After many compliments and good wishes were passed among the fellow members they were invited to the basement where a grand spread was laid for them by the willing helpers of Mr. A. McKenzie's class.

Each officer in turn was called upon and made his resolution for the coming year, in which both Rev. Mr. J. McKenzie and their teacher, Mr. A. McKenzie gave excellent speeches.

Mr. Chester Thurber moved a vote of thanks to the ladies for their great help in the past year, and the spread which is excelled nowhere. This was answered by the president of the Girls' Class, Miss Tucker.

Mr. H. E. Henry and Mr. K. Kenyon, who were delegates to the Boys' Work Congerence, held here last week, delivered a thorough report which was appreciated by one and all.

AUSTRALIANS' HEROISM ON TORPEDOED SHIP

"Not Afraid to Die!" They Cried—General Gave Life For Others

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Details of the perfect discipline maintained by the Australian troops when the transport Southland was torpedoed some time ago have been forwarded by Captain C. E. W. Bean, the official press representative with the Australians at the Dardanelles.

The transport was carrying the men to Lemnos. The torpedo tore a hole forty feet by twelve on the port side. The men turned out immediately, ran straight to their proper places, and lined up. Their officers shouted: "Steady, boys, that's the one thing! Steady!

The Southland was listing heavily to port. Afterward the list changed with a lurch to starboard, but the men stood there. The discipline was perfect.

In the forward part of the ship they could see a hatch broken in and water washing about the dark spaces of the hold, with the bodies of some of their comrades who had been killed by the explosion floating about in it.

"Bad luck, that two and a half months in the desert should end in this!" said one.

"Are we downhearted?" called another.

"No!" they all shouted. "Are we afraid to die?"

"Are there enough boats for all?" one of the men was asked by his officer. "I don't know," was the reply. "The best thing we can do is to cut down some of these horse boxes in case they are necessary." So a party set to work with might and main, chopping down part of the temporary fittings.

Meanwhile some of the boats were launched, but owing to the haste one or two overturned. An order came. "Six men wanted to jump into the sea and right an overturned lifeboat. Six men came forward instantly, dived over, righted the overturned boat, and baled her out.

By 10 o'clock the last boat had left the ship. It contained the General and his staff, who were traveling by this ship. During the long wait the men amused themselves by singing songs.

There remained on the Southland the Captain, officers, some members of the crew, and a number of Australian officers and men who had volunteered to stoke the ship and bring her to port. The vessel eventually reached Mudros.

One of the officers who saw the incident states that [illegible] Linton was seen in the water, swimming well. Some one shouted to him: "How are you getting on, Sir?" He answered, "I'm doing well. Save the others first."

Voice of The People

Dear Sir,—Looking through your paper last evening, I noticed an instance of what is described as a self-sacrificing woman who is giving up her allowance from the Patriotic Fund. Where are the authorities of this fund? Do you consider sir, that young women without children, who have been earning money ever since their husbands enlisted, should be allowed to draw from this fund that is subscribed from all classes, making them far better off in many cases than the actual giver. In my opinion it should never have been allowed. While some are suffering from the effects of this awful war others are benefitting.

Trusting you will find room for this in your valuable paper I remain,

Yours, etc.,
A Subscriber to the Patriotic Fund.

"Knocker 8499" Beats Out His Knocks

November 26, 1915.

Dear Sir,—It seems to be the general opinion of the best element of our city that there is and has been for some time something wrong with the system and the management of our municipal affairs. If someone would go to our banking institutions mercantile or manufacturing industries and stop the management from discharging, criticising, or finding fault with their employees, because at the present time to do so would be unpatriotic, then the working class would be in the same position as the Government officials and the municipal authorities. And why not? This would place a number of working men on Easy Street for the winter, and under those circumstances some of them would be base enough to wish would never end.

Of course, our Mayor and board of aldermen are above taking advantage of anything of this nature. Were not the honours that they enjoy thrust upon them, they would not make friends of electors by catering to the narrow minds of some of them in order to get such a thankless job. Of course we wanted them in every case more than they wanted the honour of being our representatives. If some of them were shovelled in, most of them were hand-picked by the workingmen, and if some electors do not get the same consideration as others, that may be the price they are paying for their independence (it comes high sometimes) if one is not satisfied and has no scruples. We have lodges from twenty-five cents up, and the dearest is not aways the best; so let him get on the inside with the rest of the gang.

Taking everything into consideration, this bunch that is running the city (elected and appointed) might be worse if we stopped spoon-feeding them. We must not say anything about shady transactions in connection with paving contracts, as then they would come back and call us knockers. It would be wrong for the working class to call their attention to the fact that their interests were neglected in regard to receiving a fair share of the money paid out in the city for munitions of war—they would be called kickers. They would tell us that the working class should not dirty their own nest, and that would be right, for God knows it is dirtied enough by the big interests and those elected and appointed to keep it clean. As the working men are not real estate dealers, they should be given some legitimate reason why they should boost the town.

As a well-regulated city, we have not got them all beat; the working men are still able to work; his family is small, but large families are not fashionable now. Anyway, some of them have got to sweat for bread for many others; they must be intellectually weak, as they have to work with their hands. This was a good old honest way when father was a boy; honest men are not all frozen or as a means of getting up in this age, it is very much out of date. Strictly starved yet. We ought to be thankful for not having started to kill each other. We are a liberty-loving, neighbourly people, who would not believe all we hear about others who differ from us in politics and religion if it did not suit our party to do so.—Yours, etc.,

PARK ST. BAPTIST BIBLE CLASS HAD PLEASANT EVENING

The Young Men's Bible class of the Park street Baptist church held an oyster supper and concert in the school room last night that was very much enjoyed. A musical programme was provided by Sergt. Major Bert Hartshorn and his brothers, Norman and Fred, Walter Farr, Tom Smith, Harry Goodwin and Mr. John Johns. A very pleasant evening was spent. Rev. Dougall Brown presided.

Yonkers became a city in 1872, and had a population of 79,803 in 1910, which swelled to 91,619 in 1915, a percentage of gain of 4.5. Rochester is the only other city which excelled this rate, its gain equalling 16.4.

Feed With a "Punch."

People often wonder why they feel so much more lively after eating Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal for a month.

It's because Roman Meal revitalizes the system. The bran in it stimulates the digestive organs, while the deodorized flax seed lubricates the whole digestive tract. Besides, the flax seed with the whole berries of rye, nourishes and sustains the system in a way a highly refined cereal food could not begin to do. Try Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal and see how much better you feel.

If you cook Roman Meal Porridge, remember you spoil it if you stir it.

"Why are you interested in that?" inquired the druggist.

"I suffer from indigestion."

"Why, you're very young to have dyspepsia."

"I don't have it," explained the boy, "but my father does."

THE GRENFELL OF THE PACIFIC

A Sailor Parson and His Work—Capt. Smith to Be in Peterborough

Few religious enterprises have more readily appealed to Peterborough people than Dr. Grenfell of Labrador. It will be of interest to learn that the equally wild and storm-swept coast of the Pacific is being cared for by just such another man, though with a different personality. John Antle will be in Peterborough on Monday.

John Antle was born on the wild coast of Newfoundland, we might almost say cradled by the rocks and lulled by the ocean winds. He is a son of a sea captain, and as a boy sailed and managed his own boat. After ordination, he plunged at once into mission work, first as a sailor-missionary along the Atlantic coast then for a while in the United States, then in Vancouver City. But the sail or instinct was strong within him and in 1904 he set off in a boat built by his own hands to take a summer holiday as far as Alert Bay. He met the loggers as he went and greatly attracted them by his manly, straightforward ways and ready sympathy. It was thus he found his life-work.

Now look at the men for whom he is giving his time, talents, money—yes, his very life. The loggers carry on the lumber work on the coasts of the Georgian Gulf. They chop and saw the gigantic trees, cut them in lengths, follow them down the skid-roads, work the signals and engines, act as foremen, etc. Their wages are from three to five dollars a day. They are naturally manly, generous, and frank as out-of-door workers often are, but denied of necessity, the comfort and enjoyment of home and friends, they turned for solace to the drinking saloons with which the settlements abound. Body and soul the men were being ruined, their earnings of weeks squandered in a few hours.

Before Mr. Antle began his work of redemption, there was not one to hold a helping hand—to dress their wounds in the frequent accidents to which they are exposed from falling logs, and other danger. When a man took ill or had a limb broken, he would have to wait the chance arrival of a boat, or else die in the woods untended and alone. No doctor, no nurse, no church, no Gospel. The heart of the missionary was stirred to its very depths with compassion. Returning from his holiday he represented earnestly what he had seen, pleading earnestly for help. Enough money was collected to build and equip a Mission ship, and the brave little craft—the Columbia—plied busily day and night on her errands of mercy with her devoted captain at the wheel or holding Divine service in the cabin or alleviating the sufferings of the wounded.

Later on, hospitals were erected with nurses and doctors. This was the beginning of the great Mission, which now extends from Alert Bay to Van Anda.

The burden was growing too heavy for the young life that had stepped into the breach against the forces of sin and suffering; so again, Mr. Antle came home to plead the cause of the logger, in Canada and the Old Country. The result was a fine, new Mission-ship, built at a cost of $25,000, equipped with all necessaries for the work. The Church of England service is held in the cabin which contains the Lord's table, surmounted by the emblem of our faith; and the surgery can boast of a complete outfit, even to the X-ray apparatus, which has been instrumental in saving many a lumberman's life. As to assistants, Mr. Antle no longer works alone; a few others are sharing the splendid work which he continues to direct.

Captain Antle has kindly undertaken to give an informal lecture describing the scenes of his heroic labours in St. John's School House next Monday evening, illustrating it with beautiful limelight views. No admission fee will be asked.

LIQUID CATARRH REMEDIES USELESS, ONLY RELIEVE, NEVER CURE

They go direct to the stomach, have very little effect on the lining of the nose and throat, and entirely fail to cure. Only by cleansing the air passages, by relieving the inflammation and killing the germs is cure possible. No combination of antiseptics is so successful as Catarrhozone. In breathing it you send the richest pine balsams right to the seat of the disease. Irritating phlegm is cleared out, hoarseness, coughing and hacking are cured. For a permanent cure for Catarrh, nothing equals Catarrhozone, get it to-day, but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size containing two months treatment, costs $1.00; small size 50c; sample size 25c.

THE SPLENDID SERB.

By your old men's beam on the mane,
By the blood of your youth in the plain,
By the tears unshed for your holy dead,
By the children of your slain,
Ye who fought till no fight availeth,
Oh Serbs 'tis the hour to shield
All that is left of your people—
The hour to yield!"

Hark! on the hill-winds pinging
O'er the thunderous drone of war,
From the snowy height of Kara Dach
To the valleys of Vardar,
The splendid Serb had answered
From a patriot's soul of flame,
"Better to die in honor
Than live in shame!"

"It is said . . . . . is in dope. We'll we perish
We fight and we ask not why.
Back from our blackened homes and fields
Till we've nothing left but the sky.
Till the last fight man on the last lone hill
Shall cry as death calls his name:
"Better to die in honor
Than live in shame!"

O world of men and sorrows!
In words of immortal light
The whole of the art of living
The creed of eternal right
Comes down from the Serbian summit.
For each man's soul the same:
"Better to die in honor
Than live in shame!"

BRITISH GUNS DEMOLISH MANY ENEMY TRENCHES

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The following official statement was issued last night by the War Office:

Gen. French reports that our artillery has successfully bombarded many portions of the enemy's trenches during the last four days, destroying wire entanglements and reaching their parapets. To the bombardments the enemy made little reply. The enemy artillery, however, has been active north of Albert, north of Loos, north of Ploegsteert and east of the Ypres.

"On the evening of the 22nd the enemy made a heavy bombing attack on a mine crater held by our troops south of the Bethune-La Bassee road, but was repulsed. Mining has been constant on both sides during the last few days. On the 23rd we exploded a mine north of the Bethune-La Bassee road and occupied the crater. On the 24th the enemy exploded a mine south of Cuinchy, causing some damage to our trenches. A hostile bombing attack against the crater was repulsed. Thursday the enemy exploded mines near Carnoy and Givenchy.

"On the 25th 20 of our aeroplanes successfully bombed a German hut encampment at Achet le Grand, northeast of Albert. The enemy replied with a single aeroplane, which dropped bombs near Bray, doing no damage."

NUPTIAL IS SOUND

Rupture is not a tear or breach in the abdominal wall, as commonly supposed, but it is a stretching or dilation of a natural opening, says J. V. Egan of Toronto and New York, the noted appliance specialist who will visit Peterboro, Oriental Hotel, Tuesday and Wednesday—December 7th and 8th. The "Compulsors" as now used and approved will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, affording immediate and complete comfort, but is intended to assist nature to close the opening in the shortest time known to medical science without an operation. This appliance has received highest awards wherever shown, producing results without harmful injections or other aids. Mr. Egan has testimonials from our own section for inspection. If interested call, he will be pleased to show you same without charge.

A PATRIOTIC BIRTHDAY PARTY

The Kitchener Patriotic League are holding a birthday party at the home of Mrs. Eyers, 198 Antrim street, on Wednesday, December 1st, from 3 to 6 and 7 to 10 o'clock. The proceeds of same for sox for the boys in the training camps and the trenches.

The League have sent out a great many invitations, but have found it impossible to reach every one of our citizens who would like to have a share in this good work and so extend a very cordial invitation to everyone who would like to do do his or her bit for our boys in the trenches.

The invitations are gotten up quite unique. A small sack with a sock pointed on it is sent out with each invitation, coppers to be placed in the sack, amounting to the years that the donor has attained. The sack then to be brought or mailed to the above address on Wednesday next. Tea will be served during the afternoon and evening.

Home made candy and many articles suitable for the Christmas season will be on sale. There will also be a touch and take table and a good programme, including the orchestra of the 93rd Battalion.

AN EASY WAY TO INCREASE WEIGHT

Good Advice For Thin Folks

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on dressing their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods, rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot put flesh on the body by any of these methods. You must get the digestive tract assimilate the food you eat.

There is a preparation known to scientific druggists almost everywhere which practically embodies the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This modern treatment is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh builders. Sargol aids through regenerative, re-constructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and then pass them into the blood, where they are carried to the starved, broken down cells and tissues of your body. You can readily picture what results this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight the cheeks fill out, hollows about the neck, shoulders and bust disappear and from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh is added to the body. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient.

Leading druggists of this vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied as per the guarantee found in every package.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

"The Last Judgment" On Friday, Dec. 3rd

Announcement cards are out for Spohr's "Last Judgment," which will be presented on Friday, 3rd December, in the George Street Methodist Church under the direction of Mr. J. H. Renwick.

The proceeds will be devoted to the Patriotic Fund.

The soloists are all local talent, including Mrs. Renwick, Misses Charlotte Hanson, Etta Kemp, Evelyn Bentley, Ida Sanderson, Mrs. Rehill, and Messrs. Edward Jones, Jno. Anderson, Asa Hayoke, Fred Miles, Charles Thorpe.

Miss Pearl McKee will play the piano accompaniments and Mr. J. H. Renwick will preside at the organ. His past productions of oratorios have been so meritorious that another success is expected in the "Last Judgment."

ELECTRICS, NEW HOCKEY CLUB, WILL APPLY FOR ADMISSION INTO O. H. A.

At a meeting held in the Oriental Hotel parlours last night, the Electric Hockey Club was organized, and it was decided to apply for admission into the O.H.A. ranks, probably in the intermediate series.

The following officers were elected:
Hon. President—Mayor Fuller.
President—Dr. King.
1st Vice-President—J. A. Harper.
2nd Vice-President—G. N. Gordon.
Secretary—Donald Shook.
Treasurer—W. H. Walker.

The following were appointed to represent the new club at the meeting of the O.H.A. executive on Friday night next: Mayor Fuller, G. N. Gordon, M. J. Maher, and Dr. King.

Previous to the organization of the new club, the adjourned meeting from the gathering of Tuesday night was held and reports were presented by Messrs. M. J. Maher and J. P. Bond, as to their interview with Mr. W. A. Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A. The main point brought out was that there are a number of liabilities left over by last year's club, which will have to be assumed by any club which may represent Peterborough this year. The O.H.A. will insist that these obligations be met before Peterborough is placed back on the hockey map.

MORAN WANTS $7,500 TO FIGHT BIG FULTON

Pittsburger Formally Offered Credit at the Tuft Mission

There is lots of news from the scrap heap to-day. The promoters of the Williard-Fulton fight at New Orleans in March have wired Frank Moran that they are anxious to see Fulton and Moran hook up before March, the winner to go on with Williard in the championship fight. "Ike" Dorgan, the manager of Moran, was humbly interviewed over the change in the situation. "We are willing to fight Fred Fulton ten rounds, providing the club guarantees us $7,500, with the privilege of 40 per cent. of the gate receipts," lisped Ike. "As for the battling Williard, we are willing to take on the big fellow for 20 rounds, but we want to know just where we stand on the proposition financially."

Ted Lewis' jigtime victory over Jimmy Duffy at Lockport in Philadelphia on Tuesday night chased the heart of Charlie White of Chicago down into the boots, and he has "reniged" on his contract to fight Lewis at Boston on Tuesday night. White bothered the Welsh scrapper with all sorts of weight terms, finally holding him to 135 pounds ringside, but the Britisher agreed to everything to get a crack at White, but he trimmed Duffy in such a hurry that White is headed for the tail and uncut with a month's provisions with him. Lewis has announced that in future he intends to "quit fooling with 'em" and will hand them all tickets to dreamland—that is all that he finds willing to accept the transeporation.

Bobby Reynolds of Philadelphia, who last week strayed out a six-round bout with Featherweight Champion Kilbane, was knocked out by George Clancey of Baltimore, in the second round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Baltimore last night.

Silas Green shaded Cleve Hawkins in the final two periods of a ten-round bout before members of the Canadian Athletic Club at Sohmer Park, Montreal, last night. For seven rounds the fighting was fast and even, toe to toe, but from the beginning of the eighth Green steadily wore his opponent down. The pair are colored light heavyweights.

Why Tod Sloan Was Chased From Old England

"Tod Sloan, a former packy, was arrested yesterady on a deportation order under the Defense of the Realm act, which permits the deportation of an alien without the necessity of assigning a reason.

"A French actress named Dherlys, who played in the French revue at the Garrick theatre, was arrested with Sloan. She will be sent to France with her mother. The ground of arrest in both cases was the charge of keeping a gambling house. Officers, after being plentifully piled with liquor, are said to have lost considerable sums at cards. Associated with Sloan, it is alleged, was an Englishman who is well known to the police as an expert card sharp.

"The police cannot prosecute any of the principals, because the officers, dreading publicity, do not want to figure in court proceedings. Sloan has been in London about four months. He has been watched by the police since his arrival. The authorities were aware of Sloan's unsavory connection with the card scandals some time ago which resulted in an exodus to Paris of English and American card sharps. The authorities also knew of Sloan's association with the habitues of Ostend against whom sharp practices at cards had been charged, which the police have not forgotten. The police decline to discuss Sloan beyond saying that there were adequate grounds for inviting him to return to his own country.

"Under the deportation order Sloan was taken at government expense to Liverpool. A steerage ticket was given to him, also two shillings to buy luxuries on the voyage. He will, of course, transfer to the saloon, but officially he is sailing as a steerage passenger. He was allowed to take all personal belongings."

The 93rd Battalion are inaugurating an aggressive recruiting campaign throughout the county as well as in the city. Officers are being sent to the different centres in Peterborough county to bring the 93rd squarely before the young men of the district. Capt. Byzett has been assigned to Lakefield, Lieut. Carter to Warsaw, Capt. Neilson to Norwood, Lieut. Thompson to Hastings, Lieut. McNabb to Havelock, Lieut. Stock to Bridgenorth, and Capt. Muir to Apsley.

Manley G. Peever, second year medical student at Queen's University, and son of Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor of George street Methodist church, has enlisted with the Queen's unit of artillery for overseas service.

The bugle band of the 93rd Battalion were out with their bugles for the first time on yesterday's marchout and

Capt. Watt, speaking on behalf of Lt.-Col. Johnston yesterday afternoon urged upon the men of the 93rd Battalion the desirability of each of them acting as a recruiting sergeant. He announced that Hon. Major Davidson the chaplain of the regiment, had donated $10 to be divided into three prizes of $5, $3 and $2 respectively for the men who brought in the most recruits in the next two weeks, commencing to-day.

The Lindsay Post says: Lt.-Col. Fee motored to Fenelon Falls yesterday and inspected the men recruited and stationed there. There are some 95 in all, and a fine looking lot of men they are. At the present they are in charge of Sergt. Art. Beal.

It is expected that Major the Reverend C. C. Williams, of Cambray, will be appointed chaplain of the 109th Battalion. At present Major Williams is on the Cambray Methodist circuit. He has been doing splendid work as a patriotic speaker on various platforms throughout the province, and is closely identified with the navy, having served on board Admiral Beatty's flag ship, the Lion.

Recent recruits who have passed the medical examination for the 93rd Battalion include the following:
Russell Scheiber, Hastings, Ont.
John Howard Hall, 677 Water street.
Chas. F. Payne, Smith street.
Thos. Graham, Ogdensburg, N.Y.
Wm. Ernest Bell, Warsaw.
John Mahoney, 360 Downie street.
Ormie Spilsbury, Downie street.
Leonard Dunstan, R. R. No. 1, Millbrook.
Norman Bruce Cullen, Bridgenorth.
Bert Jerram, R. R. No. 6, Peterborough.

Chas. S. Payne in the above list is a Peterborough reservist who was at the front during the present war with the 1st Wiltshire regiment. He has only been home three weeks from the front. He will be attached to B company and will be a valuable man for Capt. Lech.

Thos. Graham, who has been living at Ogdensburg, N.Y., is an Englishman who came over to join the Canadian forces.

In connection with the recruiting campaign to be conducted by the 93rd Battalion, the Peterborough Radial Railway Company has granted the battalion the privilege of placing advertising banners on the company's cars. Full advantage will be taken of the opportunity. In this and other ways the officers of the 93rd intend to remind the young men of Peterborough of their duty. There were enough young men lining the streets this morning watching the parade," remarked one officer, "to fully complete the strength of the battalion. Those are the men we expect to get into our ranks before long."

The band of the 93rd Battalion, accompanied by Sergt.-Major Miller and Master Percy Luther, left at noon today for Millbrook, where they gave a concert this afternoon. They were entertained at dinner by the ladies of Millbrook and were scheduled to return on the 5.30 train this afternoon.

...Use by Rockefeller Fund

Device Used to Promote Artificial Respiration is an American Invention.

SENT BY ROCKEFELLER FUND.

Dr. S. J. Meltzer Made Apparatus More Improved—His Tongue Treatment Also Adopted.

German military surgeons are now restoring to consciousness soldiers overcome by gas or buried in bombarded trenches by using a device of artificial respiration invented by Dr. Samuel J. Meltzer of the Rockefeller Institute, New York.

A consignment of the mechanisms was sent over last month, and they are coming into use. They are an improvement upon the apparatus which was [illegible] in 1910 by Dr. Meltzer as a result of his investigations for the United States Bureau of Mines. Two dozen of the contrivances were sent several months ago to the allies, and they have been used on the French site on the western battle front. Germany, however, has received a supply only recently through the Rockefeller Foundation.

The new type is much simpler than any of its predecessors, for it has no delicate valves to get out of order and no glass. The entire apparatus, including the case to carry it in, which is eighteen inches long and twelve high, does not weigh more than fifteen pounds. It can be readily be used upon the field, and it has advantages over the more elaborate and heavier appliance. The last number of the North German Gazette received in this city has an article describing the demonstration of the device before the Berlin Medical Society, and the Germans are greatly impressed by its practical utility.

Dr. Meltzer is the head of the department of physiology and pharmacology at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. He invented, although he did not patent, several pieces of apparatus for producing artificial respiration and proved their efficacy by experiments on animals and also in the treatment of human beings. His work was popularly spoken of as 'raising the dead to life,' for he used the apparatus to bring back the breathing function to both men and animals in whom life was practically extinct. The device the Germans are using, which he calls an apparatus restoring respiration through pharyngeal insufflation, consists primarily of a six-foot rubber tube provided with certain contrivances for controlling the flow of air pumped through it into the lungs from a foot bellows. The tube has a nickeled mouthpiece which is inserted deep into the throat.

Each machine is provided with a pair of forceps by which the tongue can be drawn far enough out of the mouth to prevent it interfering with the procedure. The member is tied to the mouthpiece of the machine. A current of air is then forced into the lungs and the functions of taking in breath and exhalling it are imitated by alternately opening and shutting an orifice in the tube by sliding a piece or curved metal back and forth over it. This metal covering is attached to a ring through which the operator can slip a finger and thus easily control the air current.

The abdomen of the unconscious patient is kept flat and rigid by strapping a board upon it, so that all the air goes into the lungs. The pressure of air is also regulated by another tube connected at right angles to the man one the size of the opening of which is varied.

The announcement was made several months ago that a method of treating tetanus with Epsom salts injections perfected by Dr. Meltzer had also been employed. Sometimes in this treatment the patient lost consciousness and his breathing was restored by the artificial respiration device. The Germans, according to these last advices, are adopting the [illegible]

BASKETBALL.

There will be two basketball games at the Y.M.C.A. to-night at 8 o'clock. The Rankers will play the Collegiate team for the first game, while the Excelsiors will go up against a team from the 93rd in the second match. These games are free to the public.

The recruiting station on Simcoe street is being converted into a club room for the men of the 93rd. Some of the soldier boys, who are carpenters, and painters, are doing the work.

Don't Overlook the Fact That Dan Whetung is Some Weather Prophet

If Mr. Dan Whetung, of the Chemong Reserve did not order the fine weather for the late fall he at least predicted it or rather interpicted the natural indications which were observed by those who understood them. It will be remembered that weeks ago Mr. Whetung remarked that the wild geese were flying very high on their southward flight, a sign of a late fall. Afterwards he observed the "whistlers" dallying in the feeding grounds they had usually deserted at that late date. Hence Mr. Whetung was almost confident that his first prediction would be borne out. And it must be admitted that Dan essayed the thin ice of foretelling the weather as successfully as he has on many occasions been the pathfinder across the first ice on Chemong Lake. For it is generally remarked that this has been an exceptionally mild fall. Nature has shown a tendency to duplicate its work in a single year. Second crops of strawberries and raspberries have become commonplace in their generality. Even the dandelions are in bloom only three days distant from the opening of the winter season. The lingering fall developed strong counter-attacks in its retreat, drove back the scouts of the pursuing season with such effect that its rout has seemed complete. To the delight of the spectators the boreal scouts have been driven back into their main forces, but winter is none the less inevitable. But this is aside from the fact that the accuracy of Mr. Whetung's reading of the weather signs has been already amply substantiated.

HAS NO OBJECTION TO FREE REMOVAL

In regard to the Council's plans for the removal of trees on Parnell street, Mrs. Frank Christopher states that there is no objection to the removal of the trees which Mr. Parsons has selected. It was only felt that the city might delay the work until the frost had set in and not perform it during the summer, when the lawn might be injured.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Rev. Canon Davidson will preach at the anniversary services in St. Paul's church, Uxbridge, to-morrow. The church was erected during the time that Canon Davidson's father was rector of Uxbridge.

A letter written by a former member of St. John's congregation, now in Oshawa, refers in terms of appreciation to the appointment of Rev Canon Davidson, chapain of the 93rd Battalion. She says "his well-known reputation for kindness of heart and deed will make his mere cheerful presence a source of comfort to the men in the trenches."

Potatoes Are Being Shipped From the West

They Are Laid Down in Ontario For About Five Cents Less Than the Present Market Price

A NEW DEPARTURE

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer this week.

In both Montreal and Toronto this week the potato situation is in so tight that there has been another advance. As the trade and public alike know this situation has been very firm for several months now because of the rot which has gotten into the potatoes owing to the wet weather, and the potato crop has simply been a series of advances. There are however other happenings to affect this. This week for the first time in the history of the vegetable market British Columbia has sent potatoes down east. These are now coming into Toronto and what is more they are laid down here for about 5c less than the present market price of either Delawares or Ontario. This new departure of British Columbia is significant because it is an extra line in which the West is helping the East. A couple of years ago hogs were sent down East from Western Canada for the first time. Now the West comes along and helps again in the matter of food provisions by sending potatoes to Eastern Canada. There is an excellent crop in both Alberta and British Columbia this year. The second way in which this news is significant is that it will help to relieve the tightness in the matket of the price of potatoes More competition means of course an easiness in the market, particularly when these potatoes are laid down here for the first time at 5c lower than the present market levels obtaining in Toronto.

CANNED GOODS

The canned goods situation grows interesting because gradually but none the less surely canned goods are firming up and getting dearer in price. About three or four months ago canned tomatoes, peas, beans and corn, were selling in Toronto and Montreal for 2½c to 3c per doz less than what they are selling for to-day This is a noteworthy advance. Canadian Grocer some time ago predicted that the price of tomatoes would be at least that much higher by the end of the year and its prediction has already come true, and there is still one month of the year to go. There is a large export of these canned vegetables to England, partially for the men in the trenches, and the production has not been anything like as large in Canada this year. Last year was a bad year for canned goods in the Dominion, but this has certainly proved better so far and high prices are obtaining. It looks as if the trade and the public alike can look for still higher prices in the case of tomatoes although corn and peas are not quite so likely to advance. They may do so however.

SPICES ARE UP.

A good many English products are on the trek again towards higher prices. Among the changes this week are noticed that mustard in quarter pound tins is up 10c per pound, while pickles, preserves and malted vinegar are all showing advance from a few months ago. Other lines on the upgrade are capers, curry powders and marmalades. The trade will welcome the news that shelled walnuts will arrive much earlier this year than they did last. Grocers remember with no very pleasant feelings that last year the shipments were tide up and they only just got to the trade in time for the very last Christmas business.

"Young man," said a rich and prosperous old gentleman, "I was not always that. I did not always ride in a motor car of my own. When I first started in life I had to walk."

"You were lucky," rejoined the young man, "when I first started I had to crawl. It took me long time to learn to walk."

The Market Was Most "Fowl"

Eggs Still Source—Turkeys and Geese Coming to the Front.—Butter Plentiful—Apples Going Up

It takes more than threatening weather to keep a farmer away from the market when he has something to sell. It certainly pays to bring the produce to market if the difference between the buyer's price and city price is taken into consideration.

Butter once more occupied a prominent place on tables in the "hall." The price showed a weakening, however, having been quoted as low as 32 cents. The prevailing price was 35 cents a pound.

Testing Butter.

The majority of farmers' wives provide themselves with toothpicks in order that the buyers may taste their butter, but unfortunately a few still bring a silver knife to be used in common by everyone who dares to risk his or her life by so doing. Here is where the sanitary inspector might perform a useful service.

Eggs, strictly fresh, brought 40 cents a dozen, while the other variety were quoted at 35 cents. A few baskets were sold at 30 cents.

Fowl were very plentiful, and brought various prices: Chickens, $1.00 to $1.30 per pair; geese, 10½ lbs. $1.35, 11½ lbs. $1.20, 15 lbs. $1.75; turkeys, 11½ lbs $2.00, 14 lbs. $2.25, and 21 lbs. $3.00.

Testing Fowls.

A novel method of testing the freshness of fowl was demonstrated by a good lady from the farm. Taking a pin, she plunged it into a chicken and slowly pulled it out again. If the bird is fresh, it will come out easily; if stale, it will be hard to extract.

Outside Market.

Potatoes maintained their usual high price, $1.50 a bag. One farmer quoted a rate of $1.45 for five-bag lots.

Pork was fairly plentiful and brought 14 and 16 cents.

Beef sold at 11 and 12 cents.

Lamb was somewhat scarce and sold for 14 and 18 cents, although one dealer was asking 15 and 16 cents.

Live fowl were much in evidence. Ducks brought 60 cents each. Hens 40 cents, and roosters $1.00 each.

There were two or three crates of little pigs which averaged $12.00 per pair.

Apples were the chief feature of the outside section, and were remarkable for their stiff prices. The following were some of the quotations: Snows $3.25 to $3.50 per barrel; Talman Sweets, $3.00 a barrel, $1.50 a bag, or 30 cents a peck; Greenings, $4.00 a barrel or $1.40 a bag; Golden Russets, $4.00 a barrel, or $3.00 a bag; Baldwins, $4.00 a barrel; Northern Spies, $4.50, $5.00 and $6.00 a barrel, according to quality.

Special Features.

Apple-butter made its first appearance on the market to-day and sold at 10 cents per half-pint glass. Almost every buyer thought it was honey, but the shrewd vendor instantly replied, "It's better than honey, it's apple-butter." This table dainty is little known in this part of the country, but is quite common in Western Ontario, principally in the neighbourhood of Galt, Berlin, Guelph, and London.

Up there, apple-butter time is a festive season for the farmers. Each community has its apple-butter kettle (like our sugar kettle), which goes its rounds in the fall, and its presence at a farm house means a jollification among the young people.

Home-made Cooking.

The Mothers' Club of the Y.M.C.A. had a table of home-made cooking which they were selling to help swell the piano fund for the Boys' Department, while the little girls of the Charlotte street Methodist Mission Band were disposing of samples of their domestic science attainments in aid of their missionary fund.

O. U. PRICEMAN.

STARK REALISM.

An advance agent for a theatrical production was speaking to a newspaper man with reference to the wonderful powers of the leading woman.

"Do you know," he said enthusiastically, "that in New York when she appeared as the dying mother in the last act, an insurance man who had written her a policy for $10,000, actually fainted in the theatre."

WHEN the Christmas Bells are ringing round the empty fires in England, France, Belgium and other theatres of war, what a delight to your soldier friends to receive a PICTURE of some dear friend he left behind.

MORE DIVORCES IN CITIES.

The statistical year book just published asserts that the divorce rate in Germany, after steadily growing for the past ten years, is decreasing.

The divorce rate for Prussia; however, per 100,000 of population, in 1913, which is the latest year for which full statistics have been compiled, is held up as an especially black mark for that portion of the empire. The figures for Prussia are: 80.9, as compared with 80.7 five years previously, and as compared with 56.6 for the whole German Empire, while Bavaria has are remarkably low rate of 16.4. Hamburg jumps to the top of the list, however, with 93.4.

The influence of large cities on divorces is particularly noticeable in the statistics, which show a rate of 61.1 in the cities of Prussia as compared with 46.2 in the country.

FOOD RIOTS IN POLAND.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—A despatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company says:

"Food riots are frequent in Poland The shortage of supplies is so great in the towns around Warsaw that even the wealthy are unable to obtain sufficient food. As a consequence outbreaks are of almost daily occurrence, and involve fighting between citizens and the German troops.

"The situation has been made worse by the refusal of General von Besselet, Governor-General of Poland, to allow the Polish Relief Committee to work except under German control, to which the committee declines to assent. The mortality among children has trebled since the cold weather began."

EYE TALKs SERIES

IMPORTANCE OF THE EYE

A man or woman has no more precious possession than that of eyesight. Deprived of the use of the eyes we are helpless, and in proportion to the condition of the eyesight, so is the handicap for business or pleasure measured.

If eyesight were turned into dollars and cents, we would be extremely careful of it. Money means working capital, and eyesight is our greatest necessity as an earning power. PARIS, Nov. 29.—(Official).—Fighting with hand grenades is taking place near Givenchy. Quiet prevails on the rest of the front.

DO THIS FIRST—YOU!

You know, and every physician knows, that when any sickness has passed, whether it be throat trouble, organic disturbances, contagious diseases, or even a severe cold, a relapse is feared, because sickness robs the system of Nature's resistance and leaves it subject to lingering germs.

Drugs never build up a worn-out body—only food can do that, and the first thing to take after any sickness is the concentrated, blood-making oil-food in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the tissues, benefits the blood and strengthens both lungs and throat.

Struck By An Automobile and Dies As Result

Mr. Coleman Blewett, Formerly of This City, Struck by a Car in Toronto While Crossing the Street —So Seriously Injured That He Died an Hour Later

AN INQUEST TO-DAY

TORONTO, Nov. 29. — Coleman Blewitt, of Peterborough, was struck by an automobile on Saturday evening while crossing St. Claire avenue here, and so seriously injured that he died an hour later in the General Hospital. The driver of the car, Frederick Powell, of Todmorden, was at once taken to the police station, but after an investigation he was released as there was no evidence to indicate that he had been negligent.

Mr. Blewitt was crossing the street in an easterly direction when he was struck by the automobile which was proceeding westward. He was hit on the left side and hurled to the ground with such force that the right side of his head was fractured by striking the pavement. The late Mr. Blewitt was 59 years of age. Since the summer he had been living with his son, Rollie Blewitt, at 180 Rushton Road.

The body was removed to the morgue where an inquest will be opened this morning at 10 o'clock.

The late Mr. Blewitt with his wife removed to Toronto only a few months ago. While here they resided at 317 Reid street. The deceased had been a resident of Peterborough for a number of years, engaging in the real estate business. Previous to coming to this city, he was a resident of Smith. His wife, one son in Toronto, and two daughters survive him. One daughter, Miss Beatrice Blewitt a nurse, is with the Army Medical Corps, and is now at Mudros, on the Isle of Lemnos, in the Aegean Sea. The other daughter is Mrs. Wallace Fisher, of Peterborough.

Kitchener Has Mapped the Balkan Campaign Out Fully--Is Now in Paris

British War Minister's Presence in Paris Disproves All Earlier Rumours That He Has Been Eliminated From the British Cabinet—He Visited Italy.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Lord Kitchener arrived here at 8.30 a.m. to-day. Gen. Yard-Buller of the British army, and Captain Gigodet, representing the French War Minister Gallieni, met him at the station. The Rome programme of conferences between His Lordship and the Government heads will be repeated in Paris. The British War Minister's presence in Paris is taken as effectually disproving all earlier rumours that he has been eliminated from the British Cabinet. When he visited Italy it was thought he might probably be arranging for Italian aid in the Balkans and that he would return there to direct the Allies' campaign. The first surmise was correct, but it is believed he would not have continued his journey to Paris if he were not on his way home.

He is supposed to have mapped the Balkan campaign out fully, but to have left its actual execution in other hands.

TO RESIST RUSSIAN ATTACK.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Germany is rushing preparations to-day to resist a Russian attack in the Balkans. The Kaiser evidently has decided the Czar is about to strike. The moment this happens it seems certain Rumania will be swept by just such a Teutonic flood as has pressed over Belgium and Serbia. All their preparations show the Russians will enter the Balkan field by a rush through Rumanian territory into Bulgaria. The Germans apparently propose to meet the invasion frontally, on the Bulgarian frontier and to attack the Russians from the westward on the flank.

One Smashing Blow

Some folks go on for years wondering why they have headaches, nervousness, heart flutter, biliousness and various other ailments. But they never suspect a most common cause—tea or coffee drinking.

Tea and coffee contain caffeine, a powerful habit-forming drug. The little doses repeated daily irritate the nerves, unsteady the heart, hinder digestion and work havoc generally with many users.

The simple, easy way to smash tea or coffee troubles at one blow, is to use

POSTUM

—the pure food-drink

There's "nothing missed" with the change; and thousands have found it means a big step towards health and comfort.

Postum is made of wheat and a bit of wholesome molasses—has a rich snappy flavour, yet contains no drug or other harmful element.

Postum comes in two forms: The original Postum Cereal requires boiling; Instant Postum is soluble—a level teaspoonful in a cup of boiling water makes a delicious drink—instantly. Both kinds are equally delicious, and the cost per cup is about the same.

Ten days off tea and coffee and on Postum will show

Presentation to Bethany Doctor

Dr. Sutton Was Presented With a Gold Watch Prior to His Departure For the Front

BETHANY, Nov. 29. — A pleasing function took place at Bethany when the Adult Bible class of the Methodist church took occasion to present Dr. Sutton with a handsome gold watch, as a slight token of their appreciation, previous to his departure for the front.

At the present time Dr. Sutton's numerous friends do not know where to locate him as he is on active service and sailed a week or so ago for the old country.

The Address.

Dear Friend:—We the members of your adult Bible class having learned of your decision to remove from our midst for the noble and patriotic duty of giving your best services to our King and country, feel that we would be remiss in allowing the pleasant feelings of esteem we all entertain towards you to be even temporarily severed without conveying to you our appreciation of your many sterling qaulities. Coming into our village a few years ago an entire stranger, by your honorable and gentlemanly conduct you have met with the approval of your fellow citizens, not only in your professional capacity, but as a citizen, your abilities have not been spared in promoting the best interests of your adopted village. While you have been busy in popularising along athletic lines the events that interest us in the realm of patriotic sports. You have not forgotten the fact that the higher and spiritual part of our make-up requires to be nurtured along those lines that makes for a higher manhood. You have succeeded in interesting us in the higher things of life, which under your teaching have made us better than when you found us, and we hope when far away from here on the blood-stained battle fields of France or Belgium, in the midst of your various duties you will have time to give a thought to the members of your Bible class whose prayers will follow you. As a very slight indication of our feelings for you we would ask you to accept this wrist watch just as a little token of esteem, and may success attend you in the many arduous duties you will be called upon to perform.

OBITUARY

MRS. ARCHIE WEIR.

The death occurred last night at 10.30 at St. Joseph's Hospital of Janet McIntyre, wife of Ald. Archie Weir, Mark street, Ashburnham. The deceased, who was born in Keene, was 56 years of age.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon from the family residence to the Little Lake cemetery. The service will be held at two o'clock.

Italy Will Take An Active Part in Balkan Campaign

ROME, Nov. 29.—Lord Kitchener is assured that Italy will take an active part in the Balkan campaign. The fall of Gorizia will release forces for service. Italian troops will campaign in Albania and help the Serb army with supplies.

LONDON, Nov. 29.— Colonel Maitland of the Royal Naval Air Service, jumped with a parachute from an aeroplane ten thousand feet in the air. He landed safely.

ATHENS, Nov. 29. — The Entente ministers have sent to the Greek government a new note outlining measures which the Powers desire Greece to take conforming with the agreement.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—An Athens despatch last night says all Rumanian towns along the Danube are being evacuated by local authorities.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

MILLION PUDDINGS FOR THE SOLDIERS

At a Cost of $120,000 Have Been Made by a London Bakeshop

LONDON, Nov. 5.—One million Christmas plum puddings are being turned out by one of London's biggest wholesale bakeshops for the soldiers at the Front. The bakeshop has been at it for a week and already 20,000 of the puddings have been made, packed, and sent away. It may be, when things get running faster and funds to buy the puddings accumulate, that the aggregate shipped off to the soldiers will be nearly two million.

Money for the puddings is pouring in to one of the Christmas funds. It comes in big and small lots, from everywhere. One portion of plum pudding—that is, two pounds of it—costs 12 cents, so that every sixpence donation means just that much pudding for a soldier.

The bakeshop that has undertaken to produce the million, or perhaps two million, puddings has set a staff of 100 men and women at work. The management of the shop says it is the largest pudding contract ever undertaken in history.

To let the world know something about this pudding project, moving pictures have been taken of each stage of work involved in it. These are to be thrown upon screens in Great Britain, the United States, Russia, France, Canada, in fact, almost everywhere but in the domain of the Kaiser and his ally, the Emperor of Austria.

The puddings are being made in lots of a quarter of a ton at a time. The ingredients, which are heaped on an immense table in the middle of the spacious shop, comprise 100 pounds of raisins, 80 pounds of currants, 80 pounds of suet, 48 pounds of flour, 40 pounds of sultanas, 15 quarts of milk, and 10 quarts of eggs, to say nothing of spices.

The film has caught the workers, in white aprons and caps, first kneading the ingredients from the heaps on the table. When kneaded, the mixture is put into eight-pound tins and these are soldered by white-robed workmen. Next comes the steaming process in huge retorts. The puddings are boiled for five hours, then whisked to the crating room and shipped off.

Each tin is supposed to supply Christmas pudding for four soldiers. One million puddings will cost $120,000.

SENT 105,000 OVERSEAS WITHOUT ONE CASUALTY

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—A notable record has been made by the Canadian Army Transport Service in transporting up to date 105,000 Canadian troops overseas without the loss of a single man and without one soldier being compelled to go without a meal. There was only one casualty recorded during transport, and that happened when a soldier fell off a train in Canada. This record applies to the transporting of the troops over the different railways in Canada also.

In addition, nearly 800 nurses and about 20,000 horses have been transported, and it is estimated that at the end of this month Canada will have sent overseas 110,000 officers and men. The never-ceasing vigilance of the British Admiralty and the efficient work of the Canadian army transport service, under the immediate direction of Col. J. Lyons Biggar, Director of Transport, are responsible for this record.

Work has been begun in Peru on a railroad which will cross the Andes and form a connecting link between the headwaters of the Amazon river and the Pacific ocean.

Soldier of Fortune — by Randall Parrish

God pity us if we ever fell into Foley's clutches again. There was in my mind, now I had time to consider, no doubt as to what those on board that vessel would do after they discovered him. They would realize we were somewhat astern, and, in the hope of sighting up at daylight, would cruise back and forth in those immediate waters. Any moment the Sea Gull's sharp prow might loom up out of the black wall. As she carried no lights there would be no warning. It occurred to me that they would be more apt to take a course well in toward shore, anticipating I would endeavor to reach the protection of the coast under cover of darkness. Soon one would discover the loss of the tell tale compass which would naturally confirm that suspicion. Convinced of this I steered more to the eastward, using of the lure of the compass card to assure myself of the direction.

I brought a tin of biscuit from the sea locker, more as an excuse for ending conversation than from any feeling of hunger.

"It must be pretty close to mid night," I said finally. "Are you hungry?"

The shapeless form in the offskirts straightened slightly, and I knew she had turned her face toward me.

"Hungry! Oh, no; I had not thought of that."

"You have been crying?"

"Yes; it is so foolish, but I am so frightened out here in this little boat. The darkness and that awful water has got upon my nerves. You—you mustn't scold me."

"Of course not. I feel the weight myself," I replied kindly. "This experience is almost as new to me as to yourself. You must remember I am no sailor."

Then I described the change in my plans. She listened quietly, asking a question now and then.

"What papers did you find in the desk?"

"Who is he—really?"

"Charles Henley—Philip Henley's half brother by a negro mother. Did you ever hear of him?"

"No; I was never told there was such a man."

"I doubt if any one outside those immediately interested ever knew the circumstances. Of course the family kept it a close secret. This is where the man had all the advantage. As soon as the judge died he determined to represent himself as Philip and claim the property.

"As Philip had been absent so long, no one could dispute successfully his claim to be that individual. He possessed ample evidence that he was the son of Judge Henley."

"But surely he would anticipate that my husband—Philip—would hear of his father's death?"

"He took the chance of getting the property into his hands first. As I understand the matter, he possessed no knowledge that the judge was in communication with Philip. He believed the latter had disappeared utterly and would only learn of his inheritance through accident. To prevent this he dispatched a man north to discover him, if possible, and keep him under surveillance. He thought he had every avenue guarded."

"How did you learn all this?"

"From Bronsard first. He talked more freely than he intended to do, and later I verified all he said by the letters found."

"Then, strange as it sounds, it is true?"

"Without doubt. Moreover"—and I lowered my voice in sudden embarrassment—"within the last two weeks the captain had received news from his agent in the north which gave him fresh confidence. The man reported that he had found trace of Philip Henley; he told of the life the man was leading and where he lived. I think all this must have been immediately after your separation, as he mentioned no wife. However, he described something even more important."

"You must tell me!" she burst forth as I hesitated. "Don't be afraid to trust me with all you know."

"I am not afraid," I returned stoutly enough, "not in the sense you mean at least, yet it is never easy to be the bearer of evil news."

"Is it evil?"

"Misfortune, certainly. The man reported the death of your husband."

"His death! You are sure? Tell me now what he said; how it happened."

"The report was specific and would seem to be true. He says that Philip Henley while intoxicated was struck and killed by an automobile. The date given was after you left him. His body was found by the police, but his pockets had been rifled, and there were no marks of identification on his person. He was buried unknown, but the informant claimed to have visited the morgue, viewed the body and states positively the dead man was Philip."

"And—and you think—tell me what you believe, Gordon Craig."

"There is but one conclusion to my mind. I have no doubt as to the entire truth of the story. The silence and disappearance of your husband is evidence that he is either dead or in some other way helpless."

"I—I—really I have thought this all the time. But about these others?"

"Vail and Neale, you mean? It seems to me they fit in exactly with the story. Everything had been removed from Philip's pockets and all ordinary means of identification destroyed. There must have been a purpose in this, and it must have been done by a second party, as there is no suggestion of suicide. My theory is this—the body was either found by others before the police arrived or else the automobile party which killed him paused long enough to ascertain the extent of his injuries. In either case his pockets were searched and all contents removed. Do you comprehend what that would mean?"

"I—I think so, but tell me yourself."

"He certainly had papers with him dealing with his inheritance. To a shrewd, criminal mind they would be suggestive. He also undoubtedly had keys to his apartments. Then there would be nothing more needed except a man capable of passing himself off as Philip Henley."

"In my judgment the fellows merely took those names to impose upon me, to help bolster up their story and make it appear probable. They were simply two crooks, willing to take a chance for a pot of money. I happened to be the one selected to pull their chestnuts out of the fire."

I saw her head sink into the support of her hands and knew she was sobbing silently.

"You think my conclusions must be correct?" I could not refrain from asking.

"Yes, even without seeing the letter; but," and she glanced up quickly, "the ring—Philip's ring—we found."

"I forgot to mention that. Its presence here alone is convincing. It will go to Charles Henley by his agent, who claimed it had remained on the finger of the dead man."

"Then every doubt is removed: the one killed was my husband."

There was a long, painful silence, during which I stared out into the dark, mechanically guiding the boat, although every thought centered on her motionless figure. What should I say? How was I to approach the now? Those were long minutes that there, speechless, gazing ahead, my brain inert, my hand hard on the tiller. Suddenly, with a swift thrill which sent my blood leaping, I felt the soft touch of her fingers.

"Are you afraid to speak to me?" she asked, pleadingly.

"Are you afraid to speak to me?" she asked pleadingly. "Surely I have said nothing to anger you."

"No, it is not that," I returned in confusion, not knowing how to express the cause of my hesitancy.

"I am sorry—for," very slowly, "but perhaps not as you suppose. It is hard to think of him as dead—killed so suddenly, without opportunity to think or make any preparation. He—he was my husband under the law. That was all. He was no more. I do not believe I ever loved him. My marriage was but the adventure of a romantic girl, but if I once did his subsequent abuse of me, his life of dissipation, obliterated long since every recollection of that love. He is to me scarcely more Unconquered by the Wind.

"In the year 1826," says an old chronicle, "the waters of the Rio de la Plata were forced in the month of April by a most violent current of wind to the distance of ten leagues, so that the neighboring plains were entirely inundated, and the bed of the stream was left dry. A number of ships which had been sunk in the river for upward of thirty years were uncovered and, among others, an English vessel which had sunk away in 1762. Several persons repaired to the bed of the river, all which they could walk without wetting their feet, and returned laden with silver and other riches, which had been long buried under the water. The phenomenon obtained for three days, at the end of which the wind ceased, and the water returned with great violence to its native bed."

A Good House.

Mrs. Allen was explaining a call one afternoon not long ago and was enthusiastically explaining the many advantages of concrete hollow block construction, of which the walls of her new home were built.

"The air spaces in the walls afford insulation against heat in summer and cold in winter," said Mrs. Allen. "And not only that, but such walls afford ventilation and insure a more healthful house."

The visitor nodded approval and paused reflectively for a moment, then replied:

"Well, our frame house must be quite as well built. Every night we lock the cat in the cellar and have to let her out of the attic in the morning."—Detroit Free Press.

Wanted to Find Him.

A young man went to the races in England once, but happened to be late for the first race. On entering, the first thing he saw was his young brother rushing madly up and down the course before the spectators, shouting wildly:

"Hats off! Hats off!"

He went up to him and asked him: "What's the matter?"

He did not heed him.

"Is it the King?" asked the young man. But the youngster did not mind him, but went on as before.

"Is it the Prince of Wales?" he asked him again. But he shouted as before:

"Hats off! Hats off!"

At last he gripped him by the arm, and asked:

"What is the matter?"

Then the youngster answered, resignedly.

"Oh! I backed a horse with a bald-headed bookie, and I don't know where he is!"

COULD NOT BEND DOWN
COULD NOT WEAR CORSETS
BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys, and unless the kidneys are carefully watched and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. S. Lobleskeid, Dauphin, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy ——'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had tearing down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills unused to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills; they go right to the spot. 'No substitute for me.'"

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is printed on both the label and wrapper.

"HAD ALMOST GIVEN UP."

Sarnia, Ont.—"About 27 years ago I was taken very bad, my blood, too, was in bad shape. I got so I had to go to bed and I was there for over three months. I could not eat and suffered untold agony. I had three of the best doctors I could get but it just seemed nothing was going to help me. I had almost given up. I thought I would never be any better and was willing to give up and die rather than suffer as I was. A neighbor of mine told me of Dr. Pierce's wonderful remedies and I decided to use them. My husband bought me six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I had not taken it long until I felt better. In less than six weeks I was out of bed, and in less than six months I was cured and have been well ever since. Do all my own work. I have raised three daughters, two are married and have children. They have used it and they are healthy, so are their children. I am sure it was all on account of my having them use the medicine.

"I keep all of Dr. Pierce's medicines in the house. Have 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Smart-Weed'—anything prepared by Dr. Pierce is good. I also have a copy of the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, which I have had 26 years; it has been very valuable to me."—Mrs. J. WAY, 232 Ontario St., Sarnia, Ont.

If you are a sufferer, if your daughter, mother, sister need help, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form from any medicine dealer to-day. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

A most valuable book in any home is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. A splendid 1008-page volume, with engravings and colored plates. A copy will be sent to anyone sending fifty cents in stamps, to pay the cost of wrapping and mailing only, to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Blood Thin and Weak
Too Nervous to Sleep

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood, it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from many stimulating medicines which give rise to false hopes and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own case. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

As Mr. Gellerby was taking his little son Ferdinand to Sunday School he endeavoured to improve the time by teaching him the special text for the day, the words of which were, "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Ferdie repeated it obediently after his father several times and seemed to have mastered the correct wording.

During the Sunday School exercises the teacher turned to Ferdie and said:

"The golden text."

"Now let me hear if you can say it."

Ferdie hesitated a moment, and then answered:

"Whatsoever a man sews always rips!"

JEHOVAH PROVES HIS CONSECRATED PEOPLE

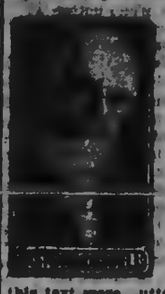
Consecration and Spirit-Begetting First, Then the Proving — One Thing to Promise, Another to Fulfil — God's Plan, Marvelously Beautiful When Understood — Faith in God Essential — Bible Teaching Reasonable—Important to Know Where We Stand — All Spirit-begotten Ones Are Brethren—God First.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]



Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 28.—Pastor Russell delivered a very practical address here to-day from the text, "The Lord your God proveth you, whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul." Deuteronomy 13: 3.) He said:

The words of this text were uttered to Natural Israel, but they are certainly applicable to Spiritual Israel—to all of God's people. The thought is manifest that the Lord's children are all under testing, that the Lord is proving our devotion. It is not sufficient that God should have called us with a Heavenly Calling, that He should have sent a Message through His Son, speaking peace and declaring that He will forgive the sins of those who surrender themselves to Him. It is not sufficient that we should be informed as to how we may gain these blessings through a full consecration to God through the Saviour. It is not sufficient even that we should accept these terms and make a full consecration of ourselves to do the will of God. Something more is necessary.

The making of the consecration, according to the Scriptures, would mean the giving up of our lives to do the will of God. "Present your bodies a living sacrifice," as the Apostle Paul expresses it. (Romans 12:1.) We have seen this privilege. We have accepted the terms. We have given our little all to God, through the Lord Jesus Christ. We rejoice that He has received our little offering through our great Redeemer, who has imputed of His merit to cover our blemishes, thus making us acceptable to God. We have now been received into the family of God in the highest sense and are New Creatures in Christ, members of the Anointed company, sons of God, called to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ to the great inheritance of glory, honor, immortality, and the Divine nature.—2 Corinthians 5:17; 1 Corinthians 12:13; John 1:12; Romans 8:17.

It is not enough that God has accepted our consecration. His purposes to prove us, to see whether we mean all that we said. Consecration is more easily made than fulfilled. Having made the surrender to God, we received an enlightenment. As the Apostle says, we were illuminated. (Hebrews 10:32.) This illumination came to us as it came to our Saviour, through the Holy Spirit and through the Word of God, enabling us to see the lengths and breadths and heights and depths, and to know the love of God, which passeth knowledge, giving us an insight into the Plan of God, helping us to appreciate what we have done, what it means to us now, and what it will mean to us hereafter.

All these things become clearer day by day; and we realize more and more the glorious things which our God has in reservation for His faithful children—things which "eye hath not seen nor ear heard," but which the Lord has "revealed unto us by His Spirit." (1 Corinthians 2:9, 10.) While all this work is going on within us, there is a testing, a proving, a disciplinary training.

A Foretaste of Coming Glory.

Every day we are receiving added blessings. God's mercies are indeed "new every morning and fresh every evening." His providences are shaping all our affairs. How are we responding to all these blessings coming from the Lord? This is the question. God has indeed entered into a Covenant with us, as He says: "Gather together My saints unto Me, those who have made a covenant with Me by sacrifice." (Psalm 50:5.) You agreed to give up yourself, your own will, all your own" preferences in every matter, not only in word and action, but in thought. It was on this condition that you and I were received. It was on this same condition that our Lord Jesus was accepted and became the Head of the Church.

Jesus was our Guarantor. Therefore the Father entered into this contract with us and gave us the Holy Spirit, the first-fruits of our inheritance. This He would not give without a definite contract; for it is the advance payment, the earnest of the glory to come. So we see that the blessing which has come to us from God through Christ is only a foretaste of what is in store for us. Our Father waits to give us all the riches of His grace, of His loving-kindness, through our Lord Jesus, in the coming Age and in the ages to follow. In those future ages of glory He will continue to show to the Church the glorious riches of His grace and of His love.—Ephesians 2:7.

"The Lord your God proveth you." The Lord does not wish to disprove us. Our Heavenly Father has great love for all of His children, and He has exceeding great blessings in store for them when their loyalty has been demonstrated. The word LOVE has in it the thought of honoring the one who is loved. "Surely we are not worthy of God's love!" you say. Very true, my brother; but we remember that our Lord Jesus said, "The Father Himself loveth you." (John 16: 27.) The Word tells us about God's deep interest in those who have become His children. It tells us that the Church are as dear to Him as the apple of His eye. (Zechariah 2:8.) What tender love and care is here expressed: All things permitted by the Lord to come to any of this class are for their good, for their preparation for the Kingdom, that they may be to the glory of God, members of the Divine family.

"The Prize of Our High Calling."

According to the Bible, our Heavenly Father alone had originally this great thing, the Divine nature, with its quality of immortality, incorruptibility. He has given it to His First-begotten Son since His resurrection from the dead, that He might have this same nature, this inherent life; and through the Son the Father has offered it to the Bride class, that they also might inherit the same glory as our Lord, though He will always remain the Head of His Church. (John 5:26; 1 Timothy 6:16; 2 Peter 1:4.) This is the sum total, as we understand the Word—that nevermore will any others attain the Divine nature—only the Father, the Son, and "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife"—no more.

Then will come the other natures on the spirit plane—cherubim, seraphim, those who will constitute "the great multitude," and then the lower order of angels. We do not know how wonderful some of these orders may be; but none will be so great as those on the Divine plane. Then, to complete the picture, we shall have mankind restored to perfection—"a little lower than the angels."—Psalm 8:5; Hebrews 2:6-8.

This is the glorious outlook before us. Those of the Divine nature will reign over all others. Theirs will be "the glory that excelleth." The Father loves us and wishes us to attain this glory. If we fail, it will not be because of his unfaithfulness. "Faithful is He that hath called you, who also will do it." 1 Thessalonians 5: 24.) The whole responsibility is with us. No one can take our responsibility. Each must stand for himself. We cannot go into the Kingdom by classes. There is no other way to get into the Kingdom except as individuals, personally related to the Lord Jesus. Therefore it is for each of us to "make our calling and election sure."

Our Flesh Not on Trial.

"Is God proving my imperfect flesh, to see whether I will use it perfectly?" some one may inquire. No. Long ago God knew that we could not do perfect works. He would not try our fallen flesh. In the Bible He tells us that all mankind are imperfect, fallen. (Romans 3:10, 20.) He is proving whether your HEART IS OF THE mind, your will." What kind of mind ought we to have? The Lord tells us. "Let this mind be in you, which was in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 2:5.) "But," you say, "I have not the same body that Jesus had." Very true; but you can have the same mind, disposition, will, that He had. You can WILL for truth, for righteousness, for faithfulness to your covenant with God. You are to come as nearly to the line as you are able. God looks to see how you rule your mortal body, to what extent you crucify the flesh and its desires.—Galatians 5:24.

You are the one in charge now. The Lord says: "I will let you work with that poor body which you have; and if I see you doing your best with that body, in due time I will give you a perfect body. If you prove your loyalty of heart now, with all your imperfections, I will cover those imperfections with the merit of Jesus. I know that if you are faithful in this blemished body, you will be entirely satisfactory in the glorious body I will give you by and by."

This is a very reasonable proposition, dear friends; and everything about God's Plan, when we come to understand it, is so beautiful, so reasonable, that we could not ask Him to change even one feature. How would it be if we could get glory, honor, and immortality without living up to our promises, while another who did not promise would do better? We would say that the one who did not promise would be better than the one who promised and did not fulfil his promise, that the one who did not promise would be more deserving of the reward. If the Lord sees that you mean all that you said in consecration, no matter how poor the body you have, the blood of Jesus Christ will cover all your defects; and you will be acceptable to God and will thus be counted worthy.

Worthiness of the Bride of Christ

The Bible says, "Worthy is the Lamb," and His Bride will be worthy, too. You say, "We know that Jesus is worthy." Yes; and those who have His spirit have a measure of worthiness also. There must be character if we are approved of God. Unless we develop the necessary character we shall never reach the Kingdom. If you have something to do with developing that character, it will be counted real worth in God's sight; and Jesus' righteousness will make up the rest. If you are found wholly loyal to Him, then you will be accounted worthy.

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne," declared the Master. (Revelation 3: 21.) If we do not overcome, we shall not be seated there. "But there are special tests, are there not?" asks someone; "Is one test how we keep the Sabbath day?" Not especially, we reply. Such a test would be but a poor proof of character. If you thought that God wished you to keep a certain day as the Sabbath day, you would be injuring your conscience if you did not keep it. It is not keeping a sabbath day or wearing clothes of a certain style or having your hair cut in a special way that proves character such as God requires.

What are God's conditions? For what is He especially looking? First, God is looking for faith — faith in Him. This is an important requisite. "Without faith it is impossible to please Him." (Hebrews 11:6.) If you have no faith in God, you might just as well stop where you are. The Lord has a glorious arrangement for those who cannot exercise faith, but He is not calling them during this Age. He will deal with them by and by. But He requires faith of those who would have His favor now. Only such can be of the Bride of Christ.

Reasonableness of the Scriptures

There is a great difference between faith and credulity. We have learned this lesson from the experiences of the Dark Ages. There was comparatively little faith then. We are not to have faith in things that nobody can understand. That is not God's Plan. It may be the creeds of men, but it is not the Word of God. He expects us to have faith in what He has declared; and He says, "Come now, let us reason together." (Isaiah 1:18.) To-day, all over the world, you will find people saying, "I believe in the Trinity, but I cannot understand it." There is no credit in believing what you cannot understand. "I thought that if I did not believe in the Trinity I would go to eternal torment," says one. My dear Brother, there is nothing about the Trinity in the Bible. The Bible is all straight and reasonable.

What the Bible says is this: "Hear, O Israel, the Lord thy God is one—Jehovah." (Deuteronomy 6:4; 1 Corinthians 8:6.) Have faith in what the Bible says. Attend to what God has declared. "To us there is one God, the Father." Have faith in this Scriptural statement. We are to believe what the Word of God declares, and not what men have said that is not in the Bible.

Another thing which God requires of us is loyalty. We are to stand for all that God stands for, and to be opposed to all that God opposes. God is opposed to everything dishonorable, evil, and false. There are only two sides. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." You cannot serve Truth and error. Watch where you are standing. There is great danger of being deceived. Thousands of people are standing to-day where they should not stand, and would not, if their eyes were not blinded. (2 Corinthians 4:4.) "His servants ye are to whom ye render service."

Whom are you serving? Are you serving Christ or the systems? We must know what we are serving. Only as we are faithful in serving God and in turning our talents to use in His service shall we be acceptable to Him. He is not looking for those who are loyal to sects or systems. This is a part of the test upon us.

Whom God Accepts We Accept.

"The Lord your God proveth you"—your faith, your loyalty, your steadfastness, your love of the brethren. "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen?" (1 John 4:20.) If any man or woman has made a covenant of consecration to the Lord, and has been begotten of His Spirit, that fact is a notice to me from the Lord that He has adopted that one. Suppose I say, "He is not my style," would that be loyalty to God? If we were in an earthly army, there might be some man to whom we would prefer not to march; but we would say, "He is my comrade; he is loyal to my government." So it is with the army of the Lord. We are fighting "the good fight of faith"; and all who are on our side are our brethren, no matter how unsightly or unattractive they may be according to the flesh. The fact that they belong to our King settles it. If He accepts them, I accept them; if He rejects them, I reject them.

This is the one which the Lord gives me up to the ones for whom I shall lay down my life. He is looking on with loving eyes to see how you and I are carrying out our covenant as to loyalty in faith, word, act and thought.

With the heart man believeth unto righteousness. Out of the heart are the issues of life. If our hearts are right, then loyalty will be manifest by our doing the best we know how for the brethren and in doing our duty toward all. It is not sufficient, however, to love the Lord with part of your heart, and to say, "Next to my wife (or my husband) I love the Lord." God must have the first place. It is GOD FIRST, the Lord Jesus second, and everything else after them.

It is all a matter of the heart. It is not mere LAW, although it may begin as such. I may say, "I have accepted God's terms. It is now a law to me to do His will." But as I progress and come into fuller sympathy with God, then comes a love for the principles for which He stands. It is my heart that is to serve God. This is the highest attainment of a Christian—that with his whole heart he should love and serve the Lord.

Our Lord declares, "Not every one that saith unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the Kingdom of Heaven; but he that doeth the will of My Father in Heaven." (Matthew 7:21.) This means that many who make the covenant of full consecration will fail to keep it, fail to obey its requirements, and that their failure will indicate a deficiency of love for Him—that self-will still reigns in their hearts, giving God only the subsidiary place. The Kingdom is only for those who by the grace of God shall at heart become copies of the Lord Jesus Christ in that they will love Jehovah God with all their heart, all their soul, all their being, all their strength, and be able to say, "Not my will, but Thine, O Lord, be done." No other condition than that of full submission to the Lord can make us acceptable for the Kingdom; for no other condition represents full self-abnegation and full love for God.

In Clover.

Not very long ago there lived in Yorkshire an old man who always rode on a donkey to his daily work, and tethered him while he labored on the roads or wherever else he might be.

It had been pretty plainly hinted to him by one of the local landowners that he was suspected of putting it in the fields to graze at other people's expense.

"Eh, squire, I cud na do sich a thing, fer my donkey won't eat nowt but nettles an' thistles.

One day the gentleman was riding along the road, when he saw the old fellow at work and the donkey up to his knees in one of his clover fields, feeding luxuriously.

"Hallos, John!" said he. "I understood you to say your donkey would eat nothing but nettles and thistles."

"Aye, said John, "but he's been misbehavin' hisself, sir. He nearly kicked me i' th' cheat just now, so I put him there to punish him!"—Tit-Bits.

Christmas Appeal

FOR

The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

In the 40 years of the Hospital's existence there have been treated within its walls 24,156 children as in-patients; 231,768 as out-patients; a grand total of 257,676 in and out-patients.

The Hospital for Sick Children gives a province-wide service, for little patients from every section of Ontario have enjoyed its aid. Last year 469 patients were admitted from 232 places outside the city of Toronto. In 1914 there were 364 from 210 places.

Of the 2,638 in-patients last year 1,771 were medical cases and 1,067 surgical. In the orthopedic department of the 2,328 in-patients, 264 were treated for deformities, 21 Pott's disease of the spine, 10 lateral curvature of the spine, 10 bow-legs, 57 club-feet, 17 dislocations of hip, 42 tubercular disease of knee, hip, ankle, wrist and elbow; 76 infantile paralysis, 8 wry neck, and 21 miscellaneous.

Our battle is never-ending—is one that will continue while the world lasts, for it is the fight between the armies of life and death, to save the child life, the sick little ones, sons and daughters not only of our soldier men, but of the fathers and mothers still in this home-land province.

The Hospital is beating back disease and death, the enemies that assail the lives of little children as the British Empire is beating back Germany, Austria and Turkey, the enemies that assail the life of liberty.

So we appeal to the generous people of Ontario not to forget those so near and dear to us, who lie in the beds and cots of this great charity.

Will the people at large, as of old, respond to our call? Will they remember that every year is a war year for the Hospital, every day a day of battle, and that the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake?

The Hospital has waged its war for forty years. The people of Toronto and Ontario have been its friend, and this year of all years it requires help. Surely you will give to a charity that leaves for every sick child in Ontario, for only as your money reaches the Hospital can the Hospital's mercy reach the children.

Every dollar is a link of kindness in the chain of mercy that joins the money in your pocket to the miseries of some child's life, some mother's heart.

Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. MOSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Toronto.

COURTESY TO A WIFE

President Ripley, of the Sante Fe railroad is a gallant old man. When his fellow directors gave him a dinner at Chicago in honor of his 70th birthday and his splendid official work he said, in beginning the speech he made on the occasion.

"I desire here to pay tribute and praise to her who joined her life to mine 44 years ago, and since provided the comforts and rest of a quiet home, who has twice accompanied me through the valley of the shadow of death; who has watched over me mentally and morally and physically, and who is mainly responsible for such of the success as has been mine in conserving mind and body. I ask you, friends, to join me in drinking to the health of my wife."

There are thousands and tens of thousands of wives in America who do all for their husbands that Mrs. Ripley has done for hers but it is a very rare occurrence when any husband has made such handsome acknowledgemen: of devoted service. It is needless to say his fellow directors responded vigorously to his toasting.—Philadelphia Ledger.

SAVING COAL.

Expert Advice on the Keeping Down of Fuel Bills.

A problem which reaches into nearly every home in Canada and touches the pocketbooks of almost all householders is discussed advantageously in a report issued the other day by experts who have been investigating the subject. They tell the public in detail just how in heating their houses this winter they may save in their coal bills.

The report, issued at a time when the cooler weather is upon the country and people are laying in their supply of coal, intimates that large savings can be made in nearly every home and gives specific figures of the results obtained in one home in which every effort was made to economize the coal property.

The report shows not only a less cost of heating but also an economical use of fuel, and illustrates what savings may be effected when the problem is given proper consideration. Systematic and regular handling of the fire doubtless had considerable to do with the results obtained. The cost of heating is probably $50 to $100 less than what is expended by a large number of householders who live in the same locality and have about the same heating requirements, but use more expensive coal and give their heating equipment less attention.

The value a householder gets from the fuel he burns depends largely on the character of the heating apparatus, the conditions under which it is installed and the manner in which the fire is handled. The authors of this report, from their experience in heating residence heating apparatus and from observing the methods employed by many who attend to such apparatus, keenly appreciate the importance of proper firing methods, and they have written this report in the belief that some general remarks on the selection, care, and operation of residence heating apparatus may prove of some value to many.

Among other things the report states: "Many furnaces and boilers are operated in a haphazard way; drafts are opened or coal is put on when the house becomes cool; then the fire is allowed to burn rapidly until either the rooms are too warm or the fuel bed is burned down too far to kindle properly a new charge of coal.

"Such firing is always wasteful. The heater should receive regular attention, and if the demands for heat are intelligently anticipated, as they ordinarily can be, the house can be warmed with minimum trouble and fuel. When the rooms become too warm the fire should be checked by stopping the admission of air under the grate and decreasing the draft by opening the check damper. If, as often is done, the ash pit damper or the ash pit door be allowed to remain open and the draft reduced by opening the fire door the combustion of the fuel continues, although at a slower rate, but the cold air entering the fire door chills the heater so that little heat is realized from the coal.

"To burn a pound of coal requires very much more than a pound of air, and the volume of a pound of air at atmospheric pressure is far greater than that of a pound of coal. To burn more coal requires more air, and this air must be forced into the ash pit and up through the fuel bed by the difference between the pressure of the hot air and gases over the fire pot, and that of the air entering the ash pit—in other words, by the draft."

Swearing in Japanese.

Even though they are elaborately polite, once in awhile one Japanese will get mad at another. Their anger kindles slowly at first, finally fanning into a blaze that knows no staying. But even though there is a torrent of passion seething in his soul, there are no words to give it vent. It keeps surging harder and harder until he throws aside all restraint and gives up all idea of decency by putting into one phrase all his bitterness and snapping squarely into the other man's astonished face the worst thing that can be said in the whole language, "Your stomach is not on straight!"

This is the final insult. Nothing more can be added; he has cast the glove. There is nothing left for him to do but to give his enemy a cutting look, turn on his heel, and haughtily clap, clap, away on his wooden shoes.

Game of Rimes.

The children all sit in a circle, and one starts and says: "I'm thinkin' of a word that rimes with rig" (though any word may be chosen).

Then each in turn tries to guess what the word is by asking a question thus: "Is it something that sails on the sea?" If wrong, the one "it" replies, "No, not a ship."

Another perhaps asks, "Do we partly speak with it?" No, not lip." "Can we do it with a rope?" cries a third. "Yes," answers the one who is "it;" the word is ship."

Then the guesser chooses a word, and the game begins again.

Ripe Tomato Relish.

One peck of tomatoes, peeled and chopped. Let drain overnight in a colander. In the morning add six chopped onions of ordinary size, two bunches of chopped celery, two tablespoonfuls of mustard seed, one tablespoonful of celery seed, four chopped red peppers, one-half cupful of salt, six cupfuls of brown sugar, and six cupfuls of cider vinegar. Mix all together and seal in jars without heating.

Saving Trouble.

When Bobbie went to see his grandmother he was much interested in whatever went on in the kitchen. One day she said to him: "I'm going to make you a nice little pie in a saucer, all for yourself. Don't you think I'm pretty good to take so much trouble?"

Bobbie pondered. "Grandma," he said at length, "mother told me not to be a bother, and if it's going to be any trouble you can just as well make my pie reg'lar size."—Exchange.

HISTORY AND A PICTURE.

Art is not always true to history. Schoolboys of several generations are familiar with the picture of Cornwallis surrendering his sword to Washington after the fall of Yorktown. Lord Cornwallis is revealed in the act of passing over his beautiful sword to the hand of his conqueror. The inference is that Washington took the sword and kept it as a trophy of victory. The facts are quite otherwise.

Cornwallis, proud even in defeat, declined to put in a personal appearance on the occasion of his surrender. The allied forces, American and French, who had besieged him for thirteen days, were drawn up in two columns along the road leading to Hampton. Rochambeau, on a fine bay horse, was at the head of the French column. On his white charger sat Washington at the head of the American troops. The surrendered British and Hessians marched out of their intrenchments and passed down between the two columns.

Many thousands of Virginia citizens were gathered to watch the scene, all eager to get a glimpse of Lord Cornwallis. But they were disappointed in that. Cornwallis pleaded indisposition and stayed in his quarters. He sent his sword by one of his officers, General O'Hara, to be delivered up to Washington. General O'Hara offered the sword to Washington, who directed him to General Lincoln, the officer whom Washington had appointed to conduct the surrender. Lincoln took the sword from O'Hara's hand and then politely handed it back, to be returned to Cornwallis.

HOW TO GAIN FLESH

Remarkable Statement of a Woman Who was Nothing But Skin and Bones

Laugh and grow fat is a homely saying, but Mrs. Elizabeth L. Morris, of Hammond, La., tells of a more reliable method. She says:—

"I cannot say enough in praise of Vinol, for it saved my life. I was weak, nervous, run-down, could not sleep, was unfit for work and was nothing but skin and bones. Three doctors had all failed to help me. One day I saw Vinol advertised, took courage and bought a bottle, and it soon made me feel better. I continued its use and such a change! I have regained my strength, flesh and health, am perfectly well, and the doctor was surprised to see such a change in me in such a short time." Elizabeth Morris, Hammond, La.

The reason Vinol proved such a wonderful strength creator in Mrs. Morris' case was because of the peptonate of iron, beef peptone and the extractives of fresh cod livers, without oil, combined in a pure native tonic wine, which makes Vinol a most wonderful tonic.

FLOWER FIRE.

Some Plants Will Emit a Mysterious Radiance at Times.

The most wonderful—it might almost be said spiritual—attribute of flowers is neither their beauty of color or form nor their fragrance, but, strangely enough, a mysterious radiance that sometimes surrounds them, writes J. Carter Beard. It is strange that this flower fire is so little known and so seldom noticed.

The best time to watch for and to witness the emission of flower fire is just after sunset of a warm day, when the atmosphere is perfectly dry and clear. On the contrary, if the air is dense or the day has been rainy nothing of the kind can be seen. The light emitted from flowers is sometimes continuous, but oftener, perhaps, represents itself in flashes and flickerings like the sparks from a piece of paper that has been electrified. The duration of the light varies according to the state of the atmosphere and the sort of flowers that are under observation.

A daughter of Linnaeus is credited with having been the first, as long ago as 1762, to have observed the luminous emanations. While seated alone in her father's garden on a fine, warm summer night her attention was attracted to a cluster of the common nasturtiums, whose flowers shone with iridescent luster amid the surrounding gloom. Captivated by the charming novelty of the spectacle, she repeated her nocturnal visit to the flowers a number of times and never once failed to witness the gleam of the nasturtiums.

Numerous other flowers, many of which can be found in our gardens, are discovered to be self luminous after exposure to the strong, sustained light of the summer sun, for not only do groups of nasturtiums exhibit the phenomenon, but the corolla of the common sunflower, the dahlia, the tuberose, the yellow lily, and, indeed, a number of blossoms not named here.—Christian Endeavor World.

The Omnipresent Rose.

Every continent on the globe, with the exception of Australia, produces wild roses. There can be little doubt that the rose is one of the oldest flowers in the world, perhaps grown from the wind blown seeds in paradise. In Egypt it is depicted on numbers of early bas-reliefs, dating from 3000 to 3500 B. C. Rosewater, or the essence of roses, is mentioned by Homer in the "Iliad," and the flower is spoken of in the Proverbs of Solomon.

SELECT MEDICINE CAREFULLY

Purgatives are dangerous. They gripe, cause burning pains and make the constipated condition worse. Physicians say the most ideal laxative is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Buchu Nut; they are exceedingly mild composed only of health-giving vegetable extracts. Dr. Hamilton's Pills restore activity to the bowels, strengthen the stomach and purify the blood. For constipation, sick headache, biliousness, and disordered digestion, no medicine on earth makes such remarkable cures as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Try a 25c box yourself.

A GLIMPSE OF MANCHURIA.

Its Wind Whipped Natives and Its Empty Brown Wastes.

Manchuria means an interminable brown plain—dry stubble, endless empty furrows to be filled by and by with millet, kaoliang, waving, wonderful green plumage, high as a man and higher, in which not many years ago the Japanese hid whole armies.

Today it is the emptiest, most silent spot in Asia. It spreads out flat and tranquil in unthinkable forgetfulness. The sun beats down fiercely out of a deep, unbroken field of turquoise blue. The air is biting cold. A sudden breath of it is like a slap. A great tingling follows and a sense of extraordinary buoyancy. One feels impelled to laugh, to shout, to strike out, to do violent things. To sleep or sit with folded hands would drive one mad. There is that in the air which compels like the lash of a whip.

Peeling Onions For a Living.

The profession of onion peeling is not one that obtains much notice, yet there are at least 500 women in the east end of London earning their living by removing onion skins. With practice they can make 4 or 5 shillings per day. Often they have been peeling since childhood, daughters succeeding mothers. It is not a profession you can learn in one lesson, for the skin must be removed by hand or the onion "juices" and is no use for pickling. The onions are always peeled in water. This is not to save the eyes of the peeler, but is done to keep the onion white.—London Express.

They All Think That.

"There goes a man who is sure I'm not doing my duty to my family."

"One of your neighbors?"

"No."

"Wrong again. Not even an acquaintance."

"Who is he, then?"

"A life insurance agent."—Detroit Free Press.

The Thunder.

"Say, mamma," queried the small son of a local labor leader, "is it the thunder that strikes or the lightning?"

"The lightning, dear," was the reply.

"Oh, well," replied the youngster, "I suppose the thunder doesn't belong to the union."—Chicago News.

WAR BENEFITS CZAR'S FAMILY

New Mood Prevails in the Russian Royal Household.

The war has made a great difference to the Russian royal family. In the days before the war the Czarina lived in constant dread of her husband and children being assassinated and could scarcely bear them out of her sight. Indeed, so ill did she become with worry that to please her the great ballroom at the Winter Palace in Petrograd was turned into a bedroom for the whole family, in order, to quote the Czarina, that in the case of an outrage they "might all die together."

That is all changed now, however. The Czarina cheerfully said "good-bye!" to her husband when he went to take his place at the head of his armies, and she and her daughters are working indefatigably on behalf of the wounded. The Czarina has no time for morbid worrying and is consequently in splendid health, and is one of the most energetic and hard working women in Russia.

The Russian Grand Duchesses are charming and clever girls, and have profited by the careful training of their mother. The Grand Duchess Olga is an excellent musician and the Grand Duchess Tatiana paints like a professional artist. Both sisters speak several languages with equal facility, and both are very fond of riding and of outdoor exercise. The Empress likes her children to practise every kind of sport and to spend as much time as they can in the open air, and she has tried to give them an education on strictly English lines, like the one she received herself.

"That's All."

"Please state to the court exactly what you did between 8 and 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning," said a lawyer to a delicate-looking little woman in the witness box.

"Well," she said, after a moment's reflection, "I washed my two children, and got them ready for school, and sewed a button on Johnny's coat and mended a rent in Nellie's dress. Then I tidied up my sitting-room and made two beds, and watered my plants and glanced over the morning paper. Then I dusted my parlor and set things to rights in it, and washed some lamp chimneys and combed my baby's hair and sewed a button on one of her little shoes and then I swept my outside steps and brushed and put away the children's Sunday clothes, and wrote a note to Johnny's teacher asking her to excuse him for not being at school on Friday. Then I fed my canary and cleared off the breakfast table and gave the grocer's boy an order, and then I sat down and rested a few minutes before the clock struck 9. That's all."

"All!" said the dazed lawyer. "Excuse me, your honor; I must get my breath before I call the next witness."

Candle Nearly 1,000 Years Old.

Devastated Arras possesses an ancient church, Notre Dame des Ardents, which remained uninjured despite the recent terrific bombardments, and which contains a unique relic that is nearly 1,000 years old. The relic is known as the Holy Candle. It is guarded in a richly enamelled silver casket, and a curious history is attached to it.

It appears that in May, 1105, the Holy Virgin appeared during the night to two minstrels. A terrible plague depopulated Arras at that time, and the Virgin—so goes the legend—gave the two minstrels a candle (which they in turn gave to Bishop Lambert, of Arras), and told them that the hot wax of this candle mixed with pure water would cure the inhabitants of Arras of the dreadful malady.

The remedy proved efficacious, and a grateful populace erected the Monastery of Ardents. The candle has been carefully guarded, and it is the firm belief of the inhabitants of Arras that it frequently saved them from utter destruction.

Sympathetic.

A street car "masher" tried in every way to attract the attention of the pretty young girl opposite him. Just as he had about given up, the girl, entirely unconscious of what had been going on, happened to glance in his direction. The "masher" immediately took fresh courage.

"It's cold out to-day, isn't it?" he ventured.

The girl smiled and nodded assent, but had nothing to say.

"My name is Specknoodle," he volunteered.

"Oh, I am so sorry," she said sympathetically, as she left the car.

Better Paid.

The Marquis of Bute tells an amusing yarn about a certain clergyman who asked a small boy:

"Who is that elderly gentleman I have seen you in church with?"

"Grandpa," was the reply.

"Well," said the clergyman, "if you will promise to keep him awake during the sermon I will give you a penny a week."

The boy agreed, and for the next few Sundays the old grandfather was made to hear the sermon. The clergyman was delighted at the success of his little scheme and handed over the weekly penny according to the contract.

One Sunday, however, the old gentleman went to sleep as before. Very much vexed, the clergyman accosted the boy at the end of the service.

"I am very angry with you," he said. "Your grandfather was asleep as usual during the sermon to-day. I shall certainly not give you a penny this week."

"It doesn't matter," replied the boy coolly; "grandpa gives me twopence not to disturb him!"

Battles Without Casualties.

In the present war even the smallest battle results in a long list of killed and wounded, but in the past when artillery was not so deadly, contests were occasionally waged without the loss of a single British soldier.

An instance of this occurred at the Battle of Futtehpore, which occurred during Havelock's forced march to relieve Lucknow. Although the rebels were driven from a strong position and eleven guns captured, not a single Britisher was lost. Havelock put this astonishing result down to "the fire of the British artillery exceeding in rapidity and precision all that has ever been witnessed."

Potato Doughnuts.

Two eggs, one cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of nutmeg, one-quarter teaspoonful of lemon extract, one cupful of sweet milk, one cupful mashed potatoes (mashed very soft and creamy), three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and about a quart of flour. Add a pinch of ginger to keep them from soaking fat. Fry in hot fat.

What Chalk is Made Of.

The chalk seen in the cliffs on the south coast of England and the chalk used on blackboards are the remains of the bodies of tiny sea creatures pressed together. The remainder of the minute bodies has disappeared long ago, but the carbonate of lime, which is chalk, has not been altered.

Of Course.

"Is anything equal to more than the sum of its parts?"

"Yes."

"What is?"

YOU'RE BILIOUS! LET "CASCARETS" LIVEN LIVER AND BOWELS

Get a 10-cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have a bad cold.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills of castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested fermenting food and foul gasses; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

TREES FULL OF FAT.

There are several trees that yield an oily substance much resembling butter and making a good substitute for it. Some of these grow in Europe, but the best known species are natives of Africa and South America.

The Bassia butyracea, or the "shea butter," as it is commonly called, grows wild on the west coast of Africa. The butter obtained from this tree is derived by pounding and pressing the seeds, which are three inches long. When extracted the oil assumes the consistency of butter and smells like chocolate. Not only is it an excellent article of food, but it is used extensively for the making of soap and candles.

The seeds of the crab tree of Brazil and Guiana are 70 per cent fat, and the "crab wood tallow" derived from them is excellent for the manufacture of candles and soap. When boiled the tallow turns out yellow butter which contains a small quantity of strychnine. The latter, however, is easily removed by prolonged boiling.

From the nutmeg a useful fat is obtained. The nutmegs which have been broken or damaged by insects are roasted, ground and pressed for the fat, which is used for cosmetic and medicinal purposes.

A tree abounding in the forests of Africa and called by Kaffirs "chignite" yields (from the fruit or bark, the exact source being unknown) a white butter-like substance which constitutes an important article of commerce on that continent.—New York World.

Labouchere's Complaint.

If people banished from their tables all the commodities which, like salt, have been condemned in print their diet would be decidedly monotonous. "Food faddists are most aggressive persons," Henry Labouchere once complained. "In my time I have known them to preach that we should give up meat, tobacco, soup, starch (including bread and potatoes), salt, tomatoes, bananas, strawberries and bath buns. I have also witnessed movements for giving up boots, waistcoats, hats, overcoats, carpets, feather beds, spring mattresses, cold baths, linen clothes, woolen clothes, sleeping more than six hours, sleeping less than nine hours and lighting fires at the bottom."

Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm is faith in action. "Faith believeth all things." Enthusiasm puts that belief to the test. The enthusiast believes that the thing can be done; he has faith to believe that it ought to be done; he has enthusiasm to do it. To the unthinking enthusiasm is but the foam on the deeply stirred waters. In truth it is the striving of the waters themselves. It is the very life of effort. —From "The Power of Mental Demand," by Herbert Edward Law.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

Dr. King, the late Bishop of Lincoln, England, whose statue was unveiled in his old cathedral the other day, was fond, in his later years, of sleeping in a chair at the seaside. One evening when he woke he was so stiff that he could not rise from his chair, so he said to a buxom fishing lass:

"Give me your hand, my dear."

The lass did so, with the remark:

"I've helped father many a time when he's been drunker than this."

Mark Twain was visiting H. H. Rogers, said a New York editor. Mr. Rogers led the humorist into his library.

"There, he said, as he pointed to a bust of marble white. "What do you think of that?"

It was a bust of a young woman coiling her hair, a graceful example of Italian sculpture. Mr. Clemens looked, and then he said:

"It isn't true to Nature."

"Why not?" Mr. Rogers asked.

"She ought to have her mouth full of hairpins," said the humorist.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

In this simple one piece frock we have a very popular model. It has the blouse entirely plain, although the bias closing has a slightly ornamental effect. The neck is low with a wide collar and the sleeves are plain, fitting the arm to the elbow and spreading a little below. They are gathered and drawn into a band cuff at the wrist.

The skirt has four gores. It is fitted at the top and is given a circular sweep at the lower part. There is a seam up the centre of the back and the closing is in the centre of the front. A little above the hem of the dress is a band of trimming, and the same material is used for the front portion of the belt. The lower edge of the skirt measures 2½ yards in the medium size.

Quite a simple dress may be made in this style of serge or gabardine and something more dressy in velveteen with trimmings of plaid taffetas. There are also plaid velvets which are nice for collar and cuffs, but which are hardly suitable for the trimming band on the skirt.

The dress pattern, No. 7,423, is cut in sizes 36 to 46 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3⅞ yards of 45 inch material, with 1½ yards of 22 inch silk to trim.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

GREEK REPLY NOT ALTOGETHER SATISFACTORY

FRENCH AVIATORS MAKE SUCCESSFUL RAID

Allies' Desire To Police The Greek Waters Refused By King

Made the Request in Order That Steps Might Be Taken to Put an End to the Enemy's Submarine Activity--Rapid Progress Has Been Made by the French and British in Their Campaign Against the Germans in the Kamarons

IS AUSTRIA SEEKING SEPARATE PEACE?

ATHENS, Nov. 29.—The Greek reply to the Entente Powers' last note was handed to the Allies' Minister here on Sunday, it was learned to-day. The Athens Government's attitude has not relieved the situation, however. The Allies' demands include a concession which the Greeks know the German powers will not consider neutral. Germany, though she has protested, is believed to consider that Greece is powerless to prevent the passage of Allied troops through Greek territory, and therefore to regard this as no violation of Greek neutrality by the French and British. Against the Allied requirement that the French and British be permitted to police the Greek waters, with a view to terminating German submarines' activity. So strong the Teutonic objection is understood to have been raised, however, that King Constantine has refused compliance.

What the Greek communication said in answer to it has not been published, but it is the general expression that while conciliatory in tone, it falls short of granting what the Entente group asks.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Rapid progress by the British and French in their campaign against the Germans in the Kamaruns, in equatorial West Africa, was officially reported to-day. The British have reached the Puge River, west of Jaunde, and the French have occupied Makondo. The German troops have been completed scattered with heavy losses in the Northern Kamarun.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—(French Official Communique).—Retaliating for a recent bombardment at Verdun by four German aviators, five French airmen have dropped twenty bombs on the railway station at Brieulles, cutting the line and wrecking a moving train, the War Office announced to-day. Grenade combats were reported in the Artois region on the Lille road and in Lorraine, in the vicinity of Reillon.

ROME, Nov. 29.—Austria is trying to conclude a separate peace, according to the Tribuna to-day.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The French steamships Algerian and Omar and the British steamship Tanis have been sunk by submarines, presumably in the Mediterranean. From the Algerian 29 persons are missing.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—The Kaiser and Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria are conferring to-day at Schoenbrun Castle, Vienna. The meeting is their first since the war began.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Serbia's ruin is declared in to-day despatches from Athens and Salonika to surpass Belgium's in its completeness. It is admitted that the Germans, Austrians and Bulgarians are in full control in all of old Serbia, and Sanjak of Novibazar, and that the Bulgars hold little more than half of Serbian Macedonia.

More than half of the population has been driven from that portion of the country that the invaders occupy. Unless powerful forces of Allies are poured into the Balkans, it is conceded by military experts that Montenegro's fate must be the same as Serbia's.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Declaring that Germany will win and will annex Canada, Charles E. Russell, Socialist leader, urged a bigger American army and navy to prevent it.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—The Dominion Government, in commandeering part of the supply of grain in eastern elevators in Canada, is acting as agent of the British Government in precisely the same manner as it has acted for the Imperial authorities in purchasing other supplies in this country. The financing of these purchases is handled through the Ottawa Branch of the Bank of England.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 29.—Seated on a stool in the room of his factory, Henry Ford to-day opened up on his critics, especially Englishmen who have ridiculed his peace efforts. "If this war is stopped now," said Ford, "it will be England who has made it possible. She has made it possible not only to stop the war, but to stop the spread of militarism. Ford denied he had pro-German tendencies. "I am pro-peace before everything, but pro-British if this war can be stopped now," he said. Plans for his peace cruise will be practically complete on Wednesday night, when he returns to New York, Ford said. Reports that Wm. Jennings Bryan was en route to Detroit to confer with Ford were not confirmed to-day.

THINKS CANADIAN WOUNDED SHOULD NOT BE SEGREGATED

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Lieut.-Col. Harry Page Croft, M.P., and chairman of the Imperial Middon, is criticising the segregation of the Canadian wounded in the Shorncliffe area. He suggests that there are reasons for a contrary policy which far outweigh any advantages from the point of view of a central organization. If the Canadians are to be segregated, he says, this priceless asset of Imperial intercourse will be lost, and parochialism will reign supreme. He knows of numerous cases where acts of thoughtfulness have won enduring approval from Canadian wounded. Now apparently this is to be discouraged, and Canadian wounded are to be hedged under Canadian care and influence. It is pointed out by the Canadian medical department that this is not the case, as hundreds of Canadians are distributed throughout the country in general and in cottage hospitals, and the Canadian institutions are by no means confined to the Shorncliffe district.

Another side of the question is that Mrs. Howard, wife of the Agent-General for Nova Scotia, has resigned her position as a Red Cross visitor because she considered that the Canadians in a suburban hospital in the North of London were not well treated; in fact, she asserted that they were treated almost as prisoners, and her offer to take them out was turned down.

MAGISTRATE DID NOT RELEASE CHAS. BREWER TO-DAY

Although an Order Was Presented Mr. Dumble Demanded That Bail Bond Include Clause Binding Accused Over to Keep Peace

MAY AMEND ORDER

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared in Police Court this morning armed with a judicial order for the release of Charles Brewer, who is awaiting trial in the County Gaol on a charge of attempted murder. Bail to the amount of four thousand dollars representing four sureties were attached to the order. Magistrate Dumble refused to sanction Brewer's release because the bond did not include a clause binding the accused over to keep the peace. Brewer is suffering from a hardening of the arteries. Some objection was made by Crown Attorney Hatton respecting the certificate of the physiciana who reported on Brewer's condition. "Doctor's certificates are easily obtained sometimes," he said. "This man has been dragged around in goal for several weeks, and I demand his release in accordance with the order," said Mr. Gordon.

"Then I will apply for a mandamus," countered Mr. Gordon.

After a little more deliberation it was decided to postpone the attempt to obtain Brewer's release until Wednesday morning. In the meantime Crown Attorney Hatton will get in touch with the Attorney-General's Department with a view of having the order amended so as to include provision for binding Brewer over to keep the peace.

VICTORIA COUNTY WILLING TO CLOSE THE PIGEON BRIDGE

The following committee from Victoria County Council will come to Peterborough on Thursday, Dec. 2nd to consider the Pigeon Creek bridge. Warden Mulligan, Reeves Fee, Hetherington, Morrison, Broad and Robertson.

The cost of building the Pigeon Creek bridge would amount to about $80,000. Warden Mulligan at the recent meeting of the Victoria County Council favoured closing it up as there is not enough rigs going over the structure to keep the grass from growing on it. "The bridge is no value whatever to Victoria County."

Warden Mulligan—I figured out it cost $2?? repair for every rig that went over the bridge.

ROUMANIA IS EXPECTED TO JOIN THE ALLIES

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Signs have multiplied in the last two days that Roumania will join the Allies and send her well-equipped army to fight the Teutonic alliance. As diplomats here see, Roumania has little choice. The Czar is believed resolved to cross Roumanian soil with or without her consent. The Balkan situation is too serious to delay, and Russia is bound by no treaty such as guaranteed Belgium's neutrality. Several hundred thousand Russian troops are massed on the Roumanian frontier, and the Bulgarian Government, anticipating Russia's quick move, has ordered the evacuation by civilians of all her villages. Definite action is expected within a few hours.

93rd BATTALION GO INTO BARRACKS ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Peterborough Soldiers Will Occupy Their Winter Quarters for the First Time To-morrow Evening—More Officers Have Joined the Establishment of the 93rd--Recruiting Campaign to be Carried Out—To-day's Military News

To-morrow will be a notable day for the 93rd Battalion—not only because it is pay-day, but also because the battalion will move into winter quarters in the armouries to-morrow night, sleeping for the first time in the barracks. Practically all details in connection with the moving in of the soldiers have been arranged and there is little left but the issuing of blankets, etc., to the men. The Army Service Corps have most of their supplies in and there will be little confusion in locating the battalion in its new home in the armouries.

Hon. Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, who visited Uxbridge yesterday, brings back a glowing report of the enthusiasm prevailing in Ontario county over the 166th Ontario County Overseas Battalion. Lt.-Col. Sam Sharpe, M.P., is the commanding officer and he and the officers of his command have been conducting a strenuous recruiting campaign which has already had splendid results. The 166th have now 213 recruits at Uxbridge and throughout the county are other quotas, which bring the total up to about 400. The recruits have been coming in at the rate of about fifteen per day. Every village and hamlet in the county has been visited once and the officers are now going through the county again. The Ontario County Council has voted $3,000 to assist in the recruiting for the 166th and a further $2,000 for a regimental band fund for the Ontario Battalion. Hon. Major Davidson says the Uxbridge recruits are well behaved and fine looking soldiers.

Notices—

The ladies of St. James' Methodist Church wish all the officers, N. C. O.'s and men of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., to attend an entertainment to be held there for their benefit this evening at 8 o'clock.

The following unclaimed mail is being held in the Battalion Orderly Room:

Lieut. Newlands, Lieut. R. S. Cross, Ptes. Robert Woods, Wm. Layfield, S. Richner, A. Hardman, W. C. McFaul.

New recruits who have passed the medical examination for the 93rd Battalion include the following:

Henry J. Browne, 69 Hunter Street, West.

Fred E. Dunford, Lakefield, Ont., 2 years in the 57th Regt.

Private Harry Fitzclarence, another of the Peterborough boys in the 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, who was with the convalescent soldiers who returned recently on the Metagama, has been passed by the Quebec depot. His right thumb was fractured and the little finger of his left hand amputated. Only a literal handful of that Peterborough company have not appeared in the casualty list as either killed or wounded.

Capt. Chas. Ackerman leaves for Picton to-morrow, where he will deliver some instructional lectures to the Picton company of the 80th Battalion.

Pte. Wm. Ebbs, of the military police of the 93rd Battalion, is paying a week-end visit to Toronto.

Although it has been officially announced that all recruits in Peterborough county are to go to the 93rd Battalion, and that the latter unit is strictly confined to the county for recruiting purposes, Corp. Boylett, one of the Peterborough members of the 59th Battalion, is here recruiting for the 59th. Col. Dawson's area is evidently larger than that assigned the 93rd.

TWO PETERBORO' BOYS ON THE CASUALTY LIST

PTE. HORACE BALLARD, 21st Battalion, officially reported seriously wounded. Pte. Ballard's home is at 451 Stewart street, and he is the nephew of Mr. Geo. Carter of that address.

Corp. Wm. Shepherdson, 153 Hart Ave., of 2nd Battalion and Pte. Horace W. Ballard, 451 Stewart Street, of the 21st Battalion Are Officially Reported Wounded.

RELATIVES NOTIFIED

The first casualty among the 57th Regiment detachment in the 21st Battalion, Second Canadian Division, so far officially recorded, was learned of yesterday, when Stanley Ballard, 451 Stewart street, received a telegram from the Adjutant-General notifying him that his brother, Pte. Horace Ballard, of Peterborough, had been seriously wounded. The telegram stated that Pte. Ballard had been admitted into the Australian Hospital at Wemeroux, France, on Sunday, Nov. 21, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the shoulder.

Pte. Horace Ballard is one of the best known Peterborough boys in the 21st Battalion. Although born in England he was brought up in Peterborough, having been a resident of this city since he was eight years old, and he has a host of friends here who will be sorry to learn that he has been wounded. Before enlisting Pte. Ballard was employed at the Canadian General Electric Works. He was a member of the Midnight Sons Club, a number of whose members are now at the front with the Canadian Contingent.

Pte. Ballard enlisted here in October, 1914, and left with the 57th detachment to join the 21st Battalion at Kingston on Nov. 8. The 21st has been at the front for several months now, but fortunately have figured very lightly in the casualty list.

Pte. Ballard lived with his uncle, Mr. Geo. Carter, 451 Stewart street.

Corp. Wm. Shepherdson.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shepherdson, 153 Hart avenue, received a telegram from the Militia Department on Sunday informing them that their son, Corp, William Shepherdson, had been seriously wounded on Sunday, November 21st, having been shot in the thigh. Further particulars, it stated, would be forwarded later. Corp. Shepherdson was one of the few remaining men of the Peterborough Company, 2nd Battalion, 1st Contingent. He was a member of "A" Company of the 57th Regiment, and had answered the first call for recruits. He and the late Corp. Bert Carpenter were the only two members of their section who had come through the battle of Langemarck uninjured. Corp. Carpenter was afterwards killed, and Corp. Shepherdson who remained with the 2nd Battalion, is now reported seriously wounded. He was born at Clairmont, Ont., and served for a short time in the regiment at Uxbridge before the family moved to Peterborough.

WHEAT SEIZED BY GOVERNMENT IS FOR ITALY

EFFECT ON THE PRICES

Special to The Examiner:

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 29. —It was announced at noon in government circles here to-day that fifteen million bushels of wheat commandeered Saturday night was for Italy and is to be delivered to Canadian seaboard by the government. Price to be paid is the ruling figure at the close of the market Saturday, 104 3-8 for No. 1 Northern.

Toronto, Nov. 29.— In local grain circles this morning there were many guesses indulged in as to the effect on prices of Government's seizure of fifteen million bushels of wheat. Opinions different widely. One set of experts reason that the action of the Government does not alter the supply and demand situation in the slightest and its ultimate effect will be slight. The majority of opinions, however, leans the other way, on the ground that the Government's action affects the foreign demand for wheat and carries with it the possibility of future action along lines similar to that just announced. Following Winnipeg's example, Toronto is not trading in wheat to-day. The immediate effect on wheat prices in the Chicago market was a sharp advance, December wheat opening at 1.03, 2 1-2 cents a bushel above Saturday's close, and May wheat opening 3 3-8 cents higher, at 108 1-2. These opening gains were not held, however, and later prices were easier, though a considerable advance over Saturday's price level was still maintained.

TURKEYS TOOK TO THE WOODS

Mr. Robert M. Little of Stoney Lake, had an exciting experience while taking a load of turkeys to Lakefield. While passing Garbutt's Swamp in Dover the turkeys broke loose and took to the woods. A hunting party was quickly organized by Mr. A. Darling, and after considerable trouble the fowl were all rounded up and placed safely in the crate.

BALE FROM THE PATRIOTIC LEAGUE

The Patriotic League of Ashburnham sent away on Saturday a bale containing the following articles: 400 dressings twelve by sixteen, 200 compresses 200 wipes, 200 bandages, 10 many tailed bandages, 15 pairs of pyjamas, 15 bed jackets, and 5 personal property bags.

EXCESSIVE PROFITS.

Profiteering, that is, making unearned money in the matter of making munitions at the expense of the country, is several shades worse than privateering. Privateering is, or was, according to the terrible ethics of war, a legitimate expedient to harass the enemy; but profiteering is a wickedly illegitimate, achievement of profit at the expense of ourselves, of our country and our cause. According to a statement made by Sir Henry Pellat, a high authority, the profit on a thousand 18-lb. shells made in Canada at $380 each is $200,000. On a total cost of $380,000, a profit of 50 per cent. squeezed out of the terrible necessity of the country and the Empire, and the Allies, is not business; it is robbery. While everybody is sacrificing so much to help on the war—spending money and losing money—it seems monstrous that a few should have enormously profitted, at the expense of the country — of those sacrificing so much. If such things are true, and no denial has been generally made, the government should "get after" such profits and demand a refund in the shape of a swingeing taxation of profits, that will compensate the country for the actual waste of public money; though no taxation can wipe out the stain of the act of Canadians making unrighteous profits out of the extremity of our nation and Empire. The great need of the Allies has been, and will continue to be, munitions. The less they cost, the more money will be available for other necessary purposes of war; the sooner we shall be able to achieve the victory.

THAT "PAPER" BLOCKADE.

The United States in its recent elephantine "note" virtually joined voice with the Germans in declaring the blockade of German ports a "paper" blockade. This, of course, means that it is not effective, and is of the same character as the paper protests the United States delivers to Germany in apologetic protest against the Teuton outrage of United States rights, against insults to her flag, which has become a mere ornamental symbol, powerless to protect the lives and persons, and of United States citizens, and inert in avenging their destruction. But Britain's blockade of Germany is no affair of paper; it is destructively effective, and one of the powerfully legitimate means of waging war by weakening the resources and power of resistance of the enemy. A woman writing from Berlin tells us, without telling it in specific terms, of the terrible state of food shortage that exists in Germany at the present time. We know that if it were plentiful, were making its way through the "paper" blockade, the Germans would not be using food substitutes such as they have been compelled in invent. Among other things we are told of the use of potatoes for flour instead of wheat; of acorns, beechnuts, maple, and linden seeds for oil and the feeding of cattle; jam instead of butter; "synthetic" rubber, which is not rubber at all, for the genuine article; every sort of substitute for coffee; chemically prepared tubes of food; newspapers for fuel; high smelling benzol instead of gasoline for automobiles, which are not allowed to be used for private purposes; paper comforters and pillows because of the lack of cotton; soda instead of kitchen soap. Lessons are being given to the women on how to cook without oil, and butter, and cream. These things are not mentioned, except to show that the "paper" blockade is a real, and not an imaginary, thing; that it pinches hard; that it shows the ever-immanent truth that Britannia rules the waves; that it is an answer, effectively unanswerable of the laboured charge of the United States that Great Britain is unlawfully interfering with her commerce because the British blockade does not blockade. The situation in this regard is encouraging, as it shows that the interminable process of attrition is daily getting nearer the bone. It is an indication that victory, with all it means for the allied cause, and the cause of humanity, is coming nearer. It is an incentive to greater effort a call for the employment of every available agency—in the way of men and money, and munitions, to the end that the end may be hastened, and the terrible slaughter, suffering and waste, may be sooner ended.

CREDIT AND BLAME.

Without thinking, more than superficially, we get the idea that in a great war like this, neutral nations have nothing to do but sit down and watch the colossal business of butchery, and reap incidental profits from the necessities of the combatants. An idea like this is effectively dispelled by a concrete example of the futility and folly and wrong of such a conception of the duty and place of neutrals in war. Sir Edward Carson, noted irreconciliable as he is, has shown clearly that the break down of international law that has attended this war, and is attended, in turn, by a long train of murderous acts, involving even the lives and property of neutrals, is due to the attitude of one of the greatest neutrals the United States. Speaking in London Saturday to the "American Luncheon Club," Sir Edward Carson said:

"America is the greatest neutral at the present moment. When I mention America as the greatest neutral naturally I turn to the conduct of neutrals in relation to the mitigation of the horrors of war, and nothing fills me more with dismay when I think of the outcome of the horrible period through which we are passing than the fact—I am not blaming anybody, but it is a fact—that international law, the product of all the peace instincts of all nations with a view to preventing interruption to civilization, even in time of hostilities, has, I fear, been entirely abolished, or at any rate greatly encroached upon by the impotence of the neutrals themselves."

Sir Edward went on to point out that while a neutral nation might by diplomatic, "notes," strong in language, satisfy the consciences of its citizens, it would not by mere notes meet the obligations placed upon it as a party to international law; that the failure of international law through the apathy of neutrals, would kill faith in conventions between nations, and that the only safeguard of peace would be increased armaments and greater armies. Even now the United States is exemplifying this truth by its big programme of increased naval forces and larger armies; things it might have avoided if it had lived up to its obligations as the greatest neutral nation. If it had done its duty as a neutral it might have hastened peace; or if not that, have immensely mitigated the horrors of war resulting from the breach of international ethics, which only neutral nations can prevent or lessen. With all this Sir Edward Carson bore testimony to the great debt of gratitude we owe to the people of the United States. He said he would never finish his speech if he attempted to describe the many benefits they have conferred on humanity, even if the Government had been remiss in its relations to the interests involved in maintaining the integrity of international law. He went on to specify the latest benefit of Americans and not the least:

"I call to mind the murder of that brave woman in Belgium, Nurse Cavell. Never will there depart from the minds of Englishmen and Irishmen who understand the situation the brave and humane efforts made by Brand Whitlock and Hugh Gibson, who, indeed, fulfilled not merely the functions of representatives of your great United States but showed themselves men who had engraved in them those great qualities and feelings of humanity which even in times of war are implanted by our Great Maker, mercy, forgiveness and comfort, developed in them in the highest degree. We are grateful to them. America ought to be proud of them, as I am sure she is."

Sir Edward Carson closed with the expression of the hope—which we all share—that the United States and Britain (and we include Canada) would be drawn close together in the interests of civilization and humanity.

ENGLISH GOOD NAME.

The confidence reposed in the British soldiers is exemplified by the following item, which contains a splendid tribute to the honour of our men in the trenches. A convent in one of the Belgian towns near the firing line was threatened with a Hun invasion. Knowing the horrors that had occurred on previous occasions, the Rev. Mother was sorely perplexed about the safety of her nuns and pupils. One of the nuns suggested that they be sent into the British trenches, and the suggestion was acted upon. When the Rev. Mother was asked if she had no fears for the safety of her flock, she epitomized the honour of our troops in the single sentence: "THE MEN ARE ENGLISH."

A CONSERVATIVE JOURNAL DEFENDS TRANSCONTINENTAL CONSTRUCTION "EXTRAVAGANCE"

To eliminate curvature and reduce gradients between Scranton and Binghampton, the Lackawanna Railroad has recently expended $12,000,000. The replacement work involved the construction of a huge concrete viaduct half a mile long across a valley over which the trains are carried at a height of 240 feet. By this bit of reconstruction the mileage between Buffalo and New York is only reduced by three miles, but by reducing the grade of 1.25 to .69 two locomotives now haul the load between Binghampton and Scranton which formerly required five. The new bit of line, 30 miles long, built within a stone's throw of the old track, cost including the viaduct construction, over $300,000 a mile.

What it would cost to make either the Lehigh or the Lackawanna for its entire length a road practically without curvature or grades, we do not pretend to say, but we have authority for the statement that several billion dollars could be expended profitably on American railways in the way of replacement or reconstruction. The roads, in short, can materially decrease their operating expenses per ton mile by straightening and levelling their lines.

This leads us to wonder whether some of the recent criticism against railroad construction in Canada is not misdirected, and perhaps mischievous. The dog who barks up the wrong tree does more harm than good. The critic who hurls his assault at the one point which is impregnable can only bring upon himself and his cause disaster.

Hon. Edward Blake has a good case against the men who diverted the cash and credits given by the Canadian Government to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company from construction work to stock promotions but he made a serious mistake when he denounced the enterprise itself as visionary and impracticable. Those who assail the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway may be justified in saying that the road was unnecessary, or that the men who built it got too much money out of it, but they are treading upon dangerous ground when they say that the road should not in its construction have aimed at anything like physical perfection. By the same token those who think the construction of the mountain section of the Canadian Northern was premature or too generously financed by the Dominion and British Columbia Governments are badly briefed when they declare against a construction policy which resulted in a road crossing the mountains at a grade of only one-half of one per cent.

Our railway problem is serious and complicated enough without unnecessary muddling. A clear perception and a sane judgment are needed, and we think, if brought to bear upon the problem, they will arrive at the conclusion that the superb construction of the National Transcontinental throughout its line, and of the Canadian Northern for nearly its entire length as far as its trunk or continental line is concerned, furnishes our one big asset; the one fixed point from which we can map out our future policy. We are able, at any rate to eliminate the item of "replacement," usually the heaviest cloud that shadows railway property as an investment.

Great differences of opinion must exist as to the future of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern. These roads and the Canadian Pacific as well must have huge earnings to produce a return upon their capitalization. Quite possibly the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern could easily do all the work that is now being done by the Grand Trunk Pacific. Still, if a man has three horses for work which a team could do, he may congratulate himself upon the fact that the extra horse is sound and will be available if needed. Our railway problem is acute and the wasteful duplication of service made necessary by our competitive system makes it more difficult. That the two new roads are so admirably built is, however in our opinion rather a cause for rejoicing than an invitation to despair

WANTS PETERBORO' COUNTY COUNCIL TO HELP PAY FOR KINMOUNT BRIDGE

Reeve Morrison, at the meeting of the Victoria County Council spoke on the Kinmount bridge, saying that the township of Somerville will give the their moral and financial support. "The county of Peterborough through a loop-hole crawled out of payment for this bridge and we wish to endeavour and place the maintenance of it on the rightful owners. Somerville people are proud of it, but consider they have no right to be charged with its upkeep. The bridge was built first by the province, but on its wearing out was rebuilt by the County of Victoria. Peterborough was expected to assist in paying for the structure, but failed to do so. On bringing the matter to court for decision two judges gave it in favour of Peterborough that they were not responsible for the structure, as according to the bridge-building act it could not be made a county bridge. So the matter has been a bone of contention since its erection."

A committee will approach the County of Peterborough asking them to assume half the cost of the bridge.

WHERE LIBERALISM STANDS.

"There are those among us — the young hot-bloods—who say: "If they (the Conservatives) are bound to break the truce, let us at them.' The message I bring from Sir Wilfrid Laurier is to ask you to remember that this is no time to be looking only for the momentary success of the Liberal party. He asks you to stand for something higher than present and immediate political success. He has made greater sacrifices than we have. He has a bigger vision than we who are younger. He asks you, the young men of Liberalism, and all of us to concern ourselves wholly with winning victories in Flanders, in the Balkans and at the Dardanelles, rather than winning party victories at the polls."—Hon. George P. Graham, to the members of the General Reform Association of Ontario.

"If ever there was a war which commanded the consecrated, whole-souled support of every man who calls himself a Liberal, that war is this war. Britain is fighting for every advance, every reform, every ideal of free government and democracy that true Liberalism holds dear. It is up to every one of us to do his utmost to aid in destroying the menace of Prussian militarism which prevents any guarantee of real peace and progress in the world."—N. W. Rowell, Ontario Liberal leader.

Much of the excellence of well-cooked vegetables depends upon the proper use of seasonings and sauces. The seasoning selected should undoubtedly be suitable for the dish, but so much depends upon custom that only general suggestions can be made. The Italian and some other races are fond of garlic, the Germans of summer savory of "bohnenkraut" in string beans, and the English of mint with peas. Each housewife must select the seasonings which her family prefers, and endeavour to use them in such a way that the special flavours may be most satisfactorily brought out.

Here is a rice pudding which is both easily made and toothsome, and also possesses the useful quality of cheapness, which is something sought after but seldom found in these days of enhanced prices: Put half a pound of rice into a saucepan along with about two teaspoonfuls of milk and a few drops of lemon juice. Cook the rice slowly until it has thickened, then add three or four tablespoonfuls of syrup, and, if you like a sweet pudding, a little sugar. Continue cooking until the syrup has been thoroughly mixed through the rice. Then turn the pudding into a mould and set it aside until cold. That is the every day way; but if you want something a little more special you might arrange some apricots in a pudding dish, pour the rice over them, and serve cold with rice, rich custard.

SERBIAN ARMY IS INTACT, RETREAT IS ORDERLY

Will Be Ready for Offensive When Allies are Ready

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The Chronicle has the following from Athens:

For some time now the invaders have had the best roads in their hands and the Serbians have been without the use of railways, yet their retreat was carried out with a remarkably slight loss of men, though a considerable amount of material had latterly to be abandoned. Though the Serbians have now been compelled to abandon the Katchanik Pass and all that region, their magnificent efforts there have been of infinite value. They have indeed saved the northern army while that army did its splendid work in slowing up the Austro-Germans advance and making it extremely costly.

Save Northern Army.

The Serbians at Katchanik and in the Prilep region, by a brilliant defence alternating with heroic intervals of daring offensive, kept the way of retreat open for the gallant northern army, which now, in two sections, is being directed into Albania and via Albania into southern Serbia. That army is now retreating in perfect order.

For the moment the headquarters are at Prisrend. It is thought likely that headquarters will shortly be transferred to Scutari, in Albania, towards which place a greater portion of the northern army will march, it being impossible to send a larger part to South Serbia, owing to the extremely bad condition of the only southward leading route through eastern Albania. It can be stated on very high authority that King Peter's glorious army is still practically intact. "When the great offensive comes," said a highly placed Serbian officer yesterday, "you will see that we shall be ready to take our part in it."

Mrs. Timpkins was fond of moving. One day a friend met Timpkins walking quietly after a load of his goods and chattels.

"Hello, Jim, about!" he hailed him. "Moving again? Where are you at to this time?"

Timpkins returned his greeting and then replied:

"I am sure I don't know—I'm just following the 'ole 'uc we to find out."

C. P. R. NOW HAS 35,000 SMALL SHAREHOLDERS

Number of Holders of Not Over 50 Shares of the Great Corporation's Stock Has Nearly Trebled in Eight Years—A Wonderful Distribution—Widespread Confidence in Future of Canada and Its Premier Railway.

The increasing number of stockholders in Canadian Pacific gives a vivid indication of the growth of confidence in the company's position, and in the Dominion of Canada, as a centre for capital investment.

At the annual meeting of the C.P.R. in 1907 it may be recalled that Sir Thomas Shaughnessy remarked that there were upwards of 14,000 shareholders whose holdings did not exceed fifty shares, each, of the company's stock. By June 1915 this number had swelled to 27,000.

The Financial Times secured the definite assurance this week that there are now 35,000 names on the company's list, of persons holding fifty shares or less. This is a marvellous record, and gives striking evidence of the increasing popularity of the shares among small investors.

C.P.R.'s Earnings.

The dramatic increase in Canadian Pacific's earnings continue to be a sensation in the railroad world. New York observers are already confident that the company will easily earn its 10 per cent. dividend in the present fiscal year, in fact this week forecasts were made that the company would earn at the rate of 15 per cent. on the capital.

Since the latter part of September, when the traffic tide definitely turned, the road has piled up earnings so fast that the losses of July and August have been entirely wiped out, and the road is now well over $1,000,000 ahead of last year in gross.

Of course the Canadian Pacific is now at the height of the crop moving season and grain shipments have been unprecedented. The C.P.R. is reported to be moving 12 miles of loaded cars daily. Winnipeg bankers are confident that the grain movement will continue abnormally heavy throughout December and January. Aside from this kind of traffic, however, Canadian Pacific has vast quantities of munitions and war materials to transport, as these are being turned out in profusion from scores of plans in Canada.

Apart entirely from traffic, the C.P.R.'s Special Revenue for 1915 promises to offer the most interesting phase of the company's position. The company itself has been a heavy manufacturer of materials of war, and its fleet is largely contracted to the British Government.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE CARD THAT TOOK THE TRICK.

By RUSSELL THORNE.

[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

"The trouble with you, Jim," said Tom Darby to his friend James Terry, "so far as women are concerned, is that you don't understand them."

"I wish some fellow who knows all about them would establish a school where men could be taught to manage women. I'd enter for instruction. You might give me some points if you would."

"Oh, I don't pretend to know the subject thoroughly. I merely keep in mind a few general feminine characteristics. I don't think much of learning theoretically without practice. I'll tell you what I'll do. There's Maggie Worth, a friend of mine, whom I think I know pretty well. I'll introduce you to her and from time to time coach you on how you shall act toward her. How would you like that?"

"First rate."

The introduction was made after a few preliminary general instructions, such as not to miss an opportunity to pay a compliment, never to engage in argument, and always be deferential. Terry did not have much confidence in being able to learn the subject, but was anxious to get rid of a certain faculty he had discerned in himself for antagonizing the sex. He put his mind on the subject, reported all that was going on between himself and the girl on whom he was practicing to his friend Darby, and received minute instructions as to how to act in each and every case. But whether he was especially obnoxious to this particular girl or he was incapable of being taught how to make a lady's man of himself, he seemed to fare worse with Miss Worth than with any woman he had ever met. Darby kept suggesting acts and words unimportant in themselves, but well calculated to gratify a woman. They all appeared to irritate rather than please the person on whom they were practiced.

"Just hold on a bit," said Darby after Terry had reported the failure of one of the "attentions" the coach had suggested. "You keep off for awhile, and I'll step in and see if I can find out what's the matter. From what you tell me, you carry out my instructions to the letter, and yet they don't seem to work. I'll get Maggie to tell me wherein you fail."

A few days later Darby told his friend that he had better choose another subject. Maggie had taken an especial dislike to him. There was Darby's own sister Ruth. Better try her. Terry seemed quite relieved at the change and entered upon sharpening his abilities to please the sex by whetting them on the new subject. One day Terry said to his pupil:

"Somehow, ever since I introduced you to Ruth, Maggie has seemed displeased not only with you, but with me. She says you are a weak, vacillating sort of fellow, and my being a friend of yours shows conclusively that—well, she puts it 'birds of a feather flock together.'"

"Why don't you try some of the devices on her you recommended to me?"

"I will. I'll send her the prettiest basket of flowers I can buy and write her a note. I know exactly how to put it. Just you wait."

A few days later Terry met Miss Worth walking in the park. She smiled at him and asked him if he would show her the way to the grotto. In his ignorance of how to please a woman he replied that he hadn't time, whereupon the girl angrily told him that he hadn't a single gentlemanly instinct. He gave way at once and walked humbly beside her. Before parting with him she told him to come to see her that evening; she had a present for him. He called, and, taking the most beautiful flowers from those sent her by Darby, she gave them to him. He took them to Darby and with wonder in his eyes asked him what it all meant.

"Well, I'll be jinged!" exclaimed the novice in woman's management.

"I'll tell you what, Jim," he said presently. "While I have a general knowledge of the characteristics of women, there's something in this case that puzzles me. I prefer that you should work the rest of it out by yourself."

"I don't know how," said Terry ingeniously.

There was an estrangement from this time between teacher and pupil, between Terry and Ruth Darby and between Ruth Darby and Maggie Worth. Darby's efforts to make a lady's man of his friend had apparently borne thistles instead of fruit. One day Darby went to his friend and said:

"Jim, I've just had a talk with Ruth What do you suppose she says?"

"What?"

"That Maggie Worth is dead in love with you."

"With me?"

"Yes. And so is Ruth in love with you."

"Great Scott! What makes you think that?"

"She's so bitter against Maggie."

"Heavens! What am I to do?"

"I've instructed you how to win the girl I expected to marry. At any rate you've done it."

There was a solemn pause between the friends, at the end of which the pupil said, "Tom, can you show a how to undo it?"

"Jim," said Darby, extending his hand after another pause, "women are sharper than men to see some things I didn't know what an honorable numskull you are."

350,000 METHODISTS FROM GREAT BRITAIN HAVE JOINED THE COLORS

LONDON, Nov. 5 (Letter).—The prominence attained by the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Great Britain on the battlefield was brought out strikingly this week at a conference of Methodists presided over by Sir Robert W. Perks, President of the Conference of England.

Sir Robert, who is as well known to Methodists in America as here gave statistics showing that of the 5,000,000 Methodists in the British Isles, more than 350,000 have joined the Colours. Ministering to them are 120 chaplains and 50,000 lay preachers.

Of the Wesleyan Methodist ordained preachers, thirty-six are serving in the firing line. More than one of them has been mentioned in the despatches from Sir John French for notable bravery, conspicuous among them being the Rev. O. S. Watkins who dumped handfuls of bombs in the German trenches, and the Rev. A. T. Cape, recently decorated by King George with the military cross for a deed of equal daring.

Sir Robert, a world-famous constructor of engineering projects, member of the firm of Macarthur, Perks & Co., with offices here and in New York, has had intimate reports from the battlefield in which the spirit of the Methodist fighters is described as "unwavering in a Christian faith that makes them dauntless in the face of withering fire."

"The morale of the whole British Army is superb," said Sir Robert giving up their lives for their country. Throughout all the Army runs a spirit of fortitude that speaks wonders for the spiritual phase of the lives of these fighters.

"When the war began men of the Methodist faith, as of the Church of England, the Roman Catholic Church the Jewish faith, or whatever it might be, naturally, once they got upon the field, began to think of their own religious training. They wanted ministers of their own faith to cater to their spiritual wants.

"Speaking alone for the Methodist Church, I am able to say that, as soon as our men went to the Colours, we started organizing a system whereby within a very short time Methodist preachers were on their way to join. We now have 120 chaplains in different parts of the lines, under whose direction the religious work is carried on. Their huge staff of lay preachers is sufficient to ensure prompt service wherever needed.

"Our Church sends out literature to the men, and hymn books or leaflets are provided as they are required. We now have a strong army of 350,000 fighting Methodists in the ranks, and they are all as stoutly religious spirit of the men.

"We've had a hot fight and I rather think the Germans got the worst of it," wrote one soldier from the battlefield of Flanders. "We were right up to the cannons' mouths and they gave us a raking. Lots of our men fell, but we kept at it until we'd dug the Germans out of their trenches. Here I am in a hospital, all shot up but not so bad as some of the Germans we left. Now we're going to have prayers and sing our hymns. It cheers us up and gets us ready for the next fight. They cannot kill off the Methodists."

That's the spirit that runs through hundreds of letters that keep coming from the Front.

Persons who are accustomed to use tea-leaves for sweeping their carpets and find they leave stains should substitute some freshly cut grass. It answers the same purpose, and gives a brighter and fresher appearance to the carpet.

Germany, Under Mask of Humanity, Denudes Poland of All Resources

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A dark picture of conditions in Russian Poland, incidentally affording an argument against the necessity of providing food by charity, is painted in an article which was published in The Times. "A leading member of the so-called Polish Independence Party," which remains in close touch with the Supreme Polish National Committee of Austrian Poland, is responsible for the statements.

The Times explains that the latter committee created and is responsible for the Polish legions fighting with the Austro-Hungarian Army against Russia, and says that the author of the memorandum, therefore, cannot be supposed to entertain hostile bias, at least against Germany's Austrian ally.

"One of the main features of the German administration in Poland," says the memorandum, "is the attempt to exploit the occupied territory economically to the utmost. Every new regulation aims at getting as much as possible out of the country, although the German authorities try to disguise this tendency in different ways.

"It is explained by reasons of strategy, or order, of policy, and even of humanity. The German authorities are especially anxious to give an appearance of humanitarianism to their policy in Russian Poland."

The memorandum says that Berlin's relief activity was short-lived. In March, 1915, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, it says, proclaimed his famous order of reprisal for the destruction of Memel (East Prussia) by the Russians, under which the Polish districts were to answer by contributions and other burdens. The German press raised its voice against contributions for Russian Poland.

Polish Food Supplies Seized

By an order of April 27, the memorandum continues, all grain and potatoes, after one and one-half poods (about fifty-five pounds) had been left as a supply for each inhabitant until harvest, were to be delivered to a Posen company mentioned in the order. The order explained that the purpose was to provide flour for districts where there was a shortage. The peasants in the district of Kujawy, who had plenty of grain, which they were keeping for an hour of need, were exhorted to give up grain for famine sufferers in Dombrova. That district received an absolutely insufficient supply, but on July 1 an order appropriating the rest of the grain for the German Army was enforced.

"This order," the memorandum says, "extended confiscation to the coming harvest, without any pretense of philanthropy or humanitarianism."

Asserting that from the first the Germans "condemned the industries of Russian Poland to perdition," the memorandum gives long details of alleged destruction or confiscation of property. It says that virtually all the coal-mining machinery in the district of Dombrowa was destroyed in the autumn of 1914 "for strategical reasons;" and that the population, dependent on the mines, were made desperate thereby.

Other incidents cited are the withdrawal of the State Bank, the absorption of the country's fuel supply, the requisitioning of many commodities and of quantities of factory machinery necessary for the country's industries, which were taken to Germany, and the seizure of factories and raw material to the value of $85,000,000.

40,000 Workmen Deported.

Payment for requisitioned property, the memorandum asserts, was made a matter of grace on a very inadequate basis, and to be settled after the war. The worst blow is described as having been the inducing of skilled labour to go to Germany under pressure. 40,000 persons having done so.

As a result of the foregoing measures, the memorandum says, hundreds of thousands of working class families are faced with starvation; manufacturers are hopping many persons virtually on charity; and 250,000 persons in Lods are living on $30,000 to $45,000 per week.

The article says the Germans have established a monopoly in coal, for which they charge exorbitant prices; have inflated the currency; have compelled local authorities to pay for repairs to roads and railways which are used only for military purposes; have confiscated Government estates; denuded forests; placed incredibly high customs tariffs on the necessaries of life; compelled all persons to carry expensive passports, from which alone the Kaiser's Government has realized $20,000,000, and levied high fines on towns and persons for violations of laws.

"The population," the memonadum concludes, "tired out by the war and ruined by so many disasters, accepts them in an apathetic mood. There is the reflection, however, that one does not ruin economically a country in which one expects to stay."

Many districts, the memorandum says, were threatened with famine as early as the autumn of 1914. The industrial regions and coal districts of Dombrowa and Czenstochowa were completely cut off from external food supplies, but local organizations were doing wonders in their attempts to save the population from starving.

Says Berlin Asked for Our Charity.

"The news of their distress," the statement adds, "spread throughout Europe and America, giving rise to the formation of relief committees. A committee was formed by Henryk Sienkiewicz, the author, in Switzerland, and the Rockefeller Institute (Foundation) discussed philanthropic action. Even official circles in Berlin announced their adhesion to this philanthropic work, undertaken with American money, and in the newspapers humanitarian proclamations appeared, signed by German officials, asking for contributions for Russian Poland, threatened by famine.

"The Polish population of the occupied districts accepted these measures with skepticism, clearly understanding that this was not a case for philanthropy; that there was no need to have recourse to outside help to ward off famine; that Russian Poland by itself produces enough grain and other foodstuffs to feed its population abundantly."

Throughout the autumn of 1914, says the writer, thousands of German wagons carried oy grain, potatoes, and other foodstuffs which were taken into Germany. The Germans brought threshing machines and even machines for digging potatoes in order to provide themselves systematically with food. On their return in the winter, although there was plenty of food in the country, they forbade it being transported from one district to another on the pretext of preventing speculation.

Thousands of bushels of potatoes were rotting in some districts, says the statement, while across the borders the populations were dying from epidemics due to starvation. The German agents of the company from Posen to which the German military authorities had given the sole right to trade in foods and other produce made requisitions on villages and manors until the country was bare of food, while the Berlin Relief Committee appealed to the German public, fed on Polish grain, for contributions and alms for the hungry Poles.

WATCH FOR THE OPENING | NEW XMAS TOY & FANCY CHINA DEPT. at the HALL STORE THIS WEEK RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

A MESSAGE TO THE WIVES OF THE SOLDIERS OF OUR DOMINION

An Appeal From the Canadian Patriotic Fund That Should Be Carefully Read—Administration of the Fund is a Partnership and the Funds Must Be Carefully Safe-guarded.

With the announcements and publicity [illegible] of the new Patriotic Fund Campaign which will be put on in the city, beginning next week, and culmination the week following the matter of an appeal to the wife of the soldier receiving allowances from the fund is of interest generally. It shows the earnest efforts being made by the officers of the fund, who are guiding its affairs from the seat of administration to advise people as to expenditure and to try and leave no excuses that those who subscribe to the fund may be able to put forward against its support.

It is now known that in almost every locality there are those who do not expend the money wisely. Having real money at disposal it is spent in other than real substantial necessaries such as are required for the living and comfort of a Canadian family. It is regretted that a few women in such way give a black eye to the fund and to some extent discredit it in the eye of the public. The very large majority of the wives of the soldiers are most careful and painstaking that economy shall be the rule, and it is wholly wrong that their interests should even by neglection be allowed to suffer. So the matter is here printed that all may see the counsel that is offered.

A Message.

The Executive Committee of the national Canadian Patriotic Fund wishes to address a message to the soldiers' wives and dependents throughout Canada. Naturally, our first thought is of recognition and appreciation for the magnificent service which you have rendered, in permitting your men to go to the front. Their deeds of bravery are matched by your acts of sacrifice.

When the war broke out and our brave men came forward to enlist, it was felt that there might be some, among those left behind, who would not be sufficiently provided for by the Government grants. Men who could not enlist, but who desired to help, felt called upon to step into the breach, and are endeavouring to make good to the soldier's wife the difference between what the Government gives her, and the amount needed to enable her to live in decency and comfort. To this end the national Canadian Patriotic Fund was created, and branches have been formed throughout Canada, from one end to the other. Thousands have contributed to its funds some in large and many in small amounts.

Should Be Partnership.

The administration of the Canadian Patriotic Fund is a partnership. There may sometimes be a tendency, as between a Relief Committee and the soldier's wife, to look upon it rather as a tug-of-war, one party being at each end of the rope, endeavouring to pull the other over the middle line. This ought not to be. Those of us who administer the fund, and those of us on whom the money is expended, are all doing equally valuable work. Each is able to help or hurt the Fund by the way in which he or she acts or works.

It is worth our while, for a few minutes, to consider the sources of this Fund. Some people imagine that the Dominion Government gives to it large sums. This is not the case. We have never directly received one dollar from the Federal authorities. It is true that monies have been contributed by county and municipal councils; but probably three-quarters of all that has come into our treasury has been by the voluntary gifts of patriotic citizens. To many of these their subscriptions mean great sacrifices. Men and women are going without what they have been accustomed to have, in order to contribute to the Patriotic Fund. Thousands of workers on railroads, in factories, in lumber and mining camps are giving a proportion of their wages to the national Fund. The North-West Mounted Police, for example, give us one day's pay per month; the Civil Servants of Alberta, less than one thousand in number, turned in over $96,000 during the first year of the war. We could give scores of instances where people of small means have given generously to help the the soldiers' dependents.

Must Be Safeguarded.

Funds that are gathered together from such sources, that represent the sacrifices of thousands of patriotic citizens, must necessarily be carefully safeguarded. The national Executive and the Relief Committees of our branches realize that they are handling trust funds. However much their sympathies may be moved, they feel that they can only give assistance within certain well-defined lines. The Canadian Patriotic Fund has been incorporated by act of Parliament. It is governed therefore, by laws which, if broken, would bring those responsible for so doing, into danger of punishment. The Act of Incorporation says: "The object of the Corporation shall be to collect, administer and distribute the Fund for the assistance, in case of need, of the wives, children and dependent relatives of officers and men, resident in Canada, who during the present war may be on active service with the Naval and Military forces of the British Empire and Great Britain's Allies." With this Act before them, the first question that every Relief Committee must ask is this: Would Mrs. ——— and her family be "in need" if there were no Patriotic Fund? If the answer be "No, they would not," then that family, no matter how many members may have gone to the front, has no valid claim on the Fund. If the answer be "Yes, the family without assistance could not decently live on the separation allowance and assigned pay," then the Patriotic Fund can be called upon to supply the amount needed to secure a reasonable degree of comfort.

When we appeal to the public for funds, we generally ask people to sikn a pledge card. This pledge distinctly states that the contributions which they are giving and will give, are for assistance, "in the case of need, of the wives, etc." When, therefore, we accept money thus subscribed, we bind ourselves to expend it only where actually needed. Any committee that might do otherwise, would lay itself open to criticism and might be liable to punishment.

The Fundamental Principle.

The fundamental principle of the Fund is that each community throughout Canada shall give what it can and draw what it needs. All contributions are placed in a common purse. You will see, therefore, how important it is that there be uniformity of distribution, and that the soldier's wife in one town be treated similarly to those in another. This means, therefore, that your local committee ought not to be more generous with you than the local committees of the neighbouring communities. When we go to the public for money, we have to be able to assure the givers that the Fund is being economically administered. Nothing cuts off our income so much as to have the idea prevalent in a community that our money is being extravagantly expended.

From time to time the management of the Patriotic Fund is urged to reduce the scale of payment. This, we have hitherto been unwilling to do. Some revision has, it is true, been recently recommended, whereby certain classes of families are dropped from the Fund; but little change has been made since the beginning, in the treatment of the soldier's wife with children, or the widowed mother, whose only unmarried son was her sole support.

Reduction Suggested.

When, on the first of April, the Government decided that assigned pay, to the extent of at least $15 per month should be compulsory, and that every woman receiving separation allowance should, in addition, receive at least $15 per month of her husband's or son's pay, there were many that thought that the Patriotic Fund should reduce its assistance accordingly. This course may even yet be adopted. It really depends upon the soldier's wife, as to whether it shall be or not. If you make good use of your money, you lessen the likelihood of such revision being made. A woman's first duty when, after being a while on the Patriotic Fund, she finds herself less pressed financially than she was before, is to pay her husband's just debts by means of the money that comes from him as assigned pay. When this has been done, she is justified in using this same monthly allowance to adequately furnish the home and to properly clothe herself and the children. When these things are accomplished, she should then try to put aside each month, the whole, or at least a large part, of the assigned pay. She should remember that on the day her husband returns and rejoins his family, his pay as a soldier ceases. He may not secure immediate employment. If his wife has put aside a little nest egg, to tide the family over the time while he is looking for work and getting back into civil life, this will be of greatest possible service. Hence, we say to the soldier's wife, pay your debts, furnish your home, and put aside something against your husband's return. If you do these things, you use his assigned pay for his benefit as well as your own.

Few Bring Discredit.

Now, while we believe that by far the greater number of the soldiers' wives are honestly and faithfully attempting to do their part, there are a few that are bringing discredit upon themselves and trouble to the Fund. One soldier's wife who is extravagant and careless does more harm to the Patriotic Fund than ten careful, frugal women can undo. We want you to feel that this extravagant woman in injuring the Fund is hurting you, and we want you to influence her to a better course.

A traveller, when in Australia, noticing that the boiled eggs he had for breakfast were stamped with four little stars and the number "22," enquired what this meant, and was told that the Four-Star-Egg-Circle had sent these eggs, and that those he had had for breakfast had come from Farmer No. 22. If one of those eggs had been stale, and he had reported the fact, the Secretary of the Four-Star-Egg-Circle, away back in the hills, would have been notified that Farmer, No. 22 was careless about his eggs, and he would have been told that no more Four-Star Eggs would be taken in future, unless [illegible] disciplined Farmer N. 22. Now, one careless woman can injure the reputation of you all by her thoughtlessness and extravagance. Remember, therefore, when you are tempted to make extravagant use of your money, that, although the money is your own, it can be so spent as to injure the cause and all those connected with the Fund.

In For a Long War.

From all appearances we are in for a long war. Canada will have to send many more men, and the women of Canada exert a mighty influence in helping to secure them. If you, who are being helped by the Fund speak well of it to your neighbours, other women will also let their husbands go. Hence, we appeal to you to guard and defend the reputation of the Patriotic Fund. You may sometimes think that you are not getting your just due. Perhaps you are not; but still the committee in your town should be credied with endeavouring to do its best. Do not "knock" the administration and thus dry up the sources of the Fund. We shall need a large sum of money to carry us through 1916. We can only get it if we have the confidence of the public and the support of the soldiers' wives. There are many ways in which you can help. You can express your appreciation so that others may give. While your husbands are at the front helping to beat Germany, you also can bring up strong reinforcements by helping to get more men and more money.

The Patriotic Fund assists the soldier's family only while he is absent from home. On his return, other agencies must be looked to, if the family is still in need of help. Before, however, your local committee drops you from their roll, they will endeavour to help your husband to find employment, and if he is disabled will direct you to those who will make your case their care.

If we can all remember that this Patriotic Fund is a great partnership, some of us working on the money-raising end, and others on the investment end, having in view the fact that the only dividends we seek are comfort and security for the soldiers' dependents, we are certain that the generous-hearted people of the Dominion—from the Atlantic to the Pacific—will see to it that our purse is kept filled until the end of the war.

Then the man who is at the front will fight all the better and the woman who let him go will feel that her sacrifice is appreciated.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND.

"CABIRIA"

There is in "Cabiria," the stupendous photo spectacle by D.Annunsio that is to be shown at "The Grand" for 3 days, commencing Thursday, December 2, a very tender love story which starts at the beginning of the picture and is maintained all through the two hours and forty minutes which are taken in exhibiting the picture. A little girl, "Cabiria," is rescued from sacrifices to the god Moloch by a chivalrous Roman patrican. They are parted. She becomes a slave to the Carthaginian princess. The patrician goes to fight in the battles of the Roman Republic Nevertheless, he is true to the sentiment which the beautiful little Sicilian girl has inspired in him. In after years he rescues her from Carthaginian persecutors. He saves her from destruction and molestation at the hands of the furious high priest and finally when the storm and carnage of the great epoch is cleared away he takes the beautiful girl to his home in Rome as his bride.

MOVING CROPS DIFFICULT TASK

IMMENSITY OF YIELD PROVES ALMOST PAST UNDERSTANDING.

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 29.—That the trails in the southern part of the provinces are simply black with teams which are hauling grain to the market; that the majority of the elevators are full, and that the railroads are experiencing the greatest difficulty in moving the grain, owing to the immense yields, is the statement of M. A. Craig, Deputy Minister of Agriculture. The yields, he says, are so immense as to be almost unbelievable, cases of 50 and 60 bushels per acre being quite common.

As a consequence of the big crop there has been very little fall plowing this year, all the energies of the farmers being concentrated on harvesting operations.

AN APPEAL FOR THE LADY JELLICOE FUND

This winter, owing to the tremendous increase in the number of small vessels, trawlers, motor yachts, etc., employed in patrol work and submarine hunting, there is great need for comforts for the sailors and others employed on them. The commanding officers on the Grand Fleet have also expressed the opinion that help from those interested to the disabled seamen and the stricken relatives of the fallen, would be very acceptable.

Lady Jellicoe can stil find use for any number of socks, vests, pants, stockings, mittens, and jerseys for the naval hospitals, and will gladly receive money for supplying blankets for the smaller craft.

Lady Jellicoe can still find use for produced £23,000 in money and over 90,000 garments were sent from her house to the Grand Fleet.

Up to 23rd April, 1915, $963.50 contributed by Canadians was sent by Mr. Justice Hodgins to Lady Jellicoe and over 6,000 articles were also forwarded to the Emergency Committee A statement of the moneys verified by the manager in Toronto of the Bank of Ottawa was forwarded to Lady Jellicoe, and has been enclosed to the various papers throughout Canada. These figures do not include what was sent by others direct in consequence of her letter.

Any contributions in comforts or money sent to Mr. Justice Hodgins, 9 Dale Avenue, Toronto, will be forwarded by him free of expense to Lady Jellicoe.

Aged Dummer Man Sends Donation to New Patriotic Fund

The first subscription for the new Patriotic Fund came to hand on Saturday, being received from Mr. Jacob White, Con. 2, Dummer.

Mr. White had been invited to attend the conference as one of the deputation to wait on the County Council on Wednesday next. He wrote a most cheery and encouraging letter said that as he was over 80 years of age he could not very well attend, but that his heart was in the cause and he would cordially support it. He enclosed a handsome subscription to the fund, and said he hoped it would be large, and that the county would do a liberal and helpful part.

That is the expectation of the committee—that the County will recognize its responsibility and do what is handsome.

SPECIAL MEETINGS AT THE TABERNACLE

Beginning Tuesday night, there will be special services in Bethany Tabernacle each afternoon at 3 o'clock and each evening at 8 o'clock throughout this week.

Rev. P. W. Philpott, the well-known pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle of Hamilton, will be the speaker for the first three days. Mr. Philpott was at one time stationed in Peterborough as a Christian worker, and his many friends will be glad to know that they are to have the privilege of hearing him again. He is a speaker of exceptional ability, and all who hear him are certain to be greatly benefited by his stirring addresses.

Dr. R. J. Zimmerman, of Toronto, will be the speaker for the last days of the week, and will also give two addresses on Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

MEMBERS OF 93rd BATTALION ATTEND EAST AND CITY CHURCHES

One Company Was Present at Morning Service at St. Luke's Church and the Other Was at Mark St. Methodist Church—Splendid Discourses.

Part of the 93rd Battalion, under command of Lt. Stewart, headed by the 93rd Band, attended divine service at St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, yesterday morning. The soldiers occupied the centre rows of seats, and the immense congregation taxed the capacity of the edifice. The offertory on this occasion was given to the Ashburnham Patriotic League.

On behalf of the officers and congregation, the Rector, Rev. W. H. White, M.A., extended a hearty welcome to the officers and men of the 93rd to this service. "We have a special sympathy with you in your high calling," he said, "by reason of the fact that fifty young men of this church are now with the Colours. We have the greatest pleasure in welcoming you, to share with us our Advent service. To-day is the great and solemn New Year's Day of the Christian Church." The Rector here remarked that a special military service was not being held, but he directed their attention to the Advent message as contained in the words of St. Paul: "The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light." The second coming of Christ, remarked the reverend speaker, was an inevitable certainty. There had been day and night ever since, man had been able to notice it, but the time would come when the world would cease to revolve and a light would shine forth brighter than day.

"We are admonished by Paul to cast away the works of darkness," he continued. "The dissolute may steal about in the darkness, but when daylight comes, their wickedness is seen. It is only the good citizen who can stand the light. In the olden days before going into battle, the knights were shriven and made clean their lives. To you soldiers, I would say your arm will be twice as strong if your heart is clean. Let us ask ourselves if our habits and our thoughts will merit the esteem of our mothers and sisters. If not, they will not receive the commendation of Christ."

Rev. Mr. White pointed out that soldiers of Christ must put on the armour of light. Christ's call was to work and to fight. "We must cleanse our consciences and gird ourselves for work,' he said. "At the present time we cannot be better attired to do God's work than in the King's uniform. I congratuate you men who have heard the call of God and your King. The young man to-day can best serve Christ by donning the King' uniform in the cause of liberty and right."

In conclusion, the preacher drew attention to the fact that apart from the battles to be fought on the battlefields of France and Flanders, each one had a daily battle to fight for Christ. The men of the 93rd were soon to go into barracks. This would be a new life for most of them, and especially for the younger men. He urged them to make their habits and language clean and worthy of a true soldier of the Cross, to choose those things that were best for them, morally and spiritually, to stand up and strike for Jesus Christ.

The Methodist section of the 93rd Battalion were accorded a warm reception at the Mark Street Methodist church yesterday by Rev. R. A. Whattam. The detachment were commanded by Lieut. J. A. McNabb. In expressing his pleasure at the presence of the soldiers, the pastor said: "No more welcome guests can cross the threshold of this church. I welcome you because of the characters you bear, and the lives you have lived with us as citizens. I welcome, too, because of the cause for which you have enlisted. You have drawn the sword in a cause which the Man of Galilee would have done were He on earth to-day."

Mr. Whattam's message was based on a clause of the 36th verse of the 22nd chapter of Luke, in which Christ's injunction was:

From this passage it was evident that there comes a time when man shall put away the spirit, not of meekness or humility, but of servility, and, if necessary, fight for their rights, when the very principles of the Kingdom of God were endanzered. Such words seem strange from the lips of Jesus Christ, whose methods were as far as could be imagined from cruel war. But although Jesus had no part in mere selfish quarre's, He knew how to be angry, and to blaze forth in indignation at greed and hypocrisy. He swept the money changers out of the temple just as He would sweep the earth clear of the evils which divide it. In his heart was the stern, inflexible determination that by the help of God all oppression should be overthrown.

But were they, as men, following in the course of the Divine Man? Was there any remedy but the sword? Had they sought the conflict? These questions the speaker answered that each day brought a deepening conviction that there is no other way to fight a tyrant but by his own means. But they were not fighting with all the low and cowardly methods of the oppressor, but only the weapons necessary for his overthrow.

"When the case is threshed out before the supreme court of civilization," said Mr. Whattam, "the responsibility will lie apparently and actually upon the hearts of the war lords of Germany."

The speaker spoke in touching terms of Belgium's plight —the devastation of her provinces, the decimation of her inhabitants, the ravaging of her womanhood. "Oh, my friends, I congratulate you this morning that you are young and strong and free to go to the rescue of defenceless innocence. May God bless you, and may the spirit of Christ guide you in the labour to which you have put your hand."

Referring to the womanhood of the Allied nations, the Red Cross nurses especially, the pastor said "You have associated with you in this enterprise spirits filled with unspeakable life—life known only to the hearts which beat in utter recklessness of their own interests.

93rd Men Attend St. Peter's Cathedral

At St. Peter's Cathedral, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who preached the sermon at the 10.30 a.m. high mass assured the Catholic members of the 93rd Battalion that they were cordially welcome in the three churches at all times, not only as individuals but as a military unit. He stated that while the clergy and the people were praying for a speedy and successful end of the war, they were not forgetting in their prayers the men who were helping to win it.

Bishop O'Brien said he was pleased to observe that the number of Catholic recruits was growing, and he incidentally remarked that he was glad to know that two and one-half per cent. of the Catholic population of the city had enlisted, which was about the same proposition as the enlistment throughout the province. Considering the fact that most of these recruits were native-born Bishop O'Brien felt that the response had been a good one. He was sure that the Catholic men would continue to do theid duty in the future as they had in the past.

Farmers' Institute Meeting Next Month

The Farmers' Institute will hold meetings at Stewart's Hall, Otonabee, on Wednesday, December 15, and at Lakefield on Thursday, the 16th. Mr. Alex McGregor, the president, will occupy the chair. WAS REMANDED FOR SENTENCE

Chas. Johnston Pleads Guilty to a Charge of Stealing a Quantity of Copper Wire From the City

In this morning's police court, Charles Johnston pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a quantity of copper wire belonging to the Peterborough Utilities Commission and valued at ten dollars. The wire was taken from the Aylmer street sub-station and consisted of heavy electric cable. Magistrate Dumble remanded the accused until Thursday, when he will appear for sentence.

Will Make Restitution.

"Keep him at home at nights and make home rich and cheery for him. I have seen boys like him come here and grow right up into a life of crime." Thus did Magistrate Dumble address the mother of a juvenile delinquent. The latter pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a quantity of baseballs from the Peterborough Baseball Club and valued at ten dollars. This will have to be paid as well as the Crown Attorney's fees, amounting to six dollars. Another delinquent was given some sage advice by the Magistrate.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., Justice of the Peace for both city and county, occupied a position on the bench with Magistrate Dumble.

Former Local Man Dies in Montreal

Death of Mr. C. Marcus Bennett Yesterday Afternoon in That City —Funeral Here

The many friends in Peterborough of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Marcus Bennett will regret to learn of Mr. Bennett's death in Montreal yesterday afternoon. Mr. Bennett was head salesman in that city for the McLaughlin Automobile Co. Only a little over a week ago he entered the hospital to undergo an operation. Following the ordeal he seemed to make satisfactory progress but later he suffered a relapse, gradually sinking until the end came.

The late Mr. Bennett was 35 years of age and was born in England. He resided in Peterborough for a number of years, marrying a local girl, Miss Flossie Wade, daughter of Mr. Edward Wade, 87 London Street. He was a man of exceptional business ability and was universally esteemed for his splendid qualities of heart and mind.

The remains will be brought to Peterborough on the early train to-morrow morning. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 from the residence of Mr. Edward Wade, 87 London Street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

DISPUTE BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENTS

His Worship Mayor Buller has the assurance of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario that the Commission is prepared at any time to purchase eletcrical energy from the Dick son Company at sixteen dollars per horse-power delivered in Peterborough or thirteen dollars per horse-power in Lakefield. At present the manufacturers are paying eighteen dollars per horse-power for a ten-hour day, while under the regime of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, power could be obtained at twenty dollars per horse-power for a twenty-four hour day.

As the Mayor put it to-day, he was of the opinion that the city was not getting all that was expected. He appreciated the fact that the cost of commercial and residential lighting had been reduced all the way from one-quarter to one-half, and that during the past six months the consumers have been saved anywhere from twenty to thirty thousand.

While in Toronto a few days ago Mayor Buller took this matter up with the officials of the Hydro-Electric Commission, and was informed that the delay was due to the Dominion Government. The question of surplus water powers is an issue between the Dominion and Provincial Governments, and until the matter is straightened out, the work of utilizing the present available water power will be at a standstill.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., was approached regarding the matter. The Federal member caused a letter to be despatched to Premier Borden emphasizing the necessity for haste in the matter.

In time the city hopes to acquire its own water power, but this is a step that will be subject to delay until the dispute between the two Governments is settled.

A WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY TO SECURE A PIANO FOR CHRISTMAS

The Christmas Musical Club Offers Many Buying Advantages to Members

No greater opportunities have ever been presented to buyers of musical instruments for Christmas than are now offered to readers of The Peterborough Examiner through the Christmas Musical Club. Those who join the club are entitled to many advantages and savings not accorded to others.

The Club is founded upon the co-operative plan and by purchasing together within a limited period the members can secure standard musical instruments for Christmas at the lowest spot cash prices and still have the privilege of paying for them on easy terms. No extras are added to the price of the instruments because of Club terms of payment and there are many other buying conveniences. One of the interesting things about the plan is the Relief Insurance and Free Exchange privileges.

Club members are entitled to make selection without restriction from the stock of the well known house of J. M. Greene Music Co. The fact that the goods may be secured from this old established firm insures satisfaction and goods of the highest quality. The instruments that may be secured include Baby Ennis and Sweet Toned Ennis; also the well known "Artists Choice," New Scale Williams Pianos. A large variety of Player Pianos and Grand Pianos of the above makes are included.

A membership fee of $1, payable after acceptance entitles the member to all benefits of the Club. If he decides not to purchase before the Club closes, his money will be refunded. Any person thinking of purchasing a piano or player piano, should join the Musical Club now, as it closes on the night of the 24th of December.

A postcard mailed to the Christmas Musical Club, care of J. M. Greene Music Co., Peterborough, will bring the information which will tell you about the plan.

"REPENT YE, FOR THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS AT HAND"

Sunday Morning Service at Park Street Baptist Church The Pastor, Rev. Dougald Brown, Delivers An Able Address

"The Messenger and His Message" was the subject chosen by the Rev. Dougald Brown, pastor of Park street Baptist church, for his Sunday morning sermon, the text having been taken from Matthew, 3: 2 and 3, "Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying: The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight."

John is here represented as a public crier, "the voice of one crying in the wilderness. He is the first man who introduced Jesus Christ to the world. He is not called a prophet, nor yet is he called a preacher; rather he is the connecting link between prophet and preacher. He is declared to be the forerunner, one who is to run ahead, to announce the coming of the Lord—the unfolder of the new dispensation.

The four gospels declare that he is the fulfilment of the prophesy of Isaiah: "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God."

The prophesy had fulfilment in the deliverance of the children of Israel from captivity, that great, glad, joyful day, when they were freed from persecution, when their iniquity that drove them into captivity, was pardoned, when their warfare was ended, when they received double for all their sins, "where iniquity (sin) abounded, grace did much more abound."

The words of the Lord, "Comfort ye my people," must have been joyful word to this sad race. It awakened in them a great hope. John is the crier and says: "He is come, Christ is at hand, the great deliverer is here."

This message ought to be as sweet to us, for it delivers us from the captivity of sin. Christ came to redeem us.

The message ought to be as sweet to us, for it delivers us from the captivity of sin. Christ came to redeem us.

The message as expressed by Isaiah is the same truth as proclaimed by John. One says, "Comfort ye," the other, "Prepare (repent) ye, for the kingdom of God is at hand."

"Who is this that cometh from Edom. . . I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save." "I have trampled them in my fury." The warfare has been accomplished. In Jesus Christ we find pardon of our iniquities, the forgiveness of our sins. 'He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon Him and with His stripes we are healed."

On the cross He cried, "It is finished." Our redemption was complete. Through Christ, God's justice was satisfied.

The Jewish people looked for a national deliverance. The dead would be raised up, a great army established, the enemy destroyed and the national life raised to dignity and honour. But John did not say, "Get ready for a great military display," instead he called: "Repent ye." The kingdom of God is righteousness, not militarism, not the massing of armies, not the killing of one another. The great battle is not eternal, it is internal, the wickedness in our own hearts.

To-day there is a crier; every preacher is a crier, and his message is the same, "Comfort ye my people; prepare ye; repent ye."

The same power which delivered Israel is with us to-day; the same forgiveness awaits us.

"If a man love Me, he will keep My words; and My Father will love him, and He will come unto him, and make Our abode with him."

The only way to come to God is through repentance. "For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing." However, the wilderness shall blossom as the rose, the crooked shall be made straight, the mountain strongholds of satan shall come down, the valley with its malaria, and men who crawl like serpents must come up, the rough places of our lives made plain, and the glory of the Lord revealed.

TRENCHES WERE FLOODED OUT

Pte Patrick Duggan's Interesting Letter Tells of Condition at the Front

Mr. Chas. Duggan has received the following interesting letter from a relative, Pte. Patrick Duggan, of the 14th Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, formerly of Peterborough:

Belgium, Nov. 8th, 1915.

Dear Charley—Your letters to hand, dated Oct. 17 and 25th, which I received this week. I am pleased to hear you are still getting along alright. Things are the same as ever here, five days in the trenches and five out. The only difference is, things are not quite so smooth. This is one awful country for rain, though I'll admit the big guns have quite a lot to do with it Last tihme we were in the trenches, which was four days ago, we got flooded, owing to the continuous downpour of rain. Dug-outs, etc., were all ful of water. Of course this made things rather bad for both officers and men. We had to walk about all night and work the whole day, sleep being out of the question. We have had a fairly good time in the billets, which consist of wooden huts built on a farm a mile or so behind the firing line. They are very cold at night, but I understand tney are going to provide each hut with a stove very shortly. I think they will then be very comfortable for the winter. There is one consolation, the Germans got flooded out of their trenches the day before we came out. A little to our right they had the nerve to get out of their trenches and walk along the top; our artillery soon put a stop to that though, with a little shrapnel.

Well, I guess I have told you all about our doings in this part of the line. There are a few things I would like to tell you, but I am not allowed to, so you will have to be satisfied with what I have already told you. I will now conclude, hoping this letter will find you in the best of health, as it leaves me at present. I was pleased to hear you received the cards O.K. Let me know if you have received the piece of German aeroplane I sent you?

With best regards, I remain,

Yours, PAT.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The Board of Police Commissioners will meet this afternoon at four o'clock.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

The Property Committee of the City Council will meet this evening to consider the question of awarding the contract for garbage collection to the next lowest tenderer.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

Woodstock ratepayers will likely have three bylaws to vote upon at the January elections. In addition to local option and the proposal to return to the ward system of election, they will also be asked to decide upon a $25,000 outlay for the completion of the storm sewage system. On this work $10,000 has already been spent.

Capt. Antle Will Speak

Interesting Address Looked For at St. John's School Room To-Night

Captain Antle of the Mission Steamer "Columbia," which cruises among the "Thousands of Islands" on the Pacific Coast will give a most interesting address, illustrated by limelight views to-night, in St. John's school room at 8 p.m. Comparatively few people know of the splendid work which has been accomplished for men both spiritually and medically in almost out of the world places along the Pacific Coast, and to men especially Captain Antle's experiences will be interesting. A hearty invitation to all is extended, and a good attendance is hoped for to hear of the work, which is unique in its variations. No admission fee. A collection to defray expenses will be taken.

REV. C. S. MASON AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

The Rev. C. S. Mason, of Uxbridge, in St. John's last night, in preaching from the text, "I came not to bring you peace but a sword," traced the history of Christianity from the proto martyr St. Stephen, noting the adoption of the Cross by Constantine, the Crusader, and latterly the raising of the Cross in defence of weaker nations. Most interesting was the history of the Empire flag, the union of the crosses of Great Britain and Ireland. The preacher, while not posing as an Anglo-Israelite, pointed out that the greatest Empire that has as yet been was surely composed of a chosen people, and of all the nations fighting, the only Empire under the "Banner of the Crosses."

Brigadier-General F. S. MEIGHEN

C.P.R. New Director

IT was the most logical thing for the greatest transportation corporation in the world to reach out and pick Frank Stephen Meighen off the financial landscape. When the shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, at its recent annual meeting, held in Montreal, voted "Yes" to the addition of this "coming" young Canadian to its Directorate, the business world the wide world over nodded its approval. He was the man that fit, the square post for the square hole, the right man, branded and labelled "C. P. R."

Back from the trenches of France and Flanders, the smell of the powder still on him, his ear-drums still quivering with the shock of the bursting shrapnel, Brigadier-General Meighen—for such is his title—makes a picturesque entry into the larger field. Well has he served his bleeding country. The best evidence of this could probably be obtained from the few surviving Germans who engaged the then Colonel Meighen's Fourteenth Battalion at St. Julien. Called home to lend his experienced advice to the Militia authorities of Canada, the honors of war gained only by duty well done have overtaken the young regimental commander.

But military prowess is not essential to the make up of the Canadian Pacific Railway Director, and men do not graduate in the service of their country in an industrial way by leading gallant Canadian soldiers to victory in Europe. In the veins of this man runs the blood of Mount Stephen. The first President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, Lord Mount Stephen, was General Meighen's uncle. Robert Meighen, father of the new Director, was a railway associate of Mount Stephen, and himself a Director of the road. Here, then, is the Meighen pedigree: it is a piece off the C. P. R.'s family tree.

Robert Meighen was a big man in his day and he left his imprint on the country. His C. P. R. affiliations were extensive, and it is appropriate that his son should resume the connection direct. One of the father's achievements was the founding of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, and in more recent years Frank S. Meighen has been widely known as its President. In addition to the large interest held by the Robert Meighen estate in the great railway company, this Lake of the Woods Milling Company, one of the largest of its kind in the world, has been for many years one of the biggest of the railway's customers.

Let no one imagine, however, that this new member of a galaxy of Canada's captains of industry, is without merit of his own, or that he is riding into the C. P. R. board room on family prestige. At the present time he holds the following important offices: President of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company; a Director of the Bank of Toronto; President of the New Brunswick Railway Company; a Director of the Canadian North-West Land Company; President of the Montreal Opera Company; a Director of the Paton Manufacturing Company. To figure thus prominently in the business life of the Dominion is to prove his great personal ability and mental acumen. "Level-headed" is the adjective that the big business men of Canada apply to Frank S. Meighen.

While filling so large a place as this, General Meighen has still found time to play. Throughout Eastern Canada he is noted as an expert exponent of the hazardous game of pony pole, and many a careering battle has been won by his own skill and daring. He is an enthusiastic sportsman in many directions, as is evident in his membership in the following clubs: The Forest and Stream, the Montreal Hunt, the Back River Pole, the Montreal Jockey, the Toronto Hunt, and others.

General Meighen was born at Montreal, December 24, 1868. He was educated at Montreal High School and graduated in Arts from McGill University in 1889. He began his business life in the steamship office of the Robert Reford Company, later entering the service of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, in their Montreal office. For many years he was Treasurer of the Company, succeeding to the Presidency on the death of his father in 1911.

Besides the clubs mentioned General Meighen is a member of the St. James and University Clubs of Montreal; the York Club of Toronto; the Junior Athenaeum, of London, England; and the Point Judith Club, of Narragansett Pier. His public-spiritedness is indicated in the fact that he was Honorary Treasurer of the local committee for the Quebec Tercentenary Celebration in 1908, and was one of the principal promoters of the Typhoid Emergency Hospital, in Montreal, in 1910.

For most of his life General Meighen has served in the militia of Canada. He was formerly adjutant of the 5th Royal Highlanders and became Lieutenant-Colonel commanding the regiment in 1908. He volunteered for service in South Africa. When the present war broke out he went to the front in command of the 14th Battalion, leading his men through several of the most famous and important engagements of the war on the west front. He was recalled in an advisory capacity, and is now engaged in organizing and recruiting the 87th Overseas Battalion, Canadian Grenadier Guards. His promotion has taken place since he [illegible]

Karl Schulz, Tired of Hunger and Danger, Fled in Full Uniform — Employed Ruse That Worked Successfully Until Near Holland Border

HAS HAD ENOUGH

NEW YORK, November 27.—After taking part in five battles and sieges, Karl Schulz decided that he did not want any more war so he deserted from the German Army and arrived in New York yesterday as a stowaway on board the Holland-America steamship Noordendyk from Rotterdam, to start a new life away from the booming of cannon and the screaming of shells. He was wounded in his first engagement by a piece of shrapnel, he said, but did not get the Iron Cross. Instead of receiving the coveted decoration he was beaten by an officer with his riding whip for giving some cigarettes to a French prisoner after the battle. After that episode he made up his mind that any one could have his cross and would have deserted but for a time did not get a chance.

Schulz told the story of his escape from the army with a dash of humor, as when he described how he marched past the guard in full uniform and appeared to be proud of his achievement.

HIS YOUNGER BROTHER KILLED.

"I left the German army," he said, "because I was tired of going without food, and getting cuffs and drill when I asked for something to eat. Also I did not want to kill any more people and I did not want them to kill me. My younger brother Gustav, was killed in the battle of the Yser last December, and if I had been killed there would be none of our family left, so I decided to leave for America on the first chance—but it was a long time coming.

"I was a painter in Berlin when the time came for me to do my military service in 1912, and I was drafted into the King of Saxony's regiment of infantry at Leipzig, and had been a soldier nearly two years before the war started.

"About July 7, 1914, all the soldiers quartered at Leipzig knew that something of a serious nature was going to happen because the guards were doubled at the barrack gates every night to see that none of the soldiers escaped. New uniforms were issued, and also new, strong boots, and the soldiers were ordered to wear them a little every day so that they would not be so hard when they had to march in them.

"My first taste of war was at the siege of Liege and from there my regiment was hurried away to take part in the battle of Chalons-sur-Marne, which began on the 2nd of September and lasted altogether seven days. I shall never forget that battle because I was wounded in the right arm by shrapnel, but had to fight on after it was was bound up by the surgeon, and the last three days we had nothing to eat or drink. For the first two days we were victorious and then the French artillery fire was so heavy and so deadly accurate that the German army under General von Hansen had to retreat slowly day and night. In that retreat we lost over 25,000 officers and men.

"At that time General von Kluck was closing in on Paris and our army was to have joined with his forces, but somehow General von Hansen was cut off and could not get into communication with von Kluck. He was superseded in his command for his failure shortly afterward, we were told.

"From Chalons-sur-Marne my regiment went to Rheims and assisted in the capture of the city. Afterwards we took part in the bombardment of Rheims, when it had been retaken by the French troops. The next battle was at St. Quentin, where our losses were very heavy, and then we had a severe fight with the enemy near Arras, when we lost a great number of men through the accuracy and long range of the French artillery.

"At intervals I did duty in the trenches which is much more comfortable and less dangerous than attacking in the open. The only thing to look out for in the trenches is the shrapnel, as the big shells all whistle overhead, but in advancing to the charge over the open plain the artillery fire is dreadful."

As he mentioned this Schulz shuddered visibly at the recollection of what he had been through.

CAUGHT IN HIS FIRST ATTEMPT.

"From the siege of Arras," he continued, "I went to Antwerp with my regiment, and while there I tried to escape, but I was caught. The general ordered me to be sent with some others who had tried to escape in motor-vehicles to Lille where there would be less chance for us to get away. They were badly in need of men or else we should have all been shot. I told the officers of the court martial that I had tried to get away because I was so hungry. When we got them, our rations consisted of black bread for breakfast, with tea or coffee if we were near a camp kitchen, and soup for dinner, with potatoes and rice in it, but no other vegetables, meat or bread. There was no butter or fat of any kind served out to the troops, and the hard black bread was so fearfully dry that it broke three or four of my teeth in trying to chew it.

"In Lille there was a woman who kept a small restaurant in the Place Marie. She took compassion on me as I was sick and not able to do the heavy work that we were required to perform there, and assisted me to escape. I had become very friendly with a sergeant in another company and he proposed that we should get away into Holland together.

REPRIMANDED BY A WOMAN

"The proprietress got hold of a small cart and horse which had been found or stolen by one of her customers, and she placed a basket of provisions in it one fine morning and the sergeant and myself started to leave Lille for the Dutch border. We were both in full uniform and had our rifles and 30 rounds of ammunition. As we passed the sentries they had to salute my comrade because he was a non-commissioned officer and let us pass. Before we reached the gate of the city, we were halted and taken before the commandant who asked where we were going, and the sergeant said that we were going out in the country to try to steal a cow from one of the farmers. He laughed and wished us good luck on our journey and hoped that we would have a glass of the cow for him on our return.

"We did not go back, however. For 14 days and nights we travelled in the cart, taking it in turns to have a short nap, until we reached Brussels, and after resting there we proceeded on our way toward the Dutch frontier. There were guards at all the railway crossings who stopped us, but the presence of the sergeant and our being armed and in uniform got us safely by. Sometimes we were looking for deserters; at others we were searching for provisions. My comrade had always a valid excuse.

"Our narrowest escape was a few miles outside of Turnhout, a town in Belgium near the Dutch frontier. We had stopped to rest at a farm house and had given the farmer's wife some French money to buy some matches and chocolates to take on the road. This made her husband suspect that we were deserters and being a careful man he left the house to go and tell the German commander to send an officer to come and look us over. Directly he had gone the sergeant said 'March,' and away we went up a steep hill in a different direction to that in which the farmer had directed us. Half way up we looked back and saw German soldiers mounted on bicycles hurrying along the road to the farmhouse. The hill was so steep that both the horse and the cart upset and we had to leave them there with the horse waving his four feet wildly in the air, and walk on to Turnhout. On arriving there at dusk we went to the small inn to which we had been directed by a friend in Brussels, and hid there for eight days. In that time the innkeeper disposed of our uniforms and rifles, cartridges, etc., and provided us with these clothes that I have on, a couple of shirts, and some Dutch money.

"The frontier was not only guarded by German soldiers on the Belgian side but there was also a series of barbed wire entanglements charged with electricity on the Dutch side to be passed. We knew that it would be impossible for us to get through the gates on the high roads as there had been a number of desertions from the German army into Holland, and the guard was doubled at each post to keep a sharp lookout for any such travellers.

"Finally our friend at the estaminet or inn said that he knew an old Dutchman who had been engaged for 30 years in smuggling tobacco, cigars and gin from Holland into Belgium and this man knew a path over the frontier where neither the Germans nor the Dutch sentries would find us and where there were no barbed wire fences.

REACH HOLLAND IN SAFETY.

"Finally we got safely into Holland without being seized or interned by the military authorities, and I left the sergeant and went to Amsterdam and afterward to The Hague and Rotterdam where I got a few odd jobs to do on the docks, and managed to stowaway in the bunkers of the Noordyk to get to New York."

Schulz said he saw 116 Germans interned at Bergen, all whom 35 had declared themselves to be deserters from the army. So far as he had heard there were nearly 5,000 runaways in Holland.

Schulz was kept on board the Noordendyk yesterday under lock and key as Ellis Island was not open. To-day he will be taken there as a stowaway and will probably be deported on the steamer on Tuesday. In this event he will not go to Holland or Germany, because the British will take him off at Deal, and send him to a camp. He has letters to J. von Veen, 639 Gregory avenue, Passaic, and others to persons in Norfolk, Va., and Port Arthur, Texas, and he hopes these men will try to get him admitted to the country. He is single, 25 years of age, and has no home ties in Germany, he says, and does not wish to go back there.

THE PROGRESS OF THE AGE

Music and Farming

"We live in a wonderful age, we have seen telephones, wireless telegraphy, flying machines, moving picture machines, etc., grow up in our midst, but now further knowledge has been revealed to us by our students of psychology. Who would have ever dreamed that music could have ought to do with farming or machine building, etc., and yet on the best authority we are now informed that some music was created by the Divine mind for the purpose of inspiring those people engaged in the Industries and Crafts. The student of psychology maintains that certain music awakens and clarifies certain mental tendencies, and by listening to music the people engaged in Industries and Crafts have those tendencies developed. With development comes a greater power than they possessed hitherto to perform their various tasks and great mentality to execute their work in a gradually advancing spirit. This superiority will be easily noticeable amongst the workers, who already take a keen interest in music. Their music loving instincts have awakened their faculties and one finds where the craftsman is a musician or very fond of music he is always a more inspired and enthusiastic worker."

The foregoing was published in an Auckland daily paper. This subject is of vital interest, especially in view of the visit of those wonderful geniuses, Leo, Jan and Mischel Cherniavsky, violinist, pianist and 'cellist. They rank amongst the greatest musicians of the world, and as a trio it is claimed they are the finest in the world. We hope that all those in our city and district interested in the progress of Canada will do their utmost to impress upon one another the great desirability of not missing the Cherniavsky's concerts, when they appear here.

These artists appear here on Dec. 14th.

Found him on the sofa.—The parish minister was doing some visiting one day, when he went to call on an old farmer who appeared at church only once a year. The minister found him lying on a sofa, poring over his Bible, with three puppy dogs at his feet. "Ah!" said the minister, "I'm glad to see you improving in your old age." "Ma improving!" said the farmer. "I'm looking for names of the dogs!"

General Sir John Nixon's Army Within Sight of Famous City

LONDON, Nov. 27. — Turkish troops resisting the British advance in Mesopotamia are falling back, according to an official announcement last night, reporting a Turkish retirement on the Dialah, ten miles from Bagdad.

The announcement says:

"A telegram from Gen. Sir John Scales Nixon, commander of the British forces in Mesopotamia, under date of the 25th, reports that Gen. Townsend's troops were in possession of the battlefield, while the Turks were reported to be retiring on Dialah, ten miles above Ctesiphon, and the same distance from Bagdad. Gen. Townsend was engaged in clearing the field of wounded and prisoners.

"At first it was stated that 800 prisoners had been taken. It now appears that no less than 1,300 have been marched back to Lajj.

"Our wounded are reported to number about 2,500, of whom 1,800 were leaving that day by steamer for Basra. The number of killed has not yet been reported.

"Gen. Nixon praises the excellent handling of the troops by Gen. Townsend, and the splendid spirit shown by them after their severe losses and hardships from want of water and food."

One of the most severe surprises the Turks were given in this war was on the Persian Gulf, where they found their offensive forestalled by a British invasion.

Turkey had shown her hand since the last of August, 1914, and Russia and Great Britain were ready for the events leading up to and subsequent to the 30th of October, when Islam joined Teuton.

By the beginning of November the British in the Gulf of Persia were ready. The Government of India had sent he Poona Brigade, under Brigadier-General W. S. Delamain, to Bahrein.

This brigade contained the 2nd Dorsets, the 20th Punjabi Infantry, the 104th (Wellesley's) Rifles, the 117th Mahrattas, and the 23rd Pershawur, and the 30th Mountain Batteries. On November 7th the force reached the bar of the Shat-el-Arab, where the village of Fao, with its Turkish fort, lies among the flats and palm groves. The gunboat Odin bombarded the fort and troops landed and occupied the village. The brigae then sailed 30 miles up the estuary, passing the refinery of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, at Abadan, and disembarked at Sanijeh, on the Turkish bank, where it prepared entrenched camp, and sat down to wait for the rest of the British force.

Two More Brigades Arrive.

Here, on the 11th, there was some fighting with the Turks from Basra, who were dislodged from a neighbouring village by the 117th Mahrattas and the 20th Punpabis. Two days later Lieut.-Gen. Sir Arthur Barrett arrived with the rest of the Indian Contingent. This included the Ahmednagar Brigade and Belgaum Brigade.

MR. R. M. GLOVER IS SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT OF HOCKEY ASSOCIATION

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—Nominations for office in the O.H.A. closed on Saturday night with Secretary Hewitt, and as a result a number of the principal offices have been filled by acclamation, although there promises to be a keen fight for places on the Executive Committee.

Mr. Charles Farquharson, who has been a most capable president for the past two years, retires from office in favour of Mr. James T. Sutherland of Kingston, who has been vice-president for the same time. Mr. Sutherland is one of the best known hockey men in Canada, and should make a good president.

By promotion, Sheriff J. F. Paxton of Whitby becomes first vice-president, and R. M. Glover of Peterborough moves up from the executive to the second vice-presidency. Complete list of nominations is as follows:

President—James T. Sutherland, Kingston.

First Vice-President—Sheriff T. F. Paxton, Whitby.

Second Vice-President — R. M. Glover, Peterborough.

A. A. U. of C. Governor—Francis Nelson, Toronto.

Secretary—W. A. Hewitt, Toronto.

Treasurer—Dwight J. Garner, Toronto.

Executive (four to be elected): A. E. Copeland, Midland; Frank Hyde Woodstock; C. L. MacNab, Orillia; G. B. Dawson, Sarnia; Robert Hamilton, London; Charles V. Lloyd, Stratford; Robert P. Parker, Hamilton.

Mr. Farquharson as past president and Mr. J. Ross Robertson, life member, will also be members of the new executive.

The most important amendments to be considered at the O.H.A. annual convention will be those affecting the enlisted soldier-hockeyists. There are clauses suggested by the chairman of the sub-committee, Mr. J. Ross Robertson, to give the soldier the same privileges as students as regards residence, and these will no doubt be adopted unanimously, judging by the expressions of approval from all over the province since the proposal was first mooted. Mr. Robertson's amendment gives the soldier the option of playing in his home town, with the soldiers' team with which he is connected, or with any team in the town in which he is located by the military authorities.

Mr. J. T. Sutherland of Kingston proposes that when suspended O.H.A. players enlist, their suspensions shall be automatically raised. This, of course, is not to apply to professionals.

Mr. A. H. Schlegel of Preston suggests that during the war players of any town not represented in the O.H.A. be allowed to play with the O.H.A. club nearest to their residence.

In addition to the foregoing there are other amendments, one restricting the [illegible] as it applies to High School pupils, another making it clear regarding junior players, and others making it imperative for players to sign referee's reports before a game and compelling clubs to keep a regular set of books open to O.H.A. inspection.

In the rules of the game, Mr. G. B. Dawson of Sarnia makes a suggestion regarding the introduction of substitutes in the second and third periods of play.

The amendments were sent out to the clubs on Saturday.

HOCKEY

Pursuant to instructions received from the executive of the Ontario Hockey Association, all parties who have accounts against the Peterborough Hockey Club, are requested to make them out in detail and present to R. M. Glover, a member of the executive, as the local situation is to receive immediate attention.

ITALIANS TO ENTER GORIZIA

LONDON, Nov. 27. — Despatches from the Italian Front state that the methodic siege operations of the Italian army against the Austrian positions on the Carso plateau dominating the great fortress of Gorizia are progressing with uniform success.

The city itself is now within range of the Italian guns on the north, south, and west, but General Cadorna, the Italian chief of staff, has given orders that, as far as possible, no artillery fire be directed on any part of the city. Before an attempt is made to occupy the fortress all the dominating positions on the amphitheatre of hills which surround it must be captured.

The work is being carried out in detail, and its completion is now believed to be certain. The most difficult approach and attack operations which the Italians have been obliged to undertake on the hilly plateau were in the Monte San Michele district.

Five peaks, dominating each other were fortified with all the most modern devices by the Austrians. Three of these are reported taken and the entrenchment works on the fourth are now announced to be in the hands of the Italians.

The resistance made by the Austrian troops is of the most desperate character and fierce counter attacks have been delivered after each gain made by the Italians. The superiority of the Italian mountain guns, however, continues to be manifested and the assaults of the Bersaglieri and the Apini prove irresistible.

When the conquest of San Michele has been completed it is believed that the Italians will enter Girizia. The city proper has been practically evacuated by the Austrian military forces.

For use in cities which forbid garbage, waste paper and ashes to be mixed a Cincinnati inventor has brought out a ventilated, three compartment rubbish receptable.

NO STARVATION IN THE FRENCH TRENCHES

PARIS, Nov. 29.—As far as food goes, the French soldier lives well, if the ordinary programme of the French common people is taken as a standard. His menu is based on two solid meals a day with a breakfast of bread and coffee. There is nothing the French soldier appreciates so much as his morning coffee. It is brought to him in canvas buckets, sugared, but without milk, and, like all French coffee, it is excellent. If the weather is bad there is usually a sip of rum from the company rations to go with the coffee and bread.

For dinner and supper the two great staple dishes are ragout and pot-au-feu. The ragout is made of stewed meat, preferably mutton, highly seasoned. The pot-au-feu is boiled beef and soup. The stew is generally thickened with dried beans or rice but the pot-au-feu receives as many varieties of vegetables as ingenious foraging can, muster, with always a plentiful basis of potatoes.

Occasionally the French cooks, even close to the firing line, vary the menu with special dishes, such as steaks, brains, hearts, and the like, which they carry out to the men in the trenches. It is a current remark in France that the cook is the bravest man in the regiment, and this is generally a tribute to the danger that he sometimes has to undergo to carry his dainties to the appreciative Poilus who await his coming at the very apex of the battle line.

The meat in its raw state is brought up on the hoof to a point as near the lines as is conveniently safe, and there slaughtered. Typical French economy is shown in this operation, for use is made of every possible fragment of the carcass. The hides, bones, and uneatable portions are carefully collected and sent back to the base to be otherwise turned to advantage. The cook of each mess sends his assistant each morning for the squad's share of the butcher's stores, and the assistant receives promptly a great piece of beef or mutton corresponding to the number of men to be fed.

The operation of carving the meat is generally a matter of great interest to soldiers who happen to be off duty. They gather in the vicinity of the cook's tent or hut and admire or criticise the skill with which he undertakes the operation. Although some of the best cuts are often put into the pot, there is an opportunity for the exercise of considerable skill in trimming off an occasional supply of steaks or chops for treatment in some other manner.

The meat dishes by no means complete the soldier's dinner. There is the bread—and French bread is proverbially excellent. It is baked in loaves like a small millstone, and before being served the crust is carefully cut away, because in transportation and handling a certain amount of dirt is bound to gather there. The interior is rather more solid than that of the French bread served in American restaurants or in Paris.

Each man is allowed a half-pint of red wine with each meal, and the individual may provide himself with such luxuries as salad, cheese, or fruit. Salad often may be obtained locally, and not infrequently the men have their own little beds of their favourite green, grown in some favourable spot close to their position.

DODGING AVALANCHES.

Perils of the Alps Which Have Given Place to Perils of War.

While an Englishman was climbing one of the peaks of the Alps he came to a stretch of broken snow about 100 feet in breadth, composed of the remnants of avalanches which had fallen from the face of the mountain above. It was necessary to cross it. An avalanche had fallen 10 minutes before this Englishman and his two guides had reached the place and another would doubtless soon follow. The crossing must be made between two avalanches.

Twenty yards this side of the snow track, and perhaps 100 yards from the threatening snow wall, the little party paused for critical survey. The question stood for instant decision. From the appearance of the snow wall it must be determined whether another avalanche would fall within the next few minutes.

Was it best to hurry silently across? Was it best to wait? Was the next section of the snow face in such a condition that a mighty yell would send an avalanche down and give them an opportunity for a hasty retreat? On the other hand, if they all yelled together and no avalanche fell would the concussion hasten the next fall, whereby they might be overwhelmed in crossing?

One towering pinnacle of snow pushed a little beyond its fellows seemed ready to totter to its fall. They looked at it doubtfully. It ought to have gone with the last avalanche. Would it stand or would it fall within the next three minutes? A hundred feet is not much of a space to cross; but such crossing, if through fresh, broken snow from six to ten feet deep, is slow and floundering work.

From the time that the party came within view of the snow the utmost silence had to be observed, and now the searching but momentary scrutiny completed, one of the guides whispered that they should come along. With noiseless speed they hurried forward. Silently they struggled through the snow and as silently emerged on the other side.

Japanese Theatres.

Oriental visitors to our theatres think the performances very ludicrous, even if a tragedy is being enacted. We reciprocate by thinking that Chinese and Japanese theatres are run by crazy people, the customs are so very peculiar.

In Japanese theatres a singular custom prevails of allowing a visitor for a small fee, to stand up, and the unfortunate individual behind him has no right to remonstrate or to rise and try to get a peep at the stage. He may hear, but he cannot see.

Another peculiarity is that the extravagantly disposed visitor may purchase the right to sit upon the stage wherever he likes, and the actors go on with their parts in apparent unconsciousness of his presence.

It is not an unusual spectacle to see a broadsword combat fought all around a visitor, who coolly enjoys the scene and shows no disposition to move.

Unnecessary Trouble.

Jim had looked in at the country livery stable in search of a job. He seemed promising, and was set to work greasing the axles of a carriage. In a remarkably short space of time he reported the task finished.

"Look here," said his new boss, 'd'ye mean to say you've greased all four of them wheels already?"

"And why haven't you greased the two hind ones?"

"Wool," exclaimed Jim, calmly, "so lang as the two front yens gans all reet, the two hind yens hev to foller."

WAR GHOSTS.

Supernatural Contenders in the Present and Other Conflicts.

In a telegram from Petrograd, it is stated that many Russian sentinels declare that they have seen the famous ghost of Gen. Skobeleff in a white uniform riding on a white horse. This appearance, according to tradition, always marks a critical moment for the armies of the Czar, and invariably causes panic in the enemy's ranks.

The telegram has started a correspondence in some London newspapers on war myths, and the appearance of apparitions which alter the course of battles.

"Supernatural appearances of this character," writes one correspondent, "have marked the narratives of almost all wars.

"Thus in classical history you have the appearance of Castor and Pollux at the battle of Lake Regillus, riding on white horses. They won the battle for Rome and carried the news of it at incredible speed to the city.

"Another apparition is that of the flaming cross which appeared in the skies at noon above the army of Constantine I. at the battle of the Milvian Bridge, near Rome, in 312. The cross bore the famous words, 'In this sign you will conquer,' and Constantine is said to have been so affected by the portent that he had the cross inscribed on the shields of his soldiers and became a Christian.

"It has been supposed that with the advent of high explosives, wireless telegraphs, and long range artillery these visions would be crowded out of the modern battlefield, but this is not so. There is the now famous story of the rider on the white horse at Mons, who is believed to have caused the Germans to retire in the middle of their victorious career.

"The English soldiers who saw this apparition say it was St. George, the French soldiers have identified it as St. Michael, although some are inclined to believe it was Joan of Arc.

"Skobeleff used to wear in the Russo-Turkish war a white uniform and ride a white horse, so that his soldiers, who worshiped him, used to call him 'the white general.' It is not a method of generalship which would last many minutes on a modern battlefield, but it created in the soldiers the legend of Skobeleff's invulnerability."

The British Weekly, in an article on "Angels and Demons," says that though it has "no intention of discussing the credibility of stories relating to angelic interpositions in the present war," yet "that such interpositions may, and do, take place is a doctrine firmly rooted in revelations and in experience."

Dr. Horton, in a glowing letter on the war's awakening of spiritual perceptions, says he asked one of his young men, on the front, if he had seen the "White Comrade," of whom so much has been heard in the French lines.

"No," he said, "I have not seen him, but I believe in him. Nothing is impossible here, for the unseen becomes seen in times like this."

A Pathetic Appeal.

"When Wolseley conquered Cetewayo," said an English officer, "he took nearly all his wives away from him. I believe he left the monarch only a half dozen or thereabout. Cetewayo day after day sent piteous messages to Wolseley pleading for the rest of his wives, but the British soldier refused sternly. When Wolseley came to leave the country Cetewayo, in despair, sent this message to him: "'If you will not send me any more wives will you not at least be enough of a gentleman to exchange the six I have for six others?'"

THE ETERNAL FEMININE.

Fashions 4,000 years old are now being revived, according to archaeologists who have made studies of women's dress down the ages. A scholar well versed in the characteristics of the great civilization which has been laid bare by the excavations in Crete in the last 15 years, was strolling down the avenue the other afternoon when he stopped in amazement before the window of a well-known Fifth avenue costumer. There, on a form in the show window, was one of the newest fashions—a bodice drawn to fit tight about the waist, with a deep V at the throat and a high collar rising behind the neck, and a flaring skirt with four or five ruffles falling over each other in almost the shape of a bell.

"Amazing!" he exclaimed to his companion. "Almost an exact replica of the faience figures of the earth goddess which Sir Arthur Evans discovered at Knossos!"

The companion, who had never heard of Sir Arthur Evans, Knossos, or an earth goddess, demanded that he be shown; so the archaeologist took him back to his study and showed him there a little figure—a copy of the original found in Crete—which had a strange similarity to the waxen lady in the window. There was a short-sleeved, tight-waisted bodice of dark orange, with purple ribbons; a heavy belt; and a flaring skirt with seven flounces, made in a checkerboard pattern of dark purple and light blue.

"That lady," said the archaeologist, "is either the earth goddess or one of her priestesses, and the figure was made probably 2,000 years before Christ. It was found in the remains of the capital of the Cretan kingdom, which was contemporaneous with the palmy days of Egypt and Babylonia.

"This gown is a fair specimen of the general style of the dress of the Cretan woman of the upper classes. The flaring skirt, the narrow waist, the low-cut corsage—these are practically constant characteristics. They often were transparent waists with heavier jackets over them, the general effect being strikingly modern.

"Hats were usually made with rather low crowns and wide brims, but, while in classical Greece and Rome there was little variation on that model, the Cretans had about as many kinds and conditions of hats as any age up to the present. Usually the brim was turned up before or behind, or all around, and there was considerable use of ribbons and other trimmings. A conical hat surrounded by a rolled brim and decorated with three rosettes sounds modern, but the model is 3,400 years old.

"Cretan women usually wore their hair in long ringlets down on the shoulders, generally leaving a devastating curl on the forehead, which, combined with their big, dark eyes, must have had a positively irresistible effect.

"The Cretans were expert shoemakers, too—far ahead of any other ancient people; and the elaborateness of their dress shoes found hardly any parallel in the subsequent history of the world until the epidemic of back and side lacings and colored scroll-work decorations, which fell on New York this spring."

"How about men's clothing?" the scientist was asked. "If women are coming around to the Cretan fashions, are not the men of our day likely to do the same?"

The scholar threw up his hands.

"God forbid!" he cried. "In times of peace the men of Crete wore nothing much but shoes, a belt, and a loin cloth."

Her Set.

"And you say," he said, "that you have already raised four large families this season? Really I can't account for it."

"It is easily accounted for," said the hen haughtily. "I belong to the smart set."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MYTHICAL WHITE RACES.

Mysterious Isolated Tribes of the Tropics.

There exists in the minds of many civilized people a curious fascination with respect to the idea that in remote parts of the tropics, amid the dark-skinned races, there flourish mysteriously isolated white tribes bearing a strong resemblance to the civilized branches of the Caucasian race.

Who they are and whence they came no one knows; native fables afford no explanation. Once it was thought that forgotten white explorers might have built up unknown kingdoms in the wild places of the earth, but upon examination these theories vanish as rapidly as do the white tribes themselves, and the ultimate explanation is almost prosaic.

Yet so strong a hold has the idea gained that even in the beginning of the 20th century the possibility of the existence of genuine white races is not altogether scoffed at. Less than 15 years ago an American officer engaged in the operations against the Moros in the Philippines, collected apparently substantial evidence, relating to the mysterious white tribe in the island of Mindanao. The mountainous district in the centre of this island has never been explored, and even the coast is not well known.

But along the seaboard many stories are told of the fierce white people who have their home in the forest-clad mountains of the interior. Eye witnesses depose to having seen a fair complexioned girl, who fled toward the hills as soon as she was addressed. Other men and women of a light complexioned race are said to have been seen by more venturesome natives who were bold enough to approach the wild mountain district. The American officer was so impressed that he determined to conduct an exploring party across the centre of the island. But apparently the mysterious white folk had vanished, for the world has as yet heard nothing of the search being crowned with success.

Arabia, however, can, with more reason, boast of a white tribe. For years stories of such a race have been told in the Persian Gulf, and an American missionary stationed at Muscat attended some years ago to "coffee house babbles in eastern Oman concerning a mysterious race of light complexioned people who live somewhere in the mountains, shun strangers and speak a language all their own."

Various theories have been propounded to explain the fable, but probably the explanation is to be found in the narrative of a journey made to Oman in 1870 by Col. S. B. Miles, a British officer. Col. Miles, in the course of his travels nearly 40 years ago, came across a town named Shereisi in the heart of the Green mountains. This strange place was perched like an eagle's nest on the top of a great cliff, and was inhabited by people of a lighter skin than the rest of the tribes in the interior. They rarely descended to the plains, and refused to mix with or intermarry with the Arabs.

DEATH OF MR. R. A. WARD IN TORONTO

Passed Away on Saturday Night—Funeral To day

Mr. Robert Alexander Ward, formerly Principal of Borden Street Public School, Toronto, died at his home, 67 Rosemount Avenue, that city, on Saturday, aged forty-eight years.

Mr Ward had lived in Toronto for about twenty years, and during the greater part of that time was connected with the public school teaching staff. He was obliged to cease teaching on account of poor health a number of years ago, but after a short retirement again joined the staff as Principal at Borden Street School. Three years ago he resigned on account of poor health. For years he taught in Kew Beach School.

Before going to Toronto, Mr. Ward taught near Peterborough and also in Parry Sound. He always took a deep interest in church work, and was a prominent figure at Broadway Methodist Church in his home city and its Sunday School.

Mr. Ward is survived by his wife—who was formerly Miss Rebecca Linda Kennedy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Kennedy, Water Street, Peterborough—five children, and his parents. His father is Mr. W. A. Ward, C.N.R. agent at Bancroft.

The funeral took place from the family residence, 67 Rosemount Ave. this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Bird Families

HOW many of us are familiar with the various bird families which are most common around the farm? As a rule we do not consider these birds of much value; in fact, we think of them more frequently as destroyers of property. Much valuable information to the contrary, however, is contained in Farmers' Bulletin 630 of the United States Department of Agriculture. In order that Our Folks may become more familiar with the subject, we intend publishing from week to week a brief description of various birds as gleaned from this bulletin.

Whether a bird is beneficial or injurious, depends almost entirely upon what it eats. Within certain limits birds eat the kind of food that is most accessible, especially when their natural food is scarce or wanting. Thus they sometimes injure the crops of the farmer who has unintentionally destroyed their natural food in his improvement of swamp or pasture. Many species live almost entirely upon insects. It is thus evident that in the course of a year, birds destroy an incalculable number of insects and it is difficult to over-estimate the value of their services in restraining the great tide of insect life. Many, too, maintain life practically on weed seeds, and here again is another useful function of birds.

The Bluebird

The first species we shall study is the bluebird. The eastern bluebird, one of the most familiar and welcome of our feathered visitors, is a common inhabitant of all the States east of the Rocky Mountains from the Gulf of Mexico to southern Canada. In the Mississippi Valley it winters as far north as southern Illinois, and in the east as far as Pennsylvania. It is one of the earliest northern migrants, and everywhere is hailed as a harbinger of spring. Very domestic in habits, it frequents orchards and gardens, and builds its nests in cavities of trees, crannies in farm buildings, or boxes provided for its use.

The bluebird has not been accused, so far as known, of stealing fruit or of preying upon crops. Beetles constitute 21 per cent of the whole food, grasshoppers 22, caterpillars 10, and various other insects nine, while a number of spiders and myriapods, about six per cent, comprise the remainder of the animal diet. All these are more or less harmful, except a few predacious beetles, which amount to nine per cent. In view of the large consumption of grasshoppers and caterpillars we may at least condone this offense, if such it may be called. The destruction of grasshoppers is very noticeable in August and September, when these insects make up about 53 per cent of the diet.

So far as its vegetable food is concerned the bluebird is positively harmless. The only trace of any useful product in the stomachs consisted of a few blackberry seeds, and even these probably belonged to wild rather than cultivated varieties. Following is a list of the various seeds which were found: Blackberry, chokeberry, juniperberry, pokeberry, partridgeberry, greenbrier, Virginia creeper, bittersweet, holly, strawberry bush, false spikenard, wild sarsaparilla, sumac (several species), rose haws, sorrel, ragweed, grass and asparagus. This list shows how little the bluebird depends upon the farm or garden to supply its needs and how easily, by encouraging the growth of some of these plants, many of which are highly ornamental, the bird may be induced to make its home on the premises.

Breeding cattle and horses from South Africa have been sent to Cuba by an English ranch owner there who will experiment with crossing them with American stock.

Losses estimated from $80,000,000 to $90,000,000 are caused by hail in France each year.

Storm Warnings Are Displayed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29. — Storm warnings predicting forty to sixty-mile winds have been displayed over the great lakes and along the coast from New Jersey to Maine.

WORTH KNOWING

HAVE you noticed the bright fruit on the different viburnum bushes, such as the black haw, highbush, cranberry, and Viburnum lantana? The viburnums are worth growing for their autumn fruit and coloring.

Fine specimens of dahlias and gladioli in all colors were abundant this year. These two plants deserve to be planted in greater variety than they usually are. They furnish an excellent fall flower for all sorts of purposes.

Is the entrance to your home attractive? Things that are always noticed in the country are entrances to farmsteads. These should at least be clean, orderly, and well laid out. The lawn is more pleasing if it is kept clipped and if it contains a few shrubs and trees.

The value of spraying was demonstrated again this year in spite of the small apple crop. One orchardist who has no fruit this year, on account of the spring frosts, has given his orchard as good care as if it contained plenty of fruit. This is the right spirit and will mean a good crop another year.

Proper grading is necessary in order to get the best prices from many buyers. This is especially true of apples and other products that sell on appearance. A few poor apples in a lot will lower the selling price to that of the poor apples. Better sell No. 1 and No. 2 stock in well graded packages.

Has any preparation been made to keep birds about the place this winter? Birds should be fed when there is heavy snow or at other times when food is scarce. There is a good old Scandinavian custom, which might be followed here with pleasure and profit, of putting a sheaf of wheat out occasionally during the winter to feed the birds. Try it. The fun of watching the birds will pay for the trouble.

SLEEP WARM

Dr. W. S. Rankin, of the North Carolina State Board of Health, tells us to sleep warm and to have fresh air in our bedrooms without freezing.

Believe in fresh air? Sure you do. So does everybody else. You cannot find a man in "a Sunday's journey" who will admit that he does not believe in fresh air. But how much does he really believe in fresh air?

The next time you come in late at night or go out early in the morning, just steal a glance at the closed bedroom windows in your street. You are from a civilized town if one family in ten has its bedroom windows wide open, or if one family in 100 is using a sleeping porch. Why? They believe in fresh air. Sure, but they are afraid of cold air. Here is the secret: Keep warm. Keep warm at night and do not sleep cold. About the meanest thing we know of is to try to sleep with just enough bed cover to be cold, and half awake and half asleep all night, and yet not cold enough to get sufficiently awake to get up and get the right kind of bed clothes.

And what are the right kind of bed clothes? Well, keeping warm at night consists of about three things: First, the night clothes you wear; second, the bed clothes on top of you; and third, the bed clothes under you. Aside from the aesthetic side of wearing different clothes at night from those worn in the daytime, a complete change of clothes, with the consequent airing that our bodies get, is now believed to be beneficial to health. It is needless to say the airing given one's day and night clothes alternately is also worth while. But the point is that with the decreased activity at night one can wear to excellent advantage soft, warm, loose-woven garments, that would not stand the wear of the activities of the day.

urday. The Women's Institute of Millbrook had prepared a veritable feast for the khaki-clad musicians, and the latter did ample justice to the good things provided. Afterwards the band gave a concert in the Armouries, which was largely attended and undoubtedly enjoyed by the audience, judging by the applause. All the new, marching songs were played, as well as several standard numbers. Master Percy Luther sang "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," with band accompaniment, and contributed a new recitation. The band arrived home on the 5.30 train, loud in their praises of the treatment accorded them by the hospitable people of Millbrook.

Lieut. J. A. New, of the 40th Regiment, who has been attending the School of Infantry at Kingston, is spending the week-end in town. He will leave to-night for Cobourg to report for duty to Col. Floyd, the officer commanding the 139th Northumberland Battalion. Lieut. New was a law student with Gordon and Widdifield, and was formerly on the editorial staff of the Examiner.

The establishment of the 93rd Battalion has been increased by the arrival of Capt. J. H. Burnham, Paymaster, and Lieuts. J. A. MacNab and Percy Stock, of the 57th Regiment, who returned from the Infantry School at Kingston on Saturday evening.

Lieut. M. B. Hamilton, of the 33rd Battery, Kingston, is home from Kingston on a few days' leave.

MONASTIR EVACUATED AND SERBIAN ARMY RETIRING

Italy's Armies Will Join War in Other Theatres When Austria is Beaten

King and General Cadorna Tell Lord Kitchener Struggle on the Isonzo is of Primary Importance to Nation But That Supreme War Council Will Be Obeyed.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Lord Kitchener, watched the shelling of Gorizia by the Italians on Saturday in the company of King Victor Emmanuel and General Cadorna, and before leaving the fighting front he paid a moving tribute to the valor of the Italian troops and the efficiency of the Italian artillery. This was read to the various divisions of the army in the order of the day and was greeted with tremendous cheering for England and Lord Kitchener.

One result of Great Britain's War Secretary's sojourn in Italy is the agreement to send a big Italian force to the Balkans if the general war council soon to be held in Paris approves of this course of action. Moreover, I am informed the general war council, which is composed of high military experts of the four great allied Powers, hereafter will decide all the great movements by land and sea.

General Cadorna tells, according to despatches from Rome, that his great push against the Austrians will tell effectually for the Allies in the end, but the King and General Cadorna told Lord Kitchener that as co-ordination spelled success they will abide by the decisions of what soon will be the supreme general staff.

The King of Italy who is a splendid soldier, agreed with Lord Kitchener that the Franco-British forces have the Germans practically beaten on the western front and that a new Russian offensive foreshadows victory in the eastern theatre but he and General Cadorna strongly impressed in Britain's War Secretary that the operations against the Austrians in the "irredentist" provinces were of vital importance to Italy which when the object there is attained would send armies to join the Russians and Franco-British forces in the tremendous struggle which all military experts agree will take place in Thrace before the winter is over.

While this news is encouraging, despatches from Athens indicate that the Serbian army, which has been fighting in the depths of winter against odds of five to one with short munitions is nearing the end of its resistance. This is why the Entente Powers are insisting on all the concessions demanded from Greece, and, though the despatches from Athens still are pessimistic in tone, there is an undercurrent of feeling that despite the Kaiser's threats, King Constantine, realizing that defiance of France and Britain will mean the end of his dynasty and making a virtue of necessity, will concede everything.

The Serbians will still in occupation of Monastir on Saturday, according to the Athens correspondent of the Times, who reports that four Serbian regiments were already in the town and that another had arrived on that day.

A despatch to the Daily Mail from Saloniki states that Germany's announcement that the Serbian army is beaten and the campaign against the Serbs closed masks a decision of the Austro-German-Turkish council to meet the menace of the great Russian army which is massed along the Roumanian frontier by the abandonment of the Serbian campaign, while two-thirds of the Serbian army, which, though retreating, is still effective, seems to spell failure for the grandiose campaign, which was to end with the little land desolated and the Kaiser and his victorious legions in Constantinople. The steadily growing Franco-British forces in Serbia are a profitable factor in forcing the decision to abandon the pursuit of the Serbians, the latest report being that German cavalry is within twenty miles of the French lines.

Germany Is Expecting An Attack in Balkans On All Four Fronts

The Attack Will Be Resisted by Bulgars, Turks and a Thin Sprinkling of Teutonic Troops—How Germany Believes Attacks Will Be Made.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 30.—Germany expects an attack in the Balkans on all four fronts. The attack will be resisted by the Bulgars and the Turks and a thin sprinkling of Teutonic troops. The German Emperor's visit to the Austro-Hungarian ruler Monday is believed to have related to plans for this defence. The Rome story that Austria seeks a separate peace and William's visit to Vienna to fight such a move is not taken very seriously.

The Berlin general staff is understood to look for Balkans attacks as follows. Russians and perhaps Roumanians on the north. Russian attempts at landing on the Bulgarian Black Sea coast. French and British and surviving remnant of Serbians in the south. Italians and Montenegrins, through Albania, in the west. The Bulgars are counted on to defend their own northern frontier. A few Germans and practically as many Turks as may be needed will fill in the gaps.

Turks are scheduled to guard the Black Sea coast. Turks, it is believed, will predominate against the Allies in the south, with a strong German detachment and enough Bulgars to represent the Bulgars' claim to the possession of Serbian Macedonia. Austrians will be called on to oppose the expected Italian advance through Albania. Owing to the severe winters in the Balkans, it is thought unlikely there will be much more serious fighting this season, but a terrific campaign is expected early in the spring. No serious German drive against England's possessions in Asia or Africa are anticipated until the Balkan position has been made secure.

Campaign Against Montenegro By The Austrians

Montenegrins Are Strongly Entrenched and It is Recognized That It Will Take Desperate Fighting to Dislodge Them

WEATHER TERRIBLE

VIENNA, Nov. 30. — Austria has launched a tremendous campaign against Montenegro, which it is declared officially is to be completely overrun. The border is marked by a rugged mountain chain between the Lim and the Chebotina. In this natural fastness, the Montenegrins are strongly entrenched and it is recognized that it will take desperate fighting to dislodge them. Heavy guns are being brought up as rapidly as the country's natural difficulties permit. The weather in the mountain is already terrible. The defiles are deep in snow drifts, the rocks are ice coated and fierce blizzards sweep the region. The Teutonic view is, however, that the Montenegrins are not so well prepared and will suffer more from winter campaigning than will the Austrians. There will be no suspension of the invasion therefore, on account of the weather.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The Bulgarians have crossed the River Cerna. Monastir has been evacuated. The Serbian army is retiring in good order.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The German-Austrians have halted in their southward march in Serbia owing to the Russian-Roumanian situation.

ATHENS, Nov. 30.—The Serbs still hold Monastir, but the Bulgarians are making another siege.

VERMONT BANKER ON TRIAL TO-DAY

RUTLAND, Vt., Nov. 30.—George C. Averill, former president of the Vermont National Bank of Brattleboro, will be placed on trial in the Federal Court here to-day on an indictment charging him with making false entries in the books of the bank. There is no charge of misappropriation, but the Federal bank examiners claim that the false entries were made to make the reserve and deposits appear somewhat larger than they really were.

ITALIAN RESERVE CONTINGENT IS OFF

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The last contingent of Italian reservists in the United States is embarking here to-day, and all those summoned for duty who fail to account for themselves, will be classed as deserters. Even the excuse of physical inability to fight is not accepted if the reservists are in shape for home guard or other service.

How To Make the Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind and You Save $1. Fully Guaranteed

This home-made cough syrup is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Its promptness, ease and certainty in conquering distressing coughs, chest and throat colds is really remarkable. You can actually feel it take hold. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of better cough syrup than you could buy for $2.50. Takes but a few minutes to prepare. Full directions with Pinex. Tastes good and never spoils.

You will be pleasantly surprised to note how quickly it loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, be sure and ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Premier Asquith's daughter, Violet, and his secretary, Benham Carter, were married at St. Margaret's, Westminster, this afternoon.

The wedding was attended by most of the members of the Diplomatic Corps, representatives of Royalty, and many society people.

WILL MEET IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 30—Prominent Republicans from many states are here to-day for the meeting of the National Republican Union, which will be permanently organized for a campaign to revise the basis of representation in Republican National Coventions.

Horace C. Stilwell of Indiana is chairman of the Union.

BERLIN'S EARLY CLOSING.

No Liquors Sold or Consumed on the Premises After 9 P. M.

Some time ago the order was given to Berlin liquor dealers to sell no more spirits after 9 P.M., but it seems that some of their customers got around the law by ordering beverages before the closing hours and consuming them on the premises until much later hours.

Now this, too, has stopped, according to the North German Gazette of Nov. 4. Henceforth wine and spirit merchants are forbidden not only to sell drinks after 9 P.M., but are required to see that none are consumed at their establishment after that hour.

Twelve to Fifteen Million Bushels of Wheat Have Been Commandeered

By the Government--All Wheat of Nos. 1, 2 and 3, Northern in Store in Eastern Elevators

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—The Dominion Government on Saturday commandeered all wheat of Nos. 1, 2 and 3 Northern in store in Eastern elevators. The amount of grain affected is estimated at from twelve to fifteen million bushels, although there is a possibility that the total may run slightly above these figures.

This action, probably the most drastic ever recorded in the grain trade of the Dominion, was taken for the purpose of protecting the Imperial Government, which is buying the grain, and for which the Government here is acting. The commandeering of the wheat caused a sensation in the wheat market, particularly in the West, and enquiries have been pouring in to-day as to the significance and scope of the Government's action.

As explained in an official memorandum issued to-night the method of commandeering the grain was adopted in order that the purchasing Government might not be subjected to the extra expense of inflated prices which would follow the Government's entry into the open market as a buyer. The Dominion Government has been bending every energy toward securing a market for the huge grain surplus of Canada, and it is hoped that by securing the fulfilment of this first order from the Imperial Government at a fair price that other orders will follow. All wheat of the grades mentioned in store at the head of the lakes and Eastward is taken over. The price has not been fixed, but will be adjusted on a basis of the fair market value, taking into consideration the magnitude of the order.

Will Help The Grower.

It is pointed out that had the method of commandeering not been adopted the probable rise in price would have accrued to the grain dealers and not to the growers, while the latter, who still holds nearly 200,000,000 bushels, now stand to profit from an increase which may follow the Government's purchase. No wheat in elevators west of Port Arthur and Fort William or in the hands of farmers or in transit is affected. Information as to the actual destination of the grain is not yet available, and it is possible that the British Government is buying for one of the other allied powers.

The total amount of grain in store in all elevators in Canada is estimated by the Dpeartmnt of Trade and Commerce at 23,408,302 bushels, of which less than a quarter of a million bushels is held in interior elevators. The Government is, therefore, commandeering at least one-half of the amount in Eastern elevators. This is approximately six per cent. of the total exportable surplus of this year's crop, taking the last official estimate of the total wheat yield at 336,258,000 bushels, and the surplus for export at 228,000,000.

Admiralty's Help Needed.

The Imperial Government, which has placed a time limit upon the fulfilment of the order, will, it is expected, take care of the transportation of the wheat at least in so far as the provision of adequate tonnage is concerned. It is believed here that some such move as this was in view when the British Board of Trade a few days ago took power to requisition merchants ships for the carriage of foodstuffs and issued an order prohibiting British ships of over 500 tons from trading between foreign ports without licenses.

Saturday's Closing Price Will Be Paid For Wheat By Government

OTTAWA, Nov. 29—Saturday's closing prices will be paid for wheat commandeered by the Government: No. 1 Northern, $1.06½; N. 2, $1.03½; No. 3, 98 cents.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Reports indicate that a whole Turkish division has been wiped out in fighting for Bagdad. British forces have withdrawn before the Turkish reinforcements.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—The resignation of the Shell Committee and the constitution of a new body known as the Imperial Munitions Board is announced, including Sam Hughes, Flavelles, General Bertram, and others.

LONDON, Nov. 30—A German submarine was sunk by a British aeroplane off the Belgian coast on Sunday.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—Major A. P. Anderson, of Edmonton, 3rd Battalion, has returned to the War Office after escaping from a German prison camp. Disguised as a German, he has obtained useful information.

ACIDS IN STOMACH SOUR THE FOOD AND CAUSE INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" Fixes Sour, Gassy, Upset Stomachs in Five Minutes

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can surely get relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why it relieves sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless, tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healty appetite; but what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach misery and indigestion in five minutes.

"You cared that much for me?

"Yes," she confessed frankly, "I did. I would never have told you so under ordinary conditions. But I can now, here, where we are—alone together in this boat." She paused, as though endeavoring to choose the proper words. "We both realize the changed relations between us."

I drew a quick, startled breath.

"Yes," she said calmly. "I could not help that. At first I never dreamed such a result of our friendship possible. I was Philip Henley's wife, and I gave this possible danger scarcely a thought. Indeed, it did not seem a danger. While it is true he was husband in name only, yet I was wife forever. That is my religion. Now the conditions are all changed, instantly changed, by his death."

"You believe, then, he is dead?"

"I am sure of it as though I had seen his body. I feel it to be true. Do you understand now why because of the fact we can no longer remain friends?"

"Yes," I burst forth, "because you know how I have grown to feel toward you. You—you resent"—

"Have I said so?"

"No, not in words. That was not necessary, but I understand."

"Do you, indeed?"

I stared toward her, puzzled, bewildered, yet conscious that the hot blood was surging through my veins.

"You cannot mean the other?" I questioned. "That—that you love me?"

"And why not? Am I so different from other women?"

I held the tiller still with one hand, but the other arm was free, and I reached out and drew her toward me. There was no resistance, no effort to break away. I could see her face uplifted, the wide open eyes.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Revenue Cutter.

IT could not have been long, not to exceed a moment or two, when a sudden leaping of the boat brought us back to a realization of our position. As soon as I had regained control of the craft I reached out again and touched her hand.

"This is all so strange, so unexpected, I can scarcely comprehend what has occurred."

"Strange, yes, in the way it has happened," she coincided. "But we can not afford to dwell upon that now. We are in peril. Do you really know where we are—for what you are steering?"

"It is largely a guess. There is nothing to give me guidance except as I unscrew the face of this compass and feel the needle."

"Then we may still be within view from the deck of the Sea Gull at daybreak?"

"Yes. That will depend entirely upon luck."

"Why, look there!" she exclaimed quickly. "See—to the right! Merciful heavens! It is a ship!"

It was hard to determine the nature of the vessel, the sides looming close above us, but it was not the Sea Gull. I was certain of that from the height of the rail and the outline of a square foresail showing dimly against the sky. I called out:

"Ahoy there! Take us aboard!"

I shouted twice before a head popped over the rail and stared down in apparent amazement.

"Hullo, the boat! Who are you? What do you want?"

"Small boat adrift; two passengers. Throw us a rope!"

"All right! Stand by!"

I could hear his voice up above shouting orders. There was a rush of feet, and a rope's end fell within reach. The head bobbed over the rail again, and a moment later I had helped her up a swaying boarding ladder and felt the solid deck under my feet. The intense darkness puzzled me, not a gleam of light showing anywhere. Suddenly a hand touched my arm.

"What kind of a boat is this?" she whispered.

We were at the head of the companion stairs and descended carefully, clinging to the rail. The officer, groping in the darkness, opened a door at the bottom and hurried us into the lighted cabin. Facing us, one hand resting on the table, stood a short, sturdy man in uniform. He began questioning.

"Who are you? How did you come to be adrift in these waters? Answer up, sir. You're no fisherman."

"What do you mean by escaped—run away?"

"Yes, sir." And I stepped aside so he could see her more clearly. "We were being held as prisoners."

His eyes flashed to her face, rested an instant, and then his cap was in his hand.

"This is the revenue cutter Saline, which I have the honor to command. Mr. Smith, assist the lady to a chair and have the steward bring a glass of wine. Now, sir, are you ready to answer?"

"I am. We were prisoners on board the Sea Gull. It is a long story, involving a will, in which the master of that vessel was interested. We escaped in a small boat last evening and have been floating about since."

"The Sea Gull? Do you remember the name, Mr. Smith?"

"No, sir. Perhaps a description"—

"A schooner rigged steam yacht," I explained briefly, "clearing from New Orleans for Santiago. She is en route to Spanish Honduras, with munitions of war."

He walked across the cabin twice, thinking, not even glancing up as he passed us. Suddenly he stopped, facing me.

"Where did he get you two?"

"In a bayou off the Alabama coast."

"And you got away last evening—how?"

He walked back and forth as I reviewed the events swiftly. I hardly think he asked so much as a single question, his eyes upon my face and then upon the face of the girl.

"A rather strange tale," he commented when I had concluded, "and perhaps the whole is not told. However, that is none of my affair. Now, listen. This is a revenue cutter. We were ordered out of Pensacola four days ago to intercept this boat on which you two were prisoners. We haven't even sighted the vessel, and if we did would be perfectly helpless, as she can steam three knots to our one. Only ocean streak of wonderfully good luck would ever enable us to capture her. I half believe you are the good luck, if you do what I suggest."

"What?" I asked. "I will be willing. Would you need Mrs. Henley also?"

"Yes," and he turned to the officer.

"It is not a very complicated plan, but we will try it. I don't think Henley will leave these waters without an effort to recover his boat and prisoners. He will want those papers and revenge on Craig here. He has no warning that we are after him. I believe the fellow will cruise about in the same neighborhood until daylight. All we have to do is lay a trap—the boat's the trap."

"Exactly; lower the mast, as though Craig here had been unable to step it, or, better still, heave it overboard. The loss of weight will give room for another man. Then cover the lads over with the canvas. They will never suspect the ruse on the Sea Gull or study it out through glasses. They'll simply recognize their boat and steer for it."

"The fighting odds will be pretty heavy, sir," said Smith soberly.

"We must trust to surprise and get the crew below fastened down before an alarm is sounded on board. A dozen armed men ought to clear the decks. How do you look at the affair, Craig? Will the plan work?"

"I am not sure I understand exactly what is proposed, sir."

"My thought is that this man Henley will be sufficiently anxious to get hold of you two again and regain those papers, so that he will steam about slowly all night, hoping to get sight of the missing boat at daylight. He has no means of knowing that the revenue officers are after him. If he sights us at daybreak he'll make a run and show us a clean pair of heels. He'd be hull down in five hours, for this is a slow old tub. Now, what I propose is this," and the captain counted off the points on his fingers. "There is about an hour of darkness left—sufficient to enable me to run this cutter in behind Cosmos Island safely out of sight. In the meanwhile we'll dismantle that small boat a bit, slip a dozen good men under the canvas and turn her adrift."

"And you wish me to go also?"

"Yes; if you will."

"And Mrs. Henley?"

I hesitated, half turning so as to look at her.

"You wish to say yes?" she asked quietly. "You believe the plan will succeed?"

"It sounds feasible."

She glanced toward the waiting captain and then back into my face.

"Then I will go, of course," she said smilingly. "Let us not discuss it any more."

The captain stepped forward, bowing, bare headed.

"Most bravely spoken," he said soberly. "I owe you a debt, madam. Mr. Smith, have the boat prepared at once to carry out my idea."

"To leave the impression that an incompetent seaman had been in charge of it through the night, sir?"

"Exactly. The mast overboard and the canvas stowed badly."

"Yes, sir; a big sheet."

"Bunch it so as to leave all the space possible; leave the jib set; it will help conceal the men. Send Lieutenant Hatton here."

"He will have command of the party?"

"Yes; let him pick his own men and then report to me; arm them with a revolver apiece. Be lively about it."

* * * * * * *

The dawn broke gray and desolate. I sat at the tiller, grasping one of her hands in mine and staring anxiously about the broadening circle. The boat in which we rode, while buoyant enough, still bore the outward appearance of a wreck, the broken stump of a mast barely showing sufficiently high to support the flapping jib, and the wet canvas of the mainsail completely concealing everything forward. The men were lying low, so completely hidden as to be invisible even to us, but the lieutenant sat upright, with head above the mass of sail, and was scanning the sea with glasses.

"Hadn't seen you before," he said to me. "Dark when we came over the side, you know. Bad morning."

[illegible] that black mass out there?"

"Cosmos Island." And he turned his glasses the other way. "The next ten minutes will give us a clear view."

I looked at her, noting how tired her eyes appeared in the gray light, although they smiled courageously.

"You are so tired"—

"No more than you, I am sure. Why, I have done nothing except to stay awake. You have had all the work and worry. It will not be long now."

"No; we shall know in a few minutes if the Sea Gull is standing by hunting us. If she shows up, you must do exactly as I say. You promise that?"

"Of course," and the clasp of her hand tightened. "You have no reason to doubt me."

The lieutenant's eyes were on the widening sea line and I bent down and pressed my lips to her bare arm. I glanced up again into flushed cheeks.

"Craig," exclaimed the lieutenant suddenly, "that must be the fellow off there to port! Here, try the glasses—just where the cloud is lifting a bit."

I recognized her instantly.

"That's the Sea Gull, and, by heavens, they are keeping a sharp lookout on board. See! She is swinging on her heel already; they've sighted us!"

He grasped the glass and stared out through it in silence for several minutes. Then he thrust it into a pocket and settled back out of sight behind the canvas screen.

Would Wake Up
With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McElwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Douchette Tells of her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

Belleville, Nova Scotia, Can.—"Three years ago I was suffering badly with what the doctors called Change of Life. I was so bad that I had to stay in bed. Some friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first. It is the only medicine I took that did help me and I recommend it. You don't know how thankful and grateful I am. I give you permission to publish what my good medicine has done for me."—Mrs. SIMON DOUCHETTE, Belleville, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia, Canada.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and impatience, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE DEACONS' SITES

By M. QUAD.

(Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.)

When it had been finally decided to erect a church building for a certain sect at Charlestown there came the question of the site. It was a scattered village, and there were many old people that wanted the building as close to them as possible. There were others that thought the site that would show off the church to the greatest advantage and that at the same time could be bought the cheapest, was the one to be selected. It wasn't to be anything grand, but if located right it would make up for that in a measure. It took six months to settle the question of the site. One faction wanted it on the crest of a hill and the other at the end of the bridge over the river. Deacon Henderson owned one site and Deacon Fraser the other, and each wanted $200 for the land. Each became the leader of a faction.

At first all the talk was in a good natured way, as becomes such a subject, but as time went on acrimony crept in and argument became dispute. The pastor was anxious to see the building under way, but he could not favor either faction. He could simply counsel brotherly love, and when brotherly love is stretched too far it gets pretty thin and weak. Deacon Henderson, who owned the hill site, went about saying:

"You can put a cooper shop most anywhere, but when it comes to a meeting house there's only one place for it, and that's on a hill, if there are any hills around. I most think that's what the Lord created hills for."

"Oh, Deacon Henderson may talk that way," Deacon Fraser would reply, "but he's all wrong. You put a meeting house on a hill and you make a circus of it."

The dispute finally resulted in the hilltop being offered at half price, and the congregation accepted the offer. The minister went to bed that night with thankful heart, and a great sigh of relief passed over the town. Everything seemed to be settled at last, and men began preparing the foundations of the building. But there are wheels within wheels. Deacon Fraser had been defeated on the site, but he had a shot in reserve. When the frame of the building was up and roofed over he brought out statistics to show that nine-tenths of the church buildings struck by lightning were buildings standing on hills. There was every chance that this one would be struck. He wanted it understood that he would never enter it of a Sunday when there seemed the slightest chance of a thunderstorm. His faction followed him in his argument, and there was another wrangle on hand. If his site had been chosen there was a big walnut tree that would have deflected and received any thunderbolt on its way to destroy the church.

"Yes, we know that a building on a hill is more exposed to lightning than a building in a hollow," Deacon Henderson would reply, "but we are going to prepare for that. We shall put up a lightning rod. It'll catch all the thunderbolts that come along and run 'em into the ground. We don't care how much ground they tear up, so's they let the church alone."

It was the era when men pinned their faith to lightning rods and defied old Jove to do his worst. It was settled that a rod on the church would do the business, and now all disputes seemed to be ended. The truce lasted just four weeks. The building was more than half finished when Deacon Fraser came to the front to stir up things again. He had given the matter of that lightning rod much thought, and he had come to the conclusion that it was flying in the face of Providence to put one up. It was saying to the Lord that they couldn't trust him.

Deacon Henderson was hard put to answer these arguments. They were a sort of dell to the other faction. If the church had been built on the hollow the Fraser faction would have depended on Providence. Now that it was being built on a hill the Henderson faction was going to give Providence the shake and go to the expense of $90 to put up a lightning rod. Were they whole Christians or half Christians? If they believed that man was greater than Providence, then Satan would be glad to see the building finished and dedicated. Here was a yawning pit and but one way to bridge it. The lightning rod faction took that way by announcing that there would be no rod. Everything would be left to Providence. This really ended all dispute. Deacon Frazer tried hard to think of some other point, but nothing would occur. Only when he and the other deacon would meet he would shake his head and say:

"I dunno about that church, deacon. Gimme a church in a holler, with a big walnut tree five rods away, and I'll trust Providence for the rest."

"There she is, right up on the hill," Deacon Henderson would reply, "and we're asking Providence to protect her without the help of any trees."

The church had been dedicated a month when there came a terrible storm one night. First the wind blew with fury, and then there came rain and thunder and lightning, and all of a sudden a crash that lifted half the town out of bed. When the storm ceased it was found that the walnut tree in the hollow had been struck and shivered and that the church on the hill had been blown from its foundations and rolled down the hillside into the creek. Then at once arose the question, "Which did Providence hit first?" And today, after a lapse of five years, it is still an undecided question.

"I SWEAR"

"I am a blacksmith.

I contracted a sore finger, which led to blood-poisoning.

After three months of doctoring, the finger had to be cut off.

It was too late! The poison had spread to my hand and arm. My hand was opened and the bone scraped. No use! Doctors said hand would have to be taken off.

I refused, and began to use Zam-Buk. I used it freely for a few weeks. It subdued the blood-poisoning and my hand began to heal.

By the time I had used 7 boxes of Zam-Buk my hand was quite healed.

Zam-Buk surely saved my hand, and I firmly believe it would have saved my finger too, had I used it at first."

Cultivating the Power of Observation.

"How many seed compartments are there in an apple?" he asked. No one answered. "And yet," continued the school inspector, "all of you eat many an apple in the course of a year and see the fruit every day probably. You must learn to notice the little things in nature."

The talk of the inspector impressed the children, and at recess the teacher overheard them discussing it. A little girl, getting her companions around her, gravely said:

"Now, children, just suppose I am Mr. Robinson. You've got to know more about common things. If you don't, you'll all grow up to be fools. Now, tell me, Maggie," she continued, looking sternly at a playmate, "how many feathers are there on a hen?"—Woman's Home Companion.

NEGLECTED COLDS VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. Your head becomes stuffed up; you start to cough; an irritation in the throat follows; it gets lower down; settles on the lungs; you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color sometimes streaked with blood, and you cough persistently.

You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight off this trouble, but colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate. Colds if not attended to will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Willis H. Monk, Lower Ship Harbor, N.S., writes: "Last winter I took a severe cold on my lungs, and I would cough and spit up phlegm and blood. I had the cough for nearly a month, and I got medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good. I thought I had consumption. My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am the mother of ten children, and I always keep a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in the house. I will highly recommend it to all, especially to all who have little ones to care for."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the best cure for coughs and colds. It has been on the market for the past twenty-five years. It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c

A MYSTERY.

How Mother's Questioning Struck Her Son William Junior.

William junior had been cautioned by his mother not to do a number of things, too many for brief mention, but all very dear to him, and he had promised. However, after dinner his mother, happening to look out of an upstairs window, saw him in the midst of a transgression and reserved the matter in her memory.

That evening she detained William by her knee and questioned, as mothers do.

"Have you been a good boy all day, Willie?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Real good?"

"Y-yes, ma'am."

"And not done any of those things that mother told you not to do?"

"Y-y-yes, ma'am."

"Not a single one?"

William looked at her sharply, his mouth open.

"Are you me?" he demanded.

"Why, no."

"Are you God, then?"

"Certainly not."

"Then how did you know I was slidin' down that board?"—Lippincott's.

Sorrows of the Grocery Trade.

"James, my lad," said the grocer to his new assistant, "who bought that mouldy cheese to-day?"

"Mrs. Brown, sir," was the youth's reply.

"And the stale loaf we could not sell last night?"

"Mrs. Brown, sir."

"Where's that lump of rancid butter that the baker refused?"

"Mrs. Brown bought it cheap, sir," was the answer.

"And the six eggs we could not sell a week since?"

"Mrs. Brown."

"Are you ill, sir?" asked James, as the grocer turned green and groaned.

"No, no; only I'm going to tea at Brown's to-night," replied the unhappy man as he wiped the perspiration from his face and sank into a chair.

All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Applications, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. The bank will issue a provisional receipt.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch of any chartered bank in Canada, and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the January instalment.

Scrip certificates payable to bearer will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds without coupons.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch of any chartered bank in Canada.

Holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds with coupons, payable to bearer or registered, without payment of any fee, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert, without fee, into fully registered bonds without coupons at any time on application in writing to the Minister of Finance.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

The loan will be repaid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications which bear their stamp.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 30th November, 1915.

Turkish Sub. Stopped British Ship and Then Helped Rescue Its Passengers

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A Turkish submarine stopped the British passenger ship Barulos in the Mediterranean, and, after 25 had been drowned, assisted in rescuing many of the 250 passengers who had gone overboard in a panic, said Eleanor Franklin Egan, an eyewitness, who arrived to-day on the steamship New York.

The Barulos, according to Mrs. Egan, who is a writer returning from a six months trip through southern Europe, left Piraeus for Alexandria on October 2nd. While the ship flew the British flag the crew was Greek, the passengers, a majority Greeks and Orientals. When about 5 hours south of Crete the ship picked up three boats containing the crew of the British steamship Sailor Prince, which had been sunk by a submarine a few hours previously.

The Barulos, Mrs. Egan said, carried but four lifeboats, each with a capacity for 30 people. The picking up of the crew of the Sailor Prince created a feeling of excitement which was at a fever heat when suddenly a submarine came to the surface about two miles distant and fired a shot over the Barulos, evidently as a signal for her to stop.

"Instantly a wild panic broke loose," said Mrs. Egan. "Led by the crew and the fire room force the passengers rushed for the boats. Women unable to get to the boats threw their children into the sea and jumped after them. Frightened sailors cut the ropes holding the small boats and when the latter crashed into the water three of the latter were swamped and emptied of their human loads.

"I was caught in the rush and literally forced over the side into the sea.

"The submersible had her collapsible lifeboats out and the submarine crew were pulling people out of the water on to her deck. The officer was holding up his hands and shouting to the people in the water to be calm. I heard him say in perfect English:

'For God's sake go back to your boats we are not murderers.'

"Seeing one of the lifeboats near I called for help. The people in the boat responded and threw a line to me when I was all but exhausted.

TWENTY FIVE DROWNED.

When all the rescued were returned to the Barulos a toll showed that 25 were missing, 14 children, 7 women and 4 men.

"In addition to the 25 drowned, many were hurt in the panic, several of the more serious were taken into the submarine and treated by our ship doctor who went aboard at the invitation of the submarine commander.

"The rescued British sailors proved her ocea. They not only tried to quell the panic but succeeded in rescuing many persons. Afterwards they helped the wounded.

ONE SHOT FROM SUBMARINE.

"Only one shot was fired by the submarine; she remained alongside for five hours or until all possible rescues had been made and the wounded had been attended. She then disappeared under the water and we proceeded to Alexandria, without further incident. I did not learn her name or designating number, but she was one of the largest boats of the kind I have ever seen. The captain of the Sailor Prince told me that he recognized her as the same one that had sunk his ship some hours previously, although at that time he said she flew the Austrian colours. Her deck armament consisted of two 12-pounders, which were in plain sight when the Barulos came alongside.

Cures Biliousness Prevents Brights Disease

The Certified Statement of One Has Proven the Efficiency of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Colin M. Kiel, Craighurst, Simcoe county, Ontario, writes: "My mother and I have both used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with great satisfaction. We find that there is nothing to equal them as a prompt cure for torpid liver, biliousness and indigestion. Some years ago my mother came near to death from kidney trouble and has to be careful in preventing Bright's disease. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally she keeps the kidneys healthy and active. Another point favourable to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is that they do not gripe and yet accomplish good results. You are at liberty to use my letter."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Marmaduke Caston, Justice of the Peace, who writes: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Colin M. Kiel and believe his statement regarding Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

If you are interested in this case, write to Mr. Kiel, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify his statement. We like to have people to do this, for we are very careful to only use statements from responsible persons.

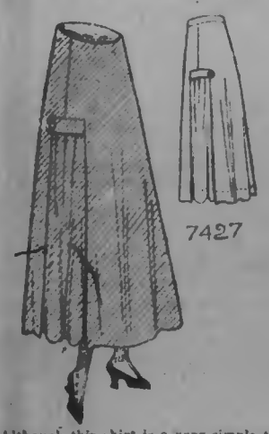
Should this case not be similar to yours, write to us for the statement of some one whose trouble was along the same lines. We have thousands of letters to choose from. Or better still, put the Kidney-Liver Pills to the test right away. They will only cost you a quarter and a box lasts for some time.

As a means of awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby curing biliousnes, indigestion, backache and kidney troubles, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills hold a unique position. By their combined action on these eliminating organs they prove effective in complicated ailments which defy ordinary treatment. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.



Although this skirt is a very simple two gore design, it offers us a novelty in cut. The two main gores form the front and back of the garment and both these are cut away a little below the hip, leaving the upper part as a deep yoke at each side. Where this gap occurs a straight breadth of material is inserted. It may be pleated or gathered as preferred and may be of the same material as the balance of the skirt or of something in contrasting color or texture.

The only chance which this skirt offers for ornament is in the little pieces which are inser at each side. These may be of a contrasting color and also of different material. If the skirt be made of velveteen, serge or gaberdine the inserted pieces may be of taffeta, while if the skirt be made of plain, heavy satin the inserted pieces may be of broadcloth. It will be more unusual to use broadcloth for the main portion of the skirt and taffetas or satin for the insert.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,427, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give number and size of pattern required, your name and address as well as the and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

HAS QUARTER SHARE IN WINDSOR SHOPS

Henry Ford Does Not Control Canadian Company, Says Manager

DETROIT, Oct. 4. — After seeing Henry Ford last Saturday in Detroit your correspondent had a talk with G. F. McGregor, the manager of the Ford Motor Works at Windsor. Henry Ford of Detroit does not own and does not even control the Windsor Ford Company. He owns 25 per cent. of the shares, but it is managed by a Canadian and run by Canadians, and three-parts owned by Canadians. To refuse to buy cars from a Canadians company because one of their shareholders happens to be an American would be as sensible as to refuse to buy munitions from American factories because the kaiser and his friends have money invested in the big American munition factories.

One scarcely expected to find Mr. McGregor in an amiable mood over the attitude of his fellow-countrymen toward his own and his partners' enterprise.

"My brother and I," he said, "are considerable shareholders in the firm. My brother is Capt. McGregor of the 21st Regiment, and Col. Robinson of the same regiment, is also largely interested. Another big shareholder is Major Beatty, who is at the front now with the first contingent. We have 400 men gone to the war, and we are holding their positions open for them when they return. Our men get a minimum wage of four dollars a day. They must not leave that without having their hearts in the war, and they know how we feel. It costs money to train new men, and we are glad to do our share as far as we can.

"We employ about 3,000 men. There are 2,000 men here in the Windsor factory, and another thousand at various points, Galt, Brantford, Oshawa, Toronto, and other places, making fittings.

"Mr. Ford's views have nothing to do with the manufacture of Ford cars in Canada, but even if they had Mr. Ford is not understood. His heart is entirely with the allies. He is supporting at least 150 Belgians refugees in England now. He believes that war is a bad thing, and he would like to stop it. But he would rather follow the principles of liberty and freedom from militarism which inspire the allies than any other.

"I believe if the allies were in any danger of being defeated he would jump in and help them. But he likes to stay out of actual fighting. He has 18,000 men in his factories and they get a minimum wage of five dollars a day. They are one big family to him. He thinks if they all speak English they will understand each other better and there will be less chance of quarrels. He has a night school to teach English to the men and there are 3,000 men attending it. They speak 45 languages in that factory.

"There are a lot of Canadians there too. Mr. Couzens, who is the financial head of the Detroit factory, is a Canadian. But we are not selling Detroit cars in Canada. We are selling Canadian cars made in Windsor by Canadian workmen."

Mr. McGregor made no secret of his disagreement with the extreme peace or anti-war party. He is heart and soul with the allies, and it is doubtful if many or any other firms in Canada can show 400 of their employees gone to the front with their places guaranteed on their return.

After hearing the evidence, the jury retired, but came back into court.

"My lord," said the foreman, "the jury are quite satisfied as to the sale of the bottle, but they are not sure of its contents. May they have the bottle to satisfy themselves?"

"Certainly," said the judge.

After a short time the jury returned into court.

"Well, gentlemen," said the judge, "have you come to a decision in the case?"

"There is no case, my lord," said the foreman. "There wasn't enough evidence to go around."—London Tit-Bits.

DR. BARANY A PRISONER.

Dr. Barany of Vienna, winner of this years Nobel Prize for medicine, is at present a prisoner in Russia. He was in charge of a field hospital at Przemysl when the Russians took that stronghold last March.

The prize was awarded to him for the discovery of a new method for treating shot wounds in the head by means of skull operations. Dr. Barany made the discovery in the course of his work at the Przemysl hospital while the stronghold was being besieged by the Russians. News of his achievement was taken to the outside world by an Austrian aviator, who flew over the Russian lines drawn round Przemysl.

Dr. Barany was already well known in Vienna and elsewhere for his medical achievements, having done some notable work in the treatment of ear diseases and other ailments.

ALL CHILDREN LOVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give It When Feverish, Cross, Bilious, for Bad Breath or Sour Stomach

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food, and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

HAGAN'S REMEDY.

Sir Robert Baden Powell's book, "Indian Memories" (Jenkins) teems with good stories of his early soldiering days in India. Some of the best stories he tells, however, are those concerning Sir Baker Russell, who was a major in the 13th Hussars soon after the hero of Mafeking joined and later became Colonel.

Sir Baker, who made a great name for himself as a soldier, was "the beau ideal of a fighting leader." He was beloved of the men, who nicknamed him "Baker's Dozen," mainly on account of his unorthodox methods.

"On one occasion," says Sir Robert, "the Colonel had to lecture one of his men for some minor misbehaviour. The man was a splendid type of old soldier, a wonderful boxer, swordsman, rider, and marksman, but he was very fond of his mug of ale. When he was brought up for having had a drop too much the Colonel remarked to him:

"'My good man, I only wish I could drink as much as you do and keep as good a nerve. Tell me how you manage it, and I will let you off.'

"Ben Hagan, for that was the fellow's name, explained his secret. It was to fill a hand-basin with beer every night before turning in, and to place it underneath his bed. Then his first act on waking in the morning was to pour it down his throat. He believed that the only way to preserve health and nerve was to take big doses of really stale beer the first thing in the morning."

WOMEN'S AMBULANCE CORPS PROVES METTLE

The Women's Reserve Ambulance got a chance to show what it can do on the night of the big Zeppelin raid on London, October 13th. How the women acquitted themselves is told by one of their number, Captain Kilroy Kenyon in "Votes for Women."

"We were all laughing and talking together," she says, "when suddenly we heard guns and bombs in the distance. It was a tremendous test of the efficiency of the drilling and discipline of the last few months, for none of the girls had really been tested in an emergency before. They all behaved magnificently from beginning to end. In a second they were all in their places at attention waiting for orders. The orders were given and in less than a minute we were in the ambulance and off.

"The driver, Captain Linton-Orman was a marvel. She drove us to the first fire in twelve minutes and in pitch darkness, for every light was turned out. When we arrived the police asked us how on earth we had managed to get there in the time."

At the first place they reached no one had been killed or injured and they started immediately for the next nearest place where bombs had fallen. Here it was found that several persons had been killed or injured. The women took command of the situation and, after doing what could be done on the spot for the injured, drove them to the nearest hospital. It was not until they were just about to start, says Captain Kenyon, that another ambulance appeared on the scene only to be told by the police: "The ladies have finished this job and there is nothing left for you to do."

At the third place to which the ambulance was driven that same night there was also work for the women to do. Although no one had been killed or seriously injured by bombs, several firemen, who had been engaged fighting the fired caused by the bombs, had been overcome by smoke. They were given first aid by the women and then driven in an ambulance to the hospital.

The Women's Reserve ambulance is an offshoot of the Women's Volunteer Reserve corps, which was started by the Hon. Mrs. Haverfield, a vice-president of the United Suffragists, soon after the war broke out. It began with six members. It now has two hundred. It is run on military lines and with military titles, too, with day and night shifts to turn out whenever an alarm sounds.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

The Emblem of South Africa.

The springbok, which has been adopted for the device of the South African contingent for Europe, was so named by the first Dutch settlers from a habit of suddenly leaping in the air, and is the characteristic antelope of the Union. It occurs almost everywhere, from the Cape to Rhodesia, and was noticed to be specially abundant in the German territory just conquered by General Botha. Prodigious herds of springbok sometimes travel through the country in dense masses that sweep away flocks of sheep or goats, and even carry with them entangled lions. These curious migrations are inspired by an instinct which tells the hungry herds where rain has lately fallen and caused a new growth of grass.

The Retort Courteous.

An Irishman was one day looking at the notice, "Your King and Country Need You." A delicate looking Englishman happened to be passing by, and, thinking to have a joke at Pat's expense, started the following:

Englishman—Well, Pat, will you volunteer for the front?

Irishman—Begob, I will if you come.

Englishman — Why do you want me with you?

Irishman—Sure, when the kaiser sees you he will look for peace. He'll think the British are rising from the dead.

State Seals.

The different important State documents are sealed with different varieties of wax, according to the office from which they emanate. For instance, the wax used for the Great Seal of England is whitish in colour, and is compounded of oils and balsams from a recipe kept in the Lord Chancellor's office. The wax of the Great Seal and Privy Seal of Scotland is a compound of resin and beeswax, colored with vermilion, which is bright red sulphide of mercury. The Exchequer Seal is made of green wax, and is considerably softer than ordinary sealing-wax.

Kitchen Economy

If you consider its body-building powers Bovril is probably the most economical food you can buy. No other food, no matter how high its price, has been proved to possess Bovril's wonderful body-building powers. Bovril saves butchers' bills and is a great economiser in the kitchen.

WAR NO BAR TO BIG PLAN

Bavarian Government Pushing Project for Vast Power Plant.

MUNCH, Nov. 29.—In the midst of the war the Bavarian Government has placed its final seal of approval on the project for a vast electrical power plant to supply all Bavaria with electric power and has submitted to the Bavarian Diet its report recommending the erection of a tate power plant.

The report contemplates the formation of a company with a capital and bond issue of $7,750,000, the stockholders, State municipalities, and existing power companies to carry out the so-called Walchen Lake project with a dam at Kruinn, five miles south of the outlet of the lake, and to combine it with the existing plant.

Through a centralised management under State control the Government figures that the cost of the power will be greatly reduced.

The Finance committee of the Diet immediately began the discussion of the project.

(Town Tattler.)

This is a secret that will, I know, be appreciated by my lady who dislikes the tedious and "nervous" task of twisting her locks around a heated iron, perhaps singeing the hair, burning off the ends, and blistering fingers or scalp in the operation. From any druggist procure a few ounces of liquid almerine and at night pour a little on a clean tooth brush and draw this down the full length of the hair. A simple thing to do but remarkably effective, as will be apparent in the morning.

The hair will have a wonderfully soft, fluffy curliness, much more natural looking, glossier and livelier in appearance than where a waving iron has been used. Almerine doesn't make the hair sticky or greasy and there will be no trouble in doing it up in any style desired.—Olga Ormebee.

Two children, a little boy and girl, brother and sister had been bereaved. They had lost by death a pet parrot. Of course when their first grief had subsided they turned the sad occasion to good account, as is the way with children, and a grand funeral. The boy Tommy was the gravedigger, and the girl Annie, wrapped the poor brilliant corpse up in a silk scarf ready for interment. And it was a mournful occasion.

When the grave had been duly patted down with a small scale, the little girl said:

"I s'pose polly's 'n he'v'n now?

"I s'pose so," said Tommy. "But I don't know."

"He's got wings," said Annie, "but he wouldn't be an angel, would he?"

"Only folks is angels," said Tommy.

"Well, then, what is he?" asked the little girl.

"I s'pose," said Tommy, "he's a bird of paradise now."

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will soon act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it is no longer irritated, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

BRITISH CASUALTIES REACH 600,000

ITALIANS GAIN IN FIGHT FOR GORITZ

FRESH GAINS REPORTED BY THE ITALIANS FALL OF GORITZ IS EXPECTED SHORTLY

Fierce Fighting in the Neighbourhood of Austrian Stronghold--Italians Capture Trenches and Prisoners and Are Pressing Their Advantage---Canadian War Loan is Said to Be Largely Oversubscribed---It Will Be Brought to a Close To-day.

LITTLE TO REPORT ON WESTERN FRONT

ROME, Nov. 30.—In the face of the most desperate Austrian counter attacks, the War Office reported to-day that the Italians continue to gain ground in their fight for Goritz. At one point, north of ther town, it is admitted the Austrians had the better of the struggle for a time. They had been heavily reinforced, and making a series of furious rushes, captured a number of Italian trenches. The Italians, however, counter charged irresistibly and recovered the positions after bloody hand to hand fighting. North of Monte San Michele the capture by Italians of important Austrian trenches is reported officially. Nearly one thousand prisoners, three machine guns and quantities of supplies and ammunition fell into Italian hands at this point. The official statement repeated the claim that Goritz's fall is imminent.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—The situation on the Franco-German front is "unchanged," the War Office reported to-day.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 30.—The list of the Canadian domestic loan closes at 3 o'clock this afternoon. While no definite figures are available, it is certain that the fifty million dollar loan has been heavily over-subscribed. It is said that the subscriptions will approximate at least 75 millions, or a third in excess of the amount asked for. The Government may decide to accept all applications in excess of fifty millions.

Private subscriptions are variously estimated at from 30 to 45 million dollars.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The British casualty lists published during November total 1,232 officers and 45,181 non-commissioned officers and men in all fields of war, bringing the total since the beginning of hostilities up to approximately 600,000.

ATHENS, Nov. 30.—The final solution of negotiations of the Entente powers with the Greek Government has been further delayed, pending the reply of the Allies to the proposal to permit the respective general staffs to define the military features of the Allies' requirement in Macedonia.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Lord Kitchener arrived in London to-day.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The British steamship Dotteral, 1,500 tons, has been sunk by a submarine. She sailed from Cork, Ireland.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Kitchener's return to-day is accepted as disposing of the rumours in circulation when he left England that he would take personal command of the Allies' campaign in the Balkans.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—According to an Exchange Telegraph despatch, Roumania has notified Russia that she is determined to remain neutral and will mine the Danube River to prevent any belligerent nation infringing of that neutrality.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—The Chamber of Deputies to-day passed the call of the Government for the class of 1917 for the army. This call sends all the boys of 18 into the trenches. It means an addition of 250,000 to the French fighting force. The Socialists in the Chamber put up a desperate fight to prevent the summons. They insisted that the call should be delayed, at the earliest, until March 15, 1916, and that even then it should be withheld until every other available man was in uniform.

Although youthful, the quarter million new soldiers which France to-day called to the colours, are the flower of her regenerated manhood. Restrictions of alcoholics and the encouragement of athletics during the last eighteen months have developed a new race of young Frenchmen, virile and strong, morally and physically. In the Chamber of Deputies to-day War Minister Gallieni promised that these men would not be required for actual fighting for some time, but it was necessary to get them in training.

"THE LAST JUDGMENT" A FINE ORATORIO

Will Be Presented in George St. Church on Friday Evening of This Week

Spohr's "Last Judgment," will be presented on Friday, of this week, in the George Street Methodist Church under the direction of Mr. J. H. Renwick.

The proceeds will be devoted to the Patriotic Fund.

The soloists are all local talent, including Mrs. Renwick, Misses Charlotte Hanson, Etta Kemp, Evelyn Bentley, Ida Sanderson, Mrs. Rehill, and Messrs. Edward Jones, John Anderson, Asa Huycke, Fred Miles, Charles Thorpe.

Miss Pearl McKee will play the piano accompaniments and Mr. J. H. Renwick will preside at the organ. His past productions of oratorios have been so meritorious that another success is expected in the "Last Judgment."

WILL NOT MATCH WITH THE KHAKI

"Khaki is the only colour that suits every man's complexion unless he is yellow; then the colours don't match, and the only excuse for not wearing it is to have a certificate of medical unfitness in your pocket," said Capt. Buchanan, lately returned from the front, who is with Lieut.-Col. Kingsmill, Commanding Officer of the 123rd Battalion, and Major Royce addressed large crowds at Shea's Hippodrome, Toronto, Sunday at the concert and recruiting rally held under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association.

WINTER QUARTERS OF 93rd BATTALION OCCUPIED TO-NIGHT

Peterborough Soldiers Enter Upon a New Phase of Military Life To-morrow—Battalion is Nearly at the 400 Mark Now Seventeen Having Been Added to the Strength Since Yesterday Morning—Machine Gun Officer Has Arrived—To-day's Military News.

Beginning this evening Peterborough's soldiers in the 93rd Battalion will enter upon a new phase of military life when they take up their residence in the armouries. The battalion will sleep in barracks to-night, and to-morrow morning the bugle sounding reveille at 6 o'clock will call them from their bunks to the first day's work under the new regime. As will be seen from the standing orders published below physical drill will be carried out from 6.30 to 7 a.m. Breakfast will be served at 7.30 a.m. followed by the morning parade from 8.30 to 12. Dinner is at 12.30 and the afternoon parade from 2 to 4.30 p.m. The evening meal will be served at 5.30 and the soldiers must in their quarters by 10 o'clock each evening.

The usual parade this afternoon was dispensed with as soon as orders were read on account of the fact that the troops are moving into their new quarters to-night. Blankets, knives, forks, spoons, etc., were issued this morning and everything is in readiness for the housing of the soldiers. The new furnaces in the main drill hall were lighted yesterday and the big arena is at a comfortable temperature to-day.

Seventeen men have been added to the strength of the battalion so far this week and a number of other recruits will report for duty to-morrow. No. 6 platoon is now at full strength and No. 7 will be started immediately. The parade state of the battalion this morning showed a strength of 391, and it is hoped that by Saturday night the battalion will be under full steam headed for the 500 mark. The soldiers are reminded of Hon. Major Davidson's $10 in prizes for the khaki lads who bring in the most recruits up to a week from Saturday.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Number 38.

Headquarters,
Peterborough, Nov. 30, 1915.

CANADIAN OFFICER TOURS GERMANY

Was Taken Prisoner at Ypres But Escaped From Prison Camp at Giessen — Travelled Through Germany and Learned Conditions

GERMAN PRESS MUZZLED

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—Escaped from a German prison camp after being captured at Ypres, and after wandering all through Germany disguised as a German, Major P. Anderson of Edmonton, who was attached to the 3rd Battalion, has returned to London with a thrilling story of adventure and an interesting account of German conditions at the present time.

Word of Major Anderson's escape and report to the War Office was received by the Minister of Militia to-day in a letter from Major-General Carson.

Has Reported to War Office.

General Carson reports that he has now arrived in London and has spent two days with officials of the War Office, giving them a full account of the conditions which he found in Germany. In his message to the Minster of Militia, General Carson says that Major Anderson has had a marvelous experience, and has shown a wonderful courage, a wonderful fund of assurance and a commonsense, combined with a marvelous amount of good luck.

The letter states that Major Anderson reports that the German press is absolutely muzzled, and that nothing is allowed to reach the people either directly or indirectly but a never-ceasing record of victories, with absolutely nothing of any setbacks. In consequence, says Major Anderson, the German people are still full of optimism, but are growing very reckless and all are "heartily sick of the war."

Clever Management of Escape.

After being captured with some of his men of the 3rd Battalion at Ypres Major Anderson was interned at Giessen, Saxony. He had a fair knowledge of the German tongue, having been born in Sweden, and determined to escape if possible. He spent some months preparing for this move, which had to be begun at night in full view of the strongest camp lights. However, he got away safely. For the first five days he walked all night and slept in concealment all day. He worked his way gradually south, using a small hand compass. After the first five days, when he thought the coast was clear and pursuit evaded, he walked boldly into small villages and slept at the village inns. He paid his way out of 250 marks which he had saved up before leaving the camp. Some of the time he rode on Government trains and had long and interesting discussions with German officers and men. After working his way to the extreme south of Germany he turned and worked back again to the extreme north, where he managed to cross the boundary into Denmark. At Copenhagen he reported to the British Ambassador and arrangements were then made to send him back to England via Sweden and Norway.

EYE-SIGHT TEST IS MUCH EASIER

The young men of Peterborough who have been unable to join the overseas forces owing to impaired eyesight, have their opportunity now. Major Eastwood, A.M.C., the physician in charge of the examination of recruits, has received instructions to-day that provide for a much easier sight test than has hitherto been required. Men who have been rejected on account of their eyes being below the high standard set may now apply with reasonable assurance of being accepted. The easier test should result in a decided increase in the ranks of the 93rd Battalion, as in the past many recruits have been rejected on account of their eyes.

DISSATISFID AT ACTION

of the Government in Commandeering of 20,000,000 Bushels of Wheat in Eastern Terminals

COULD BUY ON OPEN MARKET

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 30.—Grain men and millers are frankly dissatisfied at the commandeering by the Government of twenty million bushels of wheat contained in the Eastern terminals and other elevators. Apart from the dislocation of trade, caused by unexpected seizure of the wheat the fact that no compensation has been awarded is the cause of considerable complaint.

"The wheat could easily have been purchased on the open market," said H. Richardson this morning. "I was not necessary to take such drastic action. How could grain have been purchased by the Government without artificially boosting prices," Mr. Richardson was asked. "By use of brains" Mr. Richardson curtly replied. "The Government bought oats at a time when there was a scarcity in Great Britain. They went about it quietly and succeeded in purchasing a large amount without boosting the prices."

Mr. C. R. Watts, secretary of the Dominion Millers' Association, said that a very large part of the grain seized was intended for use by the Ontario mills, some of which must close down till their store is replenished. Millers and railway men are here to-day endeavouring to get the Government to make a statement regarding their position.

Killed Wife and Then Suicided

Wealthy Farmer of Harwich Township, Near Chatham, Ont. Hammered His Wife With a Shot Gun Over the Head, Then Hanged Himself

Special to The Examiner:

CHATHAM, Ont., Nov. 30.— Gilbert St. Denis, a wealthy farmer of Harwich township, killed his wife and then committed suicide this morning. Yesterday he appeared in police court on an incest charge. He was allowed out on $2,200 cash bail put up by himself. This morning he took revenge on his wife for laying the charge by clubbing her over the head with a shot gun and a few minutes afterwards hanged himself in the barn. Six children survive. St. Denis formerly lived at Tilbury.

LIVE STOCK RECEIPTS FAIR

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Live stock receipts are fair, market active. Spring lambs, $9.25 to $9.60; light ewes, $6.25 to $7. Hogs, fed and watered, $9.90, f.o.b. $9.16.

COMPLAINTS RE GERMAN WOMEN ON STREET CARS

There is considerable trouble and friction in Germany with the women employed on the tram and omnibus lines. It seems they are not so amenable to discipline as men. They come to work, we are told, in a casual sort of way in the morning, most of them unpunctual and wearing their uniforms in a slovenly way. General complaints are heard that they fail to run the cars on time, that they ring the bell at untimely moments and are far too attentive to affairs on the street which do not immediately concern them. One grumbler, writing to the Berlin "Tageblatt," says that they think far too much of their coffee, a refreshment at which they are always punctual.

WARDEN KINDRED RETIRES.

It is a matter of interst that Dr. Kindred, warden of the county, made his address at the opening of the December session of the County Council, his valedictory address. He says that his private interests demand more attention than is consistent with his contiguance in municipal public life, and he will retire at the end of the year. This is a time when we regard sacrifice of personal interests as a duty; but this applies to something that cannot be done by others, and relates particularly to the duty of every citizen in some way or other helping on the war. Dr. Kindred has won his retirement by three years' service in the County Council, one year of which he was warden. It can be truly said of him that he has faithfully and efficiently discharged his duties, not only by his attention to affairs through the county, but as a presiding officer. He has been a source of strength to the council, and has made an excellent presiding officer, guiding and steadying, but not injudiciously interfering with, the deliberations and work of the council. His colleagues will hear with regret his decision to retire from public life at the end of three years very pleasant association.

THE COUNTY'S SHARE.

The County Council at its present session will probably be called upon to deal with a proposal to make a grant of money for patriotic purposes; and it is trusted that in dealing with the question there may be no bracketting of parsimony and patriotism. This is a time when we must be contradictory. This is a time when it is a duty to practice the closest economy, but only in order that we may have more to bestow on expenditure for patriotic purposes. There need not be quoted the example of other county municipalities to inspire and stimulate our own County Council. The question is not what others do, but what we should do. It is not a question of the least we can do, but of the most we can do, in order to meet the obligations imposed upon the county, and discharge our duty. It may be considered inopportune to ask decided action from a council whose members cease to be representatives at the end of the year. This is, however, a minor consideration; they represent their constituents as fully in the closing, as they did in the opening, months of the year. And it is probable that the people as a body would endorse, and even applaud, any action the present council might take that would enable the county to make a contribution to the war worthy of its position, resources and responsibility. We can't all fight; and those who cannot contribute to the success of the cause in that way are called upon to do so in another way — equally necessary and in the end, equally effective. Compared with the City of Peterborough, it will be admitted that the County of Peterborough has not done its proportionate share in contributing recruits. To get even the county can do its fighting in another way. It would not seem an unfair division of labour to provide that if the county furnishes the silver bullets, the young manhood of the city will, as it stands ready to do, convert them into bullets of another kind, and fire them to good advantage. We must all get into this fight one way or another.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT AND THE WRONG.

This is a time above all that calls for the possession and influence of the right spirit; the spirit of subjecting, within reasonable limits, every other consideration to the promotion of the interests, to the promoting of our share of waging war and achieving victory. We do not, all, always have this spirit. For instance, the Mail and Empire permits itself to make the following editorial columns:

Mr. Lemieux took good care not to deny that his views and Mr. Bourassa's views on the use of French as a language of instruction in our schools are the same.

In Ontario Mr. Lemieux does not call us his views about on Regulation 17. In Quebec he does not carry on a campaign against Mr. Bourassa.

Such things as these do not show the right spirit. They show the partizan spirit, which at this time has no proper place in our minds, in face of the common ideals we have or should have; in face of the common task that stern conditions have set us. These remarks are made aptopos of speeches made by Hon Mr Lemieux in Toronto in the interests of recruiting. Why should he have spoken of the things the Mail and Empire says carpingly he did not speak of? Mention of them by Mr. Lemieux on the occasion he spoke in Toronto would be an unpatriotic impertinence, a wicked diversion of the public mind from the duty of the hour They do not represent an issue at the present time. No good, only harm, only diversion of aims and divided action could come of dealing with them at a time when there is, or should be, only one common aim, only one common work. They manifestly represent the thin end of the wedge of party politics and partizanship. Would the Mail and Empire have similarly sinned against the political truce, that automatically appeals at this time to every true Canadian, by speaking in a similar impertinent and malapropos manner of a Conservative statesman who was doing his bit in continuation of similar energetic service to help recruiting. Hon. Mr. Lemieux has been one of the most energetic and zealous of our public men in promoting the interests of recruiting in Canada. He has the right spirit; for, as far as his critics will permit him, to steer clear of politics, and practise patriotism, he consistently does so. He is a fluent and graceful, speaker, forceful and epigrammatic One of his epigrams uttered in Toronto on Saturday touches the quick of the question—"It is not a question of ballots but a question of bullets; it is not returning officers we want; it is recruiting officers." The whole paragraph from which these are taken is worth repeating as a compact summary statement of the duty of the moment.

"There is, after all, a greater issue at the present hour, which dominates all party contingencies; an issue which should unite the best efforts of all races, creeds, and parties. This task demands all the energies of a united Canada. It is not a question of ballots, but of bullets. It is not returning officers we want; it is recruiting officers."

Here speaks the right spirit. The Mail and Empire could remark that Mr. Lemieux "took good care not to deny that his views and those of Mr. Bourassa as to teaching French are the same." But the Mail and Empire did not remark that Mr. Lemieux took good care — especial pains—to deny that his views and Mr. Bourassa's views upon recruiting were the same. Mr. Lemieux was compelled, in defending the people of Quebec from the charge of indifference to recruiting, to point out the cause of this indifference if, it exists, as it does not exist. It was necessary to point out that Mr. Bourassa doesn't believe in recruiting. One of the three maxims which at this time compose the essence of Nationalism is "To spurn any attempt at recruiting for British troops." It was necessary to point out that "with the exception of Hon. Mr. Casgrain every member of the Dominion Cabinet from Quebec since 1911 has been a follower of Bourassa and a believer in his damnable doctrines."

Is it any wonder that if, as claimed, there is indifference to recruiting in Quebec, when the doctrine of a cult that "spurns any attempt at recruiting for British troops," receives the government imprimatur, the seal of official authority by having in the cabinet a procession of members of the school of Mr. Bourassa?

What in th world has the French language and "regulation 17" (a matter of parish politics) to do with the tremendous question of Canada's help in a great war? What we want is French-Canadian help, Ontario help, and the united help of every mother's son in the Dominion. We want them united in sentiment and action, and we shall have neither the one nor the other if we practise or permit, or approve of, the injection into the veins of the national body the poison of petty and impertinent political issues, whose exploitation can only tend to induce divided sentiment and divided action For heaven's sake, for the sake of the cause of Empire, for the sake of Canada's credit, let us cast aside the everlasting littleness of petty politics, or if we must have them, let us reserve them till a time when something less important than the tremendous importance of the fulfillment of our duty in this great war can legitimately claim attention.

WELLAND COUNTY FARMER PICTURES GERMAN MILITARISM FROM PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

The following letter by W. W. Lescher of Bismarck appeared recently in the Buffalo Express. Bismarck is a little country place in Gainsboro township, Lincoln County, about 20 miles from the town of Welland and by the way, it is one of the names that ought to be blotted out of the geography of Canada, and has for many years been a resident of Canada, to which he was driven as a refuge by German military tyranny. Mr. Luther is, or was a German. He was a German soldier. He bore arms for his country in the Franco-Prussian war.

His viewpoint on the was is interesting, and his letter is of more than ordinary interest.—Welland Telegraph.

Permit me to address a few words to my fellow-countryman, Herman Metke whose communications have appeared in Morning's Mail, one communication in particular, that of June 21, in which he asked if we had "ever seen that little speck (Germany) on the map of the world." Friend Metke, I have seen that "little speck." My grandfather marched out out of it in 1815 and entered Paris with Blucher and the English duke. My father marched out of that "little speck" in 1840, and with his father's sword did his share in the patchery of the Danes at Schleswig. I marched out of it in 1870, and after slashing and stabbing my fellow man with the same sword, entered Paris with Bismarck. The injustice of his excuse for the war, the hellishness of its prosecution, and the desire that any son of mine share not in the legalized murder of the Prussian military system, caused me to leave my home and seek one in Canada. While this has been my home for many years, love for the fatherland took me back more than once, but each visit left me in a deeper conviction that while our present Kaiser was constantly expressing sentiments in favor of peace, he and his advisers were secretly educating the masses for war and awaiting most favorable opportunity to declare it.

My last visit to Germany was two years ago, and during that time I had the pleasure of seeing another "little speck" on the map of the world—Belgium. Friend Metke, I am somewhat of a Masonic student and I am aware that the ancient Jews so reverenced the name of God that they not only never took it in vain, but they never spoke it at all. My friend, is it necessary for me to inform you why I, a German, desire that the name "Belgium" never be uttered in my presence? Is it necessary for me to refer you to the report of that man among men—James Bryce? Is it necessary for me to stretch forth my hand to my cabinet and quote you extracts from letters written on the battlefields of Belgium? Their authenticity leaves no basis for argument and their contents are such that 'Belgium' must not only be a lost word to me, but a stain on the soul of Germany, and a slap in the face of God.

I have also seen that other "little speck," Rheims cathedral, dedicated to the worship of God and hallowed as it is by the mists of ages, it had more the appearance of being God's handiwork than man's creation, and when I stood within its walls, I realized as never before that it was possible for the presence of God to enter His house and dwell with men. My friend, this, His house, was overwhelmingly grand. But what of it today? Venerable as it was for centuries by generations of mankind, it is today a stain on the soul of Germany and another slap in the face of God.

One other "little speck" I have seen—Louvain university. I spent a week there. This grey building retained all that the great thought waves of the centuries had brought. It had gathered into its keeping the thoughts that had coloured the civilization of the past. It had gathered truth on every hand and gleaned from the neglected wisdom of the ages that it might make return to the common stock in some hour of supremest need. Friend Metke, what of it to-day? Blackened stones now mark that place where once its honored walls were reared; the olden beams are burned and charred; the treasures with which its walls were lined have been ruthlessly destroyed and lost to mortal man forever. What remains? Another stain on the soul of Germany and another slap in the face of God.

There remains one more "little speck"—the Lusitania. The waters had scarcely closed over her when eternity's sea bore away upon its bosom a phantom ship laden with the souls of men and women children and babies. Yet across that unknown sea from the dim radiance of a far-off shore we may hear them say to each of us Germans who will but listen: "It were better for them that a mill-stone were hanged about their necks and cast into the sea, than that they should offend one of these little ones"—these children and babies. Friend Metke, of the Lusitania what remains? There remains the righteous indignation of the United States, another stain on the soul of Germany and one more slap in the face of God.

My fellow-countrymen, the point I have in view in writing is that the "little specks"—Belgium, Rheims, Louvain, Lusitania—have been our undoing. With Neitzsche preaching atheism in the alluring style or a poet, while Treitschke and Bernhardi expounded a rationale, if not a religion, of war, Germany but needed the firing of a pistol in the hands of a high school boy in remote Bosnia to bring us where we are, to a shame unbelieved, except that it exists.

Herman Metke, we cannot insult God and expect to win.

AVIATION IN CANADA.

How the art of aviation has captivated the imagination of young Canadians is shown by the fact that while no special effort has been made to recruit aviators in Canada no fewer than 273 Canadians have joined the Imperial Flying Service. Of these seventy were trained in the flying school established for the summer in Toronto. The school has now been closed, owing to Toronto being considered an unsuitable place for flying during the winter, and a proposal to open one in Victoria has fallen through because the Canadian Government says that teaching flying is an Imperial concern entirely, and therefore cannot be assisted locally.

We suppose that if training and recruiting is done entirely under Imperial auspices, it is only right, to avoid duplication and waste of money that the payment of expenses should be under one and the same control. At the same time, the teaching of aviation in Canada ought not to be abolished in Canada on that account. This war has shown that aviation is an essential part of the defences of a country. That being so, Canada is in duty bound to have its trained flying men. The sooner we establish an aviation department the better. At the present time it would prove a valuable auxiliary to the Imperial forces, and would most assuredly stimulate recruiting for the Royal Flying Corps. It would also give us a reserve of trained men, and would result undoubtedly in fostering the manufacture of flying machines in this country.—Montreal Herald.

THE KING'S TRIBUTE TO FRANCE.

For the first time in history a British King has visited French armies in the field fighting side by side with his own. The wearer of the British Crown has uttered "cordial and sincere greetings" to the armed citizens of the French Republic. So the last traces of a record of hundreds of years of enmity and misunderstanding are expunged. George the Fifth salutes the arms that were the terror or the envy of his ancestors, and gives honour in the name of his people, to "those magnificent military virtues which are the proud heritage of the French Army." Most of what is proudest in that heritage was proved in days when French and English had learned to regard each other as natural and eternal enemies. The most wonderful chapter in the fighting history of France was begun when she was at war with all kings, and the British Monarchy was bent more obstinately than any other upon the ruin of her Republic. Those were years in which either adversary founded for itself memories of undying glory. Never until now have they stood side by side in a war that engaged the whole heart and conscience of both nations. Never in mutual conflict have they risen to such heights of sheer gallantry and endurance as the world is witnessing to-day. — London Daily Telegraph.

A HELEN OF MODERN GREECE

It pleases the instinct of analogy to picture the Grecian Queen as a modern Helen, cause of woes innumerable, of fierce, vain battles. The likeness may be overworked, but it exists.

Greece lives at the mercy of sea power. Her people were always sailors; their merchants fleet is huge, their navy weak. Less than half the race are on the mainland. By joining the Allies, Greece could have had Cyprus at once, and later much of the Syrian coast. The powers that at Navarino made her free could at Smyrna have made her united. No wonder the people were fired with the vision of Venizelos!

As it is, Greece may stay on the fence not much longer. If her King pushes her off on the German side, she must starve under blockade. Britain may retake Corfu, which she ceded only on condition of the constitutional government that the King defies. Italy and France may divide almost at will Syria and the Aegean Island. Serbia may yet have Salonica if the Allies win.

Is it not astounding that when honor and advantage point of nation's way so clearly, it can be controlled by the stale old trick of imperial marriage; by planting on a strategic spot, long before, the daughter of a modern Grand Monarch, and about her court buildings up a structure of intrigue and bribery and usurpation in the interest of autocracy against the people?

Some say women have little political power; here is one by whose influence, and what it represents, a million men must needlessly die and her land risk ruin. For if Greece had carried out her promise at the Dardanelles—if even she had kept her King's own treaty with an ally—the war need not have looked so long and dark and terrible in prospect as it does to-day.—New York World.

GERMANY HAS HER REWARD!

At last, and for the first time since the war began, Germany can point to an apparently real and important military advantage for herself that results directly from her adoption of the policy which has come to be known as that of "frightfulness." If what seem to be official and authoritative explanations of the course of Greece are true as well as plausible, that country maintains an attitude on the whole more disquieting to the Entente Powers than to the Central Empires simply because the experiences of Belgium have shown how the Germans punish interference with their plans, while nothing very dreadful need be expected as the penalty of offending France and England.

As one British commentator puts the Greek King is said plainly to be the enemy of gentlemen than of brigands."

In some senses, of course, that is so, but there is more than one kind of safety, and some of them cost so much in honour and self-respect as to be viewed with horror and fright by those for whom loss of property and even of life are not the greatest of conceivable misfortunes. Be that as it may, by whatever of veracity there is in this theory of the Greek hesitations to give the assurances demanded by the Allies, and of the Greek refusal to stand by the treaty with Serbia, by just so much is there accuracy in the assertion that the German method of conducting warfare has demonstrated its right to be called, if not right, at least efficient.

And—well, Germany is not the only nation that recognizes "military necessity" as justifying almost anything. That, probably, is why we have heard the "atrocities" charged against the Germans denounced almost as often and almost as vehemently for their lack of military utility as for their wickedness and cruelty. At any rate, their alleged inutility has invariably been treated as aggravating the offense against morals. The argument of stupidity against cold, deliberate "frightfulness" unquestionably is weakened to some degree if it is the thought of Belgium that has kept Greece from joining the Allies. — New York Times.

SCAVENGER TO POET.

"The Bards of Ireland" is Serving Somewhere on the Mediterranean

Somewhere with the Mediterranean Forces, serving joyfully and strenuously with the 5th Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers as a lance-corporal, is a man whose life provides the strangest story in the world of literature. The poetic genius of this soldier, Lance-Corporal Francis Ledwidge, has at last shone through his struggles with poverty, and those who have read his "Songs of the Fields," a book published by Herbert Jenkins, Ltd., are proclaiming him "the Burns of Ireland," an exaggerated compliment maybe, at which Mr. Ledwidge himself will doubtless smile. But there can be no doubt of his genius as a poet, and the best literature of the day is all the richer for the enterprise of Mr. Jenkins, who has by the publication of this book given the public an opportunity of learning of the work of Francis Ledwidge.

It was really Lord Dunsany, dramatist, poet, philosopher, critic, and now captain of the 5th Inniskillings, who discovered Mr. Ledwidge.

"I never thought," says the latter, "I was a poet, nor did I believe it at all, until Lord Dunsany said so. I burnt all I wrote for years, because I thought it might as well die young and be happy."

Born twenty-two years ago in a little cottage in Slane, County Meath, Mr. Ledgidge was the youngest but one of nine children. His father died when he was two years old, and he has bitter memories of his mother struggling fiercely against hunger, bailiffs, and the other woes of the very poor.

A deep love of the beauties of Nature led him to write poetry at a very early age, but it was necessary for him to earn money to provide food for the family, and he was sent to Dublin to earn his living in a grocer's shop. He hated the work, however, and ultimately, when he was sixteen, walked home, a distance of thirty miles. In the meantime, however, he had continued to write poetry, and Lord Dunsany, in his introduction to "Songs of the Fields," quotes a verse of a poem which Ledwidge wrote while working in a grocer's shop and which was inspired by his dreams of Slane:

Above me smokes the little town
With its whitewashed walls and roofs of brown,
And its octagon spire tow'rd smoothly down
As the holy minds within.
And wondrous, impudently sweet,
Hail on him passion, half conceit,
The blackbird calls adown the street,
Like the Piper or Hamelin.

Second Appeal of the Patriotic Fund

LAST YEAR the People of Peterborough raised $45,000 for the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Wholly for the benefit and assistance to dependent relatives of married soldiers and mothers of enlisted sons. This magnificent sum is about exhausted, and must be renewed.

Last January the Local Branch began systematic operations with 85 families on the roll. December of this year will see over 315 families being cared for, and with the rapid enlistment anticipated, will presently reach 400. To meet the just calls there must be a large and new Fund.

Peterborough can never be a mendicant on the parent Fund at Ottawa. Peterborough will pay its way. Never a doubt. But will you assist? Peterborough must find $1.50 for every dollar locally expended. It must hold up its end—and more, for the assistance of smaller or less prosperous cities, towns and counties. That is an example of the Brotherhood of Giving.

The Patriotic Fund appeals to you on Patriotic grounds. On local pride. On the reputation of the city which has never been outrivalled in enterprise, grip and sand by any Canadian municipality.

Winston Spencer Churchill is 41 Years Old To-day

Noted Parliamentary Leader Has Had a Spectacular Career—Is Now in the Trenches With His Regiment

A BRILLIANT STATESMAN

Winston Spencer Churchill, the brilliant young British statesman who recently quit the Cabinet for the Army, is 41 years old to-day.

Since the days of Pitt, Britain has not developed such a precocious leader. And it is long since she had such a romantic many-sided Minister. When the storm of criticism of his conduct of the office of First Lord of the Admiralty broke over him a few weeks ago, Churchill was not caught napping. He refused to be the "goat," as American slang puts it, and he paid back coin for coin the blame for adversities of British sea warfare that were laid to him. Then he spectacularly resigned from the Cabinet and joined his regiment at the Front in France. Churchill was born on 30th November, 1874, the product of an Anglo-American union. His father was the late Lord Randolph Henry Spencer Churchill, and his mother was formerly Miss Jennie Jerome, daughter of the late Leonard Jerome of New York, and a cousin of William Travers Jerome, former District Attorney of New York.

Young Churchill was educated at Harrow and Sandhurst, and entered the Army. He longed for adventure, and so went to Cuba and joined the Spanish forces there, winning a decoration. Then he went to India, and [illegible] other medals. He became a war correspondent in the Egyptian campaign, and later in South Africa. During the latter campaign he was taken prisoner, but escaped after six weeks. On his return he won a seat in Parliament. He was made Under Secretary of State for the Colonies in 1906, and two years later President of the Board of Trade. In 1910 he became Home Secretary. In 1911 he was called to the office of First Lord of the Admiralty, and the height of his career was reached when the breaking out of the European War last year found the British Fleet prepared and gathered in the North Sea. Later developments brought bitter criticism, particularly against the Dardanelles campaign which the British Navy inaugurated, and the despatch of the disastrous expedition to Belgium. Churchill was blamed, whether rightfully or wrongfully, and when the Coalition Cabinet was formed last May, he was reduced to the Chancellorship of the Duchy of Lancaster. But his adventurous nature would not permit of inactivity or the poignards of his critics, and so he is a soldier again.

KING ALFONSO IN A TASK OF MERCY

Spanish Monarch Personally Attends to Pleas For Help For Condemned Soldiers

PARIS, Nov. 30.—A despatch to the Temps from Madrid says:

"King Alfonso has received 100,000 letters begging for his intervention in favour of civilians or soldiers made prisoners or condemned by courts martial in Germany and Austria. Most of them are from French and English mothers and wives.

"King Alfonso attends to this correspondence personally and the steps deemed necessary are ordered taken by him immediately. Letters regarding British citizens, who are under American protection, are communicated at once to the American Ambassadors.

"The King often stays up far into the night awaiting telegraphic replies to his appeals, so that he can forward their contents at once to waiting relatives.

"All the telegraph lines are kept busy in attending to this correspondence, which has reached 2,000 messages a day."

GERMANS ENLIST AID OF SWEDISH OFFICERS IN PLOT

LONDON, Nov. 30.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Petrograd, says:

"Advices from Teheran are to the effect that dissensions have occurred among the Swedish officers of the Persian gendarmerie. Some of the officers have taken advantage of the fact that they are not in the service of the Swedish Government and joined the enemy camp, while others have expressed their disapprobation of the disloyal conduct of their colleagues in disobeying the Shah's Government at Teheran and their participation in mutinies of the gendarmerie.

The insurgent gendarmerie, together with mercenaries, are occupying the Mohammedan road, where, under the direction of German officers, they are fortifying the mountain passes in order to cover the region adjoining the Turkish border.

"Prince Henry of Reuss, who presides over a committee established at Kum, is in close communication with Teheran in the hope of yet bringing the Shah and the Government under his influence. The expected return of the German, Austrian and Turkish Ministers to Teheran has the same object in view.

"Half the Meijlies (National Council) and nearly all the armed forces of Persia are at Kum and Hama-

WARDEN KINDRED ENDORSES THE PATRIOTIC FUND IN HIS VALEDICTORY TO THE COUNCIL

Warden Kindred announced his withdrawal from municipal affairs in his address to the County Council this afternoon. He reviewed the work of the past year of momentous events and their reflected influences through out the county. The address follows:

Gentlemen of the County Council:

At this the closing session of the County Council for the current year it affords me great pleasure to be able to refer to the continual material progress the County is making, and I am sure all join me in recognizing of the bountiful harvest of the season just closing with due thanks to the All-wise Providence for the continued favour in this the year of world-wide conflict and turmoil.

If there ever was a time when the material and financial resources of our country are required to be put to the test—tha time is now—when each individual citizen of the greatest dependency of our Motherland should feel himself called upon to make some worthy sacrifice for the cause of civil and religious liberty rather than submit to a rule of military bondage and tyranny with which we are threatened.

Patriotic Fund Appeal.

At this session. I am informed, a very especial appeal is to be made on behalf of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The question to be considered is "Are we as a County doing our maximum in patriotic endeavor? Compare our contribution with what other Counties have seen fit to donate, and I fear we are hardly up to the average. In response to appeals for assistance to war-sufferers and kindred funds you have voted during the past twelve-month, $4,800, with another $800 still to complete the year.

As a county we are not very wealthy, comparatively speaking, but as one of your honourable body, I feel that our givings could be easily doubled without [illegible] serious extent efficient administration of local matters. When the matter is brought before you, I hope you will arise to the occasion with a generosity worthy of gentlemen of your locality.

The different permanent improvements undertaken this year have been carried out successfully, as you will ascertain when the different commissioners report to you the matters in detail.

The finances have been ably handled considering the many unprecedented expenditures—which the county could not avoid. It is still a month too soon to give an accurate detailed statement of such.

Improvements Till After War.

With regard to County Property improvements, I think the Council have wisely followed the advice of the chairman of the committee in having all that could possibly be left over until peace is restored. Notwithstanding, absolute necessary repairs have been made, of which your chairman will report.

Your Bridge Committee have found it necessary in the interests of the municipality to order the closing of the Pigeon Creek Bridge. I understand a meeting from representatives of the city of Peterborough and the counties of Victoria and Peterborough will meet in the near future, probably during the present session, to deal with the matter, andd possibly to urge upon the Dominion Government the many urgent reasons why they should deal generously with the county by giving a substantial contribution towards its replacement.

Visited All Townships.

The duties of the Warden necessitated my visiting all the municipalities during the year, and I wish to compliment the aggressive local Councils and ratepayers on the efforts they have made, this year, particularly in improving the general condition of the roads under their respective jurisdiction.

In conclusion, I most sincerely wish to express my appreciation of the assistance of all my colleagues in all departments of work throughout the year. The harmonious way in which you have worked, cheerfully, and ungrudgingly, has greatly helped me in the conduct of affairs pertaining to the general welfare of the county.

I will not be with you next year, as I have resolved that my personal interests require that I shall more strictly attend to them, but I shall always look back with pleasure to the three years of good fellowship I have enjoyed at your hands. I appreciate very much your very courteous treatment of me, and your intense interest in county affairs augurs well for the general welfare of our beloved county.

I am, your obedient servant,

H. C. Kindred, M.D.,
Warden.

FARMER WITH WAGGON OF FLOUR PROTECTED AGAINST ANY EVENT

A farmer with a waggon piled high with bags of flour was seen driving home this afternoon. It may have been that the flour bin was running low and the trip to the store or mill was a regular incident. On the other hand there is the possibility that the commandeering of fifteen million bushels of wheat by the government sounded like a "Jack Johnston" to this farmer who sought safety first and decided to do a little commandeering in his own behalf. There must have been at least thirty bags of flour tucked away in the capacious grain waggon and tied securely so that none might be jolted off by the ruts in the road. The main feature of this spectacle was the farmer's alertness, his probable attempt to circumvent higher prices and the fact that he had the necessary change to replenish the flour bin.

Caring For The Returning Soldiers

Matter is Being Given Consideration by the Special Committee Appointed by the Council—Civil Service Positions Available

The Committee that was appointed by the city council to consider ways and means of caring for returning soldiers, are still employed in their task. They are seeking information from various sources relating to the matter and hope at an early date to have something tangible to submit to the council.

County Council Show Patriotic Spirit in Speeches

Reeve Walsh, of Douro, opened a discussion on patriotisc giving at the County Council meeting this afternoon, when he urged economy and the depriving ourselves of unnecessary things. He suggested that the Reeve might do for nothing the work of bridge overseeing which now costs $5 per bridge.

Reeve Shaw, of Harvey, pointed out that in case of bush fires, etc, one trip under the Walsh suggestion might cost more than the present $5 yearly.

The discussion rolled up into a real patriotic ball at this stage and gathered speed as it progressed.

Mr. Fitzgerald of Lakefield said anything done to cut off salaries of necessary employees would be a mistake. Not many people in the county will go without butter on their bread this year.

Reeve Cohen—Mr. Walsh's suggestion would only be a small item anyway as far as the Patriotic Fund was concerned. It would only mean $300, I won't object to even an increase of $5 to my taxes. We've got to pay or fight.

Warden Kindred—I think we ought to double our present contribution of $400 a month.

Mr. Cohen remarked that a general tax reached everybody. Concerts here and there drew money from those most willing to give.

By making it a tax over the county you get at those who are not giving.

Mr. McKee said the same applied to Smith. Many seemed to be fighting shy of the various funds and a tax equally apportioned the burden.

Mr. Shaw—The sooner we realize that we are in this war, that we have got to win, and must do our share, the better for all of us. This passing the hat around is too small and picayune. This is a life and death struggle, and we've got to see it through. Talk of a mill on the dollar—Harvey township is one of the poorest in the county, but we have levied on ourselves without any outside suggestion two mills on the dollar in addition to the extra taxes that all are paying. We are quite willing to bear our full share.

Mr. Anderson, of Otonabee, remarked that the Patriotic Fund seemed hard to collect for, but the soldiers had gone to fight with the understanding that their families would be properly cared for. No matter what a man had done in the past, when he is fighting for us now he is doing a great work. We cannot afford to break faith with the men in the trenches. Mr. Anderson remarked that he did not know all on the deputation, but he did know the County Council, and if an appeal were to be made it might be wise to first directed to some whose names appear on the list of those expected to-morrow.

Burnham addressed the Council. Col. Johnston and Capt. J. H. They asked the reeves to co-operate with the 93rd Battalion's recruiting officers in securing recruits throughout the country. "We can't bu- our way to Berlin," Col. Johnston said. "We've got to fight it." Captain Burnham paid a fine tribute to the Peterborough County Battalion and supported the Colonel's request.

Presentation To Pte. D. Melton

Annual Business Meeting of All Saints' Choir Held Last Night

The annual business meeting of All Saints' church was held last night at Coleman's parlours. The election of officers were appointed for the coming year. About 30 of the adult members were present. After the meeting a social time was spent. Songs were rendered by several members. A presentation of a wrist watch was made to Pte. David Melton who had enlisted for overseas service with the 93rd Battalion. Mr. Melton showed his appreciation by thanking the choir. An enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

How Germany Is Able To Get Belgian Tax

LONDON, Nov. 30. — Nearly $100,000,000 had been exacted in tribute by Germany from the occupied provinces of Belgium up to Nov. 10, since which date the German Governor General has issued orders for a monthly war tax of 40,000,000f. ($8,000,000) until further notice.

Calculating that the Belgians in the occupied territory number 6,000,000, the levy means that every man, woman, and child must pay into the German war treasury 6f. 70c. (about $1.85) monthly.

This annual payment of 480,000,000f. may be compared with the total Belgian bulget in peace times, which amounted to between 600,000,000f. and 800,000,000f. The Manchester Guardian's correspondent at The Hague writes:

"How has such a colossal amount been found, and how will the overburdened Belgian population be able to bear this continued strain? Some information is just at hand from Brussels. That nine provinces have hitherto been able regularly to pay monthly installments is due to the fact that the provincial authorities secured large support from the Societe Generale de Belgique, which bank expressed its readiness, on conditions which have not been made public, to lend money to the provinces and make payments for them, these transactions, of course, taking place under the supervision of the German authorities.

"On the other hand, the Societe Generale was granted by the Germans the exclusive right to issue banknotes, which had hitherto been the privilege of the Belgian National Bank.

"The latest levy order issued by Baron von Bissing differs from the one issued over a year ago in some important particulars. In the first place, no limit is referred to upon the expiration of which the tax shall cease. The period of a year was previously mentioned. A clause, likewise new, that the German administration shall have the right to demand the payment in German money at the customary rate in Brussels of 80 marks to 100f., probably aims at raising the rate of the mark abroad, as the Societe Generale can in that way be compelled to obtain 83,000,000 marks monthly.

"The Provincial Councils have been called together to arrange for the payment of the war tax, their sittings having been fixed for today."

Arrested On A Serious Charge

Belmont Township Man Arraigned Before County Police Magistrate Langley

This morning in the County Police Court, George Solmes of Belmont township was charged with committing wife's sister. Magistrate Langley adjourned the case until Thursday morning in order to enable the prisoner to ting a serious offence against his obtain counsel. He was not asked to plead or elect. The offence with which Solmes is charged is said to have been committed in January of this year. The accused was arrested last evening by County Constable A. Moore.

BENT OVER THE CHILD.

Through the busy Glasgow streets a stalwart policeman led a little child by the hand. A motherly-looking woman paused before them for a moment. Then, in a sudden burst of sympathy, she bent over the child and kissed it.

"Puir wee lamb!" she breathed sadly. "She looks as cauld and starved like, and she hasna been washed for a week. Some folks canna be trusted wi' bairns, wicked, cruel things they are. Whaur did ye fin' the wean, policeman?"

INTERESTING LECTURE IN ST. JOHN'S SCHOOL HOUSE

Capt. the Rev. John Antill Discourses on His Missionary Work on the Columbian Coast—A Series of Good Lantern Slides

It was a raw evening last night when the fireside would have been the more comfortable place had every one—or nearly everyone—consulted their own wishes and feelings.

Nevertheless, this did not deter a very considerable crowd from attending in St. John's Schoolhouse at eight o'clock to hear what proved to be a most interesting address delivered by Capt. the Rev. John Antill, of the Columbian Coast Mission, under the auspices of the Church of England Missionary authorities.

The chair was taken by Hon Major Canon Davidson, the chaplain to the new battalion, and rector of St John's. He introduced the lecturer telling the audience that he had spent a great deal of time in Georgia, and on the Pacific Coast, and had worked very hard in the missionary cause and tendered him a hearty welcome which was accompanied by loud applause on the part of the audience.

Mr. Antill, in his reply thanking those present for the hearty reception tendered him, stated that it was his first visit to Peterborough; that the Peterborough canoe was most to the fore in his mind; but now that he had seen it, he regretted he had never visited the city before, which he considered as beautiful a city as any in Canada. (Bravo! Peterborough.)

The assistant to the lecturer then proceeded to project a large number of extremely interesting lantern slides on the screen, while the indefatigable lecturer very ably explained them. Starting with the C.P.R. white liners on the B.C. docks, he showed us the "loggers' lines," which had originally been a schooner, built on to, and converted into a steamer—a regular old tub. Then we were taken into a logging camp, introduced to the cook house, dining-room, and lumbermen then taken into the timber section where some British Columbian "toothpicks" were growing. Then we saw the process of cutting, both ancient and modern; the ancient when a huge tree was cut down about 12 feet above the ground, the modern when the stump was left as near to the ground line as possible. The reason for the difference, the lecturer explained, being that formerly a much higher grade of timber must be marketed than nowadays, and that "ring crack," which would not have passed muster formerly, was now accepted.

On the stump of one of the giant cedars we saw six men standing. Rather a different class of timber to that grown in Ontario. On another stump a slide showed four couples dancing. Then a tree was shown, the lower end of which measured ten feet in diameter. Oh, ye gods! Great Scott! however, would be more modern parlance. Then we saw the yard engine and the roader and the old and new methods of shifting the logs, whether by steel hawsers or locomotive engine. Then, on the waterside, we saw the logs rolled into the water, formed into booms, towed down to the sawing mills, where we were shown some "toothpicks" which had been sawn into timber 36 inches square by 60 feet long.

The whole process of lumbering, from the arrival at the nearest point to the camp down to the sending away of the finished product by rail or ship, was shown.

How true it is that one can, if one chooses, learn something new every day of one's life. The writer certainly came away knowing much more than when he modestly entered the room. It is only by the interchange of ideas that one can gain real knowledge.

This terminated part one, which the lecturer told us was introductory, in order to show the audience the class and stamp of men he had to deal with. An intermission of five minutes was then arranged, lights were turned up, and the audience sang "Fling out the banner," the hymn being accompanied on the piano by Miss M. English.

Part two showed us the lecturer's work, which appears to be as great and as comprehensive as that of Dr Grenfell, although in better climate. A map of the district shown on the screen gave us a good idea of the territory covered, being some 400 miles from north to south and proportionately wide—a very large area.

From the first boat used by Capt. Antill, a dinghy with broad beam and a 16 feet keel, capable of carrying plenty of sail, on which he and his son of nine sailed round his mission field, to the commodious steamer containing hospital wards, chapel, reading-room, and operating room was a passage of only a few years. By the way, the dinghy was built by the lecturer and his nine-year-old boy in their back yard! Between the period of the dinghy and the present steamer was a small, slow steamer, which soon became inadequate. A visit to the Old Country enabled the lecturer to raise funds for the purchase and equipment of the larger steamer, which is even provided with an X-ray apparatus.

The hospitals on land belonging to this mission were also shown; and excellently well equipped they are, too! The "Women's Auxiliary" seems to have given assistance in this direction. All honour to these noble-hearted women! There was a great necessity for these hospitals. Accidents in logging camps were frequent, more particularly as the timber is of such great dimensions and the distance to a city hospital was so great that blood poisoning would frequently set in before the patient could get assistance.

Altogether, Capt. Antil, who is a physician both to soul and body, is doing a grand work. His lecture last evening was not only extremely interesting, but remarkably instructive, and he possesses a quiet, fluent, easy style which makes one, perforce, take it all in.

At the conclusion of the lecture, Mr. Scadding, in a few appropriate words, proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was seconded by Mr. C. Jamieson.

Canon Davidson conveyed to Capt. Antill the wishes of the meeting, and after prayer and the benediction the proceedings terminated at about ten o'clock.

The Board of Police Commissioners met yesterday afternoon, and among other things granted a license for another second-hand store. This makes four in the city, which figures out at the rate of about one to every five thousand people.

The Commissioners, comprising His Honour Judge Huycke (chairman), Police-Magistrate Dumble, and His Worship Mayor Buller, inspected the Police Force, whose members were attired in their winter uniforms. They were lined up in the Courtroom, and after being put through their drill movements, were commended for their fine appearance.

The Commissioners heard a report from Chief of Police Thompson respecting an alleged case of pro-Germanism in the north country. The Chief's report was submitted to Police Commissioner Sherwood of the Dominion Police, who concurred in Chief Thompson's opinion that there was nothing to justify further action in the matter.

A number of accounts were passed by the Board.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

To get rid of moths sprinkle a few drops of oil of lovender on some small pieces of blotting-paper and place them among clothes you have stored away. This is very effective for keeping moth away.

The New York Service Scandal Begins To-day

Governor Whitman Has Been Asked to Remove Edward E. McCall, Chairman of the Commission

GUILTY OF NEGLECT

ALBANY, N.Y., Nov. 30.—The New York Public Service Commission scandal, which was exposed by a legislative investigation committee, comes to-day before Governor Whitman, who is asked to remove Edward E. McCall chairman of the commission. It is charged that he had financial interests in public service corporations over which he was exercising official duties for the state, that he has been guilty of neglect of duty, and that he exceeded his power and used his office for the particular advantage and benefit of certain stock interests.

McCall is the first member of the Public Service Commission to go on to the gridiron of investigation. The other members of the Commission will be taken up in turn, and will be handed with gloves. They will receive the same treatment as Chairman McCall, it is said, and will have to show a clear record.

Chairman McCall of the Public Service Commission, who faces removal by Governor Whitman, has been called a political Jack Horner, because of the many plums he has received. Tammany has always been good to him, and has stuck with him despite many disclosures regarding his activities. It is understood, however, that he is now forsaken by Tammany. McCall was connected with the New York Life Insurance Company, when his brother, the late John A. McCall, was President of that concern. An investigation showed that McCall received handsome fees from the insurance company which the Hughes investigating committee declared were "without reason." McCall also figured as a lobbyist, with W. H. Buckley, for the insurance companies. In 1902 McCall went to the Supreme Court bench, through Tammany power, and he gave receiverships and refereeships to Tammany followers.

Much of the evidence placed before Governor Whitman in the McCall investigation has been published during the hearings. It is claimed that at the time of his appointment to office he was the owner and is still the owner of stock in a corporation subject to his official regulation and supervision, and that he took part in meetings of the commissions where matters were under consideration affecting corporations in which he had a financial interest as a stockholder. Another serious charge is that upon the application of the Edison Company to acquire outstanding stock of the Amsterdam Company, he failed to perform his official duties by failing to give the application proper consideration, procured the approval of the application against the interest of the city of New York, and over its protests and to the irreparable injury of the city of New York and its inhabitants. It is further alleged that he failed as a commissioner to protect and safeguard the interest of the city, of its inhabitants and of stockholders and corporations subject to his official regulation. That he has exceeded his official power and influence for the particular advantage and benefit of certain stock interests and that he has failed to properly or adequately supervise corporations.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Why They're Bought

"I can certainly say the Gin Pills have done a lot of good for me.

Building Permits.

Mr. Martin Kylie has been granted permission to erect an ice-house at the corner of Clifton and Rogers streets.

Will Attend Funeral.

The entire City Council has been asked to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. A. Weir, wife of Alderman Weir, which will take place to-morrow afternoon.

To Renew Contract.

It is the intention of the Property Committee to renew the contract for the use of a dumping ground on a monthly basis until such time as provisions are made for taking care of the nightsoil.

EGYPT GUARDED BY AMPLE FORCE

CAIRO, via London, Nov. 30. — Aggression against frontier posts by western Arabs has not been serious and an ample force for protective purposes now has been gathered, according to an official report issued here. The statement says:

"The Chief of the Senussi continues to maintain an entirely friendly attitude toward the government, but certain hostile agencies have succeeded in inducing some western Arabes to commit minor aggressive acts against our frontier posts.

"In pursuance of the government's policy of removing any possible cause for trouble or friction at the smallest frontier post an ample force now has been concentrated at Matrus to protect our Arabs against any aggression."

ACCOUNTS PASSED BY THE BOARD

At yesterday's meeting of the Police Commissioners, the following accounts were ordered to be paid:

Roy Studio, $1.50; F. L. Robinson, $3.50; Bullied & Irwin, $11.35; C. R. Banks, $30.90; Fanning's Steam Laundry, $2.40; T. W. Lundy, $3.00; James Hum, $1.00; J. A. Gibbs $1.50; Duncan Bros., $1.25; Wm. R. Loch, $16; Merrill & Meredith, $120; Blewett & Middleton, $5.50; W. H. Hamilton, $6.25; W. J. Sherwood, $1.00; Bell Telephone Co., $20.70; G.N.W. Telegraph Co., 80c; F. R. J. McPherson Co., $3.50; Peterborough Examiner, $27.50; R. J. Wolstenholme, $6.

Garbage Contract Was Re-awarded

Mr. E. K. Graham, a Former Contractor, Will Do the Work For $6,250

Last evening it took the Property Committee of the City Council less than an hour to re-award the garbage collecting contract for the year 1916. After that the committee sat around for fifteen or twenty minutes from force of habit. The contract was originally awarded to Mr. Justus Blodgett. The latter decided to relinquish the contract unless the city would agree to eliminate the clause which provides that the contractor must go three feet inside of the house-line for the garbage. The present contract compels the householder to place the garbage on the street-line.

A Difference of $252.

Ald. Edgar moved that new tenders be called for. To this Mayor Buller and Chairman McIntyre objected, claiming that it would be unfair to the men who tendered for the work.

It was moved by Mayor Buller and seconded by Ald. Langford, that the contract be awarded to Mr. E. K. Graham, a former contractor, at a contract price of $6,250. Mr. Blodgett's tender was $5,998, or $252 less.

Mr. Graham, who was present at the meeting, said he was willing to carry out the terms of the contract, and would see that a good service was provided.

Civilization's Great Menace.

Constipation is civilization's great menace—and nearly every adult suffers more or less form its devitalizing influence. Millions of dollars are expended each year for salts, calomel, pills, etc., to relieve this condition.

How much better people would be if they were to cut out the drugs and eat a good bowlful of Dr. Jackson's delicious Roman Meal each morning! This is a natural laxative food, and most nutritious known, designed by a prominent dietetic specialist. Ask your physician about it. It is guaranteed to relieve constipation or "money back". Follow directions on the package carefully in making porridge. Don't stir.

Sold by all live grocers at 10 and 25 cents.

Montreal Business Has Been Sold Out

Mr. George Yeotes, of Yeotes Bros., has sold out the business of this firm in Montreal, where he has been managing same for the past four years. While in Montreal, Yeotes Bros. was a very successful business, and George, who is coming to Peterborough, will be pleased to meet all his old friends.

At a suburban dance given at the town hall, there was a man who met with a mishap on the floor, due to his lack of skill in dancing.

"Thanks," replied the other, dryly. "May I inquire what motive has led you to seek me out for this complimentary outburst?"

The other smiled grimly.

"The explanation lies in the fact that the lady is my wife and that I have paid for the gown."

"Why," exclaimed the man, "when I tripped on the floor just now and fell sprawling all my length, incidentally ripping off a large section of my charming partner's gown, you were the only one in the place that did not laugh."

2—Kitchen and Cooking Utensils—

Commanding officers will be held responsible that kitchen and cooking utensils are thoroughly cleaned and placed in the open-air after use.

Stoves will be cleaned and all grease removed therefrom after using.

3—Toilet Paper—

Toilet paper only will be used in all closets and latrines.

4—Gates and Fences—

If it is found necessary on route marches or in the course of Field Training to remove farm or railway fences, same must be replaced and left in the same condition as before their removal. The officer in charge of troops passing through a gate will be held responsible that same is closed after troops have passed or that responsibility is handed over to the officer in charge of any other body of troops who may be following.

5—Private Property—

Private property and the rights of private citizens must be respected. All ranks are forbidden to trespass over private grounds or property, and same should be placed out of bounds.

6—Dress—

All troops should be taught that one of the main characteristics of a soldier is his cleanliness of person and neatness of dress. The commander of the guard should be instructed to permit no N.C.O. or man to leave barracks or quarters if dirty or carelessly dressed.

7—Hotels—

All hotels, saloons, etc., are out of bounds for all ranks except between the hours of 6 and 8 p.m. Liquor stores are placed out of bounds at all times. Hotel and liquor storekeepers should be notified to this effect, and also that bottles or flasks must not be sold to soldiers. The place of business of any hotel or store keeper deliberately failing to comply with this order should be placed out of bounds at all hours.

8—Civilian Clothes—

9—Conduct—

All ranks are expected to conduct themselves in a soldierly manner at all times and to show courtesy to all with whom they come in contact, thereby obtaining respect not only for themselves, but for the unit to which they belong.

10—Officers—

As the example set by those placed in authority has a great bearing on the conduct and manner of a unit as a whole, it is expected that officers will at all times and upon all occasions conduct themselves in a manner becoming an officer and a gentleman.

Officers are strongly urged to abstain from all intoxicating liquor and malt beverages.

11—Fire—

Every precaution should be taken by all ranks against the outbreak of fire. Special orders should be published by Commanding Officers and made known to all ranks for guidance in case of an outbreak of fire.

12—Billets—

At centres where troops are being billeted, they are on no account to be quartered in houses or other buildings where intoxicating liquor of any description is offered for sale.

Troops in billets will be present in their quarters at 10 p.m. every night unless in possession of a pass signed by their Commanding Officer permitting them to be absent after that hour. Any N.C.O. or man found on the street or out of his quarters after 10 p.m., and not in possession of a pass, will be considered as "absent without leave," and will be dealt with accordingly.

N.C.O., acting N.C.O., or senior soldier of good character will be placed in every house where troops are billeted, and will be held responsible for the conduct of the troops in the house in which he is quartered.

Any man returned to his billet under the influence of liquor will be immediately confined as if he were in barracks.

The Kingston Standard says:

The 59th Battalion has secured the services of an excellent musician of Hamilton as bandmaster of the 93th in getting the best. With a new bandmaster and a lot of new band material, the 93th expect to produce a musical organization that will attract attention.

Captain Layfield, quartermaster of the 93th Battalion, was in the city the latter part of last week, and called on The Standard. Captain Layfield was formerly an expert accountant in the employ of the General Electric Company, of Peterborough and left an excellent position to wear the khaki. He is a most capable quartermaster. The Standard was pleased to see the Captain again.

Lieut. Wilfred Stratton, of the 57th Regiment and the 93th Battalion C.E.F., has been detailed to assist the officer in charge of the examination, and enlistment of recruits as mechanical transport drivers for the Imperial Army in the 4th Divisional Area (Montreal). Lt.-Col. Walker of the 57th Regiment has been notified of the appointment, which Lieut. Stratton will enter upon at once.

The following appointments by the O. C. commanding the 93rd Battalion were read this afternoon:

To be lance corp.—Pte. H. Wood.
To be lance corp—Pte. J. Bath.

Sergt. Freeman reverts to the ranks at his own request and is appointed battalion barber.

Pte. S. Kitchen is appointed battalion shoemaker.

Lieut. Crisp, the machine gun officer of the 93rd Battalion, has arrived in Peterborough and has reported for duty.

Sgt. Allen of the 2nd battalion, writing from the trenches of Flanders to the Federal member for West Peterborough, desires him to thank all those who, by many acts of kindness, helped him and his family, in their recent bereavement, occasioned by the death of his wife in October last. Sgt. Allen was heart broken at his loss, and the desolation of his home. He could not leave the trenches and the splendid way in which kind people looked after his household matters, in his absence, has greatly restored his peace of mind. His daughter, Miss Minnie Allen, is now living with Mrs. Park, Park street, who has been exceedingly kind to her. Sgt. Allen's landlord, Mr. T. H. Hooper, has assured him that he need feel no concern in regard to his house. He assures him everything will remain just as it is until his return. Sgt. Allen is deeply grateful to all.

The lieutenants of the 93rd Battalion are proceeding to look after the recruiting. Lt. Jack McNab left this morning for Havelock where he will look after the recruiting in that district. Lieuts. Worth and Stock are going to conduct a recruiting campaign in South Monaghan, a territory that has been very little drawn upon so far.

Yesterday was a brisk one from the recruiting standpoint, nine men passing the medical examination for admission into the 93rd Battalion. Among them was Ralph Parrington, of 289 Aylmer street, the fourth brother in his family to join the Canadian forces. One brother, Trooper Percy Parrington of the Strathcona Horse, has been invalided home from the front; another, Pte. Tommy Parrington, of the 2nd Battalion, was wounded at St. Julien, and a third, Pte. Arnold Parrington, is with the 8th C.M.R. Like the Hagerman and Tobin families of Peterborough, both of which have four sons serving the Empire, the Parrington boys were born in Canada. Those who passed yesterday morning were given in yesterday's Examiner. The afternoon and evening crop was as follows:

Stewart M. Moodie Perth, Ont.
Alex. Irvine, 289 alhousie street, 4 years in 8th Scottish Rifles, 8 years in 57th Regiment.
Albert E. Thompson, 101 Hazlett street, 1 year in the 57th Regiment.
Gordon Brotherstone, 660 Concession street.
Thos. Arkill, North Monaghan.
Wilfred Buller, 281 Aylmer street.
Ralph Parrington, 289 Aylmer street.

Six of yesterday's recruits are residents of Peterborough, six of the nine were born in Canada, England claiming two of the others, and Scotland the third.

The 93rd Battalion officers expect to have 500 recruits in line by Chrismas. The 400 mark will be reached in a day or two, which will leave three weeks in which to secure the balance. There has been a steady flow of recruits into the battalion, and there are signs now the stream of new men is increasing in volume. The efforts of the officers of the battalion at the different rural centres in the next couple of weeks are expected to result in an increase impetus to recruiting.

"We aim to make the armouries this winter more attractive than the down town amusement places," remarked Assistant Adjutant Barley of the 93 rd battalion to the Examiner yesterday. "We will have a hockey team in the O. H. A. and by all accounts it will be a good one too. Rifle matches and bowling league and other amusements are being arranged and altogether I think officers and men may look forward to a very pleasant winter"

BRITAIN NOW MAKES ITS CHRISTMAS TOYS

SENDS BIG SUPPLY HERE

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The exigencies of war have forced upon Great Britain the necessity of going extensively into the manufacture of Christmas toys. While the shops last year at this time carried huge stacks of German-made toys, it is entirely different now. Last year England, with war so suddenly upon her, had no opportunity to give thought to Christmas toys, and so, instead of making her own, she used what was at hand.

Since last year a dozen new toy shops have sprung up in the British Isles, and they have been working throughout the spring and summer turning out millions of Christmas gifts. England is importing some toys from the United States, France, and Denmark; but her own supply is tremendous.

Not one Christmas toy made in Nuremburg or the toy-making towns of Bavaria will be put on sale in the shops this Christmastide. Not one British child will have a German toy stuffed in his sticking.

So far has England gone in toy making this year that loads of Christmas goods are being shipped to the United States. Tin soldiers of Kitchener's army, tin men of Admiral Jellico's fleet, tin soldiers of the French Army—the "Joffres," they're called—are on their way to New York on almost every ship.

While America, in the last few years, has exported hundreds of thousands of Teddy bears to Great Britain, this year the demand does not seem so great. The fact appears to be that America will use most of the Teddy bears she makes, and there will be no German-made "Teddies" to help swell the supply.

Germany used to turn out Teddy bears by the thousands and sell them to America. This year only one ship laden with German-made Christmas toys has found its way to the United States. That was a ship of German cargo released from Holland by consent of the British Government, coming under an agreement that existed before last spring, by which the United States and Germany were permitted to exchange certain cargoes ordered and partly paid for before March 2 last.

England, in her new toy shops in London, Birmingham, and other cities, has been making ever so many stuffed dogs, pussy cats, elephants, and rabbits. They've made their way to the shop counters now and have, as always, struck the fancy of the youngsters. There will be innumerable dogs, cats, and rabbits, to say nothing of elephants, carried around by Santa Claus all over the United Kingdom the night before Christmas.

One particular sort of stuffed animal that seems to take this year is the dog, cat, or whatever it is, sitting on its haunches, wearing a cap, jacke, and a happy grin. The British bulldog, as seen in the shops, isn't quite so gentle in appearance; he doesn't sit with his paws outstretched and with a cap on. He looks as though he had the Kaiser on his mind and was thinking of biting him.

Games of myriad kinds are on the Christmas market. They bear names like "The Silver Bullet," "Beating the Enemy," and such warlike titles. Jig-saw puzzles, with battlefields of Europe chopped up, to be pieced together, are in great vogue.

Quite naturally, young Britain must have its soldier uniforms, and there is a great array of them in every shop. Toy guns, cannon, and tiny motor cars, got up to look like the real ones at the front, are in huge profusion, besides aeroplanes and airships, but no Zepps.

GIRLS' AUXILIARY "AT HOME" A SUCCESS

Enjoyable Function at the Residence of Mrs. R. B. Rogers, Hunter Street East

The Girls' Auxiliary of St. Luke's church, held a very delightful "At Home" and sale of work at the home of Mrs. R. B. Rogers, 147 Hunter street, east last evening. Quite a number of the congregation and friends of the Society attended and as a result of the very successful sale of useful articles and candy, the girls will have a good amount to carry on their missionary work. During the evening Mrs. A. A. Perrin, and Miss Ruby Quartermaine gave much enjoyed vocal numbers, while Miss Kathleen Vincent contributed a recitation Several selections on the player piano also added much to the pleasure of the evening.

Dainty refreshments were served and altogether a very pleasant time was spent.

Free Gifts of Liquor Not Legal Says ViceChairman Dingman.

The executive of the Licensed Wine and Spirit Shops' Association of Toronto has sent out cards for the members which read in part as follows:—You are hereby notified that the giving of liquor has been interpreted to come within the meaning of the license laws as unlawful, so that the practice of giving liquor as a premium must be discontinued forthwith. Disobedience of this order will lead to serious trouble for offenders.—Mail and Empire Nov. 29.

Having received instructions from the executors of the estate of the late Major Bennett, I will sell by public auction, the one-hundred-acre farm known as Lot 8, Con. 10, North Monaghan; also the entire farm stock, implements and household furniture. All will be sold on the premises on the afternoon of Thursday, December 2nd. See large posters.

PEOPLES' CHIMES RUNG IN HONOUR OF ST. ANDREW'S DAY

To-day is St. Andrew's Day, the day on which in many churches intercessions are offered for missions and for "Those that go down to the sea in ships. Those men see the works of the Lord and His wonders in the deep."

At the 10 a.m. service in St. John's this morning the members of the Women's Auxiliary gathered for corporate communion.

To-night at 6, the St. Andrew's Patriotic League are holding a Scotch supper and entertainment.

The Peoples' Chimes gave out a merry peal, also "The Blue Bells of Scotland," "To Banks and Braes," "Bonnie Dean," "Auld Lang Syne," "O Canada," and God Save the King.

A Decrease in Number of Drunks

Nineteen convictions for drunkenness was recorded for the month of November as against twenty-six for a corresponding period of last year. This is the first month that the eight o'clock closing rule has been in force. Chief Thompson has been asked to furnish the License Board with a report dealing with the effect of the new regulation.

Pennant Club To Hold a Debate

The Pennant Club of the Murray street Church are having a debate to-night in the church parlour, the subject of which is—"Resolved, that at the termination of the war Great Britain should give back to Germany the colonies taken from her during the war." The leaders will be Mr. F. Wrightmeyer of Brooklyn, N.Y., for the affirmative, Mr. W. Troine for the negative. Mr. Jos. Wearing, M.A., has consented to act as critic while Messrs. O. F. Lapp and W. Brovett will judge the contest.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

MANY AMENDMENTS TO BE CONSIDERED AT THE O. H. A. ANNUAL MEETING

The following amendments to the O. H. A. constitution will be discussed at the annual meeting:

TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Present Clause.

6. No player who has been suspended or expelled by this or any other organized association shall play with or against any club in the O. H. A. in any match to which an admission is charged until such player has been reinstated or the period of his suspension has terminated, and any club in the Association playing any such suspended or expelled player or players on its team, or playing against a team playing any such players, shall forfeit its membership in the Association. Provided, however, that no player who has been professionalized, whether by this or any other recognized association, or who has by his conduct become a professional under the conditions of those regulations, shall be eligible for reinstatement into this Association upon any ground whatsoever; and provided further that the Executive of this Association shall have no power to even entertain an application for the reinstatement of any such player. In all applications for reinstatement to the Association to be considered at the annual convention, notice must be given in the regular way.

Proposed Amendment.

By Jas. T. Sutherland, Kingston—

Add to Section 6 the following: "Any player who is under suspension from the O. H. A. for any cause whatever and who enlists for Overseas Service shall automatically be reinstated and eligible for membership in this Association. This, of course, does not apply to professionals."

TO THE REGULATIONS.

Present Clause.

3. No player shall compete in an Association match who has not been a bona fide and continuous resident of the town, city, or village to which his club belongs since the 1st of August next preceding the date of said match. In case of a player residing in a rural district village or police village he must play with the O.H.A. club in the nearest town to his residence. A bona fide and continuous resident shall include a teacher or a student who may be absent from home and registered and in actual and regular attendance at lectures at a preparatory school, a High school, a university, or an affiliated college, but such teacher or student shall elect before the date of the first Association match and shall notify the Secretary of the Association, whether he will play with a club where his home is situated or with a club where the said school of learning is located. In case of a sailor who has not been a continuous resident under this rule, he must play with the club of his town, city or village of which he has been a resident from the 1st of January preceding the 1st of August mentioned in this clause.

Proposed Amendments.

By J. Ross Robertson—

After word "residence" in the 8th line, insert: "It being understood that a junior player has the privilege of playing in the nearest town to his residence, which has a Junior O.H.A. team."

By A. H. Schlegel, Preston—

After the word "residence" in the 8th line, add: "This rule is also to apply (during the war) in the case of a player residing in a town which is not represented in the O. H. A."

By Jas. T. Sutherland—

After the word "located," in Clause 3 of the Regulations, 19th line, add: "Provided in case of a player attending a Collegiate Institute or High School, such player shall only be granted a certificate when it is shown that such player is attending the nearest Collegiate Institute or High School to his place of residence."

By J. Ross Robertson—

Add the following: "In case of an enlisted soldier who has not been a continuous resident under this rule he shall have the following options:

(1) He may play with the team in his home town, or

(2) He may play with a soldiers' team in the town or military district in which he is located, or

(3) He may play with any team in the town in which he is located.

Present Clause.

4. No player shall take part in any Association match unless the captain shall have furnished the referee with a full list of the players and their playing certificates. Certificates shall be issued in the following form: On blue paper for senior, pink paper for intermediate and white paper for junior series, on application to the Secretary of the Association.

Proposed Amendment.

By J. Ross Robertson—

Add to Clause 4: "A player shall sign his name in full on the space provided in the certificate and also on the duplicate."

By J. Ross Robertson—

(A New Rule.)

14. Each club shall have a set of books setting for the receipts and expenses of each year in detail, which books may be examined by the O. H. A., or any of its officers appointed for such purpose at any time.

TO RULES OF COMPETITION.

Present Clause.

12. Before every game the referee shall receive from the captains of the opposing teams a full list of the players on his side, and each man shall answer to his name at the call of the referee.

Proposed Amendment.

By J. Ross Robertson—

Add the following: "And shall also sign his name on the referee's report in the presence of the referee."

TO RULES OF THE GAME.

Present Clause.

10. The game shall be started and renewed by the referee blowing his whistle or calling "Play" after dropping the puck in the centre of the ice between the sticks of two players, one from each team, who are to face it. The players who face the puck must keep the blades of their sticks on the ice until the referee drops the puck. After a goal has been scored the puck shall be faced in like manner in the centre of the ice.

Proposed Amendment.

By Chas. Farquharson, Stratford—

In the 5th line, strike out the words "The players who face the puck," and insert: "The left hand side of the players who face the puck shall be towards the opponents' goal and they."

Present Clause.

16. No substitutes shall be allowed except in the case of a goal tender, who, in the referee's opinion, has been so injured as to make his continuing in the game impossible. Should any other player be injured during the match, break a skate, or from any accident be compelled to leave the ice, the opposite side shall immediately drop a man to equalize the teams, and the match proceed without such players until such time as the player so compelled to leave the ice is ready to return. Neither player shall resume play until he has received permission from the penalty timekeeper to go on. In event of any dispute, the matter shall at once be decided by the referee.

Proposed Amendments.

By Mr. G. B. Dawson, Sarnia—

That Section 16 be changed to read as follows: "That no substitute be allowed for a goal tender except when he, in the opinion of the referee, has been so injured as to make his continuing in the game impossible. Should any player be injured during any period of the match, break a skate, or from any accident be compelled to leave the ice, the opposite side shall immediately drop a man to equalize the teams, and the match proceed with such players to the end of said period."

By Mr. G. B. Dawson, Sarnia—

That the "Rules of the Game," Section No. 17, read as follows: "That each and every competing team shall be allowed two substitutes, either of whom or both shall be allowed to enter the match at the commencement of either the second or third periods; and also that either or both of the players who were removed from the match to make room for the substitutes be permitted to re-enter the match at the commencement of the third period. These substitutes to be made by the managers or captains of the contesting teams and the referee to be notified of the change or changes."

By Mr. G. B. Dawson, Sarnia—

That "Rules of the Game," Section No. 17, re stoppages, be changed to read Section No. 18.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

By Sheriff J. F. Paxton, Whitby—

That the honorarium of the secretary for the season of 1914-15 be $750 and the treasurer $50.

THE PLEASURES OF YOUTH.

A public school teacher once put this question to her pupils:

"Which would you rather have — three bags with two apples in each bag, or two bags with three apples in each bag?"

"Three bags with two apples in each bag," was the surprising answer given by one lad, while the rest of the class was struggling with the problem.

"Why, Harry?"

"Because there'd be one more bag to bust!"

ST. ANDREW OF SCOTLAND

The Patron Saint of North Britain is Commemorated This Day—A Sketch of the Saint's History

BY FRANK RUSSELL

To-day, November 30th, is celebrated the Feast of St. Andrew, patron saint of Scotland.

The Patron Saint of Scotland.

This 30th day of November is a favourite occasion for national and social re-union amongst Scotsmen, whether at home or abroad; for from time immemorial St. Andrew has been regarded as the patron saint of Scotland and Scotsmen.

Significance of Andrew.

The name, Andrew, signifies valour and honour—two sterling qualities to be possessed by a man.

Who Was St. Andrew?

St. Andrew, the Apostle, son of Jonah, or John, was born in Bethsaid of Galilee, and was brother of Simon Peter (St. Peter). Both were fishermen and early disciples of Christ. It was of St. Andrew that our Saviour said, he should become a "fisher of men." From St. John's gospel we learn that it was Andrew who said, on the occasion of the miraculous feeding of the five thousand: "There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes; but what are they among so many?" (St. John vi., 8, 9.)

His Life Not Chronicled.

Very little appears to be known about the life of this saint. His name is rarely mentioned in the gospels; and he is spoken of in the Acts of the Apostles only as one of the twelve Apostles; nor is there any mention of him in the Epistles, or in the Revelations of St. John the Divine.

As one of the twelve, he was admitted to very close familiarity with our Lord during His public life. He was present at the Last Supper; he beheld the risen Lord; he was a witness of the Ascension; shared in the gifts at Pentecost; and amid threats and persecution he helped to establish Christianity in Palestine.

Early writers state that he preached in Bithynia, Cappadocia, Galatia, in the Scythian deserts, and afterwards in Byzantium (the ancient name for Constantinople).

His Martyrdom.

It is generally agreed that by order of the Roman governor Ægeas, he was crucified, and that in order to prolong his sufferings he was bound, instead of being nailed, to an X-shaped cross, now known generally as the St. Andrew's Cross.

His martyrdom occurred as on this day (November 30), A.D. 60, by order of the Emperor Nero, the tyrant of Rome. He it was, of whom it is chronicled that he played his fiddle while his capital city was burning.

St. Andrew's Remains Eventually Translated to Scotland.

It was in the city of Patra that St Andrew suffered martyrdom after having been scourged. His body was embalmed and honourably interred under the auspices of a Christian lady of high rank. The body was removed in the fourth century to Byzantium (afterwards Constantinople) by the Emperor Constantine, where it was, by his instructions placed in a church in that city, which had been dedicated to the Twelve Apostles.

It appears from a legend that some thirty years after the Emperor's death, in A.D. 368, a pious Greek monk, by name Rule, caused these remains to be conveyed to Scotland On the East Coast of Fifeshire he built a church, where afterwards was erected the well-known Cathedral and University of St. Andrews.

Russia Honours St. Andrew.

Not only does Scotland honour St. Andrew as its patron saint, but Russia honours St. Andrew in a similar manner as the apostle who first preached the Gospel in that country.

The Russian Order

of Saint Andrew is the highest in that Empire, and was founded by the renowned Peter the Great in 1698. It has but one class, and is confined to members of the Imperial family, princes, and persons of highest military rank. The badge of the order shows the double-headed eagle, crowned, on which is a St. Andrew's Cross, enamelled in blue, with a figure of the Saint.

The Banner of Saint Andrew differs from that of St. George, inasmuch as it bears a white cross on a blue ground. Moreover, the limbs of the cross are not rectangular or at right angles with one another, but are crossed like the letter X. This form is known as the saltire or decussante cross, and was in all likelihood adopted as the emblem of this saint in reference to the shape of the cross on which he gave up his life.

When, under King James the First of England (and Sixth of Scotland) the Act of Union between England and Scotland was entered into, the cross of St. Andrew was laid on the banner of St. George, and from this arose the evolution of the Union Jack, our national flag—the flag which should, to the exclusion of all others, be flown on every occasion.

The Union Jack as it now exists was completed later when the red cross (saltire) of St. Patrick of Ireland became a component part.

Haggis.

In Scotland to-night, as also on the anniversary of their great poet, Robert Burns, a large quantity of haggis will be consumed. This is considered peculiarly a Scottish dish, although it appears to have been common in England until about two hundred years ago. This dish consists of the heart and liver and other intestines of an animal, such as a calf or a sheep. It is boiled in the stomach of the animal, with a suitable seasoning of pepper, salt, onions, etc. chopped finely and mixed with oatmeal and finely shredded suet.

The derivation of the word is obscure. According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, it may be connected with an old verb "to hag," meaning, to cut into small pieces. The French word "hachis" and the English "hash" are of a later date than the word "haggis."

Of course, it goes without saying that "a wee drappie" usually accompanies this savoury dish.

Advent.

The position in the week of this day regulates the commencement of the Church's year, which begins with Advent Sunday. Advent is always the nearest Sunday to St. Andrew's Day. This year Advent Sunday was on the 28th inst., thus preceding the day under consideration. It will therefore be seen that St. Andrew's Day may be either the first or the last of the festivals of the Christian Year.

Y. M. C. A. Basketball

Two good games of basketball were played in the City League series at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday night. In the first game the Collegiate form sprung a surprise on the Bankers, who had won their game on Wednesday night, the Collegiate boys winning by a score of 21—15. The most effective man for the Collegiate was Jobbitt, who scored 12 points. Mulhern for the Bankers was the best goal-getter. The game was a good exhibition.

In the second game the 93rd Battalion team was badly handicapped by the absence of some of their good players. They had to meet the Excelsiors, who have a formidable line up, and proved to be a strong team. The score of 39—8 in favour of the Excelsiors does not indicate the comparative strength of the teams on Saturday night. The soldiers were very unfortunate in their shooting many good tries rolling round the basket or missing by the slightest margin. Wolno for the 93rd was the best man, although off colour in shooting. Long of the Excelsior team secured most of the points for his team.

The games this week are: Wednesday night, 8 o'clock—Excelsiors vs. Veterans, and the second game, which will follow immediately, Crossman's vs. Collegiate; on Saturday night—Excelsiors vs. Collegiate play first game, the Bankers vs. 93rd Battalion following.

The players in both games are asked to be at the Association in time to start the games without any delay.

Greece Has Paved The Way For The Settlement

LONDON, Nov. 30.—There are no details of the Greek reply to the collective note of the Entente powers demanding facilities for the Anglo-French forces, but a despatch from Athens says it is couched in friendly terms, and is regarded as paving the way for the desired settlement which would enable Greece to maintain her neutrality and not interfere with the intentions of the allies.

The tenor official messages to-day to the Greek Legation here corresponds with newspaper desapthches as to the satisfactory nature of the Greek Government's reply to the Entente Ministers.

Can Land at Any Greek Port.

The Entente allies in disembarking troops at Salonica are not violating Greek territory, nor can their action in Greece be compared to the German occupation of Belgium. This is the official reply of the French Government recently made, in which the Salonika expedition was criticised as a violation of foreign territory.

The presence of the allies at Salonika does not need any justification, according to the diplomatic view made known in Paris. The French and British are not tolerated guests, but are there as a matter of duty and established right, it is pointed out.

ThTeir action at Salonika, it is further said,. could be repeated at any other point in Greece, and with perfect legality. The landing of allied troops at Salonika is based on the London Treaty of July 13, 1863, the signatories of which are Greece, France, Great Britain and Russia, guaranteeing the independence and constitutional institutions of Greece. This convention was preceded by various other agreements entered into as far back as 1832.

Thirty thousand people greeted Billy Sunday at his three meetings in Syracuse on Sunday, opening his first New York State campaign. About $5,000 was taken up in the three offerings.

Plan German Trade Conquest After War

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—Distinguished authorities on political economy are ventilating in Berlin papers the question of how to recover Germany's lost ground in the world's markets after the war.

In the Tageblatt, Dr. Anton Palme of the Oriental Seminary advocates the establishment of a German high school for foreign knowledge, which, he asserts, will be an absolute necessity. After the war young men will find it most difficult to gain knowledge in a foreign country, because they will be confronted at every step by the hatred, suapicion, and ill-will of vanquished nations. Dr. Palme urges that work for establishing the high school begin immediately, that teachers be selected, and that material from the libraries and economic and industrial collections of each country be obtained.

In the Vossische Zeitung, Hermann Pachnicke, a member of the Reichstag, writes of the recent German-Austrian convention at Salzburg to consider closer economic and industrial relations between the two empires. He reaches the conclusion that a Zollverein is not immediately desirable, because of technical reasons. Other means should, he says be found to obtain the same results. There will probably be common rates of duty on foreign imports.

Probably Turkey and Bulgaria will also wish to be included in an arrangement of this kind, says Herr Pachnicke, securing for the industry of the Central Powers the natural products of friendly nations and a wide field of interchange.

SOLAR ENERGY.

The work of Einstein on the principle of relativity shows that a body which radiates energy loses a portion of its mass depending on the energy radiated. It follows that the sun, which continually radiates energy, is constantly losing mass. M. J. Bosler has calculated that the sun loses a mass equal to that of our earth in 80,000,000 years.

If it be assumed that the mass thus lost is gravitational mass it follows that the length of the year increases by six seconds in 1,000,000 years and that in the same time the mean longitude of the earth is affected in such a way as to produce a variation of one-tenth of a year—that is, a retardation of thirty-six days in the seasons.

Such variations are too minute to be observable. In stellar systems possessing a higher temperature the effect would be much more marked, for the energy radiated by a body varies as the fourth power of its absolute temperature.

If, as M. Nordmann believes, there exist stars having a temperature six or seven times that of our sun their radiation is one or two thousand times as intense. Thus, if the temperature of Algol is 13,900 degrees, it is calculated that at the end of 2,000 years the eclipses of Algol suffer a retardation of about twelve minutes.—Boston Herald.

An Automatic Tyre-Pump.

A tyre-pump that not only pumps up any tyre within a few minutes, but that keeps the tyre at that pressure regardless of punctures, is a British invention. The pump can be attached to the hub of the wheel in less than a minute by any person. It works on the rotary pump principle each revolution of the wheel, while running the car, driving air into the tyre, and so effective has this device shown itself during a recent official test by the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain that a tyre, deliberately punctured in five places, was kept at full pressure as long as the car was kept running. The device appears to have solved the roadside repair problem. No car need stop because of a puncture if fitted with one of these pumps, as it can be run with ease and without danger to the nearest garage or repair shop.

Austria Said To Be Anxious to Arrange Separate Peace

LONDON Nov. 30—Reports reached here from Rome that during the last ten days Austria has taken tentative steps toward arranging a separate peace with the Allies. It is rumored there that Austria and Germany are a odds concerning peace negotiations.

The rumor also is repeated there that Germany is anxious to make peace with a portion of the allies so that she can give her undivided attention to England. Austria's desire, however, it is said, is for a general cessation of hostilities to relieve the strain upon her financial and military resources.

A press despatch from Vienna says that Emperor William, who arrived in the Austrian capital at eleven o'clock ot-day, had luncheon with Emperor Francis Joseph and Archduke Charles Francis at Scoenbrunn Castle. Afterwards Emperor William received Baron Burian, the Foreign Minister, and Count Tisza, the Hungarian Premier, and later went with Archduke Charles Francis to the German Embassy.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen says:

"The Wolff Bureau (the semi-official German news agency, says that several members of the Vienna Cabinet will resign."

REFUGEE PROBLEM WORRIES RUSSIA

PETROGRAD, Nov. 30.—The effort to find a solution of the problems connected with the great migration of peoples incident to the Russian withdrawal from Poland and other parts of Russian territory is seriously engaging Russian thought.

The monetary cost of the vast movement aready has mounted high The Imperial Government and the Governments of various provinces and cities of the empire have expended money freely to shelter, feed, and clothe the refugees, whose numbers are estimated as high as 13,000,000 by some. The expenditures of the central government in this connection are already in excess of 13,000,000 roubles ($6,500,000) and the total cost is probably more than 100,000,000 roubles. Besides this, there must be reckoned huge sums involved in abandoned property, and the cost to the railways, over which free passage was given, and whose operations were for a time largely confined to removal of unfortunate victims of the war.

Besides distributing the refugees, mainly peasants, throughout the rural districts of European Russia, the Government is sending larger and larger parties as time goes on to Central Asia and to Siberia, where it is allotting lands to the refugees, it becoming evident that the majority of them will never return to their former homes, regardless of the issue of the war. Most of them have lost all their possessions, except the parcels of clothing they were able to carry with them.

Once installed on virgin soil, which process will necessitate large advances of funds for farm implements, seed, and work animals, it will be virtually impossible, it is held, to upset this arrangement and return the peasants to their former holdings.

A prospect of this sort is displeasing many Poles, who fear that the Polish question may be receiving a solution far from what they desire. Still there is a natnral wish on their part to re-establish the domestic hearth somewhere, without waiting for the end of the war. It is thought by many that only families owning land are likely to seek their old homes again, and it is questioned if even some of these may not choose to remain on their new allotments, liquidating their old titles when the war is over.

To one section of the refugees, that of the Jewish race, it is thought by many that the argument against a return will particularly apply, as it is held that their unwillingness to go back to the cramped conditions of life in the former pale of settlement will naturally be stronger than that among refugees of other races.

One of the most vital questions respecting the refugees is the procurement for them of employment to prevent their pauperisation. Many are disposed to lean on Government charity, it appears, and some disheartenment among voluntary workers for the refugees over their frequent refusal to accept employment when offered is reported. To offset this, there is the certainty of ample labour for the cultivation of crops and of a great growth of colonization on the virgin lands of Asia.

Many prisoners of war are said to be gladly accepting work in the mines and fields. An interesting development in this connection is an order that hereafter the Slavic elements be separated from the Magyar and German-speaking. It is considered probable that many Slavic prisoners will settle permanently in Russia.

HERE HE IS AGAIN.

The organizer of the "peace by Christmas" propaganda and chatterer of the peace ship which will soon sail for Europe is photographed in Washington with two of the most prominent of the feminine propagandists — Mrs. P. Snowden—a Socialist and Mrs. R. Schwimmer (on left) who organized the scheme.

Decisive Effort of Allies to Start Next Spring

Anxiously Waiting Some Sign Which Way Balkan Campaign Is To Turn

Two Phases That Will Have an Important Effect on the Development of the Near Future—The Kaiser's Trip to Vienna and Kitchener's Recent Conferences.

LONDON, Dec. 1.— All Britain is anxiously waiting for some sign which way the campaign in the Balkans is to turn. Two phases of yesterday's news, it is believed, will have an important effect on the developments of the near future—the Kaiser's trip to Vienna to call on the aged Emperor Francis Joseph and Lord Kitchener's return from the Mediterranean and his conference in Paris.

Lord Kitchener, it may be assumed, discussed with the French authorities his observations at Gallipoli and along the Vardar River front in Serbia, as well as his conversations with King Victor Emmanuel and General Cadorna on the Italian front. The Kaiser will discuss with Austrian generals the next move of the Central Powers.

Presumably, it is a question whether the Teutonic allies will attack the Anglo-French forces in Southern Serbia, or concentrate in Western Bulgaria to meet the threat of a Russian invasion from the east and the possibility of Roumania taking sides against her old enemies, Bulgaria and Turkey.

So far as Serbia is concerned winter appears virtually to have put a end to any important movements, although the Austrians are proceeding to deal with the Montenegrins, whose frontier they have crossed, while the Bulgarians are attempting to advance to Prisrend and Monastir.

With heavy and continuous snowstorms reaching the proportions of a blizzard, these operations must be slow, especially as the Serbians and Montenegrins are still offering stubborn resistance. Monastir, it is admitted, cannot be saved, but the Serbians who are defending the city are determined to resist to the last and give to the civilians a chance to escape. They hold a front some five miles from the town in the direction of Prilep, from which point the Bulgarians, who have crossed the Carasson River, are advancing.

Snow has completely stopped operations on the Anglo-French front in Serbia, the opposing forces, who are separated by a valley a mile across, having lost sight of each other.

There are no details of the Greek reply to the collective note of the Entente Powers demanding facilities for the Anglo-French forces, but a despatch from Athens says it is couched in friendly terms and is regarded as paving the way for the desired settlement which would enable Greece to maintain her neutrality and not interfere with the intentions of the Allies.

The Fall of Goritza Is Hourly Expected--Fury of Attack Increasing

Austrians Are Making Desperate Counter Attacks But the Italians Are Beating Them Back Invariably

FURY OF ATTACK INCREASING.

ROME, Dec. 1.—The Italians are increasing the fury of their attack and tightening their lines about Goritza today. News of the city's fall is expected here almost hourly. The Austrians are making desperate counter attacks, but the Italians are beating them back invariably, inflicting the heaviest losses. Sallies of this kind are officially reported at Uzzill and Vodil. Their result was the capture of several hundred Austrian prisoners, a few machine guns and quantities of war material.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 1.—The Emperor of Austria to-day accepted the resignation of his Ministers of Finance, the Interior and Commerce, according to Vienna advices. It is understood that these Ministers were leading a peace party propaganda, which was offensive to Kaiser Wilhelm.

BRITISH STEAMER SUNK.

LONDON, Dec. 1. — The British steamer Kingsway has been sunk by a submarine with a possible loss of five lives. The captain and all of the Kingsway's crew were landed to-day. Five others are missing.

British Inflicted Severe Defeat On The Enemy Near Bagdad

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The British victory over the Turks at Ctesiphon, near Bagdad, as reported last week has not, as many persons believe sealed the fate of Bagdad. An official report issued to-night says that having successfully completed the removal of his wounded and prisoners, Gen. Townsend, the British commander, in the face of the arrival of Turkish reinforcements, again has withdrawn his force to a position lower down the river. Following is the text of the report.

"The enemy's strength at the Battle of Ctesiphon is estimated at four divisions (about 40,000.) One of these is stated by prisoners to have been practically wiped out. This is confirmed by our own observations, but the approach of Turkish reinforcements is reported.

"Gen. Townsend, having successfully completed the removal of his wounded and prisoners, has withdrawn his force to a position lower down the river."

While this will prove a disappointment to the uninitiated, those who know the country through which the British have forced their way are not suprised that every precaution is being taken to prevent a reverse, or even a check, in the march up Mesopotamia

The country is very inhospitable, and especially at this time of the year it is necessary that the army should keep near the river, where there is a plentiful supply of water, and where it can be reprovisioned and supplied with munitions and guns by the heterogeneous fleet which accompanies it.

The defeat inflicted on the Turks appears from all accounts to have been a serious one. General Townsend, according to the first account of the battle, commanded but one British division, but he probably will be better supplied with guns that his opponents as long as he keeps near the river, and has the assistance of armed steamers and tugs, which have been converted into floating forts. It is expected that he is receiving reinforcements, which will enable him shortly to resume his advance on Bagdad.

As the season advances, this advance is expected to become less difficult. Heretofore, the British force has had to contend with the intense heat and lack of water, but the rivers are now rising, and there should be plenty of water for the men and horses, and for the purpose of navigation.

SOLDIERS THROW CONSCRIPTION FOES INTO THE STREET

London, December 1. — Canadian and Australian soldiers, with a sprinkling of British territorials, recently took charge of Memorial Hall, where the "Union of Democratic Control," an organization which is opposed to conscription and favours peace, was advertised to hold a meeting and unceremoniously threw the speakers into the street and turned the gathering into a recruiting meeting.

The soldiers succeeded in obtaining admission with tickets other than those circulated to the members of the union, and forming themselves at the top of the staircase leading to the great hall and galleries, forcibly took possession of the building.

Bombs containing "asphyxiating gases" were launched, and then the soldiers took the platform by storm. Several of the speakers, including E. D. Morel, the leader of the union, sought refuge in an anteroom as did the women who were distributing leaflets. The promoters of the meeting were thrown into the street with the furniture, to which they clung.

The soldiers took the places of the speakers and passed a resolution "demanding the activities of the union should be stopped and declaring the only terms of peace acceptable to the Allies were those which should be dictated after the complete defeat of Germany.

Apparently a great many people are unaware of the fact that it is an offence to break through a military parade, and the practice has become so common that the officers have had to take steps to put a stop to it.

As yet no prosecutions have been instituted, but unless the practice is stopped, some of the offenders will be taken before the magistrate. According to law, they are liable to a fine of $50 for each offence.

DREADS THOUGHT OF OLD AGE

Almost every person dreads the thought of old age, yet it ought to bring relaxation and enjoyment, because of ripened judgment and experience. Years of happiness may be added to one's life by avoiding worry, a simple diet, light exercise and if the vitality gets low, our local druggists, McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne, guarantee Vinol to restore strength and vitality. It is a non-secret remedy in which are combined cod liver extractives, peptonate of iron and beef peptone, in a mild tonic wine. Feeble old people quickly regain strength and vitality by its use.

One of the newer incandescent lamps have two filaments, either or both of which can be switched into circuit according to the demand for illumination.

IS MONTHS IN A CELLAR.

PARIS, Nov. 30.— Despite German denials, abundant proof of the French sympathies of the inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine is furnished by the list of condemnations, mostly for very trivial offences of Francophile Alsatians published in L'Humanite to-day.

One case particularly illustrates the Alsatians' feelings toward their conquerors. At the little village of Rigisheim seven men liable for military service have just been denounced to the authorities. These men, with the connivance of almost the whole village, had been hidden in a cellar since the first mobilization. Unable to escape, they were fed by sympathizers in the hope that they might be concealed until the arrival of the French troops.

TAKE "CASCARETS" IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS AND CONSTIPATED

Best for liver and bowels, bad breath bad colds, sour stomach

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

Gordon Craig

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"You have called the turn," he said quietly, "and the dance is about to begin. Unship your rudder and let it go. Let them think you are wrecked, helpless to escape, and they will be more careless. You men there, loosen your guns and be ready to scale a ship's side in a jiffy, but lie perfectly still until I give the word." He turned his head.

"You understand what you are to do, Craig, you and the lady?"

"I think so. We are to obey Henley's orders and go on board."

"Yes, but do something as soon as you reach the deck to attract attention and get them away from the rail. Try and get the lady as far astern as possible, for there is likely to be some fighting. Are you frightened, miss?"

"All right, then. I shall not wait for any signal. Now, listen, men; these are my last orders. When I say go get up any way you can and hit the first man you see. Hit hard, but no shooting unless they use firearms. But fight like devils and do it quick. They outnumber us three to one. Marston, you and Simms take the stake hold and the forecastle. Keep those fellows below down with your revolvers. Shoot if you need to. The rest of you stick close to me. All clear, lads?"

"Aye, aye, sir," returned the muffled voices from beneath the canvas.

I unshipped the rudder, letting it disappear noiselessly beneath the waves, and the boat's head swung slowly around, and we drifted helplessly, the jib flapping. In low monotone, without turning my head, I managed to convey my observations to the motionless officer.

"She's heading straight toward us under low pressure. There are two men on the bridge and a lookout on the bow. Now she's swinging to port to bring up close. There's a group at the rail near the starboard gangway; about ten, I should say. Can you see, Viola?"

"Twelve," she answered quietly, "and three forward. The third man at the rail is the captain, and he has a glass."

"By George, you are right! I recognize the fellow now. He appeared on the bridge. They expect no trouble, lieutenant, and only have the regular watch on deck. They are getting too close for me to talk any more."

It was quite evident that Henley perceived nothing to arouse suspicion, for with a swing like a hawk the Sea Gull bore down upon us, the engines slowing and then reversed. We were staring up into the faces that looked curiously down at us.

"Hand [illegible] ... [illegible] ... tioning with one arm. "Fling her, man! Now, you army bounder," he called to me, "catch that rope and make fast."

CHAPTER XVIII.

In Possession.

ONE of the hands flung the coil so that it fell at my feet, and I did as directed, as otherwise we would have been crushed under the vessel. As it drew taut the boat swung in gently against the side of the Sea Gull.

"Now, you thief," he screamed, "it's my turn to play jailer. Come up, both of you."

"Just a moment, Captain Henley," I answered, rising to my feet. "If there is any one to be punished I am the one; this woman had nothing to do with it."

"That's for me to decide," he snarled, and whipped out a revolver. "I have time to handle both of you. Come, jump now, you dog, or you never will move again. Pass the girl up first, and be lively about it. Give them a hand there, Peters, and don't be too easy."

There was no excuse for delay; besides, those lads under the heavy canvas must be nearly smothered. With my arm about her I lifted her up to where Peters could reach down and grasp her hand, and then followed as quickly as possible. Henley had swung down to the deck and stood there, his men grouped about him, the revolver still in his hand. One glance at his face told me he was insane from rage, thinking only of revenge.

"Take the woman below," he snapped, his cruel teeth gleaming. "She'll get her lesson. Here, Louis, don't you hear me? Lock her in, and bring me the key. I'll handle this snivelling thief first. So you couldn't run a boat, hey! Not so easy as it looked, was it, you dog? Thought we'd be gone this morning, didn't you? You'll find I'm not quite as easy as all that. Now you'll take your medicine!"

I still stood motionless, my back to the rail, letting him rave, but watching every movement. I remember the faces about me, fierce, scowling faces, of men wild to lay hold upon me at the first word of command. What did Henley mean to do? Kill me or give me over into the hands of those merciless devils? All I could read in his eyes was hatred, exultation, consciousness of power.

"Hard luck, Craig—hey!" he began tauntingly. "Played with the wrong man, didn't you. Now I've got the girl just as I want her, and as for you—Lord! but I'll keep you to play with all the way to Honduras. It will be a pleasant voyage, my friend. Here, Masters, you and Peters stand by. Now, you robber, give me those papers.

I handed them out, watching closely. Peters stood at my right, one hand on my arm; the other fellow must have been behind me. Henley grasped the envelope, opening the flap to be sure of its contents. The movement caused him to lower the revolver and avert his gaze for just an instant. With one motion I flung Peters aside and jammed a clinched fist into the captain's face.

Masters must have struck me at almost the same instant my fist landed on Henley, for we went down together, his revolver discharging, the flying bullet gouging my left shoulder, burning the flesh like a redhot wire. Yet I grappled him even as we crashed to the deck, but the fellow lay stunned, motionless as a dead man. Everything happened quicker than I can tell it; with such rapidity, indeed, that not a hand touched me. I could barely struggle up on one knee, dazed still by the stroke which had floored me, and glance about when the bluejackets came tumbling over the rail and leaped at the astounded crew of the Sea Gull. It was a swift, short fight, the assailants having every advantage. I saw the lieutenant, bare handed, dash into the group, striking out left and right, his men at his heels. There was a volley of oaths, a thud of falling bodies, a sharp command and the shrill pipe of a boatswain's whistle. Two men rushed forward, the first disappearing behind the chart house. The second encountered Broussard stepping off the [illegible] and hurled the fellow to the deck with one blow of a sledge hammer fist. Scarcely pausing to see whether he was alive or not, the assailant ran on toward the forecastle.

The whole affair was over in two minutes, the bluejackets circling out like a fan and pressing their enemy into a helpless mass against the rail. For a moment the fight was furious, every man for himself; then the lieutenant drove like a wedge into the bunch, and it was all over.

"Tie to the bridge there, Coates, and hold up her head," sang out the officer, "Boatswain, take charge of those beauties and run them into the forecastle. Leave two men on guard and take a squint into the engine room. Report to me here."

He glanced toward me. "Say, what is the matter with you—shot? You're white as a sheet of paper, man."

"I got one on the head with a belaying pin from the heft of it. The bullet touched me—here. Lord, how it burns!"

"Who did the shooting?"

"Henley here." And I touched the fellow with my foot. "He fired just as I hit him."

"So that's the man!" he exclaimed. "We've done a good day's work."

Henley stirred as he spoke and opened his eyes, staring up into my face and then at the lieutenant's uniform. The sight of the latter perplexed him.

"Who are you?" he asked angrily, making an effort to rise. "Where is Broussard?"

"Henley," I said, stepping in between them, "the game is up, and the best thing you can do now is to keep quiet. This gentleman is Lieutenant Hutton of the revenue cutter Saline, and his men have the crew of the Sea Gull under hatches forward. Give me back those papers."

He had the envelope still clasped in his left hand, and he glanced at it dully and then beyond me toward Hutton. Apparently his brain, yet numbed by the blow, failed to entirely comprehend. The lieutenant, however, was a man of action. With grip on his collar he jerked the wretch to his feet and held him there.

"Hand over those papers to Craig," he ordered shortly, "and be lively about it. I haven't anything to do [illegible] ... [illegible] ... will have much more from now on. You are my prisoner, and you are good for a ten spell at least. Stand up, you coward." He forced him back against the rail and glanced about the deck. The boatswain was coming aft.

"Well, Sloan, how did you find things?"

"All serene, sir; the whole crew bottled up and mighty little fight left in them."

"The engine room?"

"The engineer was a bit ugly, sir.

Lay Hold Upon Me.

Afflicted with Lame Back

THREE YEARS AGO
COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak, aching back, and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. L. Gonshaw, 683 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

DOUBLE MEANING OF AN ENGLISH WORD

By EDITH F. BAKER.

[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

It was a sad day for Emery Blatchford when Fannie Elsmere told him that she was engaged to Tom Edwards. And the girl who had chosen between these two young men did not choose wisely. Edwards never got on, while Blatchford, having one of those cheery dispositions that win people continually, found friends to drop plums into his mouth. And so it happened that while the former was spending what little his wife had when he married her the latter was prospering.

One year when the fall elections came round the managers of the party in power, fearing they would lose the fight, looked about for candidates who would be especially acceptable to the people. Among those they selected was Emery Blatchford, who was put up for sheriff and elected by an overwhelming majority.

Now, it happened that a year before this election Edwards had died, leaving his widow not only penniless, but with a chattel mortgage on her household effects, for the payment of even the interest on which there were no funds. One of the first duties devolving upon the newly elected sheriff was the serving of a writ upon Mrs. Edwards, which would deprive her of her only remaining possession, her furniture. When Blatchford came across this paper he sighed, put it in a pigeonhole, where, if he had had the power to keep it there, it should have remained till the crack of doom. Indeed he paid no further attention to it till the plaintiff in the case made such an ado about the delay that the sheriff was obliged to serve the writ.

He gave the paper to a deputy, but before the man had reached the door called him back. He couldn't bear that the unwelcome process should be enacted without being softened so far as possible. And to whom could he trust such softening but himself? Putting the document into his pocket, he waited till after office hours—indeed, till a proper hour for calling in the evening, then went to the widow's cottage. He was received with some surprise. When he had last visited Mrs. Edwards she was Miss Elsmere and had told him that she was engaged to his rival. Blatchford beat about the bush for an hour before he could bring himself to mention the all important subject. Then he said:

"I presume you know that judgment has been entered against you in the matter of the notes secured by chattel mortgage on your furniture?"

"Yes; I had no money with which to even try to save what I have left," she replied, wiping a tear from her eye.

"And you may know," the sheriff proceeded, "of the attachment I have for you."

A sudden checking of tears, a movement indicating that something important had caught the widow's attention followed the sheriff's remark.

"I knew," she replied hesitatingly, "that you had an attachment for me, but—but I was not aware that it had endured."

"The attachment I have for you," he said gently, sympathetically, "is different from the one which you mention. It is a more practically important one. An attachment that"—

He was stalled. The widow essayed to help him.

"I can understand," she said, "the difference between the—the feeling one might have for a girl and that same feeling after all that has intervened between then and now. I, too, have come to understand myself better."

The sheriff, instead of opening his legal document, opened his ears, to say nothing of his eyes. This, however, the widow did not see since her own eyes were bent on the floor, while her ears were strained to hear the expected declaration. Blatchford could not feel any certainty that he was either understood to be entering upon a proposal or that, if so, he was encouraged. He resolved upon one more effort to make clear the business on which he had come.

"This word attachment," he began—"this word attachment has different meanings. It is at once a legal term and"— "I know," she sighed.

"I mean, too, a condition of the heart. My attachment for you is as warm, as deep, as unalterable as it ever was. Give me the right to stand as your protector."

Blatchford took her unresisting form into his arms, where she rested in happy contentment for some time without speaking. Finally she looked up into his face and said:

"Do you know that when you began to talk about the word attachment having a legal meaning, for a moment I was seized with an idea that you, being sheriff"—

"I being sheriff?"

"You having spoken about the horrid suit."

"Well?"

"That you were talking about that."

"How could you suppose," he replied, drawing her closer to him, "that I would have anything to do with that matter unless, perhaps, to bring you some good news concerning it?"

"What good news?"

"W-why, the plaintiff will renew the note."

"For what reason?

"It will be indorsed."

"What's that?'

"It's the result of the 'attachment' I was speaking to you about."

Women and Tipping.

That women are close fisted when it comes to tipping is the consensus of opinion of all waiters. "I was on duty in the pen—the upstairs room where women are served—all last week," said a waitress in one of the popular priced restaurants, "and I hardly saw a nickel from one week's end to the other. They never give you anything, but I thought the limit was reached when I saw a well dressed woman deliberately pick up a dime that a young man, inveigled up there by his feminine companion, had left on the table for me. I wasn't bashful about telling her that it was mine, and she handed it over without a word—but it just shows you one of their lovely little ways."—New York Tribune.

The Devil's Knell.

Among the famous bells of Dewsbury, Yorkshire, England, is one known as "Black Tom of Soothill," which was presented to the church in expiation of a murder. "Black Tom" is always rung on Christmas eve. Its solemn tolling as it strikes the first tap at exactly midnight is known all over Yorkshire as the "devil's knell," it being the notion that when Christ was born the devil died.—London Standard.

Unsightly Pimples Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

THE HEART.

How It Acts in Everyday Life.

The human heart, in a healthy man weighs but eleven ounces. It beats from long before birth until death, in an average lifetime, about seven million times, allowing seventy beats to the minute. Every twenty-four hours this slight organ performs labor equivalent to lifting a ton of material eighty feet into the air. If the blood becomes poor, and filled with poisons from diseased kidneys, the heart is not only starved, but poisoned as well. It soon becomes exhausted and unable to meet any extraordinary demand which may be made upon it. Supply pure blood; get the kidneys to working; tone up the feeble stomach! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood, relieves the kidneys and tones up the alimentary canal. Give the heart the food it needs and it will continue to work till the natural end of life.

Berlin, Ont.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's medicines and found them to give perfect satisfaction. I had a stroke and got very bad. The doctor said I had no blood, my heart got very weak. I finally quit the doctor and began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Favorite Prescription. When I had taken about five bottles I commenced to notice a marked improvement, and in about one year and a half I was alright, could do my own work. I really think these remedies saved my life as I was in very bad condition.

"I have used 'Pleasant Pellets' in my home for several years and have found them to be good. We keep them in the house all the time. I think I owe my good health of to-day to Dr. Pierce's medicines."—Mrs. Henry Hammer, 91 Victoria St.

The modern improvement in pills—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They help Nature, instead of fighting with her. Sick and nervous headache, biliousness, costiveness, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are relieved, prevented, cured.

FAMOUS STICKS.

King George Has Collected Over 2,000 Walking Canes.

The inclusion of a number of walking-sticks which have belonged to famous men in the British Red Cross Fund sale held not long ago in London is a reminder of the interesting collections which have been formed. King George, perhaps, has the most notable collection. His Majesty possesses no fewer than 2,000 walking-sticks, which once belonged to his father, who, like many famous men, regarded his stick almost as a friend, and was rarely seen without one.

His favourite was regularly carried by Queen Victoria. This remarkable stick was fashioned from a branch of the Boscobel oak which once hid Charles II. when escaping from Cromwell's soldiers. Queen Victoria had it altered somewhat, and a little idol from Seringapatam was inserted as a knob.

Another notable walking-stick of the Royal collection which also belonged to the late King Edward is cut from the single horn of a white rhinoceros, a species now extinct, from which the heraldic Unicorn is supposed to have originated. This horn stick was given, more than forty years ago, by a Kaffir chief to Louis Solomon, a South African pioneer, and, enclosed in a case of native bamboo, was presented to King Edward when he opened the South African Exhibition of 1907.

A few years ago Lord Haldane startled the House of Commons when replying to a remark made by another member as to the danger attached to the use of cordite, by saying that he himself possessed a walking-stick made of cordite which he sometimes brought down to the House and left in the cloakroom. An uneasy look stole over the faces of the members present, but in a scientific and highly technical speech his lordship explained that cordite was a perfectly innocent substance until brought into contact with dangerous allies, and without certain ingredients necessary to convert it into an explosive it might be handled with impunity. At the same time it was noticed that Lord Haldane's stick was given a wide berth when it was seen in the cloakroom.

Mr. Winston Churchill and Lord Rosebery also have an interesting collection of walking-sticks, although not quite so valuable perhaps as that of the late Lord Anglesey, whose collection fetched a couple of thousand pounds when they were sold after his death.

Perhaps, however, the most extraordinary walking-stick of all is that which was owned by a seaman on H.M.S. Glory, which was made out of love-letters placed on a steel spike, cut, trimmed, and dressed in a very neat manner.

Electrical Rain-Making.

Mr. J. G. Balsillie, wireless expert of the Australian Commonwealth, believes he can command rain by a novel invention which will have much the same effect on the clouds as a series of mountain peaks. He proposes to create at a high altitude a discharge centre of electricity. For this purpose he will draw from a suitable generating plant a supply of current which will be discharged in two forms at a very high potential from a balloon anchored at a height of from 6,000ft. to 7,000ft.

To Australia, of course, the question of rainfall is of the utmost importance, and large scale experiments are about to be conducted by Mr. Balsillie at the expense of the New South Wales Government. Mr. Balsillie believes that if all the clouds which pass over Australia can be made to discharge their moisture while over the land, the rainfall can be not only increased, but regulated. He says that it will be possible by having a number of stations erected on the lines of the prevailing winds to secure from all the clouds that come inland the whole of the moisture they contain.

Our Friends.

If we choose our friends for what they are, not for what they have, and if we deserve so great a blessing, then they will be always with us, preserved in absence and even after death, in the chamber of memory.—Cicero.

RULES OF HEALTH
Daily Movement of the Bowels.

If every child in every school in this great country could be taught this one rule of health in such a way as to appreciate its value, and live up to it, health would abound, a multitude of pains and aches would disappear, and Canada would be known as a country where people live to a great age.

When you call the doctor his first question refers to the condition of the bowels, and his first medicine is intended to ensure the activity of these organs. Whether you have a cold or appendicitis, kidney disease or rheumatism, there are poisons in the system which must be removed, and which would not have lingered to cause trouble if the bowels had been healthful and active.

For this reason we claim that the First and Most Important Rule of Health is "Daily Movement of the Bowels."

If the bowels can be kept in healthful action at all times there is little need for either doctor or medicines, and about nine-tenths of the annoying and dangerous ills of life are avoided.

The ideal corrective treatment for the bowels is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Not only because of their promptness of action, but also because they immediately arouse the sluggish liver, and by so doing cure constipation.

The bile which is filtered from the blood by an active liver is Nature's cathartic, so if you can keep the liver right there will be no sluggishness in the action of the bowels. Keep the liver and kidneys healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you will prevent and cure constipation, and thereby avoid a multitude of ills.

RULE OF THE GLOVE.

By reason of a curious custom the people of the old town of Honiton, in Devonshire, England, are exempt from arrest from dawn to sunset of a certain day of the year. It is while the horse fair there is in progress that the law is thus suspended for awhile. The custom is a survival of a quaint and picturesque ceremonial dating from the days of King Henry III.

At the beginning of the fair the town crier, in the gorgeous dress of a beadle of the old days, appears upon the scene with a pole to the end of which is attached a large gilt glove decked with flowers. Having rung his handbell three times, the crier announces:

"Oyes, oyes, oyes! The fair is begun. The glove is up; no man may be arrested until the glove is down. God save the king!"

Each sentence is chorused by the children standing round, and at the conclusion they scramble for nuts. The glove is taken down at sunset.—St. Louis Republic.

Not Very Far.

"Here's a dollar back that I marked and put into circulation only day before yesterday. Surprising, eh?"

"Oh, I don't know. A dollar doesn't go very far these days."—Judge.

Real Unhappiness.

Sillichap—What's the matter, old man? You look unhappy. Cynicus—I am. I'm almost as unhappy as a woman with a secret that nobody wants to know.—London Telegraph.

Make clean work and leave no tags. Allow no delays when you are at a thing; do it and be done with it.—Professor Blackie.

When Swearers Were Taxed.

It may not be generally known that money was at one time raised by the State by imposing fines on those given to the habit of swearing. Laws against swearing were passed in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I., and were strictly enforced during the Civil War by Cromwell, who says of his Ironsides, "Not a man swears but pays his twelve pence." Almost a century later Swift, in his "Swearer's Bank," remarks that "5,000 swearing gentlemen of Ireland, at one oath a day at a shilling each, would furnish an annual revenue of £91,250." Swearing is much less common now than in the old days, but a Chancellor of the Exchequer at the end of his resources might still be able to raise some money from the objectionable habit.

TRAGIC LAUGHTER.

Vibration and Nitroglycerin Form a Perilous Combination.

An accident, said to be the most extraordinary on record, occurred at some oil fields in the Baku district of Russia, on the borders of the Caspian sea. One of the big "gusher" oil wells became choked, and, with a view of blowing it clear, a number of iron drums full of nitroglycerin were brought down by rail from Derbend and deposited overnight in a large shed which was used by the men as a sort of canteen.

The steward of this establishment, a Greek named Darios, opened one of the drums for some reason best known to himself and decanted a small quantity of the dangerous liquid into a long, thin glass used for mixing vodka. This he placed on a shelf behind the bar. Shortly afterward there entered a workman named Borkovitch, who was famous for the boisterous hilarity of his manner and especially for his loud, resonant laughter.

The sight of nitroglycerin in a vodka tumbler so excited his risibility that he gave vent to a series of stentorian guffaws. This set the half filled glass "ringing," and the treacherous contents immediately exploded.

The concussion sufficed, in its turn, to explode the rest of the stuff in the drums, entirely demolishing the shed and killing five persons, all who were in it at the time. The barman escaped through having gone down into the cellar just previously, whence he distinctly heard the laughter, followed by the musical "ringing" of the thin tumbler and the two explosions.—Pearson's Weekly.

PARIS, Nov. 30—A despatch to the Temps from Madrid says:

"King Alfonso has received 100,000 letters begging for his intervention in favour of civilians or soldiers made prisoners or condemned by courts-martial in Germany and Austria Most of them are from French and British mothers and wives.

"King Alfonso attends to this correspondence personally, and the steps deemed necessary are ordered taken by him immediately. Letters regarding British citizens, who are under American protection, are communicated at once to the American Ambassadors. The King often stays up far into the night awaiting telegraphic replies to his appeals, so that he can forward their contents at once to the waiting relatives.

All the telegraph lines are kept busy in attending to this correspondence, which has reached 2,500 messages a day."

PEOPLE THREATENED WITH LUNG TROUBLE—READ THIS

Copeland Medicine Co., Ltd., Toronto. Dear Sir,—Now that I am well and strong again I write to state that the fact I am alive to-day is witnesses to the merit of your medicine.

My doctor, also another, who is a specialist, said that I had the worst kind of consumption and that it was impossible for me to live. They gave me only eight to ten days before the disease would terminate fatally. They also said, that it was no use in treating me, as I was so far gone.

I was left to die, but a friend of mine told me about your medicine and procured me a bottle. Without much hope, I tried it. It did wonders. First the weakening perspiration stopped and the food I took stayed in the stomach. After a second bottle, I commenced to regain my appetite and was up in a few days of the time that the doctors said I should die. Five weeks later I was at work and have been working ever since.

I wish every one could know the worth of your medicine, especially those afflicted with consumption as I was, for I undoubtedly owe my life to its use. I will, at all times, cheerfully answer any correspondence, and you are at liberty to publish this letter if you think it will help to recommend your medicine to others.—DAVID WARNOCK, 202 Withrow Avenue, Toronto.

Given up as a hopeless case by doctors and specialists and afraid to move him to a Sanitarium for fear that he might die on the way, David Warnock is to-day a well man, following his regular employment day in and day out. He is pronounced by doctors as perfectly healthy and of normal strength—a living witness of the merits of COPELAND'S C. C. C. We have many other letters on file in our office from Ontario people praising C. C. C. as a great relief and cure for all lung troubles.

If you are a sufferer from lingering cough, cold, chronic bronchitis, run-down and weak condition, Consumption, write to us for copies of letters, or ask for addresses, and write the people living in Ontario direct.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S NORFOLK SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

No suit is more popular with boys than the Norfolk. The design which we illustrate makes the construction of this suit a more simple matter than in some arrangements of the same idea.

The yokes which are used in front and back of the coat are applied, and the coat is complete without them, therefore they may be omitted. In like manner the box pleats, which are the characteristic mark of this style, are applied, and these, too, may be omitted. Thus we have a suit which may have the pleats extending to the shoulder with any yoke at all, or may have the yokes without pleats or the pleats in the back only. In this way the same pattern may serve for several developments of the main suggestion.

The sleeves are always the same, plain and fitted loosely to the arm. They are opened at the back of the hand, and a couple of buttons are placed there. The neck has the regulation coat collar, with small revers, and the closing is double breasted. The belt is a matter of choice, and may be worn outside the pleats or passing under them.

Two styles are also possible with the trousers, which may have the edge open at the knee or gathered in bloomer style.

Tailor fabrics are used for these suits, and serge, cheviot, tweed and homespun are among the most popular.

The suit pattern, No. 7424, is cut in sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 54 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending ... to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

Time and history work strange ironies, for the oldest flag in existence to-day is without a country. Banners have flown over nations that rose and decayed and have become all but forgotten, but the flag of the Zionists still lives. Thousands and thousands of Zionists, who are waiting patiently for the day when they shall again have a country of their own, keep somewhere stored away within their homes this banner.

For to them it signifies the unity and the nationalism that once was theirs, but which has vanished. It cries aloud to them of the day when David came riding back from his victories and came down keeping a proud step to the chanting of the women on the housetops: "Davie has slain his ten thousands."

Presumably in the 13th century before Christ the first rude forms of this flag came into existence. When the Hebrews were held against their will in Egypt by Pharaoh the memories of freedom and independence that had been theirs before the days of bondage led them to unify their hopes and aspirations in a banner.

The flag was kept hidden until the mighty throng suddenly arose under the leadership of Moses and marched away back to their own lands. The description of that tremendous movement is all too vague in history. Short paragraphs tell of the surging hosts that, without arms, without provisions, made the long journey back to their homes. This dramatic leave-taking is dismissed with scant chronicles, so that nowhere does the flag that flew at the head of the column receive its due.

The flag was not accepted as the power that it has since become until the days of David. This King, who is the first vitally human being whom history recognizes, had a mysterious coat-of-arms upon his shield. The double triangle may have meant something portentous; it may have meant nothing in particular. At any rate, the mighty King wore it, and made it loved by his people and feared by his enemies. The shepherd boy who rose to be the most commanding figure of his century stirred the imagination and the devotion of his nation exactly as he has stirred readers of the Old Testament to this day.

There was none of the supernatural powers of Moses about him. He was not a seer, a prophet or a priest; he was a doer, an inspired leader, a man with all of the weakness and the strength of a nation within him. He could sing and play; he could sleep at night with the roughest of his soldiers in the wilderness; he could fight and love and hate. He overthrew his enemies as fast as they came; he fell in love with another man's wife, and slyly had the husband killed so that his love might be satisfied.

He led the people with irresistible power and sure success; he did everything that they wished to do better than they could plan, and yet he was not above them. He had come from the ranks, he sinned among them; in the main he was honest, consequently he was popular.

It is easy of comprehension, then, why his shield should have become transferred to the national flag. Some great tribute must be paid him, as when he was gone and his greatest achievements became greater in the telling, the double triangle appeared upon the flag.

Later the blue stripes were added. The priests in the temple of Jerusalem wore robes of bright blue wool. So the color was used because it meant to the people strength, purity; it typified to them their nationality powerful in spiritual things.

A Relief.

A chap had just gone to the Flanders front from the training camp in Devon, and his calmness and cheerfulness under German fire impressed everyone. So much so, in fact, that his corporal declared:

"I never saw a new hand settle right down to it like George."

"Oh," said another recruit, "if you knew George's wife, corporal, you'd understand how the poor fellow enjoys a quiet day among the vitriol sprays and poison-bombs."

They Pegged the Hole.

Lord Coleridge was once the victim of the varsity men at Oxford. He was addressing a large audience there when he used the phrase: "We must remember not merely the beauty of the individual colleges, but the beauty of Oxford as a whole. And what a whole it is!"

"Hear, hear!" yelled the varsity men. "Yes, what a hole!" they groaned. "What a beastly hole!"

Then it dawned upon Lord Coleridge that this was a thing he would rather have expressed otherwise.

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefit from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and see if you may no strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses, might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late. Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches, and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, no better one if you can, and like many others, get clear, healthy strong magnetic eyes, through the prescription here given. The Valmar Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A MAN MAY EAT ANY MEAL

And Digest It Easily If He Will But Try

FREE DIGESTIVE TABLETS

Don't be afraid of your meals. The reason you have dyspepsia is that something is lacking in your digestive apparatus necessary to the stomach's work.

A perfect stomach loves to work. Perfect digestion is not afraid of any meal and benefits by its consumption of food the whole machine of man.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets make easy the work of digestion, because they combine active fruit and vegetable essences which are needed by the stomach.

These essences are so powerful they digest food without aid from the stomach. They have done this with a meal encased in a glass tube.

We will send a trial package to any one free for his name and address.

Eat what you will or when you will then take a Stuart Dyspepsia Tablet and see how you will digest that meal. In a short time your stomach will have a natural supply of gastric juices and your whole system will be able to take care of digestion easily.

Ask any druggist about Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. His answer will tell more than we can say. Ask him how they sell. If you want to buy them give him 50c. But if you want to test them write us and you will receive a trial package by mail without cost. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 218 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

BATTLE PANIC.

Of all the mysteries of war—and there are many—none is more baffling or more elusive to the student of fighting human nature than the way in which blind panic will grip and temporarily paralyze even the most seasoned troops.

However, says a British war correspondent, so far as a comparison of the fighting qualities of the various nations is possible, I should say that the Frenchman is the most susceptible to panic.

The Frenchman's imaginative qualities make him a bonny and enthusiastic fighter, but, just because he has a vivid imagination, is he peculiarly liable to lose his head—and to lose it very badly.

I remember being with the French Foreign Legion during the Moroccan war when, late one night, the goums (native scouts) came galloping back to camp with the news that the Moors were coming on in force.

The alarm, as it so happened, was a false one, but the mischief was done. Suddenly, instantaneously, like the dropping of a great black pall, fear fell upon us, and these hard-bitten, reckless "devils" of the Foreign Legion broke and scattered.

Panic stricken men do not run. They walk, or rather stumble, along, headless of whither they are going, so long as it is away from the enemy. Also, men in the grip of a nameless fear do not cry out. Their tongues, like their limbs, are more or less paralysed.

Another curious characteristic of panic is the fact that, although the retreating men may be fired into and harried and hustled, they will not retaliate. In fact, they seem to wish to be killed.

Eighteen miles did the Foreign Legion walk and stumble across the desert, though no enemy pursued. Then, as suddenly as it had come, fear left them and they pulled up, ashamed to look at their officers, ashamed to look at themselves.

What stops a panic? It is hard to say. As often as not it goes as mysteriously, as inexplicable, as it came. It may be said, however, that it is always the officers who save the situation, beating and taunting the men into manhood again.

During the last Zulu war the late Lord "Bill" Beresford came upon a Tommy who had got a bad attack of funk and was cowering behind a rock. Beresford looked at him and then said: "Your poor, dear old mother would be proud if she could see you, wouldn't she?"

With a snarl the man leaned to his feet, rushed into the thickest of the fray, and fought like a tiger suffering from toothache.

Of all fighting men the British bluejacket or soldier is the least liable to panic. Still, even he does not always escape, although in an experience as a war correspondent which embraced 19 campaigns and 29 pitched battles, I have only once seen the British Tommy thoroughly and utterly demoralised.

This was at the battle of Tamai, when, through a blunder for which Gen. Sir Gerald Graham, V. C., chivalrously assumed a responsibility that was not his, the leading square was ambushed.

It was so neatly trapped that before anything could be done there were 3,000 of the enemy inside the square. Then the men began to give.

There was no shouting, no running, but just a confused, struggling, aimless walk, or roll, to nowhere in particular. This lasted for seven or eight minutes and then a trifling incident caused the cord of fear to snap like a fiddle string.

A wounded Tommy, down in the sand, had got hold of a Dervish round the legs in such a manner that the latter could not use his spear. Some of the men, catching sight of the struggle, called to others to turn and watch it. In a few seconds the square was stationary, and facing inwards, watching the duel.

Slowly, pertinaciously, hanging on like a bulldog, the Tommy—a very powerful man, dragged the Dervish down, stretched him across his knee, and broke his back in two.

Cheer after cheer greeted the feat, and then the late Bennet Burleigh lifted up a most unmusical voice, and bellowed forth, "Rule, Britannia."

That did it. Yell after yell of Homeric laughter burst from the ranks. Then came silence—a grim, terrible silence, as the men spat on their hands and went to the bayonet killing. Of the 3,000 or more Dervishes inside the square not one came out alive; but for about ten minutes it had been touch-and-go with Tommy Atkins.

How She Looked.

"I lost a dollar at the matinee this afternoon," remarked the fleshy woman to her husband, "and I never was so angry in my life."

"How'd it happen?" asked the man.

"I dropped it in the aisle," she answered shortly, "and I looked for it—that's all I could do."

"Did you look good?" persisted the head of the house.

"Did I look good!" shrilled the woman, really angry now. "I looked as good as a fat woman crawling around on all fours ever does."

Excessive Politeness.

Mr. B., who was dining out, had done lavish justice to the good things before him. By way of graceful apology he remarked, with a beaming smile directed toward the hostess, "I've always heard, ma'am, that the highest compliment one can pay the housekeeper is to eat heartily. You observe that I have been exceedingly polite."

"Thank you, Mr. B.," smiled back the hostess. "Indeed, I think you have carried politeness to the point of flattery."

Their Respective Ways.

For a little while they were between the devil and the deep sea. The woman got her some dresses made, and went down to the latter. But the man, after some hesitation, went to the former.

When the Deaf Hear.

It is often said that persons afflicted with certain forms of deafness can hear perfectly in the midst of a tumult. A locomotive engineer was found to be very deaf, and, although he protested that he could hear perfectly well while on his engine, he was suspended from duty. Some time afterwards he applied for reinstatement, again urging the fact of his perfect hearing while on duty. Finally the physician rode with him upon a locomotive and put him to every possible test. To the doctor's surprise he found the man able not only to hear ordinary sounds, but also to distinguish whispers and movements that were inaudible to his companion.

CHANGED HER TACTICS.

She Lacked Beauty, But She Had a Fine Sense of Humour.

There is on the Breton coast a little seaside resort nestled in an admirable setting of rocks and groves and equipped with a Grand hotel of the beach which has been transformed in these sadly changed days into a hospital for the wounded British soldiers; for all that there are other people on the sands besides the convalescent heroes and especially any number of pretty women always ready to lend their help to the doctors in charge. Among these a charming actress was particularly lavish with her attentions to the soldiers. One day when she was present a big dark fellow manifested an invincible repugnance to a bitter dose which by the doctor's orders he was to drink.

"If you are a good boy and do what the doctor tells you," said the dancer, "you may kiss me."

Instantly and with one gulp the big fellow swallowed the stuff, wiped his great moustache and claimed his reward. It was all done so prettily that even the head surgeon permitted himself to smile.

But the real comedy began when the head nurse, a homely matron turning fifty, appeared the next morning and announced:

"Every one of you who takes his medicine will be allowed to kiss me."

The effect was immediate. Each and every patient made a face and put down on the table beside him the dose which he had been about to swallow.

Now the head nurse is goodness itself, and her goodness is well spiced with wit. She was the first to laugh at the result of her invitation. Then she pretended to be angry.

"Very well!" she cried. "Every mother's son of you that hasn't taken his medicine in five minutes will be condemned to kiss me!"

The soldiers laughed in their turn and every glass was hastily picked up and promptly emptied.

Chili Sauce.

Twelve large ripe tomatoes, four ripe or green peppers (remove seeds from peppers), two onions, two tablespoonfuls of salt, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, one cupful of sugar, three cupfuls of vinegar. Peel tomatoes and onions and chop fine. Boil one and a half hours, bottle, and seal hot.

Lincoln's Life Line.

When former Senator Blackburn was a very young man he practiced law for a time in Chicago.

One day in the fifties he was engaged in a case against one of the big lawyers of the city. Blackburn was in straits. He floundered a bit, and a tall, homely man who was reading a newspaper near him gave him a hint. He floundered again, and the tall man gave him another hint.

Then the opposing lawyer jumped up.

"If your honor please," he shouted, "I desire to inquire whether Abraham Lincoln is an attorney of record in this case?"

"I'll answer that," said Mr. Lincoln, the future president. "I am not, but I am too soft hearted to sit here and watch this young man overboard without throwing him a plank!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Ironing and Mending.

For the mother who does her own ironing and mending: Prepare a small bag containing necessary things for mending and sewing on of buttons and fasten it to ironing board. She will be able to sew on buttons and draw up little rips that will make her pile of mending smaller. If she could train herself to sit on a high stool as much as possible while working she will not be so tired at the end of a day's work. Exchange.

ANOTHER WARNING WILL BE SENT TO GREECE

17,000 Serbs Captured Says The Enemy's Statement

Berlin Claims Much Booty Was Taken in the Capture of Prizend

Many Prisoners and Cannon Said to Have Fallen Into the Hands of the Victors in the Capture of Serbian City ---Serbians Are Being Pursued Into Albania is the Claim of a Berlin Bulletin---French Aviators Busy on Western Front.

SWEDISH STEAMER SUNK BY SUBMARINE

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The fight for Prizrend was short and resulted in the capture of 15,000 to 17,000 Serbs, fifty field cannon and Howitzers, 20,000 rifles, 100 automobiles and quantities of war material.

BERLIN, Via London, Dec. 1.—Teutonic and Bulgarian troops are across the Serbian frontier to-day, pursuing the fleeing Serbian army southward through the Albanian mountains. The Serbs are making no further organized resistance. Small bands of desperate men descend on the pursuing forces at every opportunity. The country is so broken that opportunities for ambushes are numerous. In this way detached parties of the invading troops have had many bloody engagements. The Bulgarians are most numerous in this pursuit. Every effort is made to hold them in a compact body as a precaution against loss of straggiers by the Serb guerillas. In the mountains, however, some breaking of the ranks is unavoidable. It has cost the Bulgars heavily. The purpose of the pursuit through Albania is to prevent the Serbs from joining the Southern army.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—(French Official Communique).—Retaliating for a German attempt to blow up a French position by the ineffective explosion of a mine, the French artillery has bombarded the Kaiser's line violently in the vicinity of Frise, in the Somme region, to-day's official communique declares. French aviators were reported active. One dropped six bombs on the railroad station at Lens. A second gave battle in the air to a German airman and brought him down. A third pursued one of the Kaiser's Taube's to Douai. Mining activity, said the report, was the chief feature of the Dardanelles fighting. One Turkish post was blown up and the Ottoman forces were compelled to abandon their position at Sap.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—King Peter of Serbia fled on horseback from Prizrend on Sunday afternoon, the day before the Bulgars captured the town, according to a Sofia telegram received here to-day. Where he is bound the Bulgars do not know. With him in his flight is Prince Troubetzkoy, the Russian Ambassador to Serbia.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—"Britain's shoulders are broad enough to bear its tremendous burden, but at the most thrift is imperatively needed." Premier Asquith thus urged economy to the trade union leaders in consultation with the Cabinet to-day. He declared that wage-earners were better off than before the war, even allowing for the fact that food and clothing had increased from thirty to forty per cent. in price. Chancellor of the Exchequer McKenna pointed out that the Government had taken fifty per cent. of increased profits from the rich. He urged wage-earners to give up fifty per cent. of their excess earnings for the war loan which would shortly be floated by the Government.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The Finance Minister of Austria is thought likely to have surrendered his portfolio because unable to raise money to continue the struggle. The Interior Minister is presumed to have retired through inability to organize for distribution satisfactorily perhaps because he could not cope with the outbreaks of popular discontent. The Commerce Minister, it is suggested, undoubtedly was called into consultation with the heads of both other departments in connection with the country's industries. From the fact that he resigned, it is taken for granted that he agreed with them.

These were surmises. Vienna despatches offered no explanation. It is agreed that the resignations hint at an increasingly serious situation in Austro-Hungary.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 1.—Fresh demands that the Reichstag members be permitted to discuss peace terms are contained in copies of the Berliner Vorwaerts received here to-day. The paper, Germany's leading Socialist organ, maintains that only in this way can the public be kept informed so as to support the Government when negotiations are begun. It argues that the Government's own good calls for no interference with the freedom of debate.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Declaring that German warships are searching all Sweedish ships on their way from the Baltic, the Foreign Office charged the Berlin Government to-day with a violation of the freedom of the seas, "with which the Kaiser loudly accused England." The searches, it was stated, are made at the entrance to the sound which leads from the Baltic to the Cattegat, Skager Rak and the North Sea.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Dr. Karl Buenz, managing director of the Hamburg-American Line, testified in his own defence to-day that he had directed scrupulous observance of all American laws in clearing vessels from American ports to furnish supplies to German warships. "We wanted our ships to go to their stated destinations even if they were emptied of their cargoes by warships met at sea," said Buenz.

"I knew New York was full of spies for the Allies," said Buenz, explaining why ships were not cleared in the name of the Hamburg-American Line.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—It is officially announced to-day that the number of British prisoners in Germany, including Canadians, was thirty-three thousand officers and men.

THE RELEASE OF CHAS. BREWER AGAIN HELD UP

Second Attempt to Secure the Freedom of Local Man on Bail Resulted in Failure This Morning

BONDSMEN NOT THERE

This morning a second attempt was made to effect the release on bail of Charles Brewer, who is awaiting trial in the county gaol on a charge of attempting to murder his wife. The application was made by Mr. G. N. Gordon before Magistrate Dumble and Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., Justice of the Peace. Mr. Gordon's authority was vested in an order made by Mr. Justice Middleton. Mr. G. W. Hatton, who appeared for the Crown, contended that evidence other than a doctor's certificate should be produced in justification of Brewer's release. He cited the case of a man residing near Chatham who killed his wife and then committed suicide following his release on bail while awaiting trial for a serious offence. "We don't want anything like that here," said Crown Attorney Hatton. Both Mr Hatton and Mr. Gordon agreed that Brewer's mental condition was not an issue in connection with the application for release. The order merely called for a physical examination to determine whether Brewer's condition justified his release. Brewer is said to be suffering from a hardening of the arteries. Dr. O. H. Amys, who has attended the prisoner since he made the attempt on his life, said that such a condition might have a mental effect on the prisoner.

The question of including a clause in the order binding Brewer over to keep the peace was then taken up, and contested by Mr. Gordon.

The case was further deferred owing to the absence of the necessary bondsmen who are required to furnish four thousand dollars in sureties of one thousand dollars each.

"THE WHITE FEATHER" HERE NEXT WEDNESDAY

The British War Office drama, "The White Feather," which has scored the most phenomenal success in the history of the English-speaking stage, will be the offering at the Grand next Wednesday, Dec. 8. "The White Feather" has already reached its second year in London and is still playing there, and has passed the sixth month of its career of phenomenal business in Australia. It played for one solid year in New York. "The White Feather" is a stirring, melodramatic comedy with many thrills and surprises through its three acts, with the best thrillls held in reserve till the end. The theme of the play, revolving around the present European war, makes its appearance of timely interest to Englishmen and Canadians. This is not a moving picture.

SERGT. ALLEN AT QUEBEC

Well Known Peterboro' Member of the 4th Battery Arrived on the Corsican and Will Be Home in a Few Days

WAS BADLY INJURED

Word has been received by Mrs. Allan, Chamberlen Street, that her husband, Sergt. Geo. Allan, of the 4th Battery, 1st Artillery Brigade, First Canadian Contingent, was one of the wounded Canadians who arrived at Quebec on the Allan liner Corsican the other day.

Sergt. Allan is expected home in a short time. He is one of the best known Peterborough boys with the First Contingent Canadian Artillery, and was the first to appear on the casualty list, being seriously wounded by a bursting shell soon after the 4th Battery went to France. He was a member of the St. George's (Peterborough) Choral Society, and served on the executive committee.

"THE LAST JUDGMENT" FRIDAY EVENING

Will Be Given to the Public in George Street Methodist Church

The oratorio, "The Last Judgment," is to be presented on Tuesday evening next in George Street Methodist Church, under the direction of Mr. J. H. Renwick, who has been so successful in his productions to the Peterborough music lovers.

His selection of soloists is most pleasing, and a very large audience will no doubt be present.

The proceeds will be handed to the Patriotic Fund.

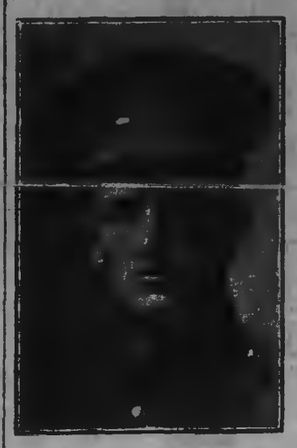
THE COUNTY COUNCIL URGED TO GIVE MORE ASSISTANCE TO PATRIOTIC FUND



CORP. HUBERT N. STUART, 781 Stewart street, who is now in England with the draft company from the 50th Battalion, C.E.F.

PTE. LESLIE JEWELL, Peterborough boy with the 39th, who was reported seriously ill. Later reports say that he is improving.

Big Deputation Representative of All Parts of the County Waited Upon the Legislators at the Court House This Afternoon and Asked For Large Grant.

ADDRESSES WERE MADE.

Representative farmers, virtually from every corner of the country composed an unique and significant delegation to the County Council this afternoon. They were there to strengthen the already strong spirit of the Council in meeting an emergency that calls for self-sacrificing action, and the enlistment of every form of means to enable Canada, the Empire and our Allies to wage a war in our interests; for the preservation of our liberties, as well as the welfare of the world at large. The deputation was a demonstration of the reality of four self-government, the people demanding of their representatives a high fulfilment of their trust and an adequate recognition of their responsibilities. The people themselves directly demanding the opportunity to do thier dudty, by assuming an extraordinary responsibility in contributing to the financial sinews of success in waging a righteous war for a righteous cause is a wholesome thing. The speakers of the deputation had the right ring, and shewed the spirit of co-operation and comparative sacrifice in no unmistakeable manner. If the members of the Council needed a new warrant, a new commission, an opportunity to interpret in action the wishes and will and patriotic spirit of the people they represent, they had them in the admirable addresses of the members of the deputation; and that they appreciated this opportunity, and felt their responsibility or had a deep interest, was shown by the respectful attention given to the representatives of the deputation.

Organized This Morning.

Mr. D. S. Campbell, who was chairman of this morning's organization meeting of the county deputation, has a son in khaki. He had come 53 miles, not with any idea that the Council needed to be told their duty but in order to support them as much as possible in view of the fact that there were certain people scattered throughout the townships who were adverse to giving to the Patriotic Fund. Mr. Campbell said he was willing to support it to his last cent if necessary, and desired to assure his reeve of that intention.

Captain J. H. Burnham was accorded a cordial reception by the county representatives. He spoke of the very serious situation before the Empire and of the splendid response Canada and Canadians had given. The men from this district had been assured that their dependents would be cared for; hence, the Patriotic Fund must be maintained. Capt. Burnham referred to the care and attention that had been bestowed upon the administration of this Fund. We did not expect that we would now have 105,000 men overseas, but the greater sacrifice we have made, the more have we found ourselves willing and able to do it. Capt. Burnham stated that our country was learning gradually how to deal with a situation which had never before confronted her, hence we must overlook the little causes of impatience. It is our duty to be patient.

Caring for County Dependents.

In reply to several inquiries, Mr. F. H. Dobbin stated that over $700 a month was being paid a short time ago to the families of soldiers who have enlisted from the county. Since that time eight or ten other families have been put on the list. The people promised the men that their families would be cared for and the Patriotic Fund served to provide home conditions at least as good as those which existed before the husband enlisted. The grant from this Fund augmented the separation allowance and went to

LOCAL SOLDIERS ARE NOW HOUSED IN THEIR WINTER HOME

93rd Men Are Settling Down in Their Quarters and Getting Acquainted With the Conditions of a Soldier's Life—Number of Transfers Announced in Orders To-day Muster Parade To-morrow Morning—To-day's Military News.

Peterborough soldiers are to-day trying to settle down into the regular routine of barrack life. The 93rd occupied their sleeping quarters in the Armouries for the first time last night, and this morning started on the barracks schedule, being out on the parade ground for physical drill at 6:30 o'clock. Breakfast and dinner passed off quietly, and the latter meal was particularly enjoyed, Sergt. Cook Wride and his staff having prepared an appetizing repast. Major Cameron, A.M.C., inspected the kitchen just before the noon-day meal was served, and expressed himself as very well pleased with the arrangements.

The Examiner has received the following letter:

Dear Sir,—Seeing in your paper about Pte. Arthur Phipps, I thought I would write and tell you I had great pleasure in seeing him when he was in Broadstairs Hospital, and am pleased to think the people of Peterborough think something of us boys who have come over and left everything to do our little bit. I hope every one will come and help us along. I was very pleased to hear that Pte. Phipps got such a good reception, and I hope we all will get the same if we may have the luck to get through all right. Pte. Brinton has joined up again, and is now stationed at west Sandling camp with the 39th Battalion. He is batman to Major Carruthers. I used to belong to the 39th, and am now transferred to the C.A.M.C., C.E.F. We are all Peterborough boys who have come here to do our best and to make Peterborough proud of us. It won't be our fault if we don't. Hoping you will insert this in your valuable paper to let the people see that we get a little news from our papers if we are away from home.

PTE. JAMES WILSON,

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

Under normal conditions this would be a normal time to press home the injunction of "do Christmas shopping early." But this year it would be out of place and unnecessary if we took the right view of things, were animated by the true Christmas spirit. All the Christmas shopping that we can justify, has already been done — in preparing parcels for the Peterborough and Canadian boys in the battle line, or in training camps abroad. These have already been shipped or are on the point of shipping if they are to reach their billet on Christmas day. We can't do very much more to show our gratitude and keep the Christmas spirit than what we should do for our soldier boys. While the giving of Christmas presents is a beautiful and significant thing in theory, its central object has, to a very regrettable extent, long since degenerated into a business matter — the exchange of Christmas presents, in which as close account is kept of gift debts to be paid as is done in a business office. Millions are spent in Canada every December or thereabouts in giving gifts to those who do not need them, and as a mere form of ostentation, often imposing embarrassing obligations on recipients. This condition of war makes extraordinary demands upon us all. There is so much suffering, so much misery, demanding almost limitless means for relief, that we should preserve our available money for meeting to the fullest extent, insistent demands. We have too much good use for our money to spend it in ways that only mean, in many cases, deference to a custom prostituted from its noble and holy meaning. At this time our Christmas giving should take a patriotic and really benevolent way—and be concordant with the Christmas spirit.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE.

It is proverbially asserted that "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." This means that what is fair play or justice for one, is the same for another—in a word it is an invitation to the doctor to take his own medicine. At a meeting of the Ontario Medical Commission, the action of the physicians in controlling or combatting "drugless" treatment of disease was discussed. Patent medicines also were put "on the carpet" for a little turn. At the conclusion of a little sparring between Commissioner Hodgins and the counsel for the physicians, Mr. Hodgins, the commissioner, "startled the court," (so the report reads), with a suggestion that > "Doctors, too, might be regulated in the matter of charges. There is nothing to prevent a doctor charging as much as he likes."

This in itself implies a serious charge. While we all recognize the important place and services of the doctors in the social economy, there is a general consensus of opinion that the disbursements on account of their services have an inverse ratio to personal economy in the matter of providing in cold cash the equivalent of scientific salvation from the calamity of dying a natural death. It is a difficult thing to appraise the value of a doctor's services, though, if we were sure of the facts, the saying "that all that a man hath will he give for his life," might help the solution of the question. At any rate, when doctors are so keen as they should be against all forms of quack salving—if they exact the pound of flesh — they should not be startled as Commissioner Hodgins "startled the court," by a suggestion that "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

STILL IN DEBT.

The Toronto World gives a choice in guessing the motives that influenced the Government in commandeering from 15 million to 20 million bushels of Canadian wheat. It was either a desire to prevent the achievement of speculators' profit, to an undesirable degree or "an evident desire of Britain on her behalf and allies, to give a preference on Canadian wheat." Either one of these aims would have justified the action. If the object influencing the seizure, was to prevent nationally injurious speculation, it argues a belated adoption of a policy that was not applied in time to prevent speculation in the matter of providing war munitions, and wickedly enormous profits. If the object of the seizure was on the instigation of Britain to pay back her debt of trade preference, a becoming sense of recognition and gratitude is revealed. Nearly twenty years ago — in 1897 — the Liberal Government of Canada, under the leadership of that staunch imperialist, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, gave Great Britain a liberal preference for her products in the Canadian market. Now if Britain has engineered a preferential treatment of Canadian wheat, in a strictly bookkeeping sense, the account is balanced, though on the score of favours, Canada, even with the Fielding preference, was very deeply in Britain's debt. She has done more for Canada than ever Canada can do for her. Our big contribution to the Empire's strength (in waging this war is a dutiful, if small, off-set to the benefits of the protection Great Britain has given us all these years, especially with her navy, when Canada refused to lift a finger to help herself by building a navy of her own as Australia has done. If Britain has desired to show a preference for Canadian wheat, if only as a measure of war we can be, and are, grateful for it, though it adds to the infinite tale of obligations to the Mother Country under which we lie. Though we send armies of the best soldiers that fight, though we sell millions of wheat at a fair price, we shall continue to be in Britain's debt.

A ROYAL REPUBLIC.

It has often been remarked that Great Britain has more of the true and full spirit of democratic liberty than some countries which, being republics, are regarded as making a specialty of the highest brand of freedom. We have at times pointed out that in the matter of responsible and representative government Great Britain is infinitely ahead of the United States or any other republic in existence. And specialists in freedom, have long noted it. It was recognized by that radical of radicals, Garibaldi, nearly half a century ago. A paragraph taken from a sketch of Lord Redesdale, a noted British diplomat, is as follows:

> In 1870 Lord Redesdale, in company with the Duke of Sutherland and Sir William Russell, the famous war correspondent, visited Garibaldi at Caprera. The old patriot talked in the most friendly way of England, for which he entertained sincere admiration:
> "Suddenly he turned around and said: 'Is it true — is it possible that it can be true—that there are actually in England people who are desirous of abolishing the existing order of things and setting up a Republic in the place of your Monarchy?' I said that there certainly were a few people who seemed to think that to do away with the Monarchy and the aristocracy and to set up a Republic was the panacea for all human ills. 'They must be fools!' he said, and then went on very earnestly: 'Why, in England you have the finst form of government in the world—a Republic of which the President rules by the will of the people, and being hereditary depends upon no political cry of the moment. With you by virtue of this heredity principle there is not the continual danger of some one saying 'Ote-toi de la que je m'y mette'—and so no perptual risk of upheavals. I only wish that I could see Italy blessed with such a republic; then I should be quite content.'"

Great Britain is the cradle and fountain of true liberty. That has made her great, and is the secret of the fact that she is morally, as well as materially the most dominant force in the world. British liberty and its accompanying characteristics are the cause of this war, not the provocative cause, but the inevitable cause. With her ideals of liberty, with her sense of moral obligation, with her sense of civilization, due to her spirit, she would have found it impossible not to take up the cudgel for a weak nation whose liberties were brutally attacked and outraged. And when the war is over we shall find that the spirit of British liberty, its true freedom, will not be confined to her sea girt self and her vast outlying Empire, but will have become a possession of other nations; an inspiration and motive that will go far to prevent the tyranny, that will have been destroyed, from again gaining a foothold, or an important influence in Europe or elsewhere in the world.

RED CROSS EFFICIENCY AND THE ENDLESS CALL FOR MAINTAINING IT AT HIGHEST POSSIBLE POINT

There has been a great deal of comment from a great many quarters as to the efficiency of the Red Cross. In fact, the Red Cross has received so much praise that a sceptic might be inclined to suspect that a great deal of it is extravagant. Certainly if all our knowledge of the workings nurses, doctors, and orderlies who are responsible for the success of the organization, the public might discount a certain amount of Red Cross eulogy as a form of self-praise.

When, however, the soldier whom the Red Cross exists to preserve pronounces a favourable verdict, even the coldest cynic is forced to acknowledge the extraordinary efficiency and perfection of the work which the Red Cross Society is carrying out.

A letter sent recently to the Head of the British Red Cross by Sir Alfred Keogh, who is Director-General of the Army Medical Services, is typical of the Army's verdict upon the Red Cross. "I wish to congratulate you," he says, "upon all that has been accomplished. Immense progress has been made. Although this is not the time for a final appraisement of the work of your Society, I should like to mention the very manifest improvements which have taken place in the business side of the organization, due to the selection of men of proved capacity and wide experience for the purpose of administering the affairs of what has become the largest Red Cross Society in the world. It is clear that you possess an organization fully effective for any emergency."

The full force of that efficiency is only available on condition of the earnest cooperation of the whole civilian population. The Red Cross has no magical formula for working without funds. It is merely an efficient channel for the conveyance to the troops in the field tangible evidence of the sympathy of the non-combatant population. The success of the Red Cross redounds to the credit of our whole country. Any diminution in its efforts would be a disgrace to all of us.

The Red Cross Argument.

There is no debater, however skilled, who would not be sadly at a loss for an argument if he had to take the negative side of a debate as to the wisdom of supporting the Red Cross.

It is difficult to conceive of any valid reason for refusing assistance to the Canadian Red Cross. The overpowering logic behind every Red Cross appeal is the irresistible logic of human suffering. That is the one invincible Red Cross argument.

When you turn a deaf ear to a Red Cross appeal you are like the Levite whose inhumanity brings out in strong relief the virtue of the good Samaritan. There is no sophistry so great as the sophistry which wriggles out of our plain human duty to relieve the endless physical suffering which is the lamentable aftermath of battle. There is no optimism so ghastly as the complacent optimism which asserts that the Red Cross is amply provided for, and that the war's casualties are ridiculously exaggerated.

Indifference to the needs of the Red Cross is in anyone a sure indication of inhuman levity and cynicism. The duty of the civilian non-combatant at this time is, above all, the duty of binding up the wounds of those who are combatants.

The Red Cross argument is a simple assertion of this creed, that it is the duty of the non-combatant to mitigate the soldier's suffering.

Red Cross Ambulance Transport.

Undoubtedly the work of ambulance transport is one of the greatest Red Cross achievements during the war. There are to-day over 650 motor ambulances at work with the British and Canadian troops in France. This includes two complete convoys of 50 cars at the actual Front, a double convoy at Boulogne, and other units at Havre and Rouen. The Boulogne convoy is stationed in a large building formerly used for a fishery exhibit. This has been turned into an immense garage, which shelters all the cars of the base. There is also a huge repair shop fitted up with the most modern machinery. Complete records are kept of each journey made by each ambulance and touring car.

Ninety cars are always in readiness for instant service. They are divided into sections of eighteen. Inside of two minutes after a call has been received, the whole ninety cars are in motion to the central railway station to attend to their work of transport between train and hospital. In March, 33,941 patients were handled. In May, after the second battle of Ypres, 7,000 wounded were handled in one day in Boulogne alone.

The convoys which work at the Front, are under direct military command. It is their duty to go to the field hospitals and to transport the wounded who have been brought the previous night from first-aid posts Sometimes they go up to the first-aid posts themselves, and so come under fire.

This war has proved that the motor ambulance car is absolutely essential. It is not a luxury. It is a necessity It is as much a Red Cross requirement as are bandages and surgical dressings. The motor ambulance transports the wounded swiftly and painlessly. It saves time and decreases the jar of movement, and it is estimated by competent medical observers that it has cut the mortality rate in half. One of the most useful gifts that can be made to the Canadian Red Cross Society is a motor ambulance.

HOW LONG?

The report of a horrible domestic tragedy near Chatham, in which a drink-crazed man beat his wife to death and afterwards hanged himself, states that the murderer "went home last night in a partly intoxicated condition, and this morning continued drinking." How much longer will Ontario stand for the curse of civilization?—Globe.

NEW ENGLAND SUPPER.

A New England Supper will be held from 6 to 7.30 to-morrow evening at St. George's Church. Concert at 8 Chair will be taken by Col. T. J. Johnston. Interesting talk by Sergt Jones, of the 93rd, on his experiences at the Dardanelles when a sailor on board a British warship. This will be the first description of the Dardanelles in Peterborough by a man who has been there.

WORK IS MIGHTIER THAN TALK.

What is the value of Sir George E. Foster's thinking as applied to the advantages so far secured by the combatants in the great war? The value of Sir George E. Foster's thinking on the subject of war, can be measured by the results of Sir George E. Foster's thinking on the subject of his own Department of Trade and Commerce.

The unfruitfulness of Sir George E. Foster's thinking may be due to the smallness of Sir Robert Borden's leadership or to the inadequate initiative of Sir Robert Borden's Minister of Trade and Commerce.

That Sir George E. Foster's thinking on the subject of his own public business is unfruitful and ineffective is a truth proclaimed in the tones of Canada's inability to secure or take care of more than $3,000,000 per week in British war orders when these orders are going to the United States at the rate of $100,000,000 per week.

If, "after fifteen months of war the advantage is with Germany," the balance of advantage might be changed in favour of Britain and her allies, by Sir George E. Foster's WORK at Ottawa, quicker than by Sir George E. Foster's TALK on any platform.—Toronto Telegram (Conservative.)

NEEDN'T BELIEVE IN GOD.

In Order to Sit on a Jury in Quebec, Judge Decides.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—Belief or disbelief in God does not debar a man from sitting on a jury, and his affirmative is of the same value as the oath of the other man, decided Mr. Justice Panneton in the Superior Court, when one of the jurymen chosen for the case of Guthrie vs. the Montreal Baseball Club, told the Court he did not believe in God.

Expansion.

A very stout fellow once presented himself to Sir Francis Burdett and asked him if he had a situation to give him.

"I do not know you," said Sir Francis, looking at him.

"Why, have you forgotten me?" said the fellow. "I was formerly a page in your house."

"My dear boy," said the baronet, "you have become a volume!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Minuteness of Molecules.

Molecules are so minute that there are about a sextillion of them in a cubic inch of air. These at freezing temperature oscillate back and forth at the rate of 1,470 feet a second. The average length of their path between oscillations is about one two-hundred and seventy-seven thousandth of an inch. Each comes into collision with its fellows about 5,000,000 times a second.

A Long Message.

The longest item of news ever telegraphed to a newspaper was the entire New Testament as revised, which was sent from New York to a Chicago newspaper for May 22, 1880. That issue of the paper comprised twenty pages, sixteen of which were taken up by the New Testament.

Ages of German Generals.

Too old at 40, or at 50 either, has as a rule, no meaning in connection with the higher commands in the German army. Haeseler and Von der Goltz are 79 and 78 years of age respectively; Von Hindenburg and Von Mackensen are 68 and 66; Von Kluck is 69, and of the same age are Prince Leopold of Bavaria and the Gen. Von Below and Von Hausen. Von Bissing and Von Falkenhausen are each 71. Weyrsch, Eichhorn, Emmich, Moltke are 67, and the following have the number of years stated after them: Linsingen, 65; Heeringen, 65; Scholtz, 64; Gallwitz, 63; Below, 62; Einem, 62; Falkenhayn, chief of general staff, 54. The Crown Princes of Wurtemberg, Bavaria, and Prussia, commanding armies, are respectively 50, 46, and 33 years of age. The latter would seem to be quite an exception.

Bilkins' Camera.

Not long ago there was an exhibition of the work of a local photographic club to which the young fellow belongs, and where were displayed the results of certain of his efforts to immortalise his family and friends. In one corner hung a group of figures twisted into the most extraordinary positions, the general effect being that of persons in various stages of paralysis.

"Who in the world are those queer-looking people?" asked someone.

"Oh, those are some of Bilkins' strained relations," said a bystander.

Tuxedo Hears War Lecture

Mr. Frederick Palmer Says Men of Wealth Should Lead in Fight for Home Defence

TUXEDO PARK, N.Y., Dec. 1. — Mr. Frederick Palmer, for a year American correspondent with the British army and the only writer besides Mr. Kipling to inspect the British fleet, delivered an illustrated lecture to a Tuxedo audience which filled the club ballroom. Mr. Palmer told the members of the Tuxedo society that places like Tuxedo should take the lead in home defence. They have the most at stake, he said.

When some one remarked to a member of the Stock Exchange battalion of the new British army, who had an income of $360,000 a year, the inconsistency of his serving as a private he replied, according to Mr. Palmer, "I'm the very one who ought to expect to enlist. I'm fighting for my twenty thousand pounds a year. I oughtn't to expect the fellow who is getting two pounds a week to do my fighting for me."

In England, France and Germany the so-called upper classes, the men of wealth, of family, of standing, have taken the lead in offering their lives to their country," Mr. Palmer declared. "At Oxford and Cambridge any able bodied student who did not offer himself would have been an outcast. In no class has the death rate been so great as among the students and the graduates of the universities.

"Well, I recall a walk I took over an English country estate one day with Captain Francis Grenfell, cavalry man and possessor of a host of friends, who won the Victoria Cross for saving the guns at Mons, and was home recovering from his wounds. As he looked out over the Thames Valley he said: "That is what we are fighting for. Life has been sweet to me, the world has been good to me—that is, England has been good to me. My life is the least I can give to her."

Class Members Were Entertained

Keene Items of Interest—Curling Club Elects Officers

KEENE, Dec. 1.—The members of the Willing Workers' B.B. Class of the Methodist Sunday School were entertained at the home of their teacher, Mrs. H. McLachlan, last Thursday evening. The time was delightfully spent in all sorts of games and enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. Thomas O'Neil, who spent the past week with her mother, Mrs. Martin Kennealey, returned to her home at Hastings on Saturday.

Mrs. L. Burley and little daughter, Annie, spent a few days the past week with Peterborough friends.

Mr. Hugh McFee and sister, Miss Hazel, spent Sunday at Mr. Porter's, on the 6th Line.

Mrs. William Kempt and daughter, Miss Lois, went shopping in Peterborough last Wednesday.

Mr. L. Hart spent the week-end at his home near Lindsay.

Mr. William Brown has accepted the position as clerk for the firm of Anderson & Skinner.

The Ladies' Patriotic Society are planning to give a ball early in January for the benefit of the society.

Mrs. J. D. Brown and son, William, spent Monday in Peterborough.

Privates J. Milne and J. J. Moore of Peterborough spent the week-end with their families.

Miss Josephine Kennealley returned home last Wednesday from Peterborough, where she spent a few days with friends.

Miss Maggie Bolin was home from St. Joseph's Academy, Lindsay, to to attend the Quinn-Dorris wedding last Tuesday.

Officers Elected.

On Friday evening, 31st November, a meeting of the Keene Curling Club was held at the Victoria. The following officers were elected for the year:

Pres.—Robert Nelson.

Vice-President—Robert E. McIntyre.

Secy.-Treas.—Joseph McCartney.

We are pleased Mr. Z. Tucker, who has been quite ill for some time, is getting along very nicely.

Mr. Robert Brown has the management of the Keene Skating and Curling Rink for this season, and is busy preparing to make ice for the season's sport.

Mrs. William Wedlock, Sr., visited friends at Peterborough a few days the past week.

WILL YOU HELP

THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND APPEALS TO YOU ON ITS RECORD!

For Details of the Plan of Campaign See Succeeding Publicity Announcements

For 12 months its directors have administered the monies freely given for the wife or mother and soldier's family. It is the organization that provides for the family a decent scale of living. With most patriotic citizens the only question is "HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE." We consider the extent of the need and the ability of the contributor.

By Christmas we shall have 35,000 families on the Fund. Hence the need is great.

Five million dollars were expended the first year.

NINE MILLIONS ARE NEEDED NOW.

Men who can should go and fight, and those who cannot fight should pay. Those who will do neither are unworthy of the liberties they enjoy, and for which men by the thousands are dying.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND APPEALS TO YOU. IT IS FOR YOU TO SAY IF IT APPEALS IN VAIN.

ST. ANDREW'S NIGHT AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

A Scotch Supper Followed by Music and Singing—A Highly Successful Gathering

And it was crowded even to the doors! Such was the state of affairs at St. Andrew's Sunday school-house last evening when the 'Examiner' representative walked in shortly after six. Not only should the "standing room only" boards have been out, but the "house full" as well, did the good Presbyterians worshipping at St. Andrew's church possess them. Of course, no one was turned away! "Let them all come" was the slogan and the overflow waited their turns for supper, in the commodious, and well-warmed and lighted church.

Hundreds were present to enjoy the Scotch tea (or supper) which was provided. The tables were well laid out and plenteously and prettily decorated with flowers. As soon as the first contingent were seated and ready for action, a flourish—not of trumpets but—of bagpipes was heard. At the head of a procession marched Mr. Robert Yeaman, chief bagpiper to the establishment. He was followed by a damsel bearing on high a huge dish containing several haggis, reminding one somewhat of the Christmas procession of the Boar's Head, in the Old Country. The 'haggis' was followed by a long procession of matrons and maids all dressed in white, with red "fixings" bearing the Red Cross on their arms. The supper, which was very bounteous, was a cold collation supplemented by the hot'haggis.'

While the late comers were at the tables Mr. Herbert C. Treneer gave a most enjoyable organ recital.

Captain Rollins occupied the chair for the programme which followed. These were the numberes:

Song—Lieut. Raymond, 93rd.
Bagpipes selection—Robert Yeaman.
Quartette, "Blue Bells of Scotland," "The Soldier's Farewell," 93rd Battalion Band quartette, (Ptes. Bradley, Miller, Payton and Smith).
Concertino solo—Pte. Loader, 93rd.
Solo—Miss Helen MacLaren.
Saxaphone solo—Pte. J. James, 93rd Band.
Address — Rev. Mr. Maconochie, Centreville.
Solo—Miss Stevens.
Solo, "Keep the Home Fires Burning"—Miss MacLaren.

TORONTO DOCTOR REPAIRS LIMB UPSET BY GERMANS

Lieut.-Col. T. B. Richardson, Head of Camp Hospital, Applies Miraculous Surgery to Leg of Pte. A. Gibbons—Neglected in German Prison Camp

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—The first operation in the attempt to save the leg of Pte. Arthur Gibbons, a Toronto youth of the 3rd Battalion, and to undo, if possible, the botched work of German surgeons in the prison camp at Giessen, Germany, was successfully performed by Lieut.-Col. T. B. Richardson, camp hospital commandant, at Exhibition camp.

Pte. Gibbons, still in his teens, was wounded in the battle of St. Julien last April. A bullet smashed his right thigh bone and severed the nerve tissue. Unable to get back behind the Canadian lines, Gibbons lay helpless on the field and was captured by the Germans and sent to the prison camp at Giessen. The German doctors made no effort properly to reset the fractured bone. Like many other Canadians who needed medical attention, Gibbons was left to his own fate. He lay on a pile of straw on the prison floor for over four months with a crude plaster encasement on his hip and the fractured bone not properly set in place to knit. The shattered pieces of bone and tissue had congealed together into a hard callous mass and healed. When he was able to walk, his leg was three inches shorter than the other. The bone had been roughly and crudely set, and consequently the lower portion of the leg and his foot were paralyzed. It was useless and dead, and he was forced to walk on crutches. In an exchange of prisoners, Gibbons was returned to England, and then sent home to Toronto permanently disabled.

Decided to Have Leg Amputated.

After suffering much pain at home for some time, he came to the camp hospital fully determined to have the leg amputated. "Wait awhile," said Colonel Richardson. "We will see what can be done, without amputation."

Gibbons was sent to the General Hospital, where an X-ray picture of the badly set bone was taken. And yesterday Col. Richardson started out with his mind fully made up that careful application and care could not only save the leg, but eventually render it "just as good as ever."

The first operation performed yesterday was to remove the dead nerve matter that had congealed and formed a crust around the swollen fracture. This was done, and the live nerves in the upper part of the hip above the fracture were joined to the lower nerves, which are apparently dead, as Gibbons' leg is lifeless. Whether the nerves in the lower part of the limb will respond to the live centres can only be determined by time. The nerves may begin grow together, but Col. Richardson is hopeful, and is of the opinion that they will.

Nerves Were Joined.

"Time will tell," said the colonel. "The nerves might respond in a month, may be a year; it all depends."

If they do, Gibbons will recover the use of his leg. When he does, another operation will have to be performed—an operation just as delicate and as serious as the one he passed through yesterday. The bone, on account of being improperly set, due without doubt to carelessness on the part of the German doctors, has overlapped about 3 inches, and the fracture has been allowed to knit together in this clumsy manner. When the nerves are properly grown together, providing the operation has restored the function of the nerve and circulation in the limb Colonel Richardson will operate on the leg and transplant about 3 inches of bone to the thigh.

Will Graft On New Bone.

To do this he will remove all the hard callous and scar tissue and chisel the bone. Should this prove successful, as all of the 230 operations performed by Colonel Richardson have done heretofore this year, Gibbons will be whole. It will only mean rest, probably many months in bed, with careful attention.

Private Gibbons' case is being closely watched by specialists and surgeons. If the operation is successful and Gibbons recovers the use of his limb, it will be a triumph for Canadian surgery. George Gibbons has suffered unknown pain and hardship since he fell in action last April. But the thought of being able at some future date to use his leg, after having made up his mind to have it amputated, has made him nearly forget his sufferings at the hands of the Germans.

Handled Similar Case Yesterday.

Another interesting case, similar in substance and fact, which was operated upon yesterday was that of Lance-Corp. E. Spademan, formerly of the 36th Peel, 4th Battalion, also a victim of German doctors wanton neglect.

Spademan was wounded in the arm at Ypres. He was shot through the forearm, and when the Germans had treated his wound his arm and hand were contracted, and he was unable to open his hand. The scar tissue underneath the wound caused contraction of the muscles, and Spademan's hand was useless. Col. Richardson opened the wound and was successful in properly replacing the nerve so that in time Spademan can open his hand.

Nursing sisters are also doing good work at the hospital. Sister Gertrude Ross, an expert masseuse, has done some excellent work; and in one case where a man was suffering from a stiff muscle in the arm caused by fragments of shrapnel, she applied treatment and he is now able to perform any work with his arm and hand.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—The wave of temperance which is sweeping over the country is indicated in the figures of tobacco and liquor consumption published anew in detailed form in the Inland Revenue Department's annual report.

The percapita consumption of spirits was 572 gallons as against 1,061 in the previous year. Beer consumption was 6,071 gallons compared with 7,209 in 1914; wines, .095 as compared with 124; tobacco, 3,427 pounds, as against 3,711.

The 1914 consumption, however, appears larger than it really was by reason of the quantities of liquor taken from bond that year, and entered for consumption in the hope of avoiding the extra tax imposed after the war started. Even allowing for this, there is a substantial falling-off.

HOT MEAT IN TRENCHES.

Canadian Troops Are Being Well Cared For.

LONDON, Nov. 29.— Major Ardley Weaver, of the Canadians, writes his father in Manchester: "The wounded are extraordinarily well cared for. All medical arrangements are splendid. If officer or man receives an at all serious wound he is sent to England at once. The Army Service Corps and Supply are wonderful. We have hot meat in the trenches, bread, tea, cheese, and a nip of rum twice weekly."

MAY CUT OFF SALE OF LIQUOR ON THE TRAINS

Officials of Department Know of No Law Permitting Railways to Serve Liquor Within Province.

Railways operating in or through the Province of Ontario will shortly find that they cannot serve liquor to passengers either at a bar or at the dinner table. Information gathered is to the effect that the Ontario License Board will shortly deal in a formal manner with the question. At the present time the individual members of the Board are giving the matter considerable attention, and as soon as the Board gets back to Toronto it is likely means will be found and machinery operated to prevent the railways dispensing alcoholic refreshment to thirsty passengers.

At the Ontario License Department it was stated that at the present time there is no license of Ontario law which permits a railway company to serve drink on the train, either at meals or at a buffet or a bar. Officials know of no Dominion provision which would allow the sale of liquor on trains within the Province of Ontario. In the absence of any law or license sanctioning the dispensing of liquor on a train in the province, the railways bring themselves under the Liquor License Act, and can be prosecuted for a breach of the regulation.

After the License Board has given the cases careful consideration, the chairman, J. D. Flavelle, will probably write to the railways, notifying them that they are breaking the law, and will be prosecuted. On the other hand, the commission may institute, or cause to be instituted, criminal proceedings, and thus put an end to the sale of liquor by railways.

All American railways running west of Chicago have stopped the sale of liquor on their trains, and it is said that this action has come to the attention of the License Board, and made the need for some such move here all the more evident.

BIG INCREASE IN CUSTOMS RECEIPTS

November 1915 Shows a Big Increase Over Same Month Last Year

The customs receipts for the past month are greatly in excess of the receipts for November of last year, there being an increase of $64,060.98. The returns for November, 1914, were only $15,571.60, whereas this year they were $79,852.58.

TO PHOTOGRAPH 2,000,000 POLES

Berlin, Nov. 30.—Two million persons have been ordered by the German Governor General of Poland to have photographs taken in order that passports may be issued to all over 15 years of age, according to the Overseas News Agency.

One million photographs already have been made and this number is being increased at the rate of 30,000 a day. The work is being done by 60 photographers with 250 assistants.

25 CENTS DESTROYS YOUR DANDRUFF AND STOPS FALLING HAIR

This, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxurience which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after just a few week's use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair —new hair—growing all over the scalp.

"CABIRIA"

A Great Educational Film by D'Annunzio

"Cabiria," the great motion picture tableaux to be shown at the "Grand" Theatre for three days, commencing Thursday, Dec. 2, should interest all students of ancient history. The time of this vast photo spectacle is in the third century B.C., when Rome and Carthage were at war. The final success of Rome was followed by the consolidation of the Roman Empire, which shortly before the Christian era reached the apogee of its greatness. In the film, an attempt is made, and successfully, to show life as it was lived in those strenuous days. Historical characters, such as Scipio, Hannibal, Archimedes, and other great warriors and personages of the time are characterized. The Greek philosopher, Archimedes, is shown utilizing the power of the sun for the purpose of creating conflagration. He burned up the Roman Fleet by fixing the solar rays upon the ships. Every schoolboy knows that a double convex glass possesses the power of concentrating the solar rays. Archimedes was probably the first to discover this fact. The picture is one, therefore, that besides its tremendous spectacular and tragic interest has a high educational value. It shows us real history on the screen. It shows up the people of Rome and Carthage as they lived at that period. The producers of the film referred to reliable historical records for their facts. There is no anachronism in the picture, every detail is faultless. It would certainly be worth the while of all educators and students of history to visit the Grand Theatre during this engagement, if only to study this era of history on the screen.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hine, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 238 College Street, will be answered on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

North-End Wife: May I ask you through your column what should be put in the paste to make burlap adhere to the wall?

Ans.—Usually the addition of molasses will suffice. But when the walls are sand finished or porous or hot with lime, some preparation is necessary. Let us know the conditions.

Constant Reader, Peterborough: I have had some painting done lately and it has the appearance in places of the dried skin of an apple after having stood a long time. It has sort of frizzled or shrunk, and does not shine in those places. Can you explain the cause?

Ans.—Your paint has the undeniable earmark of the novice. It was not painted; it was slopped or daubed on. Painting consists of infinitely more than merely laying paint on a surface with a brush. There's a certain art and knack to it that is acquired only after years of practice. I say this with all due respect to many who think otherwise. The word paint is so elastic that it is impossible to describe it in a word, or even a sentence. There are hundreds of combinations called paint, and as many ways of treatment, to say nothing of the multitudinous surfaces which paint is applied. Your paint was evidently laid on too heavy.

San Toy, Peterborough: If you will tell me how glazing is done, through your very helpful "Arts and Crafts" column, I will be much obliged.

Ans.—The word glazing, like paint, is elastic. It is at least a triplet in the painters' vocabulary. Putting a pane of glass in place is called glazing, forcing soft putty or filler into the pores of wood we call glazing. Should we use some transparent colour over gold or other surface, it is glazing. So unless I know what you want to glaze, I cannot help. Write again with particulars.

Reader, Peterborough, Ont.: Some time ago you published a list of colours and what they were symbolic of. May I trouble you to again publish them, and at the same time I would like to know whether oil paintings may be cleaned with impunity, and how?

Ans.—
Gold—Nobility, virtue, greatness.
Silver—Purity, justice, innocence.
Red—Courage.
Blue—Fidelity, consistency, science.
Green—Mildness.
Purple—Royalty.
Black—Danger.

I am loth to suggest anything to clean oil paintings, especially if they are at all valuable. I am told, however, that an application of fuller's earth has a very refreshing effect and is harmless. So please yourself.

Admirer, Lindsay, Ont.: I have had the misfortune to spill some sewing machine oil on a leather-covered chair. Is it possible to remove it without spoiling the leather. It is out of your line, I know, but I am sure you can suggest some remedy.

Ans.—Try washing it with benzine or gasoline, which must be absolutely clean. What does not come off the surface will be driven through. Then allow the chair to stand a day, so that the benzine may evaporate, after which wash it over with well beaten white of egg, and polish with a soft clean cloth, or a little was rubbed in and polished if desired.

SUGAR PRICES TAKE A TWENTY-FIVE CENT JUMP.

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Sugar prices in Montreal and Toronto took a jump this afternoon of 25c on the hundred pounds, making the third jump this month. The sugar market at the present time is very strong in New York and has been advancing considerably for the past week and in jumping here the prices followed the lead of the general sugar market.

Prospects are that sugar will go even higher. To the consumer the advance means an extra half cent for every pound.

Sugar on this continent is very scarce and has been for some time, while the demand especially at this season of the year is heavy owing to the manufacture of Christmas sweets, cakes, etc. Sugar took a jump here on Nov. 9 and again two days later. The war is the main cause of the rise in prices. The world owing to the holding up of the beet crop is dependent on the cane crop which is now almost exhausted.

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

The Present Month—December

Some of Its Characteristics—Its History and Some Days of Observance

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

December is the last month of the current year. Decem is Latin for ten and, although this tenth month is the twelfth of our present calendar, it was the last month of the old Roman calendar, which is ascribed by tradition to Romulus, which calendar contained only ten months.

Etymologically Incorrect.

This name, being retained for the twelfth month, is really incorrect; but it has been accepted by long custom.

Descriptive

December is a dark, chilly month; with it comes the shortest day and the longest night; a cold that oftentimes pierces the bones to the very marrow and turns rain into ice. Gone are the flowers in our gardens, although the evergreens, if not coated with snow, make a brave show. Yet there are many days of bright sunshine, and when the shortest day is past there is hope before us, for then the days begin to lengthen out and snowdrops and crocuses will begin to knock under the earth, as if asking to be let out.

December is, of course,

A Winter Month,

And winter, we all know, is the coldest period of the year, so far as the northern hemisphere is concerned. Winter proper, may be defined, astronomically, as beginning with the sun's entry into the Zodiac sign, Capricornus, on Dec. 22nd, and terminating at the vernal equinox, say March 21st. Thus it extends from the shortest day (December 21st), when the sun attains its greatest southward declination, to the moment of its crossing the equator at the spring or vernal equinox.

Cause of Cold Weather.

The chief cause of the greater cold of winter is due to the sun's rays falling more obliquely on the earth's surface than is the case in summer.

In the arctic regions the year is naturally divided into two seasons—summer and winter, the winter being long, and the summer short. Theoretically, the greatest cold in winter occurs after the winter solstice— the period when the days are at their shortest, and the suns' rays are most oblique.

The Superior Intellectuality

Of the races inhabiting temperate regions—where there are the four seasons, viz., spring, summer, autumn and winter, is due, partly, to the constant necessity for forethought in providing for the regularly recurring season of winter, when natural sources cease to be available.

Characteristics.

On the 22nd day of the month is the winter solstice, when the Sun enters the sign of 'Capricornus,' or the 'Goat.' The ascent of the sun is thus allegorized by a climbing animal, for it had reached the lowest declination on the twenty-first, the shortest day. Now it recommences its upward path which it continues to do until the twenty-first of June—the longest day—when it attains its greatest altitude at the summer solstice.

The early part of December bears a considerable similitude to the past month of November; heavy falls of snow and hard frosts being on regle. Yet no hard and fast rule can be laid down, as we appear to now be experiencing milder winters than was the case some years ago. But the country may be covered with snow the; farm houses apparently half buried, while the rick yards look like mounds of upconed snow.

Historical.

In the calendar of Romulus this month had thirty days; Numa Pompillius, on revising the calendar, shortened its duration to twenty-nine; Julius Caesar, however, added two days, making it, as now, a month of thirty-one days.

The Saxons called this month the 'winter-monath' (winter-month), as also 'heligh-monath,' or holy-month, from the fact of the Festival of Christmas falling therein; while the modern Germans term it 'Christmonat,' or Christ's month.

Ecclesiastical Feasts.

Of course the 25th—Christmas Day—stands predominant as being the anniversary of the Nativity of our Blessed Saviour, and to this day may well be devoted an article expressly on the subject, as will be the case with the Examiner.

Of other red-letter festivals there are, St. Thomas (Dec. 21st), St. Stephen, the first martyr, (Dec. 26th); St. John the Evangelist (who is the patron saint of our chief Anglican church in this city (Dec. 27th); and The Holy Innocents' Day (Dec. 28th).

Of black-letter days are St. Nicholas (Dec. 6th); St. Lucy (Dec. 13th); O Sapientia (Dec. 16th); St. Silvester (Dec. 31st).

The Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary is also celebrated on the eighth day of this month.

St. Nicholas, who is commemorated on the 6th, is the prototype of Santa Claus. In Holland, this day is practically the commencement of Christmas, of which country he is the Patron Saint, as he is of several others.

Fast Days.

Of fasts there are in addition to every Friday, as ordered both by the Anglican and Roman churches, the Ember-Days (Dec. 19th and, 20th); and Christmas Eve, which being the vigil of Christmas Day is a fast, although usually looked upon as a festive occasion.

The Moon's Phases.

For December, 1915, are these:
New Moon on Dec. 6th.
First Quarter on the 13th.
Full Moon on the 21st.
Last Quarter on the 29th.

A Happy Month!

Our close friends and Allies — the French—have a pretty custom of wishing their friends 'a happy month' on the occasion of their first meeting after the commencement of a new month. I will do the same.

O readers dark!
O readers fair!
With auburn, or
With soft, brown, hair;
With eyes of grey,
Or orbs of blue,
A happy month
I wish to you.

ATTENDED STOCK JUDGING COURSE IN WESTWOOD

Department of Agriculture Represented by Norwood Officials—List of Speakers Present

HASTINGS ITEMS

HASTINGS, Dec. 1.—A few from this district attended the stock judging course at Westwood on Monday and Tuesday, under the auspices of the Farmers' Institute Branch and the Department of Agriculture. The main speakers were W. J. Gardhouse, Thistletown, and F. Mallory, Frankford. The Department of Agriculture was well represented by Messrs. McRae and McDowell, of Norwood.

An interesting lecture was given in the Presbyterian Church on Monday evening by Rev. W. E. Hassard. The lecture was illustrated by limelight views, and was both interesting and instructive. On Sunday the pastors of each church took up the subject of Bible study work at the morning services.

The W. M. S. of the Methodist Church held a missionary quilting on Wednesday last. The ladies are preparing a box of bedding and clothing for some needy mission station.

Home From the Front.

Private Commiskey has returned from service overseas, and was given a hearty welcome home on Monday evening at the Town Hall in Westwood.

Dr. Wade is moving to Roseneath to begin practice there. His place here is being filled by Dr. Sweeney.

Rev. Isaac Sorell and Mr. W. Warner attended the district meeting in Campbellford on Thursday last.

Dr. Huycke, of Castleton, has purchased the residence and practice of Dr. Edmison, and will take possession at once.

Dr. Edmison has moved his family to Toronto, where they will remain during his absence at the front.

The ladies' minstrel show on Friday night proved to be quite a success. A large crowd was in attendance, and a good programme given. Proceeds were in aid of the patriotic fund.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church met in their November meeting on Friday last at the Parsonage, when a number of important items of business were disposed of.

An operation was performed on Mr. W. Faux, of Asphodel, last week, when Drs. McGrath, McNulty and King, of Peterborough, amputated his leg. We have been informed that the patient is resting as well as could be expected.

Mr. Lew. Spence visited in town last week. His many friends are pleased to see him and hope for his speedy restoration to health.

Baker Bros. sent a large consignment of poultry to Flavelle of Lindsay on Wednesday last.

Personals.

Mr. J. McCarthy spent a few days in Toronto during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Moore, of Alliston, who are renewing acquaintances here, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. Cook.

Mrs. J. Stevenson and Miss Gladys took a trip to Campbellford last week.

Mr. H. Lambert has moved his hardware store into the premises fitted up for him by Mr. J. Lynch.

Mrs. J. Buck received a telegram this morning that her daughter Dora was very ill in Western Canada. Mrs. Buck left on the afternoon train for the West.

Private Richardson, who is returning from the front, passed through here on Monday, en route for his home in Warkworth.

Mrs. (Rev.) D. Dickson, of Coe Hill, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Buck.

Miss Minnie McConnell has returned from an extended visit near Port Hope.

Two Former Peterborough Men Were Appointed

Imperial Munitions Board Include the Names of Mr. J. W. Flavelle and Mr. E. R. Wood

The constitution of the Imperial Munitions Board, in place of the Dominion Shell Committee, resignations of the members of which have been received and accepted, include two former Peterborough men, namely Mr. J. W. Flavelle and Mr. E. R. Wood.

The new board consists of Sir Sam Hughes, honorary president; J. W. Flavelle, Toronto, chairman, with executive and administrative powers; Gen. Alex. Bertram, deputy chairman; and Col. David Carnegie, G. H. Dawson, of Victoria, B.C.; C. B. Gordon, Montreal; J. A. Vaillancourt, Montreal, president of the Bank of Hochelaga; and E. R. Wood, Toronto, as members.

The new commission to inquire into "the supply and sufficiency of raw materials in Canada required for the production of munitions of war, and the best methods of conserving the same," has been appointed, with Col. Thomas Cantley, New Glasgow, N.B., as chairman, and George W. Watts of Toronto, E. Carnegie of Wefland, Robert Hobson of Hamilton, Hon. W. C. Edwards of Ottawa, and Geo. C. Mackenzie of the Mines Department, Ottawa, as members.

The new Munitions Board does not include any member who is directly connected with the manufacture of shells. The reorganization was effected by Lionel Hichens of the British Munitions Department, who was left here by D. A. Thomas, David Lloyd-George's representative in America to complete the details.

Men's Quarters in the House of Refuge Have To Be Amplified

Mr. E. Deyell, deputy-reeve of Otonabee, reported to the County Council yesterday afternoon the necessity of immediately providing additional accommodation for men at the House of Refuge. There are now forty inmates, twenty-nine of whom are men. All the rooms available for them are occupied to their full capacity and Mr. Deyell urged that something be done right away. Mr. Beavis, the caretaker of the House, awited on the Council and supported the statements of the chairman. Mr. Beavis stated that this is the first time the House of Refuge has been overcrowded, although on the women's side there is some accommodation not in use.

man of the Management committee Two of the old men are mentally unbalanced and the Council decided that since the home was not erected for asylum purposes that steps should be taken to have these two men removed to a proper place. Action to this end was left with Mr. Deyell, who was also instructed to construct in the attic a sleeping room for six or seven men.

Mr. Mears is a preacher of repute and is always a welcome visitor to the Methodist pulpits of Peterborough. Rev. Mr. Whattam of Mark street church, will be at Cavan and Cavan circuit, preaching missionary sermons.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. S., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Appeal Against The Assessment

Was Heard Before His Honour Judge Huycke—Judgment Reserved

An appeal against the assessment levied on the property of the International Harvester Company was heard yesterday before His Honour Judge Huycke. The assessment was originally based on the wholesale rate of seventy-five per cent. and subsequently reduced by the Court of Revision to the manufacturers rate of sixty per cent. The Company, which was represented by Mr. F. D. Kerr, contended that they should appear either under the retail rate of thirty per cent. or the unclassified rate of twenty-five per cent.

AFTER ROUBLES OF MASSES

London, November 30. — Curious crowds standing on the snow-covered streets of Petrograd reading placards announcing a new 100,000,000 pounds war loan at 5 1-2 per cent. interest, are described by the Mail's correspondent in the Russian capital. This is the first time that an appeal has been made to the masses of the people to subscribe for such an issue, as previous loans have been taken by the banks and the wealthier classes.

The campaign of poster advertising was planned with skill and enterprise to attract the attention of the large portion of the population who do not read newspapers.

POWER COMMITTEE MET LAST EVENING

To Consider Proposed Offer of the Dickson Company

The special committee appointed by the City Council to consider the offer made by the Dickson Company relative to a supply of electrical energy, met last evening. The company offered to supply the city with upwards of three thousand horse power at sixteen dollars per horse power delivered in Peterborough, or thirteen dollars per horse power at Lakefield. At present the city is paying eighteen dollars per horse power. In addition, the Company agrees to install the plant at their Lakefield dam. The latter is to be constructed by the Government. The matter was laid over until further information can be obtained concerning the details of the scheme.

PRINCESS PATS GET A REST.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—The Princess Pats Regiment is now out of the trenches and is acting in an instructional capacity to young British subalterns and non-commissioned officers. This information is given by Captain George Macdonald in a letter written to a friend here.

Captain Macdonald describes how when they left his brigade, General Smith-Dorrien spoke highly of the Patricias. It is expected that this regiment will be billeted for ten weeks.

RUPTURE IS CURABLE

Rupture is not a tear or breach in the abdominal wall, as commonly supposed, but it is a stretching or dilation of a natural opening, says J. Y. Egan of Toronto and New York, the noted appliance specialist who will visit Peterboro, Oriental Hotel, Tuesday and Wednesday—December 7th and 8th. The "Curatrus" as now used and approved will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, affording immediate and complete comfort, but is intended to assist nature to close the opening in the shortest time known to medical science without an operation. This appliance has received highest awards wherever shown, producing results without harmful injections or other aids. Mr. Egan has testimonials from our own section for inspection. If interested call, he will be pleased to show you same without charge.

GOVERNMENT AIDS RECRUITING

A contribution of $24,500 has been made by the Ontario Government to aid recruiting. The sum is spread over fifty regiments and battalions, and includes the $5,000 which it was announced would be given on the recruiting tag day.

A FRATERNAL VISIT

The Epworth League of the Methodist church visited the Young Peoples' Guild of the Presbyterian Church on Monday night. The meeting was in charge of Mr. R. G. Lawlor, B.A., and Mr. Arthur Searight. "Browning" was the evening's topic.

Mrs. Stephens has resigned her position in the post office.

Mrs. John Kelly fell last Friday, and broke a couple or ribs.

Mr. Robert Mace, who has been in the employ of Mr. A. Brethen, left last week for Brantford, where he is going in partnership with another man in raising strawberries, etc.

Mrs. A. R. Anderson and Miss Helen Anderson are visiting in Peterboro at the home of the former's brother, Mr. B. Ackerman.

Mr. Ward Patterson of Peterboro was in town on Wednesday.

Mr. George Mills left last Monday for Grimsby where he has purchased a business, having sold his boot and shoe business here to Mr. Dan Oakley of town.

NORWOOD HOCKEY TEAM

The Norwood High School students have organized a hockey team with the following officers:

Manager, Karl W. Irwin.
Captain, Armor Weir.
Sec.-Treasurer, Everett Finlay.
Committee, Harry Keenan, Reggie Portway, Richard Williamson, Martin Killoran.

The town boys have re-organized and selected two teams for the purpose of forming a league with the High School, the officers being:

President, M. H. Minore.
Captain, Roy Watson.
Manager, Earl Cummings.
Sec.-Treasurer, Ernest Hall.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. (Rev.) Peer has been visiting at Buckhorn and Hall's Bridge.

Mrs. Thomas Drope and Miss Vera Drope of Alnwick, who were visiting Norwood friends, returned home on Sunday.

Captain Neilson was in town on Wednesday.

Pte. Walter Brett of Barrisfield was in town last week.

Mr. Harold Hall of Wadena, Sask., has been a guest at the home of his aunt, Mrs. M. Nicol.

Mr. Bruce Scott of Lindsay, has been visiting his brothers, Messrs. Bert and Ed. Scott, Asphodel.

Mrs. (Dr.) Hess and Miss Myrtle Hess of Hastings, were in town on Tuesday.

A $50 SUBSCRIPTION

Mr. W. T. Buck presented the local chapter of the I.O.D.E. last week with a cheque for $50.00.

The daughters of the Empire gave an afternoon tea on Wednesday afternoon at the armouries in honour of Mrs. G. Mills who leaves shortly to reside in Grimsby. An address was read.

Mr. Cecil Watson has returned home from the West where he spent the last few months.

On Wednesday afternoon, December 1 at 3 o'clock, Rev. C. Waddell, B.A., will be ordained into the Baptist ministry. Representative ministers of the Association will hold an ordination service in the evening at 7.30.

Mr. Charles Anderson of Toronto, was in town on Friday.

Mr. Storey of Campbellford, was a guest on Sunday of Miss Lizzie Crok.

HONORABLY DISCHARGED

Mr. Gordon Puffer, who enlisted, and was at Barrisfield, was honorably discharged last week on account of his health. Mr. Puffer has just got out of the hospital, where he had been for ten weeks with pleurisy, during which time he suffered four relapses. He returned home on Saturday and feels his disappointment keenly.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church gave an afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. J. B. Pearce on Thursday in honor of Mrs. George Mills. Mrs. Mills, who has been a life member for several years, was presented with a life membership pin. The society will miss her very much as she has always taken a very active part, but we know that Norwood's loss will be Grimsby's gain.

Mr. McLaren of Merrickville, was a week-end guest at the home of Mrs. Butterfield.

Mr. Hermie Nicol of Ingersall spent the week-end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Nicol.

Rev. Mr. Dickson, the minister from Coe Hill, who recently enlisted at Belleville, was in town on Sunday.

Mrs. McLeary of Havelock, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Butterfield.

Mr. John Weir spent the week-end in Madoc at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnor Weir.

Rev. G. Andrews of Pontypool, was home on Friday.

OBITUARY

On Saturday at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Brestow Moffatt, the death occurred of Mr. Thomas Moffatt, formerly of Smithfield. The funeral service was held on Sunday night at 8.30, and the remains were taken on the early train on Monday morning to his former home where interment took place.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaker or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyath's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and drew this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Success ! !

Although not entirely unexpected, the success of the Christmas Club the first day, Monday, was almost sensational. Never outside of this club has the Peterborough public been offered such unusual privileges and advantages in the purchase of a Piano or Player Piano and they were quick to respond. The Club is limited to 50. That is why

Readers of The PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER

Should Immediately Join the

CHRISTMAS CLUB

The Plan Briefly

The total variety includes 12 different kinds of instruments. Special club terms have been arranged for each outfit. A club member pays his one-dollar fee, selects his instrument, and after that pays the special weekly club terms, according to the Piano he chooses. The instrument is then delivered Christmas Eve or thereabouts.

Or Save up to $150.00 on the Well-Known Sweet Toned Ennis Player Piano

THIS UNIQUE CLUB has been organized in co-operation with the old-established firm, The J. M. Greene Music Co., in support of the "Sensible Christmas" movement. It is designed, through its many advantages, to enable any home to secure a Piano or Player-Piano and have music for Xmas without the usual outlay. The membership is limited to 50. The Club closes when this number join or by December 24th at latest.

Any responsible person may apply for membership, the only requirement being that he is in the market for a Piano or Player Piano. The membership fee is only $1.00. The fee is returned to you if you do not buy, and credited to your account if you do. Applying for membership does not obligate you to buy. You can withdraw at any time. But it makes it possible for you to secure all the privileges if you select your instrument before December 24th. But while you have till December 24th to make your selection, the Club closes as soon as 50 enroll. "Join NOW," is the safest way.

Instructions for Joining

Simply cut out, sign and mail attached coupon to the "Christmas Club," or else phone or call at The J. M. Greene Music Co. Store. They will then supply you with membership blank and illustrated circular. By signing the membership blank and returning it to them with the Club membership fee of $1.00, this membership will entitle you to all the club privileges, if you select your piano or player-piano before December 24th.

THE NEW LIFE SAVING HELMET—Photos show the value to the soldier of the new French "Adrian" or steel cap, named after its inventor, Colonel Odrian, which has entirely replaced the "kepi" as headgear because of the protection afforded the head against the dreaded and deadly shrapnel splinters. Every helmet from one to six shows the value of the helmet as a protector.

Warden Kindred's Work Is Appreciated By the Council

The special committee of the County Council composed of Messrs. McKee, Walsh, Deyell, Fitzgerald and Squire, appointed to deal with Warden Kindred's address presented the following reply read by Mr. B. Squire this morning:

In this time of struggle and warfare it is a cause of great satisfaction and thankfulness that such a bountiful harvest has followed up the labours of those engaged in agriculture and that thereby Canada will be able to contribute so much to the supply of food required by the Allies to feed their armies in the field and thereby assist in bringing the war to a successful issue.

We agree with the Warden that a very special effort should be made to assist the Canadian Patriotic Fund and other funds organized to assist those who suffer by reason of the war. Everyone should be prepared to make grave sacrifices in order that those who are fighting the battles of the Empire should be so far as possible relieved from suffering. When we consider the great principles for which we are fighting we cannot be too liberal in our grants for such purposes.

A very important question is involved in the reference of the Warden to the Pigeon Creek Bridge. It was built at a time when the cost of material to construct this was very much less than at present, and material is also difficult to procure. The respective municipalities interested will have to determine whether to abandon the bridge or to rebuilt it at a considerable expense.

We regret exceedingly that the Warden has determined to retire from the Council. Every member of the Council appreciates the ability and energy displayed by him in the performance of his public duties and the sacrifice of his own affairs he has made in endeavouring to advance the public interests.

The Council united in wishing our Warden long life and prosperity, and trust that he will still maintain his interest in all matters pertaining to the interests of the people.

This Morning's Police Court

James Howden of Emily township, will sojourn in the county gaol for a period of ten days unless someone undertakes to pay a fine of two dollars. In this morning's police court, Howden was charged with being drunk in a public place. He exhibited a pair of badly damaged optics and was otherwise under the weather.

A man who gave him home as Wartworth pleaded not guilty to a similar charge. After the officer's evidence had been heard he was fined two dollars.

MR. CHAS. GUNN'S SPLENDID CROPS

Mr. Thos. Gunn, 418 London street, has received a letter from his son, Mr. Chas. Gunn in Lydiard, Sask., who is homesteading there, stating that from this years harvest he had 701 bushels of oats, 797 bushels of wheat and 536 bushels of flax. Mr. Gunn went west five years ago, previous to which he was employed in the C.G.E. machine shop.

make up the difference between what was formerly going into the home and the present separation allowance and the money remitted home by the soldier. We know that some of the women are extravagant, Mr. Dobbin said, but these must not be allowed to give a black eye to the whole body of women the majority of whom are fine women. Some are saving money, and all are contented with what they are receiving.

Mr. Dobbin quoted figures showing that the County had given about $4,000 to the Patriotic Fund.

Mr. O'Connell's Address.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell pointed out that the city's assessment was twelve million dollars and the county's ten million dollars. In short, the figures were almost identics. Contributions from the city had been $60,000 given last year, $5,000 for the British Red Cross, $12,000 for the Canadian Red Cross, making a total of $77,000. This was apart from other patriotic contributions of a more general nature. It is now proposed to ask the city to contribute another $60,000 to the Patriotic Fund for the coming year, part of which will likely be a generous grant from the Council, thus making a total of $120,000 from the city.

Suggestion to County.

It was felt in the city that when the facts were placed before the county citizens they would only be anxious to bear their share of the present burdens. It would not be out of the way to make a grant of $4,000 a month for the next year toward the Patriotic Fund, having regard for the property values in the county, what the city has done, and the great necessity that this fund be generously supported.

Mr. O'Connell concluded his remarks by a reference to the duty that is imposed upon all the people at the present time. We are participants in the war, and yet our country has not suffered the devastation that has ruined such an immense section of Europe. In fact, this country is even more prosperous than it was before the war broke out. Those who cannot fight must be prepared to make a sacrifice that can at least begin to compare with the work of the men at the Front. We must expect to give a portion of our income this year, and should arise. Must give everything to make sure that our country is victorious.

Ex-Warden Garbutt said that a year ago the county citizens did not realize they do realize it now. He approved of the plan to raise by assessment whatever sum was decided upon. Canvassing had not met with much success where it had been tried in Smith and other townships of the county.

His Honour Judge Huycke.

"I would not give much for your this war," said Judge Huycke, who asserted that this consideration was secondary to that of the privileges, liberties, rights, and principles that we enjoy, and the appreciation of which is being weighed in the scales of war. It was the surprise of his lifetime that there were some people who did not look with favour on the Patriotic Fund. This country had promised to the soldiers on their departure that the home-staying citizens would look after those who were left dependents. We would be the greatest of poltroons and cowards if we were to leave the widowed mother charity of the world. "I don't think the Patriotic Fund is giving too much to them; in fact, I don't think we have given them enough in some cases."

The benches in the County Council Chamber were unable to accommodate the crowd of farmers and other citizens from the far and near sections of Peterborough county, who assembled this afternoon to present to their municipal representatives their wishes in regard to the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

Mayor Buller and many of the city's aldermen were present, also Capt. J. H. Burnham, His Honour Judge Huycke, Mr. Daniel O'Connell, Mr. F. D. Kerr and others.

Warden Kindred welcomed the deputation and observed that the Council particularly wished to hear the views of the men from the various townships.

Mayor Buller in a few words, urged the Council to follow the wishes of the people. He advised them to have no fear of possible effects of a generous gift upon their prospects at the coming municipal elections.

Judge Huycke made a splendid address. He first referred to the retirement of Warden Kindred, which, he said, would be a distinct loss to Havelock and to the county. He congratulated the Warden upon his expression yesterday that the county had not done its duty. There was no one in the county who had done his full duty and this, His Honour said, could apply to the whole country. Toronto claims and appears to be setting the pace for the province in the matter of patriotic giving of men and money, and that city has done well, but the city of Sydney in Australia, has done, man for man, three times better than Toronto. We feel we have done well in our contribution of men, but Australia is now sending the last unit of 300,000 men. We are preparing the last unit of an army of 150,000 men. His Honour appealed to the individual members of the Council to assist and throw their influence in with the efforts of recruiting officers who may be sent to various parts of the county. King George's appeal to his people published in the Ontario Gazette was effectively received by Judge Huycke, who emphasized the humane, loving, living aspect of this document, a man to man request, rather than king to subject, for a wide response to the voluntary system of recruiting. Judge Huycke also addressed the Council briefly in regard to giving to the Patriotic Fund and our self-imposed duty of providing for the soldiers' wives and families.

Mr. O'Connell's Presentation.

Mr. O'Connell apologized for appearing before the Council, since the matter was one of purely county concern, but it was felt that the city and county could better co-operate in this way. It makes no difference whether a man enlists from the county or the city, he and his dependents are looked after by the City of Peterborough Patriotic Fund. Mr. O'Connell reviewed the formation of the local fund, its first comparative failure, and later success, with the assistance of the Toronto expert organizer. Peterborough city has given to patriotic ends between $80,000 and $120,000 during the past year. To Ottawa had been sent $40,000 as its share of the Patriotic Fund, but during the year practically all this money has been returned to Peterborough city and county, to the dependents of the soldiers. Hence it is now absolutely necessary to renew this credit with the Patriotic Fund. Otherwise this community will become a burden to the Dominion as a whole.

Locally it was felt that the county would be anxious to accept their share of this burden, hence the assembly of this deputation to express their opinions on the subject to their representatives. Mr. O'Connell reiterated his trepidation at appearing before the Council on this occasion, but gradually directed his address from the abstract to the concrete and finally broached the idea of a gift of $4,000 a month from the county as a fair contribution.

REV. MR. PHILPOTT AT THE TABERNACLE

Rev. P. W. Philpott of Hamilton, arrived in the city yesterday and gave his first address at the Tabernacle last night. His subject was "The Life of Faith" as set forth in the example of the first seven patriarchs of faith, mentioned in the Book of Genesis. He dwelt at length upon the life of Abraham as the great example of faith, and obedience and pictured this outstanding Old Testament character as not only the father of an earthly race by precept but also the father of all who are children of God by faith. He greatly encouraged fathers and mothers to believe God for the salvation of their children, taking the father and mother of Moses as an example of those who trusted God for their son when he was placed beyond their reach and they had no further power to help him themselves.

Mr. Philpott is a most pleasing and able speaker and carries his audience with him from the moment he begins his address. None who attended the service last night could go away feeling other than greatly benefitted by the message of the hour. A bright cheery song service preceded Mr. Philpott's address. He will speak tonight at 8 o'clock and to-morrow at 3 and 8 p.m. A cordial welcome is extended to all.

SUCCESSFUL TEA HELD

A successful parlour tea was held at the home of Miss Jean Anderson, 156 Douro street, under the auspices of the Willard Y. of the W.C.T.U. During the evening dainty refreshments were served by the members. A musical programme was rendered and was much enjoyed. A silver collection was taken for the funds of the society. At the close of the evening Mrs. Whalley offered a vote of thanks to those present, who had so kindly assisted in the success of the evening. The next regular meeting will be held on Tuesday, December 13th, at the home of Mrs. Whalley, 3 Engleburne avenue, to which all young people are invited.

President—Capt. S. J. Gilmour.
Members—Lieut. T. W. B. Marling, Lieut. E. E. Snider.

Orderly Officers' Visits—

Orderly officers will in their round call upon the soldiers who are confined in hospital.

Passes—

Late passes may be issued by company commanders or officers detailed by them until further orders up to and including 15 p.c. of the strength.

The commanding officer has been pleased to grant permission to all N. C. O.'s of the rank of corporal and above to enjoy the privilege of permanent pass, i.e., to be absent from quarters till 11.30 p.m. daily when off duty; for a later hour late passes will be required for those living in barracks rooms.

It will be necessary to have at least one N.C.O. in each barrack room every evening from 9.30 p.m.

Promotions—

The commanding officer has been pleased to make the following promotion, provisionally: To be corporal, Pte. Chas F. Payne; to be corporal, Signallers. Pte. E. W. Watson.

Recruiting—

Lieuts. R. P. A. Crisp and E. E. Snider have been placed in charge of the recruiting station or stations in Peterborough in the interests of the 93rd O .S. Battalion until further notice.

Furnaces—

It is published for general information that under no condition must any person tamper with the furnaces in the drill hall except those authorized by the officer in charge.

Muster Parade—

A muster parade will be held on the floor of the drill hall on Friday, the 3rd inst. at 10.30 a.m. when all ranks are to attend with the exception of those who are in hospital and those doing recruiting duty outside of the city limits.

Defaulters and men in detention will parade under the guard.

No exceptions will be made other than outlined above.

Dress—

Adverting to Battalion Order No. 21, Section 4, Sub-sec. (a) of the 21st of November, 1915.

Attention is called to the fact that this order is not being carried out by all ranks. It must be distinctly understood that all orders effecting the regulations for wearing or discarding articles of clothing is only made after consultation with the medical officers and it is considered by them absolutely necessary for safeguarding the health of the men. In future this order must be strictly complied with.

Agenda—

Adverting to D. O. Part 1 No. 30, Sub-section 4, should read: Pte. D. Campbell transferred to 'A' Company and not Pte. Chandler.

Notices—

The Canadian casualty list contains news of the death of Private Kenneth Gallenger of the 20th Battalion, C.E. F. What gives local interest is the fact that he is another nephew of Mr. G. A. Powell, city, son of his eldest sister. Mr. Powell has thus had two nephews killed in action and another near relative twice wounded. Lt.-Col. Victor Odlum, of the 7th Vancouver battalion. Some time ago Lt.-Col. Odlum was wounded in action, in which his battalion was nearly wiped out. When he partially recovered he reorganized it and returned with it to the battle line, with his wounded arm still in the sling and he and his battalion again gained glory in the attest drive in which the Canadians were conspicuous.

Mr. David Melton, who has recently enlisted for overseas service with the 93rd Battalion, was presented with a wrist watch by the employees of the Bonner-Worth Co. The presentation was made by Miss D. Tait, and an address was read by Miss McFaddyn. At the close of the presentation Mr. Melton replied very suitably, and said that he was sorry to leave the factory.

A member of the Examiner staff has received the following interesting letter from Pte. George Goodwin of 298 Edinburgh Street, who left Peterborough with the 8th C.M.R.:

"Somewhere In France."
Nov. 15, 1915.

Dear Sir,—I have a few minutes to spare, so I thought I would let you know how the boys from old Peterborough are getting on. There are not many of us in this regiment, as most of the members are Easterners from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, but the few that are here are a much better class of men than the rest. We have already had our first experience of trench fighting, as we were in the front line for 24 hours with another regiment that has been in before, and they showed us the points in the game. After coming out of the trenches they moved us back to billets in farm barns about a day's march in rear of the firing line, and we are here still; but we expect to go into the trenches again shortly. I wish Col. Johnston was with us now; his nephew, Mr. D. Johnston, is one of our officers, and he is liked immensely by all the boys. We have very comfortable quarters here in a farmer's barn, and have a coal fire in an old gasoline tin, and it certainly makes the place look cheery. It does not seem possible that most of the boys around me now were never away from home before—they all seem to take things as they come, and one seldom hears a murmur from them of the small hardships that we naturally have to put up with under the existing conditions. Most of the Peterborough boys hold good positions in the regiment, and even in training they were mentioned as the cleanest and neatest of the bunch on parade; and I am certain that they will prove to be no "church parade soldiers" when they are in the thick of the fighting. I got a good reminder of how careful one has to be in the trenches, as one fellow who was standing next to me got inquisitive and looked over the parapet of the trench, and he immediately ducked again. And it was none too soon, —"ping-whiz-ping"—a veritable hail of bullets struck the sand bag where his head had been. Well, I suppose I must close now, as it is lights-out time—we have to put them out at 8 p.m. here.

You must excuse the pencil, but ink is conspicuous by its absence in this place.

Yours truly,
George Goodwin.

Sergt.-Major Hartshorn, Sergt. Traynor and other members of the 93rd Battalion are taking part in a concert at Bethany to-night. The talent among the Peterborough Battalion is always in demand.

To-day the men of No. 6 platoon, 93rd Battalion, showed their appreciation of the efforts of Sergt. E. P. Clarke on their behalf by presenting him with a handsome gold headed cane, accompanied by the following address:

Sergt. E. P. Clarke—

Dear Sir,—We wish to take this opportunity to welcome you among us. We are pleased with the way you are bringing us along in our work and we assure you that we all wish to co-operate with you on these lines.

We ask you to accept this cane as a token of our regard, and hope you will find it useful.

Signed on behalf of No. 6 platoon.

The 155th Battalion of Infantry for Prince Edward and Hastings Counties was authorized yesterday by the Militia Department at Ottawa and promulgated by Colonel Hemming, O.C., of the Third Division.

Lt.-Col. Adams, who is now the senior major of the 80th Battalion, has been selected to command the new unit. The new commanding officer is a citizen of Picton, and the Grand Master of the Order of True Blues for the Dominion of Canada.

Lt.-Col. Adams joined the 80th Battalion in Barriefield Camp.

The 93rd Battalion went on a route march this afternoon leaving the Armouries at 2 o'clock. Another route march is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

The establishment of the 93rd Battalion has been increased by the arrival of two more subalterns, Lieut. Puyjalon and Lieut. Quakenbush, who are on duty to-day.

The men of the 93rd are not allowed to leave the Armouries until after the afternoon parade is dismissed each day.

Kingston Standard: It is expected that the 59th Battalion will be ready to leave about Thursday. D Company goes to Cornwall, A Company will go to Gananoque, and B and C Companies, with the staff, will go to Brockville. Companies will be changed every month during the winter. The Fair Grounds will be used in Brockville, the Armouries at Gananoque and a building, formerly used as a mill, will be used at Cornwall.

The Kingston Standard says: Lieut. Bailey, formerly of the RegistryOffice C.M.S.C., at the Armouries, who has been made assistant adjutant of the 93rd Overseas Battalion at Peterborough, has gone to his new position. The work of the Registry Office has been taken over by Quartermaster-Sergt. Bose.

A musketry course has been authorised by Lt.-Col. Brown, G.S.O., at Belleville and Peterborough. Sergt.-Instructor Murray, formerly of the School of Musketry, Ottawa, will be the instructor.

When War Was Declared

big men in the publishing business realized that the greatest event in the history of the world—since the Resurrection—had commenced.

The Amalgamated Press — England's great publishing house believed the whole people of the Empire would want a comprehensive historical and pictorial record of the war—as events progressed.

A conference was held. The project was laid before the board. The enterprise was launched.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and Historian of the South African War; Sir Gilbert Parker, Canada's most famour writer; H. G. Wells, novelist and seer; A. G. Hales, leader among the new school of war correspondents; F. T. Jane, authority on Naval Strategy; Claude Graham White, aviation expert.

The result was a great and unique record of the Empire's mighty struggle.

More than 100,000 volumes were subscribed for.

—Then it was decided to sell the work in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and other parts of the Empire.

An allotment was made for Canada, and the volumes set aside for Peterborough are here.

The first volume is ready for delivery, and by sending your name and address to the office of this paper, full particulars of our offer will be sent you.

In this volume there are more than 1,100 illustrations, two coloured portraits, 15 authenticated maps of great battles and a wealth of narrative such as never has been published before. For remember the authorities—Conan Doyle, Gilbert Parker, Wells, Hales, Jane, Graham White, etc.

THE FUNERAL OF LATE C. M. BENNETT

The funeral of the late C. M. Bennett took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. E. Wade, to the Little Lake cemetery, Rev. R. Pogue officiating. The pall-bearers were W. R. G. Higgins, J. Brightman, J. M. Gemmell, R. M. Glover, W. C. Ackerman and R. Reiderman.

Local Masons were represented.

The flowers that accompanied the remains from Montreal were most beautiful. The McLaughlin Company, of which the deceased was manager at Montreal, forwarded a large wheel of flowers.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. R. J. Bagley who has been ill and in the St Joseph's Hospital his friends will be pleased to hear he is improving.

The friends of Mrs. E. G. Clarke who has been in the South for some time will be glad to hear her health is much improved by the change.

Mr. L. T. Ardiel of the Dominion Bank, Toronto is in the city relieving Mr. Fisher of the local branch of the bank who was called to Toronto owing to the death of the late Mr. Blewitt. Mr. Ardiel will be in the city until Saturday.

Mr. G. A. Grant, Water Street, has returned from a trip to the Canadian North-West. In Saskatchewan and Alberta there was very little, if any, snow, but in Manitoba practically all through it, there had been heavy snowstorms, making good sleighing and regular winter weather.

Exhorting His Hearers.

An evangelist was exhorting his hearers to flee from the wrath to come. "I warn you," he thundered, "that there will be weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth!" At this moment an old woman in the gallery stood up. "Sir," she shouted, "I have no teeth." "Madam," returned the evangelist, "teeth will be provided."

A Target Practice.

A new recruit was out for target practice, and his target seemed the only point in the landscape quite safe from his bullets. "Great Scott! my man," said an officer, hurrying up to him, "where are your shots going?" "I don't know, sir," replied the new recruit, confidentially; "but they left here all right!"

Not Very Clearly.

A pompous person, who had made a large fortune as a builder, was holding forth on the mutability of the world. "Can you account for it, sir?" said he, turning to Foote, the actor and humorist. "Why, not very clearly, sir," said Foote, "unless we could suppose the world was built by contract."

The pastor, Rev. Mr. Craw, expressed no views on the matter, only distributing the ballots to the people.

Music & Drama

"KILKENNY."

With his smile as bright, his laughter as infectious, and his voice as silvery sweet as ever, Fisk O'Hara the Irish singer-actor, delighted a large audience last night in his new play "Kilkenny." The vehicle which is using this year differs in many respects from some of the plays in which he has been seen here, but it gives him the same opportunity to display his talent, and he added to the laurels he had already won. He was heard to advantage in four new songs, of which the favourite probably was "Ireland is Ireland to Me." Mr O'Hara was supported by a clever company, including Marie Quinn and other favourites. The Grand was packed to the doors.

KITCHEN SHOWER FOR YOUNG BRIDE

On Saturday evening, 27th Nov., the young people of the neighbourhood of the Sixteenth of Smith gathered at Sunnyside Farm, the home of Miss Vera Harris, to give her a kitchen shower before her wedding on Wednesday, 1st December. After she had been showered with many useful articles for her future kitchen, an enjoyable time was spent in games and music. The shower was brought to a close by all joining hands and singing "Auld Lang Syne," after which three cheers were given for the future bride.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—A mere play for time is all officialdom here can see to-day in the Greek request for "a definition of the military features of the Allies' requirements in Macedonia." An answer to the latest Athens note is being prepared, but it is declared its tone will be such as to leave Greece no further alternative but defiance or acquiescence.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—In a long cablegram addressed to Pope Benedict, Henry Ford has outlined the manner in which he hopes to end the world war and "bring the boys out of the trenches by Christmas." Henry Ford's peace headquarters to-day made public a copy of the cable message. From the gathering of peace delegates carried to The Hague by his peace ship Oscar II., Ford plans to have selected other delegates to sit in an International Peace Congress in some neutral capital. This congress is to formulate a definite peace for submission to belligerent nations.

"For this undertaking, Most Holy Father, we bespeak your goodwill and co-operation," Ford cabled the Pope. No reply has been received thus far.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—That no commission was asked or offered on the purchase of remounts for the first Canadian Expeditionary Force was the declaration of three Toronto witnesses who appeared before Sir Charles Davidson, Royal Commissioner charged with the investigation of alleged irregularities in contracts for the sale of war supplies to the Dominion Government, at the first session of the Commission in the city to-day. Witnesses stated that all kinds of decrepit, sprained and blind horses were offered to the Government by Ontario horse dealers. Some 12-year-old horses were bought. This was beyond the age limit.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—Important modifications made by the Government in the order commandeering twenty million bushels or so of wheat in the elevators at the head of the lakes have the effect of practically nullifying the drastic action in so far as to eliminate business is concerned. Arrangements have been made whereby all bona fide contracts will be filled and mills kept going. The Government has agreed to loan enough grain from that seized to fill all bona fide contracts.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 1.—Dr. Emerich W. Ritter (Von Rettaghe), 38, chemist and self-styled son of an Austrian Count, under arrest here to-day, stoutly maintained that he knew nothing of munition plots. Ritter claims he is the original inventor of the liquid fire now being used in the European war. He said he had negotiated with the former Austrian Ambassador Dumba for the sale of his invention to Austria-Hungary.

Ritter said that two men, high in official life, came to him and proposed that his liquid fire be used to sprinkle on President Wilson and Secretary of War Garrison, but he declined.

Separate Peace With Italy Now The Kaiser's Dream

Such a Scheme is the Object of Emperor William's Visit to Vienna, Says London Paper

LONDON, Dec. 2.— The Pall Mall Gazette, associating Emperor William's journey to Vienna with reports that Germany is willing to enter upon peace negotiations, ventures the opinion that, as already suggested, the Emperor's trip to the Austrian capital may represent a fresh attempt to bring about conclusion of separate peace between Austria and Italy. It says:

"Some features of Italy's attitude may lend encouragement to such an enterprise. The government at Rome, for reasons never disclosed, has refrained from declaring war on Germany and has shown no particular eagerness to co-operate with the Allies in restoring the situation in the Balkans.

"If it is believed in Berlin that Italy can definitely be squared by a liberal surrender of territory wherein she claims a national interest great pressure may be employed at Vienna to bring about such a sacrifice and thus liberate Austrian troops for other regions."

To Keep Straightest, Unruliest Hair in Curl

(Woman's Tribune.)

The straightest, contrariest hair can be kept in curl by such simple and harmless means, that the use of the drying, singing, blistering curling iron is altogether inexcusable. One need only get a few ounces of plain liquid silmerine from the druggist and apply a little to the hair before retiring. The result will be quite remarkable, as the looking glass will show in the morning. The hair will be delightfully wavy, fluffy and glossy, without being in the least greasy, gummy or streaked.

The silmerine is best put on with a clean tooth brush, drawing this through the hair from crown to tip, preferably after dividing it into strands. The application seems to gradually improve the texture and the growth of the hair.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 Herbert L. Pratt, one of the vice-presidents of the Standard Oil Company, has leased for a city home the twelfth floor of the apartment house under construction on the south-east corner of Fifth Avenue and Seventy-Second Street.

Mr. Pratt will pay, it is said, $30,000 a year for his rooms.

British Strs. "Colenso" and "Orange Prince" Have Been Sunk By Submarines

Colenso Crew Has Been Saved But Nought is Reported Yet of the Other—Britain's Killed, Wounded and Missing —Furious Mountain Fighting on Montenegrin Frontier

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The British steamships Colenso and Orange Prince have been sunk by submarines. The Colenso crew was landed to-day.

Concerning the fate of those on the Orange Prince nothing has yet been made published. Both were comparatively large vessels, the Colenso of 3,861 and the Orange Prince of 3,583 tons. The former was a Wilson liner, sailing from Hull, and the latter a Prince liner, with Newcastle as its home port. The Colenso was in the North Sea trade, and presumably was sunk in that naval war zone.

KILLED, WOUNDED, AND MISSING.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Great Britain's killed, wounded and missing since the war began number 510,230, Premier Asquith informed Parliament yesterday. Of the casualties 379,958 of them occurred in France and Belgium, 106,610 in the Near East, 11,502 in various other zones of land fighting, and 12,160 at sea.

FURIOUS MOUNTAIN FIGHTING.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 2.—Furious mountain fighting is in progress on the North-Eastern Montenegrin frontier between the Montenegrins, helped by a few fugitive Serbians and Austrians. Further to the north-westward the struggle spreads into Austrian territory, between the Montenegrin border and the Upper Drina. From the beginning of the war the Montenegrins have had the better of the fighting with the Austrians. They have been across the frontier in many places. The annoyance to Austria has been serious and the Vienna Government is said to be determined to end it.

WILL HAVE FAR-REACHING EFFECT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—A decision which will have a far-reaching effect on the future action of the United States against German activities in this country and in Canada probably will be returned here late to-day. Federal officials believe that the verdict of the jury in the trial of the Hamburg-American Line officials, charged with violating United States Custom laws through furnishing supplies to German warships, may establish a precedent for numerous other cases involving pro-German propagandists. New York was turned into a virtual naval base that Germany's commerce raiders might be furnished with fuel and supplies. More than $1,500,000 from Germany is admitted to have been spent. The question at issue is whether American Customs laws were violated when false manifests were made and vessels cleared in such a way as to prevent information of their mission reaching Germany's enemies. Closing arguments to the jury were made to-day by Roger Wood, Assistant United States District Attorney, and William Rand, Jr., chief counsel for the defence. Judge Howe will instruct the jury immediately afterwards.

Greece Delays Answer To The Allies---Russia Ready To Act in the Balkans

Suspicion That King Constantine May Not Grant All the Entente Demands—Teutons, Bulgars and Turks Face Dilemma.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Reports from Athens regarding the negotiations of the Allies with Greece are still conflicting. Some despatches declare that King Constantine is prepared to assume an attitude of more "benevolent" neutrality than ever, while others voice the suspicion that the Greek Cabinet is not prepared to go as far as the Entente Powers desire.

In any case the Allies' demands for guarantees of safety and facilities for the armies operating near the Greek frontier remain unanswered and there appears to be a hitch in the negotiations. The Greek repiy was expected on Monday but is still delayed.

The Athens correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company takes an optimistic view in a despatch from Athens, received yesterday, which says:

"The basis of Greece's reply is a neutrality which will continue benevolent to the Entente as long as the sovereign rights of Greece are not infringed and no restrictions of a military character are imposed.

"Greece argues that, with Salonika and its railway communications in the hands of the Allies, Greek forces will be deprived of their only adequate provisioning base. There is no indication that the Entente will modify its original demands, but both the Government and the diplomatists are hopeful of a satisfactory result."

German newspapers state that Field Marshal Von Mackensen's army, with Bulgarians and Turks, is to be directed against the Anglo-French forces in the south, but doubtless many of them are going down the Danube to meet the Russian menace. The public is expecting every day to hear of the movement of the Russian army which the Emperor recently reviewed in Bessarabia, but apparently the negotiations with Roumania for the use of the Danube have not been concluded.

A Budapest report goes so far as to say that Roumania has refused permission to the Russians to use the river through Roumanian territory, which would be the more convenient route for an attack on Western Bulgaria.

The Russians, moreover, are being somewhat relieved on the extreme north of their line by the retreat of the Germans. By a counter attack in the region of Illoukst the Russians have driven Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's men a little further from the Dvina River. Even in the contrary event, however, the Russians have plenty of men to spare for the Balkan campaign this winter.

The number of Serbians who have taken refuge in Albania is estimated by the Athens correspondent of the Star at 250,000, including soldiers and civilians. The army is said to have retained all its mountain batteries and some of the field guns. A large number of Serbian boys between the ages of fifteen and seventeen accompanied the army and will be trained to fill the gaps in the ranks.

County Ratepayers Promise To Endorse Whatever Grant Council Makes to Patriotic Fund

Did Not Name An Amount But Requested County Council to Use Their Judgment and to Be Mindful of Present Demands in Deciding County's Contribution.

FINE SPIRIT DISPLAYED

It was doubtless a recognition of the wisdom of the members of the County Council and of their knowledge of the conditions throughout the County and the sentiments of its residents that led Wednesday's rural deputation to refrain from specifying the amount they desired to give to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Those representative farmers, however, left no doubt as to their desire that they should bear a full share of the burdens of the war, and of their approval of the system of collecting their contribution by a tax levy on their assessment. And as a parting encouragement to the councillors they assured them that whatever action they decided upon would be fully endorsed by the ratepayers, and favourably regarded during the approaching municipal elections.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell had concluded a detailed explanation of the operations of the Patriotic Fund in the city of Peterborough and what it had accomplished by suggesting that the county give $4,000 a month during the coming year.

Warden Kindred felt that, in the compiling of figures comparing the city and the county's contribution since the commencement of war, the county had not received credit for all it had done.

Mr. O'Connell replied that he was considering only the gifts to the Patriotic Fund and not to the Red Cross funds and others.

Mr. Squire, Norwood —Is not this amount larger than the proportion expected from Canada as a whole?

Mr. O'Connell replied that some places in the west could not be expected to give as largely as the east.

Mr. Anderson, Otonabee— Did the Central committee ask you to raise this amount?

Mr. O'Connell stated that no direct request had been made, but that the people have promised to support the wives and families of the soldiers, that Peterborough's credit at Ottawa is almost wiped out and it is now an apparent duty to replenish that credit.

Mr. J. H. Garbutt.

Ex-Warden J. H. Garbutt of Smith was the first speaker from the rural delegation. The residents in the rural sections, he said, were just beginning Canadians—Back to Back at Ypres!

The man does not breathe who can read this history and remain unmoved. Who can ponder upon the thrilling pictures without experiencing a wondrous pride in the valour of his race.

THE story pulsates with the ardour of the heroes who man the shrapnel-swept trenches, charge cheering across the deadly "no-man's-land" and act in the bloody drama.

Now, while pulses beat, is the time to gather and garner from the actors themselves this glowing tale, the like of which the world has never known before. And it has been well done as a thrilling, absorbing, vivid pageant—a story in volume after volume that will never die, a memorial tablet graved with the names and deeds of those men whom our children's children will delight to honor and know as household words—the manhood of the World's finest peoples.

Famous Authors who have Contributed.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of "Sherlock Holmes," writes a stirring memorable article on "How the Boer War Prepared Us for the Great War." Every citizen in the Empire should read this valuable contribution.

Sir Gilbert Parker (Bart.) Canada's foremost son among world authors, has written on "The Rally of the Empire." He describes the instant binding-up of the scattered British Empire into a mighty working force in the cause of Freedom.

H. G. Wells, foretold the Zeppelin raids long in advance of the war. Mr. Wells has written "Why Britain Went to War." Every citizen in the Empire should read this special and thoughtful explanation. It contrasts the opposing National ideals in true "Wellsian" style.

Gordon Craig

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"Come on, you," he said, jerking him savagely. "Yer bloody pirate; make another crack an' I'll land yer one. Is he that Henley, sir?" of the lieutenant

"Yes; ever hear of him?"

"Have I? Aye, many the time. He's wanted in Galveston, sir, for somethin' worse than runnin' arms—it was a knifin' job, sir."

"What became of the girl?"

"The steward took her below and locked her in before the fracas started."

We went down the companion stairs together into a deserted cabin. No steward was in evidence, and, finding the captain's stateroom locked, the lieutenant kicked open the door and entered. I turned back, explored the passage and finally dragged Louis out from a dark corner of the pantry.

"You locked up the girl."

"Ah just had to, sah. Captain Henley he just nat-rally skin me alive, sah, if Ah don't. But Ah nebbeh hurt her nose."

"Where is she?"

"All right, Louis," and I tossed him into one corner. "Now, listen; set that table and get some food on it quick. Make coffee, but don't wait for anything else."

"Yes, sah."

I crossed the cabin and inserted the key. As the door opened she stood there waiting, her hands held out.

"It—it is all over with? You have been successful?"

"Yes, don't worry," and I held her hands fast, looking into her eyes. "There can be no further trouble. Captain Henley and his crew are prisoners. The lieutenant is in Henley's cabin, going through the papers. He wants to have a full report ready when the Saline comes up. The three of us will breakfast together."

"You must permit me to wash the wound on your head first," she insisted. "The hair is all matted with blood. Please."

She ministered to me with womanly gentleness, parting the matted hair and cleansing the wound with water. While in no way serious it was an ugly bruise and required considerable attention. Sitting there on a stool while she worked, I could hear Louis boasting about in the cabin, but my mind was busy with a thousand matters requiring settlement. At last I refused to be ministered to any longer. As we entered the cabin the lieutenant stood in Henley's door.

"I was looking for you, Craig," he said, coming forward and bowing to my companion. "Here is a newspaper clipping which may be of interest. I found it on the deck."

I read it hastily and in silence handed it to her, watching her face as she read. It was a local item describing the finding of a dead body which could not be identified. The details of the man's appearance as well as the clothes worn were carefully depicted, evidently in hope some one might thus recognize the party. She remained with the bit of paper in her hands for what seemed a long while, while we waited. Then her eyes were slowly lifted to our faces.

"That was Philip Henley," she said soberly.

"Your husband, madam?" asked the lieutenant as I remained silent.

"Yes; legally my husband, although he had driven me from him by dissipation and neglect. I—I cannot tell you the wretched story now."

"Nor do I ask it," he hastened to assure her. "What is it, Mapes?"

A bluejacket stood at the foot of the stairs, one hand lifted in salute.

"The Saline, sir, is alongside and hailing us. The boatswain sent me."

We followed the two on deck, and after one glance about I led her around the bulge of the cabin to the narrow deck space astern. The boat in which we had escaped had been hoisted into its davits, and we halted in its shadow. I could perceive the whiteness of the Saline's deck and the group of officers on the bridge. The captain, facing us, hollowed his hands.

"What have you to report, Mr. Hutton?"

"The vessel is in our possession, sir, and the crew under guard below."

"Any injuries?"

"None serious, sir."

"And the captain—Henley—did you get him?"

"He's with the others."

"Better put the fellow in irons, Hutton. There are some serious charges against him, you know."

"What is to be our course, sir?"

"Pensacola. Don't wait for us."

"Aye, aye, sir. Shall I hold Craig and the lady?"

"Not on this case. We have all the evidence needed. If you take their addresses that will be all that is necessary. Pleasant voyage!"

He waved his hand and then, perceiving us as he turned away from the rail, lifted his cap in salute.

"It is all over now, dear," I whispered.

"Yes, but—but I do not feel as though I could ever touch that money."

"You will have no choice. The courts will decide that."

"I know what I would like to do with some of it."

"What?"

"Buy this—this boat."

I Clasped the Straying Hand and Drew Her to Me.

"In memory?"

"Of course. You loved me then."

"And now and always. Do you know what is the first thing I shall do when we make Pensacola?"

"No."

I clasped the straying hand and drew her to me, looking down into her eyes.

"Telegraph my father I am coming home."

"Is that all?"

"And that I shall bring a wife with me. Right here I end my career as a soldier of fortune."

Under the protecting shadow of the boat our lips met.

THE END.

BRONCHITIS

NEGLECTED COLD.

Bronchitis starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is a light color but as the trouble progresses the phlegm arising from the bronchial tubes becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often of a stringy nature.

Bronchitis is usually at its worst in the morning on account of the phlegm becoming lodged in the bronchial tubes during the night, and it very often takes some time coughing and gagging before you can get the throat clear of the phlegm.

When this happens you may be sure that if the bronchitis is not attended to immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia, or some other more serious lung trouble.

The best remedy for to cure the cold is DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Roy Conner, Greenwood, Ont., writes: "I must tell you what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Whenever I got a cold I would be troubled with bronchitis, and sometimes I would almost choke to death. After taking two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I was cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25c and 50c. per bottle. See that you get the genuine

WOMAN WEAK AND NERVOUS

Creston, Iowa.—"I suffered with female troubles from the time I came into womanhood until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would have pains if I overworked or lifted anything heavy, and I would be so weak and nervous and in so much misery that I would be prostrated. A friend told me what your medicine had done for her and I tried it. It made me strong and healthy and our home is now happy with a baby boy. I am very glad that I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and do all I can to recommend it."—Mrs. A. B. BOSCAMP, 804 E. Howard Street, Creston, Iowa.

Tons of Roots and Herbs are used annually in the manufacture of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is known from ocean to ocean as the standard remedy for female ills.

For forty years this famous root and herb medicine has been pre-eminently successful in controlling the diseases of women. Merit alone could have stood this test of time.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

ILLUSION IN WEIGHT.

Take a sofa pillow in one hand, balance it carefully until you think you have a right sense of its weight. Hold a large glass in the other hand and have some one pour water into it until you think it weighs about as much as the pillow. Then weigh the two and see how far out of the way you are.

Or take a cup in one hand and put in the other as many coins as you think may be needed to balance it. You will find your judgment far from correct.

Take two same jars. Fill one with hot water and the other with cold and ask a friend to say which is the heavier of the two. The bottle with hot water will seem 25 per cent heavier.

Take three articles weighing the same. Put one on the ground, one on a table and one on a high shelf. Ask a friend to lift them and determine which of the three is the heaviest. He will pick the one on the shelf as the one which weighs the most every time.

The laws of illusion in weight are quite exact, and it is marvelous to see what a large proportion of people will make exactly the same mistake in exactly the same way. Thus the pillow seems lighter than it is because its appearance suggests lightness. Of two similar weights the one that is the larger in size will always seem the lighter. That is why the weight of the cup will be underestimated in the experiment just described.

Any change from normal temperature, either hot or cold, will appear to increase the temperature. A piece of ice the same weight as a glass of water will seem to weigh twice as much.

The extra exertion needed to sustain the weight of an object either above or below our natural reach seems to make it heavier, and for this reason the weight on the shelf will seem to have the advantage.

Does this show what poor judges we are? Not at all. It only proves our good judgment. It is like the sad case of the college student in a class on optics who could see through the illusions, so that matters which appeared crooked to the rest of the class, although they were really straight, appeared straight to him. Instead of complimenting him on his discernment, the professor promptly expelled the student from the class on the ground that he was drunk. And he was!—New York American.

MAYONNAISE DRESSING.

Mix one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of powdered sugar and a few grains of cayenne. When well mixed, add two egg yolks and one-half teaspoonful of vinegar, and then add olive oil very gradually (at first drop by drop) while stirring constantly. As mixture thickens, thin with a teaspoonful of vinegar or lemon juice alternately, stirring or beating constantly. Use in all two tablespoonfuls each of vinegar and lemon juice, and one and one-half cupfuls of olive oil. If the oil is added too rapidly the dressing will have a curdled appearance. A smooth consistency may often be restored by adding the curdled mixture slowly to the yolk of another egg. The bowl containing the mixture should be placed in a larger bowl of crushed ice and the oil for the mayonnaise should be thoroughly chilled. Mayonnaise should be stiff enough to hold its shape.

Eczema Was Cured Twelve Years Ago

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health, keep the bowels regular and the blood rich but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it regularly.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my legs and suffered terribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

"Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house, and find it invaluable for chafing, chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct." —(Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

GOLD WITHOUT GLINT

By MARK ANDERSON.

(Copyright by American Press Association.)

"I'm tired of this gentlemanly sailing," said Ned Ellery to the half dozen young men he had aboard his yacht, the Vesta. "What do you say to putting the crew ashore and working her ourselves?"

"A belly idea!" exclaimed all at once.

"Very well, we'll do it, but I want you fellows to understand that you're to obey orders and treat me as respectfully as the crew do. I'm to be captain, you know."

This put a different complexion on the matter, but all considered it jokingly and one by one agreed to "sign articles." The crew were put ashore and given railroad tickets to their homes for a few days' leave. The young men took off their yachting suits, put on ordinary sailors' togs and reported to their captain for duty.

For the first day it was pleasant sailing, but on the second the sky took on a dirty look, the wind freshened and increased to a gale. Since they were near no harbor the Vesta was obliged to stand out to sea, and the gentleman crew found all the work it wanted and more than it had bargained for. One morning tired, soaked and soiled they put into the harbor of one of the most aristocratic towns on the coast. However, the weather had changed, and the sun sparkled merrily on the waves. Ellery went ashore to order provisions. When he returned he said:

"Fellows, I met my old friend Duncan Starkweather on the dock. He's invited a party of girls to go on a cruise, and his yacht has broken down. I offered him mine as a substitute, and it was accepted. We sail at four bells this afternoon."

It looked at first as if there would be a mutiny. All agreed that they had not shipped for any such purpose, but the captain quieted them by saying that while not engaged in actually working the yacht they might devote themselves to the girls. But it must be distinctly understood that they were to retain the role of sailors. Under this provision all consented, the girls were taken aboard and the Vesta weighed anchor.

"I'm sorry," said Starkweather to Ellery, "that I couldn't muster any boys for the girls. The truth is all our young men go to the big cities."

"Too bad!" replied Ellery. "You and can hardly be expected to entertain ten girls."

This bit of dialogue was overheard by the crew, who looked at one another knowingly. "We'll show these duffers," they muttered, "whether they'll have all the entertaining to do."

The girls sat on the after deck lamenting that there were no young men to flirt with and remembering how advantageous was yachting for catching husbands. Then they strayed away over the ship.

"Beautiful day," remarked Billy Riggs, who was coiling a rope, to Margaret Lee as she passed him.

"Eh?" was her surprised reply as her nose went up.

Billy went on coiling the rope.

"A good sailor! Oh, you mean am I liable to be seasick. I'm a pretty good sailor." And she joined a couple of girls further on. Irwin saw the three turn and look at him indignantly.

"You there!" called one girl in a despairing voice to a member of the crew. "Won't you please bring me a napkin or a towel or a bowl or something?"

The sailor didn't hear.

"Here, sailor," cried another girl, "please help me to the side, won't you?"

"Sorry," replied the sailor, "but the jib's flapping. I must go and attend to it."

Ellery, finding that he and Starkweather had more to do in the case of the girls than they could attend to, went forward, called the crew together and remonstrated. His remonstrance produced no effect. The men hadn't shipped as stewards, but before the mast. Then he went to Starkweather and revealed the situation. Starkweather transmitted it to the girls, who by this time were too ill to care whether they were tenderly placed in bunks or permitted to roll in the scuppers. At any rate, they were not in a condition to placate the crew. But the yacht had been headed for the harbor, and it was not long before she was quietly riding at anchor.

"Boys," said the captain, "full dress to speed the parting guests."

Every man went below and returned in white flannel trousers turned up at the ankles and navy blue jacket and cap.

"Young ladies," said the captain, "before you go ashore permit me to introduce my crew." And he mentioned each man separately, the girls now and again recognizing a name which figured frequently in the society columns of the city journals. A few were noted for being the sons of multimillionaires, and all were gentlemen.

The painful scene—painful to the girls, deliciously comforting to the boys—came to an end on the arrival of a boat the captain signaled for, and the young ladies went ashore. The same evening coals of fire were heaped upon their heads by each receiving a basket of flowers with a card, "Compliments of the crew of the Vesta." And that was the last any of them ever saw of the said crew.

"Girls," said Miss Lee at the tea table over which they met the next afternoon, "we've gone and done it. They say 'all is not gold that glitters.' I wish gold would always glitter, so that we lone creatures living in a town deserted by men would know it when we saw it."

Clean, pure and wholesome, a tea you will like.

Christmas Appeal

FOR

The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

In the 40 years of the Hospital's existence there have been treated within its walls 26,105 children as in-patients; 231,768 as out-patients; a grand total of 257,876 in and out-patients.

The Hospital for Sick Children gives a province-wide service, for little patients from every section of Ontario have sought its aid. Last year 499 patients were admitted from 233 places outside the city of Toronto. In 1914 there were 394 from 210 places.

Of the 2,858 in-patients last year 1,771 were medical cases and 1,087 surgical. In the orthopedic department of the 2,838 in-patients, 264 were treated for deformities, 21 Pott's disease of the spine, 10 lateral curvature of the spine, 10 bow-legs, 57 club-feet, 17 dislocations of hip, 42 tubercular disease of knee, hip, ankle, wrist and elbow; 76 infantile paralysis, 3 wry neck, and 21 miscellaneous.

Our battle is never-ending—is one that will continue while the world lasts, for it is the fight between the armies of life and death, to save the child life, the sick little ones, sons and daughters not only of our soldier men, but of the fathers and mothers still in this home-land province.

The Hospital is beating back disease and death, the enemies that assail the lives of little children as the British Empire is beating back Germany, Austria and Turkey, the enemies that assail the life of liberty.

So we appeal to the generous people of Ontario not to forget those so near and dear to us, who lie in the beds and cots of this great charity.

Will the people at large, as of old, respond to our call? Will they remember that every year is a war year for the Hospital, every day a day of battle, and that the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake?

The Hospital has waged its war for forty years. The people of Toronto and Ontario have been its friend, and this year of all years it requires help. Surely you will give to a charity that cares for every sick child in Ontario, for only as your money reaches the Hospital can the Hospital's mercy reach the children.

Every dollar is a link of kindness in the chain of mercy that joins the money in your pocket to the miseries of some child's life, some mother's heart.

Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees,
Toronto.

Preparing Casualty Lists.

Battles take place over such a long front nowadays, and are spread over so much greater a time, that the preparation of casualty lists is much more difficulty than in previous wars. As soon as possible after a battle comes to an end the regiments concerned are paraded, often enough in the battlefield itself, and the roll called by the adjutant. The names of those who do not answer are carefully noted and sent to the headquarters of the brigade to which the regiment is attached.

The names of the wounded who have been sent to hospital by the Royal Army Medical Corps men are taken and marked off on special forms. Even if a soldier is so seriously wounded that he cannot give details of himself the doctors have no difficulty in discovering them from the identity disc and badge each soldier carries. It is from these badges that the names of the dead are noted and forwarded to headquarters. A certain amount of time is allowed for stragglers to return to camp before they are reported as missing and the lists completed. They are then cabled to England and checked again at the War Office from the regimental rolls which are kept there. Then and not till then the lists of dead, wounded, and missing are published.

National Preparedness.

A Highland minister, of the old school, who was rather pompous, came to a shepherd's house to baptise the son and heir.

"Are you prepared?" he asked the fond parent.

"Ou ay, munnister; I have got a graund ham for tea."

"I mean spiritually prepared," thundered the cleric.

"Af coorse I am! oh, yes, I got a jar o' whusky from the inn," replied the imperturbable Scot.

TIPPING THE INSPECTOR.

Experience of a Traveler With Two Customs Officials.

"When I came back from Europe, this being my first trip," said a Chicago man, "I was given a striking object lesson in the difference between an American and an English customs inspector. This related to their attitude toward tips.

"Friends of mine had told me it was the proper thing to slip an inspector a little present on getting back. The one who attended me was so polite and took so much trouble to go through everything—we had numerous trunks and bags—that while I was waiting at the customs house office on the pier to pay my duty I slipped into one of his outer coat pockets an English sovereign I happened to find among my American money.

"A few minutes later he approached me.

"'Did you put a gold piece into my pocket?' he asked.

"I smilingly admitted that I had done so.

"'Will you please take it out?' he asked. I complied.

"'You may have not realized it, but that might have cost me my job,' he said and walked away.

"Now, when I landed at Liverpool an inspector who handled my baggage and marked it hung about me until I went to have it checked, or registered, as they call it. As I stood near the window he kept repeating, 'Don't forget my pocket; don't forget my pocket, sir,' until I finally grasped his meaning and handed him a tip. Then with a 'Thank you,' with a rising inflection, he left me."

Adjectives From Names.

If you want your fame absolutely and entirely absorbed you should have an adjective rather than a noun derived from your name. Mention of a stentorian about never nowadays recalls the famous Stentor, whose voice made him notorious at the siege of Troy. Nor do we remember when we use maudlin (with a touch of scorn) that this word is what art has done for Mary Magdalene. She was so often represented by painters with eyes swollen and red with weeping that her name passed into the language to mean tearful.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat

When you wake up with the backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and slow you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sour water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Invisible Troops.

Invisibility may become the chief arm of the French land service if Major Kopenhagen's invention for making troops invisible to the enemy observed before and above them is adopted by the general staff. The invention has been submitted, after trials beginning in April, 1913, at St. Cyr. L'Information states that on trial the new method made 25 French soldiers on an open field so invisible that an aviator circling over the field at a height of 1,000 feet had to report, at the end of 24 minutes search, that he could not locate them.

IMPORTANCE OF YOUR FACE.

Something For Girls and Boys to Take Seriously to Heart.

If you stop to think about this for a moment you see what a tremendously important thing it is. Just as surely as you have a face the story of your life will be written on that face. If you are mean and crabbed and disagreeable your face will settle into a disagreeable expression, and everybody will avoid you. If your disposition is sunny and kind and gracious your face will beam with goodness, and everybody will know at a glance that you are lovable. And the older you grow the more distinctly your face will tell the story.

When you go out into the world to earn your living the first thing that people will ask is this. What kind of a boy is he or what kind of a girl is she? Under our present industrial system the employer has to teach young persons their trade after he hires them. So he is more interested in the applicant's character than in his present ability. And the character he will learn from the face.

It is just as the director of the employment bureau of a great department store said to me: "We base our choice largely on the applicant's looks. To be sure, the faces of boys and girls are not deeply marked. Many applicants have only begun to outline on the blank page of their cheek the picture that will eventually appear there. But even a sketch tells much. We know that almost inevitably a child will continue the facial development it has begun. The sulky shiftless, don't care kind of face we don't want. When we see a child with a face full of courage, hope, truth, good cheer and kindliness we pick that child quick. That is the sort we are after." If, then, our faces have so much to do with our future success, isn't it worth while to try to make them attractive by being attractive ourselves?—St. Nicholas.

Running Nose Colds Cured Sneezing Stopped Instantly

The worst of a cold is how suddenly it comes. No time to hurry to the drug store, croup develops, the lungs are affected with pneumonia or tuberculosis and it's too late. Keep Catarrhozone on hand,—it kills colds instantly. Something magical about the way it cures catarrh and bronchitis. Catarrhozone is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way; it heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold—that's worth remembering.

Beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months treatment costs $1.00; small size 50c; sample size 25c.

A Dual Reputation.

As Grantland Rice tells the story a certain distinguished English actor whom we may safely call Jones-Brown, plays a persistent but horrible game of golf. During a recent visit to this country the actor in question occasionally visited the links of a well known country club.

After an especially miserable showing of ineptness one morning, he flung down his driver in disgust.

"Caddy," he said, addressing the silent youth who stood alongside "that was awful, wasn't it?"

"Purty bad, sir," stated the boy.

"Oh, I wouldn't say that, sir," said the caddy soothingly.

"Did you ever see a worse player than I am?"

"No, sir, I never did," confessed the boy truthfully. "But some of the other boys was tellin' me yisterday about a gentleman that must be a worse player than you are. They said his name was Jones-Brown."

Barber—Poor Jim has been sent to a lunatic asylum.

Victim in Chair—Who's Jim?

"Jim is my twin brother, sir. Jim has long been breedin' over the hard times, an' I suppose he finally got crazy.

"Is that so?"

"Yes, he and me has worked side by side for years, and we were so alike we couldn't tell each other apart. We both brooded a great deal, too. No money in this business now.

"What's the reason?"

"Prices too low. Unless a customer takes a shampoo it doesn't pay to shave or haircut. Poor Jim, I caught him trying to cut a customer's throat because he refused a shampoo, so I had to have the poor fellow locked up. Makes me sad. Sometimes I feel sorry I didn't let him slash all he wanted to. It might have saved his reason. Shampoo, sir?"

"Yes!"

A Bit of Correspondence.

The following correspondence, ending in true Irish fashion, actually passed between two men in England some years ago:

"Mr. Thompson presents his compliments to Mr. Simpson and begs to request that he will keep his dogs from trespassing on his grounds."

"Mr. Simpson presents his compliments to Mr. Thompson and begs to suggest that in future he should not spell 'dogs' with two goes."

"Mr. Thompson's respects to Mr. Simpson and will feel obliged if he will add the letter 'e' to the last word in the note just received, so as to represent Mr. Simpson and lady.'

"Mr. Simpson returns Mr. Thompson's note unopened, the impertinence it contains being only equaled by its vulgarity."

EMANUEL, THE JESTER.

Death of a "Punch" Humorist Widely Mourned.

The thousands who have laughed over his witty sayings and stories will genuinely regret the death of Mr. Walter Emanuel, who for a number of years regularly supplied a page of bantering humor to "Punch." Here are a few examples of his fun.

Just after the publication of one of his animal books called "A Dog's Day," a friend meeting him one day congratulated him warmly on his work "A1, Mr. Emanuel. A1," he said. "And K9-2," replied Mr. Emanuel, quietly.

He was fond of telling how he was once badly insulted by a dog. "I was admiring my garden," he said, "when suddenly I saw a strange dog enter, look round, and then walk up to one of my leading blades of grass and coolly eat it. My anger, I think, was excusable, for it was a fine sturdy blade, well over a couple of inches high, and I had been much complimented on it. The garden, indeed, has never looked the same since!

Another dog story concerned a pavement artist who drew a milking scene. "But, my good fellow," said Mr. Emanuel, gazing at the scene, "that is not a bit like milk." "No, it ain't," was the answer. "I did one like the real thing once. It took me close on two hours, and then a beastly dog came and licked it up."

In his "Answers to Correspondents," "House Dog" was informed that any chemist would make up a mouth-wash to remove the unpleasant taste of burglars, while "Anxious" was told there was nothing degrading in living in a kennel, as King Edward and Queen Alexandra did so. In the advertisement, for instance, it was stated "regularly used in the kennels of the King and Queen."

Mr. Emanuel was the inventor of the comic telegrams from people who were unavoidably prevented from attending this or that public function. Here is one which he read out at a dinner, and which was supposed to be sent by the Kaiser. "Have not been invited, but cannot resist temptation to send telegram. Much gratified at my son's loyal reception in India. He hopes shortly to visit other portions of his future empire." From which sly hit it may be gathered that Mr. Emanuel knew the Kaiser, whom he once wrote "deserved a Punch in the eye" better than a good many other people.

"Both men and women have sprung from monkeys, but the women have sprung farther," was one of his most quoted sayings, while referring to pets in his book "Bubble and Squeak," he said: "Sufferers from neuralgia require special consideration in the matter of pets. To these I would recommend silkworms, whose language is unexceptionable, except when you have to take the lettuce from them for the salad: or butterflies, whose bark, even when they are angry, is scarcely audible."

Brown's Case.

A man was going through a hospital one day when he came across Brown, who was patched up here and pieced out there, and looking considerably like a veteran of an aviation corps.

"Sorry to see you looking this, old man," remarked the visitor, pausing before the chair in which Brown was recuperating. "What in the world ever happened to you?"

"You don't really mean it!" exclaimed the visitor almost enthusiastically. "They say that when a man falls from a great height he thinks of all his sins before he hits the ground. Is that true?"

"Well, no—that is, not in my case," thoughtfully rejoined Brown. "You see, I only fell five storeys."

How To Get Rid of a Bad Cough

A Home-Made Remedy that Will Do It Quickly. Cheap and Easily Made

If you have a bad cough or chest cold which refuses to yield to ordinary remedies, get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking a teaspoonful every hour or two. In 24 hours your cough will be conquered or very nearly so. Even whooping cough is greatly relieved in this way.

The above mixture makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the finest cough syrup that money could buy—at a cost of only 54 cents. Easily prepared in 5 minutes. Full directions with Pinex.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup preparation takes right hold of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough in a way that is really remarkable. It also quickly heals the inflamed membranes which accompany a painful cough, and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the most stubborn loose cough. Excellent for bronchitis, spasmodic croup and winter coughs. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children like it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex,"—do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Pleasant for Him.

There was only one man at the boarding house, and there wasn't much of him. But the girls all made a fuss over him. After all, he was a man! One evening they had a dance, and our hero engaged himself to Miss A. for No. 1. Miss A. didn't turn up, so he condescendingly suggested that Miss B. might take it on. Just as they commenced to dance Miss A. entered the room, and her eyes glittered angrily.

"I'm afraid you're late, dearest," said Miss B., with the air of a victor.

But Miss A. tossed her head.

"Yes, dear," she replied curtingly; "another case of the early bird catching the worm!"

A CHILD HATES OIL, CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Sick, Feverish, Constipated

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Strange Signs on Ships.

Strange signs frequently hang from ships which puzzle even dwellers in seaport towns. A basket slung from the mainmast head is a sailor's sign to notify that the cargo has been loaded or discharged, as the case may be, and that the ship is ready to start on her next trip. This she cannot do until the usual Board of Trade formalities have been observed, and the ship's papers which, while a ship is in port, are deposited with the Board of Trade, have been returned to the captain.

A generally mysterious emblem is a besom lashed to a mainmast or bridge railing. This is to signify that the vessel is for sale.

Occasionally a dark blue stripe may be seen running fore and aft on a vessel; as a matter of fact this is a sign of recent bereavement. Blue is the sailor's mourning, and the stripe of this color takes the place of the black or band used by the landsman as a notification of death.

A Dance Frock.

Nothing makes a lovelier dance frock than silk net, and nothing is easier to fashion into a satisfactory evening costume. Make first a low neck evening slip of some soft silk. Pussy willow will give the prettiest sheen, together with softness, though crepe de chine or goldenrod satin may be used if preferred. The bodice is just folds of the silk net, caught at the shoulder with shirring and drawn down into the belt at back and front, and the belt a wide strip of satin ribbon.

The skirt has ruffles of tulle mounted on a tulle "drop," the upper and lower ruffles twelve inches deep, with enough narrow ruffles between to give the length of the skirt. Attached to the waist line are four-yard wide sections of tulle, which hang points down, over the ruffles.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The double breasted closing in the front of the blouse extends to the base of the throat and here it is joined by a small, flat collar which extends all around the neck. The sleeves are plain at the shoulder but slightly puffed at the wrist, where they are finished with a band cuff.

The skirt has five shaped gores, and these are arranged in box pleats in such a manner that there is a flat panel in the front and that the edges of the pleats meet in the centre of the back. Each box pleat is made double.

Waist and skirt are joined beneath a flat belt and at present this is usually made of the dress material. If collar and cuffs be made of silk this may also serve for the belt and it will be quite correct to add a belt of leather.

Gabardine, velveteen, serge, cashmere and similar materials are liked for these frocks and poplin will be found most satisfactory for wear.

The dress pattern, No. 7,438, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Medium size requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch material. Also ⅝ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods for trimming.

In looking for designs for school frocks this one should not be overlooked. It is simple, but it is also novel and very stylish.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Remarkable Operation on Returned Soldier.—Picture shows an X-ray of Pte. Arthur Gibbon's leg and a photo of Col. Dr. Richardson, who is trying to mend it at the Toronto General Hospital. Pte. Gibbons was taken prisoner at St. Julien. A bullet smashed his right thigh-bone and severed the nerve tissue. Pieces of metal are disclosed by the X-ray at various points. It is a question whether German doctors made any effort to re-set the bone, as one leg is shorter than the other. Dr. Richardson is operating and expects to give Gibbons a good leg again.

A Smooth, Hairless Skin For Every Woman

(The Modern Beauty.)

With the aid of a plain delatone paste it is an easy matter to rid the skin of unsightly hairy growths. The paste is made by mixing some water with powdered delatone. This is applied to the hairs not wanted and after 2 or 3 minutes rubbed off and the skin washed when every trace of hair will have vanished. When you go to your druggist for delatone be sure you get the genuine article.

EDITH CAVELL.

(By John O'Keefe in the New York World.)

Sun glint and gun glint, and sweet eyes clear of pain,

O distant ones, all white of face,
Who hear the riue roll!
See the real death, the true disgrace
The devil's perfect toll;
A nation in the firing place
Has murdered its own soul!

Straight fire and hate fire, with orders from the Crown;
But from the lips one breath outslips to blow an empire down!

We saw the Tide of Terror sweep
Across the Belgian plain,
And women died like poisoned sheep
That drop in a murrain,
Then wherefore should we pause and weep
Fore one more woman slain?

Clear soul and dear soul, white as the clouds that fly;
But on the cheeks the rose that speaks, "To pale girl coward I!"

For once she knew of mercy's knell
When in a shuddering sea,
The Lusitania's fragile shell
A scorpion stung in glee.
"A thousand in the sea-deeps dwell!
What is one here?" asks she.

Proud head! Unbowed head! O eagle's crest and dove's
Where now you lie beneath the sky the wide world weeps and loves!

There is a hawk that hunts on high,
On town bred geese to dine.
A thousand slays he from the sky,
With ne'er a warning sign.
"Behold!" I hear the martyr's cry,
"What is one death like mine."
Red breast and dead breast, the trembling flowers beneath!
Your white hands sow, row upon row, a crop of dragon's teeth!

UGH! ACID STOMACH, SOURNESS, HEARTBURN, GAS OR INDIGESTION

The Moment "Pape's Diapepsin" Reaches the Stomach All Distress Goes

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down; Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favourite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometime — they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

New York.

New York is the most wonderful city in the western hemisphere. It has the tallest office buildings in the world; it has the greatest bridges on the North American continent; it has more hotels than any other city in the world; its Stock Exchange is the greatest in existence; it is the world's greatest seaport; it has the most magnificent railway stations in America; it is the greatest banking center in the country; more popular songs are published in New York than in all other cities combined; it has more Pittsburgh millionaires than Pittsburgh; it has a larger Irish population than Dublin, a larger Jewish population than Jerusalem had in its most glorious days, and, according to estimates made by some of our most able estimators, it has a larger number of native New Yorkers than Cohoes.—Chicago Record Herald.

His Comment.

Howell—What did the poor fellow say when they picked him up with a broken leg after being knocked down by a trolley car? Powell—That it was the first time in his life that he hadn't had to wait for a car.—New York Press.

Thackeray's Salute.

Of that form of eccentricity closely related to egotism, whereby many of the world's greatest artists and writers have conveyed to us their appreciation of their own work, a most interesting case is that of Thackeray, ordinarily a most modest man. But there is good authority that Thackeray never passed the house in Russell square wherein he lived when he wrote "Vanity Fair" without raising his hat—a tribute from himself to his great work.

The Llama.

The story of the name of the South American llama is interesting. "Como se llama?" (What is its name?) asked the early Spanish adventurers of the Peruvians. The natives, not understanding, merely echoed the last word of the question and the name has stuck through the centuries.

What are Peps

Peps are the new treatment for coughs, colds and lung troubles. They are little tablets made up from Pine extracts and medicinal essences. When put into the mouth these medicinal ingredients turn into healing vapors, which are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes. The Peps treatment is direct. Swallowing cough mixtures into the stomach, to cure ailments and disorders in throat and lungs, is indirect. Peps are revolutionizing the treatment of colds, as their price is within the reach of all. 50c. box all druggists, or Peps Co., Toronto.

County Ratepayers Promise to Endorse

to realize the demands the war is making on everybody. While we are separated from the war zone by three thousand miles, yet we feel that we are just as much concerned as if we were very close to it. We should be prepared to make our contributions until our giving begins to pinch us. He was in favour of a collection by a tax levy.

Mr. Joshua Smithson.

Mr. Smithson of Otonabee, was in favour of letting the Council decide what should be contributed. He approved of the tax idea and said it would give some a lift forward in doing their duty.

Wm. Johnston, Belmont—The least we could do was to help with our giving. We can't do too much for the boys at the front. Mr. Johnston also paid a tribute to the girls, the nurses who have enlisted their services and have passed almost unrecognized.

James Andrews, Asphodel, agreed with the proposal to raise a contribution by taxation. He agreed with the sentiments that had been expressed.

J. O'Reilly, Norwood, observed that the County Council was the proper body to handle this question. Some townships might be like some individuals. They would not give a proportionate share if it were left to them, while others would give liberally.

Mr. Munroe, Warsaw—We may come from the bush, but we are in accord with the ideals expressed here this afternoon. Mr. O'Connell's suggestion may be something like that of the man who placed a hen on a setting of goose eggs and said, "there, do your best." It might look large in the county, but we see this thing in its seriousness now. However, I know the Council will do its duty. Some ratepayers may say that my assessment is not as large as many others, but I am willing to pay above the tax as much as any man in my district. We do not know what giving is yet. Some mothers do, however.

Robert Graham, ex-Reeve of Smith, said he favoured the proposal to obtain the contribution by taxation. He knew by experience how the voluntary system would work.

Allan B. Mann, Smith also approved of this plan and agreed that the Council could be safely left with it.

Michael Purdue, Ennismore, said that he was confident the Council would do its duty. Don't think of Peterborough, Toronto or any other places. Do it willingly. Mr. Purdue said that the farmer did not wish to make money out of the war, yet it was a fact that prices were very good. Wheat had gone to $1.60 last year for a spell and it was now around one dollar, where in ordinary times it might be only sixty cents. Cheese, too, was a good price. As a result the farmer was in a position to give liberally. One load of grain would make up the difference on many a tax bill. Too often, he said, it was the case that the real poor man was giving generously according to his means while the rich man was sliding by. An elderly man, himself, Mr. Purdue said he had three nephews in the trenches and if he were a young man he would want to be there too.

Probably it was the quality of frankness attributed to the Irish that was responsible for Mr. Purdue's remarks that the farming community was in a good position to be liberal.

Mr. Ed. Hawthorne, Warsaw—I do not wish to mention any amount the Council should give, but we want you to look carefully into the requirements and to act accordingly, and we will back you up. This remark drew a round of applause. Continuing he said, we want to do our bit, and we want you to assume the responsibility. If you are not capable of doing it, get out and let others in. This was not said harshly as it sounds, but rather as the sentiment of the deputation that the ratepayers would endorse the Council's action and stand by the Councillors.

J. G. Keefer, Norwood, said that there were very few in the county but realized the seriousness of the situation and their duty toward it. We are fortunate that we can escape with the responsibility we are called upon to assume.

D. S. Campbell, ex-Reeve of Chandos, said that his boy had gone to the front. "It cost his mother bitter tears, but she was proud of him and so was I. If I was a little younger and physically sound I'd like to be by his side. It is not all hard, this going to the front. I would rather have him die in France than know he was a coward. I have implicit confidence in the Council and I know you will do what is right. Depend upon it, we will back you up when you come before us again for election.

J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., Belmont, said that the spirit of sacrifice in Peterborough was as great as would be found anywhere. He was willing to have the Council fix the amount of the contribution, and was confident that the Councillors would do their duty toward the Patriotic Fund and also to their constituents.

Harry Webber, North Monaghan, said that the deputation was unanimous in regard to the County's contribution. "We want you to do what is right, and I know you will do your duty."

Hugh Fife, Otonabee — As far as Otonabee is concerned she will do her share. We have already done well for the Red Cross and Patriotic Funds.

Andrew Fairbairn, Smith, expressed his sympathy with the movement and was content to leave the matter with the Council.

Wm. Brooks, Young's Point, said that this was the only method of raising the contribution. The ladies of Young's Point had raised money for the Red Cross by a tea and concert followed by a dance which they had been told was immoral.

Alex. Leason, Belmont, said that a levy was the only method to get the money. He had canvassed the Red Cross and he had wished then that he had the power to assess some of the people.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, Peterborough, stated that the Patriotic Fund money was well expended. Contributions should look for the families on whom the money is well spent, and not seek out the few on who spend it unwisely. He knew of several women who were saving as much as possible in order that when their husbands returned they would have something with which to make a fresh start.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin made a brief statement to the effect that no one wants a tug of war between the city and county. During the last eight months, county soldiers have enlisted, their wives placed on the list and there has been no word from the city to the county. The figures used were only for a guide to emphasize the needs of the coming year. It had been expected that by this time there would not be more than 5,000 soldiers on the Fund's list, but it has turned 27,000. Hence our responsibility is over 400 per cent. greater.

Referred to Finance Committee.

On motion of Reeve Shaw of Harvey, seconded by Reeve Darling of Dummer, the matter of dealing with the request from the deputation was transferred to the Finance committee of which Mr. W. A. Anderson of Otonabee is chairman. Warden Kindred closed the meeting by stating that the ratepayers would soon hear from the Council what action had been determined.

Achill Island.

There are few people who once having seen the island of Achill can forget its beauty. The island lies close to the west coast of Ireland. When the skies are blue, mountains green and smiling, bogs clad in purple and pink heather and the whole picturesque island in sunshine, the place is a wonderland.

How Thin People Can Put On Flesh

This men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick and there's the truth in a few words. You hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are probably sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating and eat with every one of these a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Let the scales be the judge. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy "stay-there" fat may be the net result. Sargol aims to charge weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—to give the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food to prepare it for the blood in an easily assimilated form. Thin people tell how they have gained all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and say that the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a careful combination of six of the best assimilative elements that are known to chemistry. They come forty tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and all good druggists in this vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in every large package.

THE MONTENEGRINS ARE THROWN BACK, SAYS ENEMY REPORT

Earl Kitchener Resumes His Duties As Minister of War

THE MONTENEGRINS AND SERBIANS STILL HOLD WESTERN BORDER OF OLD SERBIA

Berlin Despatch Says the Montenegrins Have Been Thrown Back Toward Their Frontier Which Indicates That the Austrians Have Not Yet Driven Allied Forces Out --Total British Casualties Are Announced Officially

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S CABLES

BERLIN, Via Wireless, Dec. 2.—"The Montenegrins have been thrown back south-west of Priboj, toward their frontier," said an official despatch from Vienna this afternoon. Priboj is about ten miles on the Serbian side of the Mostenegrin frontier, so that it appears that the Austrians have not yet succeeded in clearing the western border of old Serbia of their enemies.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—(French Official Communique)—"Artillery duels have occurred in the vicinities of Brettincourt, in the Artois region, Frissefay, in the Somme district, and Tahure in the Champagne. There is no change in the position.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Despondent over a melancholy letter from her mother and sister in Koshia, Hungary, Helen Rothman jumped from the third storey window in her boarding house to-day, fracturing her skull. Her relatives in her native country are in desperate distress because of the war.

BERLIN, Via Wireless, De. 2.—Demonstrations in favour of a speedy settlement of food prices and distribution problems are admitted to-day to have occurred in the crowds which gathered about the Reichstag building at the opening of the session. Within a few days, Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Holtweg expects to make an address in the Reichstag in response to the questions scheduled from the Socinlists concerning peace prospects. "In Germany," said an inspired statement to-day, "nobody understands why the Allies, after their military failures and diplomatic defeats in the B[illegible]ns, have not yet brought peace negotiations. The Chancellor probably will show that the rulers of the countries at war with Germany still blindly believe the stories of Germany's starvation, economic prostration and similar illusions."

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Reports received by the Board of Trade tell of the sinking of 85 British steamers with a total net tonnage of 65,000 and the loss of 670 lives. Only twenty of the steamers were sunk by German warships and ten by mines, but 495 of the lives lost were on steamers sunk by Germ[illegible] warships.

ATHENS, Dec. 2.—Representatives of Austria and Germany have informed the Greek Government, according to Neon Asty, that if the demands of the Quadruple Entente are granted the Central Empires will "cease to consider Greek Macedonia as friendly territory."

BRAMPTON, Ont., Dec. 2.—How a mare which was once traded when it was fifteen years old for $40, "on time" was later sold to J. R. Fallis, for the Government, for $165, was told when Sir Chas. Davidson resumed the inquiry into the purchase of horses in Peel county. The mare had been bred by John Ferguson as being foaled in 1899.

Hunter testified that he had paid W. J. Jones $5 for selling the mare to J. R. Fallis, the Government purchasing agent, and formerly partner of Jones.

LONDON, Dec. 2. The casualties as announced show that in France 4,620 officers and 69,472 men were killed, 9,754 officers and 240,248 men were wounded, and 1,583 officers and 54,445 men are missing. In the Near East the killed numbered 1,504 officers and 21,531 men, the wounded 2,869 officers and 70,148 men, and the missing are 356 officers and 10,211 men. In the other war theatres on land, 227 officers and 2,052 men have been killed, 337 officers and 5,587 men wounded, and 76 officers and 2,223 men are missing. The casualties at sea are divided into 589 officers and 9,128 men killed, 161 officers and 1,021 men wounded and 51 officers and 310 men missing.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Premier Asquith to-day finally disposed of the rumours that Lord Kitchener had withdrawn from the Cabinet. Answering a query addressed to him in the House of Commons, the Prime Minister stated that Kitchener "has resumed his duties as War Minister."

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Court Attaches believed this afternoon a disagreement was likely in the State case against the Hamburg-American officials, though there are no Germans nor anyone of avowed German descent on the jury. Five are of Irish, Scotch or English birth or parentage. The others are Americans.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Greek steamship Zarisis has been sunk by a submarine. The crew landed to-day at Malta.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The Ford headquarters this afternoon gave out a list of one hundred acceptances for the Oscar II. trip, including college students, nineteen newspaper men and one representative of a movie concern.

EXPORT OF SNOWSHOES STOPPED BY GERMANY.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—The exportation of snowshoes, either partly or entirely finished, is forbidden in a decree issued under the regulations governing "weapons, ammunition and powder."

The same order removes the restrictions on the exportation of various articles, including phonographs, glassware, canes, riding whips, watches, pianos, harmonicas, and photograph frames.

PIGEON CREEK BRIDGE SUBJECT OF DISCUSSION

Is Now Closed to Traffic and Needs Repairs But Victoria County Residents and Peterboro' Citizens Not Anxious About Its Rebuilding

Representatives of Victoria and Peterborough counties and of this city, met this afternoon at the County Council's session to consider what action should be taken toward the Pigeon Creek floating bridge. Victoria was represented by Warden R. J. Mulligan of Omemee, Isaac Fee of Emily, James Robertson of Ops, Wm. Herrington of Verulam, Alex-Morrison of Sommerville, Ed. J. Broad of Bobcaygeon and J. R. McNeillie, Lindsay, county clerk and treasurer. Mayor Buller, Aldermen Green, Stratton and Dobbin, and City Clerk Armstrong composed the city delegation.

At the conclusion of the general discussion which did not indicate deep anxiety as to what was done, Mr. Shaw moved, seconded by Mr. Coben that the following committee confer with Victoria's representatives: Messrs. Crough, Brown, Squire, McKee, Walsh, Coben Shaw and McIntosh (chairman).

In the preliminary addresses to the Council Warden Mulligan said he had always been opposed to the bridge, and would as soon see it go down the creek as rebuilt.

Mr. McNeillie traced briefly the history of the bridge which was built about forty-five years ago by the town and county of Peterborough as a convenience to the residents on either side of the Pigeon river. Since 1892 Victoria County has been contributing toward the Bobcaygeon bridges. Its proportion to the Pigeon Creek bridge was three-tenths. Peterborough city and county equally shared the remaining seven-tenths of the required expenditure. The inter-county agreement provides that whenever Peterborough county desires to abandon the bridge, Victoria county shall do likewise, but not until Peterborough's by-law to this end has been passed. The initiative to abandon the bridge, however, must be taken by Peterborough county.

Mr. McNeillie quoted figures showing the balance of payments made by Peterborough and Victoria counties to several bridges. The former paid $9,321.42 as its share toward the Pigeon Creek bridge; Peterborough county paid $3,656.94 toward the Bobcaygeon bridge. Since 1892 the Pigeon Creek bridge cost $11,738.00; there was expended on the Bobcaygeon bridges $14,627.76.

Wm. Hetherington of Verulam Township admitted that this bridge was not as great a convenience as it was when erected. The railways are giving a good service on the west side. However, whatever was done depended mostly on what Peterborough county desired to do. It certainly remains a convenience to many residents around Bobcaygeon and in the townships on either side of Pigeon Creek.

Mr. Issac Fee of Emily said that whenever he came to Peterboro he noticed many farmers who had come in over the Pigeon bridge. There was also considerable traffic going from Ennismore to Lindsay and Bobcaygeon.

Mr. E. J. Broad, reeve of Bobcaygeon, favored the idea of refusing the bridge at a nominal cost, but he did not favor a large expenditure on it as such a move would be unwarranted.

Ald. Green said that the city had paid $600 toward the bridge during the past thre years. He did not know whether the bridge was worth that sum to the city or not. Ald. Green suggested that the County Council request their engineer to bring in a report on the condition of the bridge and the cost of putting it into satisfactory repair.

Ald. Stratton remarked that if at all possible merely nominal repairs should be made and the bridge kept in use.

Mr. Dobbin supported Ald. Green's suggestion.

Mr. Crough of Ennismore said there were farmers owning land on each side of the river who were benefitted by the bridge for the repairs of which he made a strong plea.

TWO MEMBERS OF THE PETERBOROUGH BATTALION

SERGT. W. J. LEMAY (Lakefield) No. 3 Platoon

PTE. HARRY NORMAN No. 1 Platoon

93rd BATTALION HOCKEY TEAM IS ADMITTED TO O.H.A.

Lieuts. Widdifield and Dupuy Will Represent the Soldier Team at the O.H.A. Annual Meeting—Officers of the Battalion Are Financing the Enterprise—Splendid Grant From the 57th Regiment Sergeants to the Mess of the 93rd—To-day's Military News.

The 93rd Battalion has entered a team in the intermediate series of the O.H.A.— their entrance having been accepted by that body. Lieut. Widdifield and Lieut. Dupuy will represent the soldier team at the annual meeting of the O.H.A. in Toronto on Saturday. The officers of the 93rd will finance the proposition and already have taken up a subscription among themselves for the purpose, but all ranks of the battalion will be eligible for positions on the team. Practice hours have been secured at Brock street rink and the khaki team expect to make things hum when the ice comes. The 93rd will be assured of a big following, and when they turn out on match nights with their band and rooters club working there will be something doing around the Brock street arena.

The sergeants' mess of the 57th Regiment last night made a grant of $50 to the mess fund of the sergeants of the 93rd Battalion—a donation that will be greatly appreciated by the overseas men, many of whom of course are ex-members of the 57th sergeants' mess. The 57th sergeants are also going to send gifts to all the former sergeants of the Regiment who are at the front or in training in England.

Peterborough has three more representatives in the 33rd Battery at Kingston, Messrs. Walter, Ernest and Percy Hamblin, three brothers, who-e home is on Munro avenue., but who have been working in Toronto, have all enlisted in the 33rd, to which battery Peterborough has sent 135 men, practically a whole battery.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

The following Battalion Orders by Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., were read to-day:

Notices—

Kingston War Garrison, December 1st.—Following the order to organize the 146th Battalion for this city and county, comes the order to organize another battalion in Picton for the counties of Prince Edward and Hastings, and there are rumours that these are not all. Within the next two weeks there will no doubt be more battalions authorized for this division. The third division has already contributed 16,000 men for overseas service, and it now has the 59th of Kingston, the 77th of Ottawa, the 93rd of Peterborough, the 80th of Belleville, the 109th of Lindsay, the 130th of Smith's Falls, the 136th, the 146th, and the 155th battalions either in training or in process of organization. The Standard predicted some months ago that the division would be called upon to furnish at least ten thousand more men for the front, and it now looks as though this number was far

City Campaign For The Patriotic Fund

Last Year's Feat of Raising $60,000 Must Be Repeated — Contract With the Boys Who Are Going to the Front Must Be Kept.

SOME HELPFUL INFORMATION

Wednesday, 1st December, saw the gun fired for the Patriotic campaign of 1915. The thoroughly representative deputation that waited on the County Council in the interests of the county support of the Fund was a gratifying evidence of interest. That the farming community are now thoroughly alive to the needs of the hour is amply evidenced. It is a sure thing that the County of Peterborough will not be behind other municipalities in the good work.

The city campaign is practically an anniversary of that of last year. The canvas and subscription culminated on 14th December, netting the handsome sum of nearly $60,000 to the Fund. It was a magnificent testimonial to the goodness and enterprise of the people of the city, and will go down in civic annals as a fear worthy to be recorded and mentioned in the despatches. But we want, more than want, we need to repeat it. The thing can and will be done. We the people of the city, hold an implied contract with the married soldier or the son of a widowed mother that if they will go and fight we will look after the wife and kids left at home. It has been done, according to our light and our means. It will be pursued, just to the extent that the peoples of Peterborough say it shall be done. Your givings on the days of next week will be a barometer by which the committee will be told your wishes and determination. If the subscription falls short of an amount sufficient to see the local responsibilities through the year, then allowances must be curtailed. These are none too large now. While the Canadian Patriotic Fund is a truly national one, while all the avails are dropped into one hopper to be withdrawn for the gen-

CHARLES BREWER WILL BE REMOVED TO HAMILTON

His Release Was Effected To-day —Bail Amounting to $4000 Was Provided

FOUR SURETIES

Charles Brewer has been released on bail of four thousand dollars, in four sureties of one thousand dollars each. The final and conclusive effort was made to-day by Mr. G. N. Gordon, counsel for the accused.

It is understood that Brewer will be taken to Hamilton by members of the family, where he will be cared for until he is returned to Peterborough for trial. Brewer is suffering from a hardening of the arteries.

SELECTING THE PRACTICAL

That is the Question of the Hour

National conditions have made us a more serious people, and that very thing is going to make us more careful in our selections in Xmas giving this year.

Fine furs and fahionable apparel for women is a timely message to all just now. Both are seasonable and useful gifts — the need of every woman.

Never in the past 15 years have fur goods in general been lower priced, as war conditions brought prices on raw furs away down. They are gradually coming back to their usual higher prices as business conditions improve—some raw furs now being double the price of last year. This will affect their values next season making furs much more expensive again.

A fur coat or fur sett can be bought this season for 20 per cent. to 50 per cent. less than their usual values.

Barries Limited, in their new business block near the Custom House, George Street, have the finest selection and choicest assortment of fur goods to be found in Central Canada—all made, lined, and designed in their own sanitary workrooms.

Barries Limited have also added this season a very select and exclusive stock of ladies' ready-to-wear coats and suits; also silk dresses and blouses. For Xmas, they have now showing the latest and newest goods just received, in silk dresses and blouses and suits and winter cloth coats. Any gentleman or lady wanting to get something different and entirely new will find everything in Barries' stock absolutely the latest and the best. We are backing up the spirit of this message for practical giving by an assortment of unusual merit and an appropriate stock in furs and ladies' ready-to-wear garments in cloth and silk. The store and factory is in the new Barrie Block, just below the Custom House, George Street, near Charlotte Street.

"THE LAST JUDGMENT" FRIDAY EVENING

Will Be Given to the Public in George Street Methodist Church

The oratorio, "The Last Judgment," is to be presented on Friday evening next in George street Methodist church under the direction of Mr. J. H. Renwick, who has been so successful in his productions to the Peterborough music lovers.

His selection of soloists is most pleasing and a very large audience will no doubt be present. The proceeds will be handed to the Patriotic Fund.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, DEC. 2, 1915

HOPEFUL REORGANIZATION.

The Toronto News has high words of praise of Mr. J. W. Flavelle as chairman of the Munitions Board. With this The Examiner large agrees, not only because Mr. Flavelle is a "Peterborough boy," but because he has within him the business qualities and other resources fitting him to give the most effective service. This he will do if he meets the News' denomination of the objects of his occupancy of the position, especially that of "increasing output of munitions in Canada at reasonable prices, to coordinate the factories engaged on war orders and to guarantee satisfactory deliveries." That there is need for new blood—replacing the old, practically cashiered, Dominion Shell Committee—that will effectuate these desiderata is evident from the past history of munitions production in Canada. Mr. Flavelle's appointment is amply justified, if he will, as the News thinks, he will do, "put the whole enormous business" of munitions provision "upon a thoroughly efficient footing"—a tacit admission that it has not been in this position heretofore. If Mr. Flavelle measures up to the "prospectus" of his friends, we may hope to see an end to political favouritism, and consequent inefficiency, in awarding contracts; to wickedly extravagant profits, and various other undesirable conditions, that measure up to the proportions of scandals. Great Britain and Canada liberally provide money for munitions, but that does not contra-indicate the necessity, the honesty, the patriotism, of getting the highest value for its expenditure.

The News, might also have very well paid a tribute to another member of the Board, Mr. E. R. Wood, another Peterborough boy. Though he may lack the partizan standing to commend him to the good graces of the news, he is withal, in all respects, as fully capable and energetic, as well equipped with business ability and high ideals, to be a source of strength to it, as any member of the Munitions Board. The Examiner congratulates both Mr. Wood and Mr. Flavelle, and the country, upon their selection as members of one of the most important organizations at this critical period of our history.

"THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT."

In yesterday's issue appeared a little article or, rather, part of an article, under the above heading, based on a summary and paraphrase of the letter of a correspondent. Through some error in "make-up" the latter paragraph, of the article, its most important part, was omitted. In justice to the reader and The Examiner it may be produced as it was put in type:

"The above summary of our correspondent's letter shows some of the results of superficial thinking, loose reasoning, with the inevitable "lame and impotent conclusions." While it may be admitted—as a half truth—that the custom of present-giving at Christmas, has been somewhat abused, it is also a whole truth that it is a holy and wholesome custom typifying the true spirit of Christmas—the gift of Christianity to the world—and one to be cherished and maintained. Because we are in the throes of an agonizing conflict, is no good reason why we should disregard the call and influence of the Christmas spirit, which presents to us a many-sided appeal. We are in this war fighting to keep intact the liberties and privileges we enjoy under Christian—British—civilization; to keep intact the civil and social system founded upon it, to carry out its spirit in our daily life, in our social and civil, and business relations. The Christianity of which Christmas is a reminder, is not much good which does not touch all sides of our life. We are daily confronted with the injunction "business as usual; production as usual," and it becomes a duty to carry this out as far as possible, as we have done with the result that in material things Canada is enjoying unusual material prosperity, and all, or nearly all, have means to help meet the many demands the war imposes upon us. With all this there is necessity to keep the wheels of business, the machinery of society, in motion. While we send soldiers abroad to fight for the retention of what we have, we at home must unite to make what we have worth the fight our brave boys are making. They are fighting to keep our conditions of life sound in all ways; we must do our share. To do this we must meet the obligations of every day life. The present condition of liberal giving even to the point of sacrifice, will not last; but the conditions we are fighting in order to keep will be with us always. We must keep life up to the standard and not only conduct business as usual, but maintain the social customs, the customs that bind hearts together. We may exclude foolish extravagances and luxuries; but there is one thing we must not depart from—the manifestation of the Christmas spirit: its gifts, little or great, according to degree that have become so great a part of Christmas observance. It is well to remember the soldiers in the trenches; but we must not neglect the platoons of our home army — the children in our homes, the friends in our circle. We are called upon to spend liberally for the cause of the war; but this does not mean that we should go hungry to do it; that we should neglect the hearts hungering for Christmas cheer by withholding the customary Christmas gifts. We must be consistent even in our sacrifices, and not sacrifice the very essence of the spirit of our Christianity."

We must not neglect the custom of gift-giving, though we can in the distribution of our gifts very well adapt them to the conditions of the time; and while we buy Christmas gifts we should consider how greatly in accord with the spirit of Christmas is thought for others, and do our Christmas shopping early; have a thought for the reduced staffs of our shops, and for those whose lack of means forces them to postpone Christmas buying till the last moment.

THE ISSUES AND DUTIES.

In a speech made at a packed-hall recruiting meeting in Toronto, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux set forth very succinctly and forcibly the issues, duties and outcome of the titanic struggle in which the million-numbered forces of right and wrong; of liberty and enslavement; of tyranny and righteous rule are weltering to-day. He is thus reported:

> The chief speaker was Hon. Mr. Lemieux, who brought greetings from the Province of Quebec. "We have our George Bernard Shaws in our Province," said he amid laughter, "but they are mighty few. They are merely the exception which proves the rule." The place for pacificists was in the struggle, Mr. Lemieux maintained, since this was a war against war, a struggle to stamp out the war-traders and sabre-rattlers. The true glory of Britain was not in her Agincourts, her Waterloos, her Trafalgars, her commerce, her literature, her traditions, though all these contributed. It rested upon her genius for free government. Hon. Mr. Lemieux paid glowing and eloquent tribute to the British treatment of South Africa and the achievements of General Louis Botha for the Empire.
>
> Having quoted the historic statement of Premier Asquith as to the issue, Hon. Mr. Lemieux declared there could be no neutrality in such a strife. "Russia, tied down by a barbarous past, has at last found herself, and is fighting and dying for liberty; little Serbia has proudly rejected the yoke of serfdom; Italy, the youngest of great European powers, has drawn the sword as in the days of Resorgimento; France — gallant, impetuous — for the third time in her marvellous history stemming the tide of barbarian hordes; Ireland, the land of a thousand sorrows, sending her best and bravest sons at the call of Carson and Redmond; Scotland, the chivalrous and brave; England, the land where, 'girt by friends or foes, a man may speak the thing he will'; Belgium, undaunted, unconquerable, choosing the noble path of honour, her King forever to be enshrined in the temple of fame — this is the roll of honour in the titanic struggle. On it is also emblazoned the name of Canada, my native land — Canada, which owes to France her life and to Britain her freedom." (Cheers.)

O England, Mother of Us All

The Examiner has received with thanks from the Empire Music and Travel Club, a new war time hymn, the joint work of two well known former Peterborough citizens. It is entitled, "O England, Mother Of Us All," The words are composed by Mr. J. H. Long, M.A., LL.B., formerly principal of the Collegiate Institute here, and the music is by his wife, Retta Longstreet Long. The words are dignified and appealingly impressive, and expressive in few words of the sacred relations that unite us to the Mother Country. On account of the local interest, the words are here reproduced:

O England, Mother Of Us All

England, mother of us all,
The children's hearts across the seas
In weal or woe, whate'er befall,
Are stilll with thee, in weal or woe,
Are still with thee.

Thy joys and griefs,
Thy hopes and fears,
Thy storied past, thy coming years,
Are theirs to share,
As when they trod thy daisied sod,
And watched the lark soar up to God,
In happy English air,

Refrain—
O England in thy hour of need,
May we prove loyal sons indeed,
God grant each heart may hear thy call;
God save thee Mother of us all.

Mrs. Long has very happily provided the musical setting for these words. The music is melodiously musical, spirited yet dignified, and exceedingly well adapted to interpret their devotional and patriotic spirit. The hymn from every point of regard is a worthy addition to the poesy and hymnoogy of the war. It is published by the Empire Music and Travel Club, 2 Gould street, Toronto.

COUNTING THE COST.

This adage old, is often told,
By sages wise, a host,
That lest we rue, the deeds we do
It is well to count the cost;
And alas 'tis true, that oft we do,
Bewail our lack of thought,
When luckless fate, we learn to late,
By stern experience taught.

But when fell hordes, unsheath their swords,
Fair liberty to blight;
And freedom's cause, and honours laws,
Armed tyranny would blight.
When war clouds low, and despot power,
Would fain enslave the world;
While hate, distrust, and lawless lust,
Dread banners have unfurled.

When ruthless foe, would crush us low,
It is wiser then, like worthy men,
To boldly venture all;
To wage fierce fight, with main and might,
'Ere all we prize is lost,
With valor high, to do or die,
Than, coldly count the cost.

MRS. A. F. CALDER.

RUPTURE IS CURABLE

Rupture is not a tear or breach in the abdominal wall, as commonly supposed, but it is a stretching or dilation of a natural opening, says J. Y. Egan of Toronto and New York, the noted appliance specialist who will visit Peterboro, Oriental Hotel, Tuesday and Wednesday—December 7th and 8th. The "Curatrus" as now used and approved will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, affording immediate and complete comfort, but is intended to assist nature to close the opening in the shortest time known to medical science without an operation. This appliance has received highest awards wherever shown, producing results without harmful injections or other aids. Mr. Egan has testimonials from our own section for inspection. If interested call, he will be pleased to show you same without charge.

EASTER ISLAND.

Mystery of Its Ancient Relics Still an Unsolved Problem.

Easter Island, which belongs to Chile, is about 2,000 miles from the mainland of South America. To archaeologists Easter Island is one of those unsolved problems with which they grapple more or less successfully; and stone images, remains of terraced structures and other evidences of a race that formerly dwelt in the island continue to draw investigators to the barren spot in the Pacific ocean.

The relics on Easter Island and archaeologists of opposite opinions regarding the people who occupied the place centuries ago. As it is at present the island covers about 42 square miles in area, and it is looked upon as the most easterly of the Polynesian group. It derived its name from the day on which it was discovered by one Jacob Roggeveen, a Dutch skipper, who in 1722 is supposed to have been the first to sight the land.

Present inhabitants of Easter Island have distinct Polynesian characteristics, but to these few hundred people the antiquities, with their curious signs, mean nothing at all.

As to who were the builders of the truly remarkable remains of a former civilization, this is the great puzzle found by all investigators. Some of the terraces, erected on headlands, with a wall toward the sea, must have been 30 feet high when built, and their length is indicated at from 200 to 300 feet. The terraces were constructed of large cut stone, fitted together with cement, and the large stone pedestals with images evidently served as deities. No less than 550 of these stone images have been found.

There are three craters of extinct volcanoes on Easter Island, and one of these is nearly 2,000 feet deep. Inside one of these craters are about half a hundred of the stone images, and the wonder is what means were employed to get others like them out, as at the foot of the slope of the crater are more images, some of them in various stages of formation. In height they range from 4 feet to nearly 30 feet.

These figures clearly are all of the same type and general characteristics. The head is long and the eyes close under the heavy brows; the nose large, low-bridged and very broad at the nostrils, the upper lip short and the lips pouting. The head is nearly always tilted backward. The forms generally end at the waist, and some only at the shoulders, very little work having been done below these points.

Wooden tablets found on the island, specimens of which are now in the Santiago Museum, are incised with hieroglyphics, which show that the carver must have been very skillful. Figures of men, animals, geometric designs, constitute the alphabet. It is easily believed that these tablets contain the history of the ancient people, but thus far no archaeological expert has been able to decipher them.

Queer Street Names.

There are many bewildering street names in European cities, and of these London presents a great variety. Bermondsey possesses a Pickle Herring street. Near Gray's Inn there is to be found a Cold Bath square. Most of the Nightingale lanes and Love lanes are hidden, ironically enough, in the slums of the East End of the British capital.

In Brussels some of the street names are very curious. The Short street of the Long chariot, the street of the Red-Haired Woman, and the street of Sorrows are remarkable enough to catch the least observant eye. The street of the One Person is, as one might guess, an extremely narrow one. But the cream of Brussels street names surely belongs to the street of the Uncracked Silver Cocoanut. This in the original appears as one ponderous word of 36 letters.

Among the peculiar street names in Paris may be mentioned the street of the Little Windows, the street of the Mule's Foot, the street of the Holy Fathers, the street of the Daughters of Calvary, the street of the Dry Tree, the street of the Empty Pocket, and the boulevard of the Good News.

Haying for Deer.

Winters when the snow is deep for long stretches of time deer congregate in yards in the Adirondacks and many of the weaker ones die of starvation. Their skeletons may be found in various parts of the great wilderness when the snows are gone. This year game protectors have been cutting tons of marsh hay on the beaver meadows in the remote sections of the Adirondacks and stacking it in sheltered places to be fed to the deer next winter when the snow is so deep that other food is not obtainable. The Conservation Commission believes that it will save the lives of hundreds of deer that otherwise would perish. The stacks have been encased in pole frames and liberally salted. Deer will not eat marsh hay unless it is so treated.

Omelet, Southern Style.

Separate the whites and yolks of three eggs, beat the whites stiff and dry, beat the yolks until light, then beat into them eight teaspoonfuls of thick white sauce and a speck of cayenne and salt. Fold this into the beaten whites. Fold in six tablespoonfuls of ground baked ham and turn into a hot buttered baking dish. Bake until firm. Take care not to overbake or it will be dry. Sprinkle ground ham around the edge of the dish, stick a spray of parsley in the centre and serve immediately.

Quite Too Much to Ask.

"I say, Sandy," said Jock, handing back his friend's photograph, "when ye had those photos taken, why didna ye smile?"

"And those pictures costing me $3 a dozen!" replied Sandy. "Are ye crazy, mon?"

Experiments are being carried on in Cuba with a fibre of a native plant that is said to make excellent fabric for sugar bags.

Important To Property Owners and Intending Purchasers

The undersigned respectfully announce the opening of a real estate business in the premises formerly occupied by C. J. Carroll & Co., at No. 378 Water street. AN AIRSHIP PROTECTOR IS THE LATEST

Several systems have been developed during the present war for detecting and locating submarines and airships. Most of them employ microphones at the ends of known baseline and determined the location by triangulation.

The principle of these systems was worked out in a practical way some time ago by Mr .Elies E. Ries, an electrical engineer of New York City. He devised such a system for use by a ship in locating a foghorn in a fog. In a sense, he provided the ship with mechanical ears, far more sensitive and accurate than the human ear. These ears were really two megaphones of such sensitiveness that they could "pick up" the blasts of a foghorn or a steamship whistle 20 miles away. These megaphone receivers were attached to a spreader, as long as the ship was wide. This spreader was mounted well upon the foremast, where it could be swung horizontally through half-circle. The megaphones were pivoted at the extreme ends of the spreader and swung simultaneously toward or away from each other by means of a simple hand lever. The lever would trace a pointer around the graduated arc, the graduations giving readings in miles and fractions thereof. The instant a warning is heard in either megaphone, the operator swings the tube until he gets the same volume of sound in both receivers. At the same time the megaphones are probably at right angles to the tube and the sound is more or less muffled. Then the operator moves the lever to turn the megaphones inward toward each other; at the point where the sound is clearest in them, they will be in direct line with the object causing the sound. The exact distance is indicated on the graduated arc. Thus, with the distance and direction both accurately indicated, it is an easy matter to get the exact spot where the airship is. Its direction and rate of travel may be equally easily determined by simple mathematical calculations.

KAISER'S AGENT TELLS OF CANADA'S BRUTALITY

How Canadians Murdered Germans and Outraged Their Women is "Beautifully" Described

Under the heading "Our Bankrupt Lady of the Snows" there appeared in the "Fatherland" a fantastic, fever-prompted story of conditions in Canada. The Fatherland is a journal published in English in the United States, bitterly pro-German. The story was so humorous, that the censor gave his consent to the publication of extracts.

"This is a story telling how the cruel British satraps of Canada have brought ruin and misery upon a once fair land. With tempting bonuses and honeyed words, they lured simple and honest men from distant lands to till their soil," says the writer in opening his article. "Suddenly there came an order to these satraps from their masters, the London financiers. And terror followed. Fathers were torn from wives and children and thrown into squalid prison camps, where thousands since have died. Others were forced to go abroad to fight for a foreign king whom many hated and of whom others had not even heard. History has no blacker crime than this." For a paragraph or two, the writer then attempted to explain how the C.P.R. owns Canada.

"But the war began and there came a call to Canada's satrap, Borden, from his London masters: 'Intern all alien enemies; give them no protection. We must terrify the Germans.'

"The servile satrap paled at these instructions, but obeyed them. He set aside and stayed his hand. In all Canadian towns and countrysides, from British Columbia to Quebec, the Canuck ran riot and typified himself with brutal Cossack deeds. He burned houses, plundered shops, and stoned unoffending women, and children in city streets and on country roads. No one deterred him. German, Austrian, and Hungarian men and women were dragged from their homes and slaughtered in the open. Native-born sons who defended foreign-born parents were slain—the daughters were brutalized by the mob.

Men Flung Into Ovens

"Then these fathers who survived were dragged to desolate detention camps, old sheds, open to winter winds and rains, flung into factory ovens, starved, and left unclad. The mortality among them was frightful. The permanent illness worse. One-third of these men can never work again, and they have been lured into this country, remember, by the soft persuasions of the men who had done them these wrongs. And their wives and children in rags to-day still roam the streets and by-ways of Canadian cities, butts of the mocking mob, begging in vain for food and shelter.

"It is painful to me to recapitulate this sad story. But the reason is manifest. These dreadful deeds were done to a quarter of a million of Teutonic peoples in Canada. If war should come to us they would be attempted to thirty millions of Teutonic peoples in the United States.

"After the mob and massacre in Canada the Canuck stopped, breathless and terrified by his own work. Factories had been ruined, farms burned down, and unemployment began to raise his grisly head. The dreadful fact was driven home to the plutocrats of England that English workmen, whom they had ground down to pauperism, would absolutely not go to war with them. They conferred and sent out instructions to their satraps in many lands: 'Drive in the men from the colonies and make them fight.'

Canada Must Save England

"Borden, Canada's satrap, obeyed. Canada must save England. It would be an easy task. The Canadians could march into a defeated country triumphantly, where there would be plunder and glory galore. After a weird distortion of figures to explain the financial condition of Canada, the writer closes:

"The satrap, Borden, went to England to discuss this crisis with his masters. The other day he returned, bringing with him his henchman, Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia. These two pitiful figures slunk in an obscure hotel in New York. With lined faces and downcast spirits they still spoke of 'heroes, courage, fortitude, and the spirit of determination that must win.' The Minister of Militia has received his reward. A commission and a cheap knighthood. May these cheap favors bring him joy."

In a crazy effort to influence public opinion in the United States another article appears, a story of war in 1920, in which the allies are attacking the United States. The editorials are wild as fighty. Instead of being barred by the mails, as a humorous weekly it should be admitted into Canada.

About 2¾ million acres of land in Great Britain are devoted to woods and forests.

Wolves Infest Russia

History tells that on Napoleon's fatal retreat from Moscow the wearied troops were constantly harassed by hungry wolf packs. Now it is said that wolves have gathered from their fastnesses in the forests of Poland and South Russia to gorge upon the battlefields of the eastern front. Some time ago an officer gave a graphic description of the long lines of wolves stealing from the coverts at nightfall, passing within a few feet of him as he lay wounded. He said that the sight of their gaunt forms, dimly outlined against the dark sky, as they bussed themselves with their ghastly feast, would never be effaced from his mind.

Russian Ikons in War

In war time, as in peace, Russia's ikons, the holy images of saints, play a great part. Every Russian regiment has its own particular patron saint, and the picture or ikon of that saint is, in peace time, kept in the garrison church. In war it goes with the regiment. A special tent is carried in charge of the priest, and it is in this tent that the altar and the ikon are placed when services are held. On the regimental saint's day the soldiers not only hold special religious services and return thanks to their saint for the protection it has given them, but the distinction between officers and men is to great extent relaxed for that day.

ODE TO SLACKERS

On with the dance!
Fair women and gay music and soft lights—
On Flemish fields another dance goes on
To the infernal rag-time of the guns,
Where brave men die that ye may loll at ease
And shattered heroes groan their lives away—
What matters this if but in Canada
The dance goes on?

On with the dance!
Here all is well and pain and loss are far—
Ye scan no lists with haggard eyes and blind
If haply one, the bravest and the best,
Husband or son or brother who went forth
To drums and fife, returneth not again.
Thoughts such as this mar not your pleasure as
The dance goes on.

On with the dance!
The latest fancy steps are de rigueur,
Freddie and Cholley, Marmaduke and Claude,
Caper and prance and foot it merrily.
No shirkers these nor slackers at this game.
"What's that A bugle call without?
Pooh, Pooh,
Let fight who will. Not we. Who cares so long
The dance goes on?"

IN BLISSFUL IGNORANCE

Some Places That Have Not Yet Heard That War is Raging

Incredible though it may sound, there are a number of places on this earth where civilised men live, but are probably still in ignorance that one of the greatest wars in the world's history is raging. Tristian da Cunha, the lonely South Atlantic island, has not received a mail since the outbreak of war. Tristian da Cunha is entirely dependent on chance communication from the Cape, 1,500 miles away. Sometimes it is a year or more without its people hearing from the outside world. It is a British possession, and its people, numbering about eighty, are mainly descendents of shipwrecked sailors. They are of mixed origin—English, Scotch, Irish, American, Dutch, Italian, Asiatic and negro. Another place that has probably not yet heard of the war is Yquitos, in Eastern Peru. Yquitos has perhaps the most romantic mail service in the world. It is only a few hundred miles from Lima, the Pacific capital of Peru, but the wall of the Andes is an almost impassable barrier. The "quick" mail route, therefore, from Yquitos to Lima is all the thousands of miles down the Amazon and across the Atlantic, and then "via Liverpool."

THE DUTCH WILL SQUELCH FORD

He Mustn't Try to Interfere With The Belligerents.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—A cable despatch to the New York Times from The Hague, dated Wednesday, says:

In Dutch official circles, Henry Ford's proposal to cause a strike in the trenches is characterized as too visionary and absurd to merit serious consideration. It is pointed out that any one attempting to foment discontent among the soldiers of any of the belligerents would inevitably subject himself to arrest and trial under martial law on a charge of inspiring mutiny.

If Mr. Ford and his peace party come to Holland they will be permitted to land and take up residence here, but there is official authorization for the statement that any attempt on his part to use Holland as a base of operations for interference with the military situation as between belligerents will be regarded as a breach of neutrality, and summarily suppressed.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages Kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

RECRUITING METHODS

How Old London Gathers Her Men For the Colors—Young Girls Help

Recruiting sergeants are highly pleased with the way in which recruits have been coming in. To take one instance only, some twenty recruits were obtained in London at a meeting in Trafalgar Square, and they all looked like men who would pass a severe medical test. Some notable incidents were witnessed at this meeting. One of the speakers was a one-armed Colonial sergeant—a Canadian by his accent—who showed on his overcoat the two South African ribbons, the ribbon of the D.C.M., and the ribbon of the Order of St. George (3rd Class). He talked breezily of life in the army. "Some say it is a weight reducer," he said. "Don't believe them; I put on weight while I was out in Flanders. Others say the life is rotten; because the soldiers are poorly fed. That's another fairy tale; I had eggs and bacon every morning." Several men mounted the plinth of Nelson's monument as the result of the Canadian sergeant's appeal.

A band of twelve young girls, from Edinburgh, the only girls' pipe band in the world, made an effective appearance in the square and marched round the monument playing Scottish airs. At the close of their performance two of the girls mounted the plinth of the monument and helped up two recruits. A touching appeal was made by an elderly soldier in khaki, showing the two South African medals. In faltering accents he told how his son had been in the great affair at Loos, and had been reported "missing." "I gave my boy up for dead," said the soldier, "but," tapping one of his tunic pockets, he added, "I got a letter from him this morning saying he is alive and well. They have had a terrible time out there, our gallant lads, but they have never faltered. I have done my little bit, and hope to do more; my boy is doing something; won't some of you young fellows here go out and help?" At this point the recruiting sergeant asked for speakers from the crowd; "anyone; an M.P., for preference," he said. There was no response until a quite young girl stepped forward and asked leave to speak. In a low, soft voice she told the meeting that she had two cousins at the front and both had been very badly wounded. She hoped they would recover, and they were going out again. Would not some young fellow in the crowd follow their example, the young girl asked, and several showed their willingness by presenting themselves to the recruiting officer.

BAD WEAK HEART

BAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unsatisfied action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart, causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Day, 296 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing.

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. They can be had at all druggists or dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE ADVANTAGES OF IRRIGATION

Striking Tribute Paid to Efficiency of Western Canada Association

BASSANO, Alta., Dec. 2.—At the conclusion of the western Canada irrigation Association congress a striking tribute was paid to its efficiency and usefulness by Dominion Government Commissioner of irrigation who declared nearly all work undertaken by government for development irrigation Western Canada has been undertaken as result of the recommendations of this association. Important resolutions passed include one presented by vice-president of United Farmers Association, seconded by the President Lethbridge Board of Trade reciting the advantages derived from irrigation in Southern Alberta. The desire of the farmers located in the districts are now served by irrigation system to have irrigation advantages urges Dominion Government that irrigation facilities be extended rapidly as possible to area approximately three hundred and fifty thousand acres Lethbridge district so that additional farming communications be enabled avail themselves benefits irrigation without unavoidable delay. The members of the convention inspected the gigantic irrigation works carried out by the Canadian Pacific at the expense of many million of dollars.

FARMERS CONTRIBUTE SUM OF $100,000

This Amount was Raised in Durham and Northumberland for Patriotic Purposes

In the past six weeks $100,000 has been raised for patriotic purposes in Durham and Northumberland. Of this sum the farmers of these counties have contributed $80,000. Wherever organized, the rural population responds in a gratifying manner.

Though Toronto and other urban centres have led the way, patriotism is by no means confined to cities. Indeed, there are many villages and townships in Ontario which have actually contributed more generously, according to population, than Toronto or any other of the larger communities. One explanation is that the average of wealth and prosperity is higher in many of the townships than in the towns and cities.

Russia Will Get A Breathing Spell

Planning to Meet New German Offensive in Spring.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 2.—Russia, to her enormous profit, is getting a winter respite. The last reports show that except in a few spots the invasion offensive is broken off.

The Utro Rossiya, the military contributor to the Birsheviya Viedomositi, and some other commentators, publish speculations regarding Austro-German intentions which probably hit the situation. The invaders have abandoned their advance under compulsion of necessity, but not without a plan. They have not the surplus of strength which would make a march against Petrograd, Kieff or Moscow possible, and they would not in any case dare a winter campaign.

The best judges of the situation agree that Germany, whatever her delusions, is making preparations for another great offensive. She may hope for peace in the coming winter, but can hardly be blindly relying on it. Germans again and again have proclaimed that only an offensive promises success. Opinion gains ground that the offensive will come in the spring, and that it will again be directed against Russia.

This Morning's Police Court

Tobacconist Fined Ten Dollars for a Breach of the By-law Relating to the Sale of Tobacco to Minors

Alexander Ross renewed his acquaintance with Police Magistrate Dumble this morning. It was his first appearance in police court inside of a year, a fact which was duly noted by the court officials. Ross claimed to have been working in a local factory on munitions of war and was laid off together with the rest of the gang. Chief Thompson doubted the prisoner's story and a wordy argument ensued. Magistrate Dumble handed Ross a haymaker in the form of a two dollar fine. In consideration of his long absence Ross was given ten days in which to liquidate the obligation.

Was Allowed to Depart.

A backwoodsman answering to the name of Clary showed evidences of indignation when he was accused of being a vagrant. He had worked right along and if given his liberty would submerge his identity in the backwood. As the Chief had no evidence to offer in connection with the case, Clary was allowed to go.

"Better let him go," suggested the Magistrate, "he has cost us a week's board already."

Judgment Reserved.

Charles Johnston was convicted of stealing a quantity of copper wire from the Peterborough Utilities Commission. Judgment was reserved for a week. In the meantime Johnston may seek the opportunity of serving his King and country. He enlisted once before, but was released from service at the request of his wife, who is in delicate health.

Fined $10.

A local tobacconist was fined ten dollars for a breach of the by-law relating to the sale of tobacco to minors.

Front Light Out.

R. G. Sturgeon was charged with a breach of the traffic by-law, it being alleged that he left his car standing on the side of the road with the front lights out. Defendant was unable to say whether or not there was a sufficient supply of oil in the lamps. Crown Attorney Hatton pointed out that as long as the car was on the right side of the road and the tail light burning there would be little danger of anybody running into it. They would have to be on the wrong side of the road if they did. The defendant was allowed to go with a warning.

Fined Two Dollars.

O. O'Hara was fined two dollars for allowing his automobile license number to become covered with mud so as to render the figures indistinguishable. P. C. Smythe was afraid that O'Hara might get off with a warning so he volunteered a little information on his own account. Magistrate Dumble closed the case with a two dollar fine.

LIQUOR IN THE CENTRAL PRISON

Statement of Escaped Prisoner Sent to Warden by Judge.

TORONTO, Dec. 2.—"That there is trafficking in liquor all the time among the prisoners at the Central Prison brickyard at Mimico," was the sworn statement of Joe Murphy when he appeared before Judge Winchester charged with escaping from custody.

Murphy was a "trusty," and one of his duties was to go for milk, and on the morning of November 19 he said he was given two or three drinks from a bottle of alcohol which Arthur Nunn, the prison barber, had in his possession. The alcohol proved too much for him while on the way for the milk, so after getting a drink or two at the hotel he was on the way to get a doctor when he collapsed. "I would have died like Arthur Nunn had I stopped there where I could get no medical attention," said Murphy, who ascribed his recovery to the treatment he had received from Dr. Parry at the jail.

Murphy, who was discharged from Niagara Camp as unfit, had been sent down for six months at St. Catharines, his offence being that he had secured liquor for soldiers.

W. Robertson, superintendent of the brickyard, said that Murphy had complained of the work and been appointed a "trusty." He was captured shortly after making his escape.

"Have you any evidence of drinking among the prisoners?" asked T. O'Connor, in cross-examination.

"No."

"You have had some deaths. What were the cause?"

"Arthur Nunn died and the inquest last night showed that the cause was a knot in the bowels."

"Had he been drinking?"

"Not so far as I know," replied Robertson.

Murphy said that he had a good time in the prison, and had been well used.

Judge Winchester found Murphy guilty and remanded him for a week for sentence. He also ordered a copy of Murphy's evidence to be sent to Warden Gilmour, of the Ontario Reformatory.

Will Erect a Huge Postoffice

Temporary Building For Army in London to Cost $300,000.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The largest temporary building that has ever been erected is being put up in Regent's Park.

It is the new Army post office, and will occupy a space of about 100,000 square feet. Its purpose is to accommodate the parcels and letters for troops at the front, and especially the Christmas presents.

Five hundred men are employed on the building, and are working day and night in order to have it finished by December 1. The foundations will be completed in a few days' time.

The cost of this temporary building will be about £60,000.

GERMAN DESIGNS ON ITALIAN WAR FACTORIES

PARIS, Dec. 2.—An attempt on the part of Germans to destroy munition plants in Italy is said by the Journal, in a despatch from San Remo, Italy, to have been discovered by the Turin police. It was learned that the plan apparently was being directed from Lugano, Switzerland, and the case was referred to the Swiss police, who arrested a boatman. In the possession of the boatman were found two boxes, labelled chocolate, which he was about to ship to Turin. The boxes were filled with dynamite.

The Journal's despatch adds that the arrest of a number of other persons some of them connected with the German Consulate, is imminent.

Miss Violet Asquith Married.—The marriage of Miss Violet Asquith "right-hand daughter" of Premier Asquith, and Mr. Maurice Bonham-Carter, principal private secretary to Mr. Asquith since 1912, took place on Nov. 30th at St. Margaret's, Westminster, London, known as "The Bride's Church."

Council Dealing With the County's Patriotic Grant

The greater part of this morning's session of the County Council was devoted to the discussion of the County's contribution to the Patriotic Fund. The Finance committee was deputed yesterday to deliberate on this question and this morning the members threshed it out. The noon recess found them still undecided. Opinion seems to be divided as to whether the present Council should make the necessary decision or whether it should only recommend to the 1916 Council the amount of the contributions. The incoming Council will meet in January, hence any move to place the final decision with that body means a delay of only a few weeks. This does not intimate that the this morning's discussion points to the final decision.

GILMOUR B.Y.P.U. PRESENT BIBLES TO MEMBERS

Who Have Enlisted for Overseas Service.

On Monday evening, Nov. 29, a very pleasant evening was spent when about forty of the young people of Murray Street Baptist Church accepted the invitation of Gilmour Memorial Church to spend an evening with them. The programme which was supplied by the people of Murray Street Church, consisted of short, bright addresses by Rev. C. G. Smith of Belleville, Rev. J. R. Webb, Mr. C. S. Brown, M.A., and Mr. J. L. Pettit; a quartette by Misses Kidd, Harstone, Rathbone and Sanderson; a duet, and a solo by Miss Clara Kidd.

Another item of the programme was the presentation by the Gilmour B.Y.P.U. to two of their members, Messrs. Leonard Palmer and Fred Holden, who recently enlisted, of a Bible each with the following address:

Dear Brothers,—Your friends of the Gilmour Memorial B.Y.P.U. desire to congratulate you upon your decision to serve your King and country in the cause of liberty, and of the old flag which have ever been the supporters of the down-trodden and oppressed. The task in which you are to be engaged is a hard one, but you will have right and the most sacred cause on your side to nerve you to high endeavour. We wish you to know that we are proud of you, and that we will constantly pray the God of battles to keep you and give you victory, not only over the oppressor in Europe, but also over every evil influence that may come to you. We ask your acceptance of a Bible as a remembrance from your friends of Gilmour Memorial, as a lamp to your feet and a light to your path. By order of the B.Y.P.U.

Rev. John Galt, Pastor.
Clara Young, President.
Ruby Archer, Secretary.

At the close of the programme lunch was served and was very much enjoyed by all, and the evening was closed by the singing of "God Save the King."

Roosevelt A Candidate For The Presidency

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—"Theodore Roosevelt will be the Republican candidate for President next year. The young Bucks of the party everywhere are for him," declared Speaker Champ Clark to-day. He said he had been feeling the political pulls and in many States. "I purposely put a statement about Roosevelt in my speeches," said Clark, "and his name brought cheers when that of no other member of his party would accomplish that result."

Judgment Has Been Reserved

The appended appeal was heard yesterday in the Appellate Divsoin of Osgoode Hall, Toronto:

Re Robert Hamilton Estate.—R. R. Hall (Peterborough) for W. F. Hamilton. B. D. Hall (Peterborough) for Royal Trust Co. J. A. Worrell, K.C., for Annie S. Hill. Appeal by William Fortye Hamilton from order of Lennox, J., of 4th November, 1914, refusing to construe will on ground that it had been sufficiently construed by previous order. Appeal argued. Judgment reserved.

PEACE TALK CONTINUES IN GERMANY

Although They Insist it is Sought "Only For Reasons of Humanity"

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—Peace talk continues in Germany, and has been taken up by the press throughout the empire. A significant statement issued by Dr. Solf, the Imperial Colonial Secretary, in which he asks "no more than an honorable peace with the guarantee of a happy future," is being widely quoted and approved. The most violent war organs are joining in this trend of comment, although they insist that Germany seeks peace "only for reasons of humanity." The Vossische Zeitung says: "We gladly associate ourselves with the honest aspiration of a speedy peace, to which the North German Gazette recently gave expression on behalf of the Government."

Admits Shortage.

In opening the Reichstag to-day the President, Dr. Kaempff, after referring to the victories of the German armies, said:

"Proud England is troubled about the key to her supremacy. All our enemies have recognized that we are invincible on the battlefield; so, that more eagerly do they cling to their hope to destroy us economically, to conquer us by hunger. As they allow themselves to be deceived regarding our financial strength, which has been proved by the astonishing results of our war loans, so they have also been deceived in their estimate of our economic strength.

"We have corn for bread. Potatoes the most important food of the people, are abundant. If in other things there may be a scarcity, as cannot be disputed, yet the hardships thus caused to a majority of the poorer population will be surmounted by the organization of the provision market. We therefore, financially and economically have every reason to contemplate the future with firm determination and unshaken confidence."

The Financial Minister presented a bill for the taxation of war profits, urging a speedy discussion so that none could escape the tax. The bill was referred to the committee.

"Take keer, mah frens," said the preacher solemnly; "take keer dat when de time comes to shuffle off dis hyah mo'tal coil, you doan git los' in de shuffle."—Puck.

AN EYE WITNESS BREAKS INTO VERSE

Reminiscences of An Event on Nov. 29, 1915.

The young men of Park Street Baptist Church
Some time ago decided
To leave the ladies in the lurch,
And not by them be guided.

An oyster supper was their plan,
With a concert in its wake;
So they got busy, every man,
And arranged some part to take.

They sold tickets by the score,
And worked with all their might;
The ladies, they were pretty sore
'Cause they weren't in the limelight.

But they were Johnnies on the spot
Last Friday afternoon;
Their minds with wonderment was fraught
To know what the boys were doin'.

They came around with faces wise,
And examined every nook;
Then towards the kitchen cast their eyes
To see who was the cook.

There they found Archie, neat and trim,
In white apron, cap and coat;
The questions that they put to him
Would simply get your goat.

The tables Charlie helped to lay,
They were a pleasing sight,
With ferns and decorations gay,
Which aided appetite.

The supper surely was O.K.,
And was served in proper style;
The tables then were cleared away,
Which took a little while.

Rev. Brown presided in the chair,
And said "What's coming is a treat".
The Hartshorn Orchestra was there;
And let me say, they can't be beat.

Next was a song by Sergt. Bert;
Of Bert we're proud and fond—
Some Dutchmen will get badly hurt
When he gets across the pond.

His pal was there in khaki, too,
And gave a 'cello selection;
Hats off to Tommy! He's true blue,
They stopped at one home for a spell;
You asked me, "Did they dance?"
Say, mister, "Masons never tell,"
So this time you've no choice.

An Eye-Witness.

John Johns recited for us then,
And was greeted with applause;
He is one of many men
Whose orations have no flaws.

Next was a song by Walter Farr,
Which was called "Sons of the Sea";
On singing Walter is a star,
His voice sounds good to me.

The Hartshorn boys gave a quartette
Where each one did his share;
His music is perfection.
The grimaces I'll ne'er forget,
Their stunts were very rare.

The next number Norman sang alone
Which was appreciated;
Could I but sing in as sweet a tone,
I'd surely be elated.

The Bible Class composed of men,
Sang in accents clear
A song I'd love to hear again,
Of Canada so dear.

The Hartshorn Orchestra then played
"Hartshorn" was all the go;
The truth is Hartshorn are wayback
'Most everywhere you know.

We were favoured then by Harry G.
With a song appropriate,
About the harbour and the sea;
We all thought it first-rate.

Then Fred was called with much applause,
And how did he begin?
He talked about his wife, because
She cooked fowl with "insides in."

The programme now came to a close,
We enjoyed everything;
At the final everybody knows
We sang "God Save Our King."

The Hartshorn boys soon had a bunch,
Who stuck to them like leeches;
At last they all went into lunch
'Mid songs and witty speeches.

They don't believe in too much slumber,
So to make the time complete
They let out in goodly number,
And sauntered up the street.

How to Cook Roman Meal Porridge

Invariably use double boiler or put boiler in basin of boiling water. Have water boiling in both vessels, that in inner one salted to taste. Slowly stir in one cup Roman Meal to each two cups water. Cover, set in outer vessel, and never stir again even while serving. For early breakfast cook at evening meal and warm in morning, using a little less Roman Meal. It's dark, nutbrown, granular, rich porridge. It nourishes better than meat, prevents indigestion, and positively relieves constipation or "money back." Ask your doctor. All grocers, 10 cents and 25 cents.

Made by Roman Meal Co., Toronto.

Bloodiest Battle of the Whole War Now In Progress on Isonzo

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The fighting on the Italian front of late has been the most sustained and fiercest battle of the whole war. For weeks the Italians have been attacking the Austrian bridgeheads and mountain positions along the Isonzo River, and are slowly, but surely, drawing their nets around Tolmino, Gorizia and Doberdo. Their attacks have been repeated time after time against positions which had been most carefully prepared, and, while the Austrians report that most of these assaults have been repulsed, their accounts are considered here to have been so worded as to prepare the public for their retirement from Gorizia at least.

Tuesday night's Austrian official report says: "On the Italian front it becomes clearer that the Italians will, at all costs, force a victory near Gorizia if it is at all possible to do so."

Monday the Italian attacks were directed against the entire front from Tolmino to the sea, with special severity against both the bridgeheads at Gorizia and Tolmino, the latter being kept under an incessant fire the whole of the afternoon, while during the night Gorizia was bombarded with hundreds of shells of heavy calibre.

New Gains Made.

On the heights north-west of the city, and north of the Podgora Heights, some advantage was gained by the attacking forces, and the Italian lines were extended several metres through the capture of trenches near San Martino, on the Carso plateau, south of Gorizia, according to the Italian official report.

The fighting along the Isonzo is described by Archduke Joseph Ferdinand, the Austrian commander, as "the hell of the battlefields," in an interview forwarded by a correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt. The battle for the Gorizia bridgehead, which is still undecided, is said by the correspondent to be the bitterest and most bloody of the campaign. Losses are enormous and there is a tremendous expenditure of ammunition. Airmen are playing an important part. The Italians are employing great battle planes of a new type. When the weather is clear these armoured flying machines, 30 yards long, equipped with three motors and two or three machine guns, can be seen plainly from the Austrian lines. Frequently entire squadrons take part in aerial battles.

NO FAMILY SPARED IN GERMANY

How War Has Hit Germany But It Must Go On

BERLIN, via London, Dec. 2.—Ernst Basserman, a leading national Liberal member of the Reichstag, discussing the war in the National Zeitung under the title "The Will of the People" says: "A sluggard peace which does not bring us security east and west is equivalent to a lost war. The repetition of a war of destruction by European powers against Germany must be made impossible and will be made impossible if we make ourselves so powerful that none will dare attack us. Decades will pass before the hate of peoples will abate and only fear of the strong will guarantee peace. It is not lust of conquest, nor vanity, nor desire to rule the world that drives us forward, but the spirit of self-preservation of a healthy people firmly resolved to achieve security east and west which will prevent a repetition of this horrible war which has spared no single family."

Herr Basserman says that nothing could tend to lengthen the war more than the appearance that Germany was seeking peace. He insists that the country can hold out for years if necessary.

ANOTHER LARGE WAR ORDER TO AMES HOLDEN

It is understood that the largest war order for army boots yet received by the Ames Holden Co., Montreal, was closed to-day.

On enquiry at the office of the company nothing definite could be obtained, owing to the absence of the President in New York on other business connected with the Company.

This is the second large order for boots obtained by the Ames Holden Co., and further orders will likely be closed as soon as arrangements can be completed to execute same.

WARDEN KINDRED, M.D., IS MOVING TO TWEED AND COUNTY LOSES HIM

His Administration Has Reflected His Fine Qualities and His Abilities in Municipal Affairs.

The shadow of Warden Kindred's retirement is upon the County Council these days, and his approaching departure to the town of Tweed brings unrestricted expressions from his colleagues of appreciation of his municipal services and of the sterling qualities of his own personality. Warden Kindred's term in the County Council chair has been a success. With only two years' experience he was appointed to the premier place in his third year, a fact which in itself indicates the impression he had made among the other county reeves. He has been most attentive to his duties, and certainly has not shirked the demands of his office. Dr. Kindred is one of those quiet men who expend their energies with a minimum of display. It is only when the work is accomplished that you realize the activity of the worker. And Dr. Kindred has reflected a new lustre and dignity to the wardenship. There has been no ostentation about his incumbency, an element which combined with his industry endeared him to the Council. Few, if any, of the wardens of Peterborough have been posers. Their office sat lightly upon them. They graced the warden's chair instead of being noticeably elecated by it. And in this respect Warden Kindred has been no exception. His counsel has at all times been wise. He has guided rather than lead the discussions. In short his administration has been successful in every sense of the word, and his loss will be keenly felt. In the words of ex-Reeve Campbell yesterday "Peterborough's loss will be Tweed's gain."

Dr. Kindred has disposed of his property and practice in Havelock, and is moving to Tweed in the immediate future. Certainly the best wishes of his county and city friends will follow him.

IN AID OF THE PATRIOTIC FUND

The Ladies' Aid of Charlotte St. Methodist Church have offered to repeat their entertainment "The Last Loaf," next week in the Old Bradburn Opera House, for the benefit of the Patriotic Fund. The offer has been made to the committee and will be considered by them at a meeting to-night.

eral good, Peterborough can never become a mendicant on the head office, and draw money that this city has not placed there.

The Press of the city has very generously placed the reading matter columns of the papers at the disposal of the committee. It is a franchise of large value at this time and in this movement. The Fund as it appeals to the people needs educational comment. That its aims and objects be driven home for a week or so. The Publicity Committee gladly take up the offer of the papers, and for a few days will claim the centre of the stage. Other activities can, for the time being, be relegated to the wings. So from day to day an appeal will be made that all may be informed and so enthused to lend a hand. Work counts just as much as money. There are hundreds of men in the city, who get home in the evening, put on the slippers, and sit by the fireside and thank the good Lord that they are not as other men. As other men in the sense that they have comfort, peace, some measure of prosperity, and domestic happiness, as contrasted with others. All homes are not blessed. So we want these men, good men, too—but not taking thought—to come on in and lend a hand. United effort will surely tell. We cannot all make speeches, deliver addresses exort and plead, but who ever saw a real movement succeed without its hewers of wood and drawers of water? And, mind you, the off horse is generaly the better puller.

We use to-day in conversation military metaphors. Your friend attempts a lame explanation or relation of some incident. You ask him in derision if he has been recently gassed; if one attempts to take advantage in a small way, he is accused of sniping. Taking this clue, what is here written is only the skirmish line of the Patriotic Fund advance. The heavy guns, the Jack Johnsons, the Kaiserklums will be brought into play further on. The Publicity Committee wishes you to read what is here printed from day to day. What is said will be said in an integrating way, and it will all be information. Information that if intelligently considered will help to override objection, smother out excuse, set aside plausible retort, and in the end convince that the Patriotic Fund must and will be supported.

Now is the time for objections. Let us have them. One story of doubtful authenticity may work serious harm. We want to overtake such right now. To nail the hide to the barn door with elegance and precision. Any questions will be answered. People have the best right in the world to be told. If a man is going to cough up coin he surey wants to know of the bona-fides. So let us have inquiries. No matter if such seem to cast a doubt on the actions of the committee or its administration. A real good man said the other day that he had heard objections to the Fund and its administration, but that he felt convinced that for each and every objection raised a reasonable and convincing answer was ready.

Consider for a moment. Here are nine men, your own citizens—men whom you would trust in any ordinary affair of life. Take their words for the payment of money, if you like as an instance. To have a man undertake to peel his wad for you and then do it is a proof of probity. Sure thing. These nine men have been and are giving large time to the performance of and exceedingly onerous public duty, just as faithfully and seriously as if they were executors of an estate and under bonds. That there has been very little fault-finding only occasional objection is proof that they are discharging that duty well. But the point to be made is that the public will not contribute its money, no matter how commendable the object, if it gets the idea that the dispensing of the Fund is done in a perfunctory or slipshod way. So let us have any objections, that such may be met.

As to the plan of campaign. That will be told of in another issue of the papers. Probably to-morrow. It is comprehensive and thorough. The good friends who helped most notably by gifts of considerable amount will help again. But particular attention will be paid to engage subscriptions of moderate amounts from those to whom a moderate amount is quite as much to give as larger from those in affluent circumstances. Every little helps. We can build Dreadnoughts if we can get enough five-cent pieces. The steady gathering in of something from all will swell the fund to proportions that it will be a credit to the liberality of the city, a most substantial help to the national movement and a source of comfort and assistance to the family of the man in the trenches.

WEATHER FOR THE REST OF THE YEAR

Weather wiseacres have a tradition that the weather of the second day of each month rules the weather of the month, that is the weather for the remaining days of the month after the 2nd will be, in general, of the character of that of the "rulin" day. A local observer says that this rule worked with great fidelity for the month of November. The 2nd of that month was mild and mixed; a little rain, a little wind and a little mild sunshine. The weather of the month generally corresponded.

If this rule holds good for the last month of the year we shall, in initiation of to-day, the 2nd, have a mild December with a few dashes of snow, not too much wind and a good deal of sunshine and perhaps a green Christmas. This is not a weather forecast, but a challenge to the amateur weather prophet to make good, according to the rule he lays down in regard to the monthly behaviour of the weather. The meterologists and scientists will scorn the idea of a date in the calendar having any influence upon the weather; for, they claim, Divine Providence established the meteorological laws that govern the weather, long before days were named and numbered, or even time was divided into days, but one can't always tell. There are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in the philosophy of the official weather man.

LIGHT WAS ALWAYS BRIGHT

Naturalized German Baker in London Fined and Warned.

At Willesden Police Court in London, Philip Horgesheimer, a German baker (naturalized), of Malvern-road, Kilburn, was fined £5 for failing to reduce his shop lighting.

It was stated by the police that the defendant had a very bright light in his window, and every time he was cautioned he put on a shade, removing it again immediately the officer turned his back. When told that he would be summoned he replied, "Well, I must sell my cakes." On the night on which the air raid his light was particularly bright.

The defendant sent his wife, also a German, to say that he was too busy making bread for his customers to attend the court.

A fine of £5 was imposed, which the wife at once paid.

WANT NOMINATION HELD AT NIGHT

Trades and Labour Council Will Make That Request

At the regular meeting of the Trades and Labour Council held last night it was decided to endorse the proposal that the civic nomination proceedings take place in the evening instead of in the morning as has been the case. It was decided to write the City Council suggesting that this course be adopted—that the nominations should take place at 7 o'clock or around that hour and that afterwards a public meeting be held, at which all candidates might have a chance to state their position.

TURNBULLS

"THE WHITE FEATHER" IS A WONDERFUL PLAY AND WONDERFULLY ACTED

What is probably the finest dramatic company which has ever been sent out on the full Canadian circuit covering the towns as well as the large cities is that which will present the famous play "The White Feather" here shortly. Only in very isolated cases has it been deemed worth while to send a London or a New York production intact to Canada. The strong British tone of the work and the fact that it deals graphically and truthfully with war conditions in Great Britain justify the step. The theme of "The White Feather" is the machinations of the German spy bureau which so seriously menaced the naval operations of Great Britain during the early stages of the war. There is no attempt to be sensational at the expense of truth, and the many who have seen the piece during its long runs in London, New York and the chief cities of America and Australia can testify. It is but seldom that a play wins such approval among all classes of the community. King George and Queen Mary have been to see it twice in London, though they have seldom gone to the playhouse since the war began, and quite recently Queen Mary signified her approval of it by purchasing from her own purse three hundred tickets for distribution among convalescent soldiers. On the other hand we have the approbation of a bell boy in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, who went to see "The White Feather" during its tremendously successful week in that city early this month. The next day in serving one of the leading members of the cast with a pitcher of ice water he betused a tip. "Why?" asked the astonished thespian. "I went with my mother to see the play last night," said the youth, betraying his English extraction, "and I was hamply repaid."

The action of the play is located at a summer resort overlooking the North Sea, where we find four agents of the German government endeavouring to give wireless signals for a naval attack just as they did at Scarborough. How they are circumvented by a clever British secret service man who poses as a well dressed "nut" and a slacker is told in a most thrilling and amusing manner. The whole story is founded on fact and is from the pen of a Cambridge University man and a gentleman of scientific attainments. Mr. Lechmere Worrall who has made a thorough investigation of spy methods and does not draw on his imagination as does the playwright who concocts an ordinary spy play. His chief character calls for a very high order of humorous and emotional acting and he has found an ideal interpreter of his "slacker" Christopher Brent in Mr. Albert Brown a Harvard man of English parentage who is regarded by critics as one of the finest comedians on the English-speaking stage. Mr. Brown owed his entrance upon a stage career to the celebrated Canadian actress, Julia Arthur, and he was a member of her company during the three years that she starred in romantic and classic plays. Mr. Brown has also been leading man for Henrietta Crosman William Morris and Grace George, and some years ago won fame as the creator of the leading role in Eugene Walter's celebrated drama, "Paid in Full." It was necessary to find an actor who could play a drawling Englishman to the life and who was also an expert in wireless telegraphy and other electric inventions which figure in this drama. Mr. Brown not only is so much like a Britisher that old countrymen visiting Canada have made bets that he could not be an American, but for some years has for his own amusement experimented with wireless telegraphy at his Long Island home. Another prominent member of the company is Mr. Arthur Elliott, the finest living exponent of "John Bull" types of character who first was seen in Canada with the famous English company of Mr. and Mrs. Kendal. The leading lady is Miss Olive Temple, a most gifted English actress who was first brought to America as a member of the celebrated New Theatre company with which it was intended to revolutionise acting in America. Other people who were seen in the original New York cast are Mr. John Burkell and Miss Louise Muldener, having been selected by British stage producers sent to New York to organize the company. It is to be hoped that our local public will show its appreciation of this effort to give them the very best type of company and production that can be seen anywhere.

French People Realize Work of British in Fight

RAISING ARMIES WAS GREAT FEAT

Race of Seamen Understood Necessity to Land Forces Too.

The people of France have been amazed at the volume of Great Britain's contribution to the land forces of the present war. This is the lesson gleaned from reading the October number of the French Magazine Je Sais Tout, in which every article deals with French impressions of the British assistance.

In an article by Whitney-Warren, an American, the statement is made that British people realise that their efforts have been inadequate in view of the magnitude of the task. The writer maintains, however, that an astonishing feat has been performed in increasing an army from 100,000 men to 3,000,000 especially in a country not immediately exposed to invasion. Under a system of voluntary service this feat showed remarkable appreciation of the seriousness of the crisis.

While essentially a race of seamen, the British, declares the writer, have taken to the other branch of the service like a man who finds he must change his occupation. Owing to the need of creating an army, and of preparing for war, British efforts had not been felt at the front for many months. Yet, owing to the tremendous economic and financial resources of Britain, the longer the war lasted the more powerfully would her assistance be felt.

Kitchener's Army.

A description of the forming of Kitchener's armies is found in the magazine under the signature of Hubert Jacques. While admitting there was a hesitancy in enlisting at the beginning, the writer is ready with an explanation of this phenomenon. He attributes the initial reluctance to enlist to the fact that Britons had held for ages a strong conviction that the shores of Great Britain were immune from invasion.

Great Britain was a country of liberty and individual independence where the laws were made and obeyed only as the people found them equitable. It was impossible, therefore, for the British Government to change existing laws unless the nation as a whole was in accord with the change. The Germans came to the aid of the British recruiting officer, and by their air raids and submarine outrages, educated the British public to the need of armies to cross the Channel and fight the Germans. Whereas Britain at first expected to send only 150,000 troops to France, she had now sent several millions. A Frenchman who prophesied such a thing in August of last year would have been regarded as a fool.

The enormous proportions of the feat performed by the British Government in raising an army of such proportions under a system of voluntary enlistment, and doing the work in fourteen months, was commented on in the article.

A Vast Factory.

Another phase of the same article is devoted to the accomplishment of the Hon. David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, who, the writer says, has transformed the British Isles into a vast factory for the producing of guns, shells, arms and ammunition of all kinds.

These are but a few of the articles culled from many that reflect the same spirit of admiration for the British Government and the British people. Practically all draw attention to the paternal care extended to the British soldier by the authorities, who see that he has as much comfort and freedom as possible. The financial assistance rendered by Great Britain to France is dealt with by Raphael Georges Levy and other writers are Joseph Galtier, Paul Louis Hervier, Maurice Barres, Pollybe and Ernest Gaubert.

The artices are illustrated in most interesting fashion with pictures illustrating the munitions production in England, and scenes at the front. One picture shows Canadian troops capturing German trenches at Ypres.

"About the war—"

A murmur of protest checked him. But again he began.

"About the war—"

When a dozen determined men drew in breath with a hissing sound, such as the snake makes before it strikes, you know what it means. Uncle Osias knew what it meant. But he did not lack courage. Again, seizing his moment, he exclaimed,

"About the war—"

"Shet up about the war!"

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Sugar Takes a Sharp Advance—Fowl Prices on the Downgrade—Government Commanders Wheat for Allies—Review of Pototo Situation—Comparison in Prices.

Market Features.

Butter—Remains firm.

Fowl—Buyer's prices drop.

Sugar—Advances 66 cents a hundred.

Potatoes—Likely to advance.

Spices—Go up.

Hogs—Toronto prices advance 10 cents.

Dairy and Poultry.

Butter, dairy, lb.	28c to 30c
Butter, creamery	35c
Eggs doz.	39 and 40c
Cheese, lb.	20c
Cream, qt.	35c
Turkeys lb.	15c
Ducks, lb.	15c
Geese lb.	10 to 12c
Chicken lb.	12c

The Montreal Chamber of Commerce is considering taking action with other such organizations in the Dominion to appeal to the Federal Government to remove the duties on butter and eggs imported into Canada, with a view to having cheaper prices for the consumer.

Fowl quotations on the local market, last Saturday were: Chicken, $1. to $1.20 per pair; Geese, 10½ lbs., $1.35; 15 lb. $1.75; Turkeys, 14 lb., $2.00; and 21 lbs., $3.00.

Grains, Hay.

Wheat, bush	$1.00
Oats	37c
Barley	60c
Peas	$2.00
Buckwheat	60c.
Rye	75c.
Shorts, ton	$24.00
Bran, ton	$22.00
Flour, cwt.	$3.25
Baled hay, ton	$20 to $22
Loose hay	$19.00 to $20.00

The sensation of the week were the action of the Federal Government in commandeering all the wheat in elevators east of and including Fort William. The reason given is the desire of the Government to help the Allies. It is rumored that the wheat will find its way to Italy. Bigger prices for the producer, particularly the farmers in the West, will, no doubt, be the result. Besides it will place the eastern dealer at the mercy of the Western farmer for wheat to fill the orders which were to have been filled by the wheat commandeered. By this order the Government secures what it wants at a fixed price, instead of an inflated one, thus cutting out any undue profit that might have been exacted by the middleman. It is understood the Government will pay Saturday's closing quotations at Winnipeg for cash wheat, which were: $1.04¾ for No. 1 Northern; $1.03½ for No. 2, and 99¾ for No. 3.

Fruit and Vegetables.

Apples, per bag	$1.00 to $1.25
Potatoes, bag	$1.50
Onions, bag	$1.00
Onions, white pickling, qt.	15c
White beans, lb.	15c
Carrots, peck	15c
Turnips	12c
Parsnips	15c
Beets	15c
Celery, head	10c.
Cabbage	5c.
Cauliflower	5c.

Last Saturday apples were quoted as follows: Talman Sweets $3.00 a barrel, $1.50 a bag, or 30 cents a peck; Snows $3.25 to $3.50 a barrel; Greenings $4.00 a barrel, or $1.40 a bag; Golden Russets $4.00 a barrel, or $2.00 a bag; Baldwins $4.00 a barrel; Northern Spies $4.50 to $5.00 a barrel.

Canned goods are acting in sympathy with other foodstuffs by showing a tendency to advance. Tomatoes, peas, beans, and corn are selling at 20 to 30 cents a dozen more than three months ago. There has been a large export of canned vegetables to Britain.

Potatoes are reported to be affected with rot and blight, especially in Ontario, and the indications are that the keeping qualities will be very poor. It is several years since there has been such a scarcity of tubers and before spring comes we may look for pretty stiff prices.

Last year the average yield of potatoes in Ontario was 167 bushels per acre. This year the average would not be more than 92 bushels, the lowest yield on record for the province.

In other provinces the potato yield is very poor except in Alberta and British Columbia, where the respective yields were 211 and 258 bushels.

The average price per bushel to the grower works out to 7 cents for Ontario, as compared with 33 cents for Alberta.

Meats and Hogs.

Bacon, per lb.	28c. to 30c.
Ham	30c
Cooked hams	35c
Pork	14c to 16c
Spare ribs	10c
Tenderloin	30c
Lamb	14c. to 16c
Veal	13c. to 20c
Rib roast	18c
Sirloin steak	23c
Round roast	22c
Mutton	13c
Small pigs, cwt.	9.15
Live Hogs, cwt.	9.15

Hogs went up 10 cents on the Toronto market this week. The whole country, particularly the West, has been drained of swine, and till more can be raised, packers expect to pay more.

Some of our Canadian meat packers have large contracts for canned meats with the Canadian Government to supply the Army, and there is a rumour to the effect that negotiations are under way to sell the whole exportable surplus of canned and dressed meats to the British Government. We may look, therefore, for a stiffening in prices very soon.

Wools and Hides.

Wool (no market).

Sheep skins, each	$1.25 to $1.50
Calf skins, lb.	14c. to 15c
Beef skins	14c. to 15c
Tallow, rough	2c
Tallow, refined	5c. to 6c

Seed Grain.

Red clover, cwt.	$27.00
Alsike, cwt.	$25.00
Alfalfa, cwt.	$27.00
Timothy, cwt.	$12.00

General.

No. 1 granulated sugar, cwt.	$7.25
Honey, lb.	15c
Shelled walnuts	30c
Currants	13c
Raisins	10c
Dripping	10c
Apple butter, half-pint	15c

Spices are on the upward climb. Mustard is up to 10 cents a pound. Pickles, preserves, and vinegar are showing advances over a few months ago.

Comparison in Prices

With this time the last two years:

	1913.	1914.	1915
Wheat	.88	1.18	1.00
Oats	.40	.55	.37
Butter, dairy	.26	.26	.31
Butter, creamery	.28	.29	.35
Eggs, new-laid	.50	.42	.40
Cattle	8.25	8.50	8.00
Hogs	8.75	7.75	9.15
Sheep	5.75	6.00	7.00

Great Strength a Gift

Not a Thing That Can Be Acquired by Exercise and Training.

The death in Washington, Penn., of Isaac McGirr, at the age of 87, marks the passing of a peculiarly gifted man. Noted as a violinist, who studied under Ole Bull and became prominent in New York musical circles, and as an artist, whose drawings were praised by such men as Henry Ward Beecher, Daniel Webster, William Cullen Bryant, and Henry W. Longfellow, he also, in spite of the fact that he weighed only 130 pounds, was famous for his physical strength.

This emphasizes that physical strength is a gift, the same as extraordinary power to express one's self in music or in the art of drawing or painting. This is emphasized the more in the case of this man, as it represented what is usually regarded as the opposite of the other gifts and never to be looked for in one possessing either of the others. But the remarkable strength of many small men or of men so ungainly as to suggest nothing but awkwardness, is proverbial, and to these may be added the surprises given by men so pale and sickly looking as to be taken for consumptives in an advanced stage.

It was related of McGirr that he was able in his younger days to lift a barrel of cider weighing more than 300 pounds to his shoulder and drink from the bunghole, and, in addition, was a champion runner and jumper. Compare these with his other performances of drawing the softest music from a violin and producing a picture with delicate touches.

It is necessary only to mention the name of Abraham Lincoln to secure a picture of another type of man peculiarly gifted in this respect. Here great physical strength accompanied a mind that always looked in other directions. Those who hold that Lincoln was raised up for the great work that he performed point to his constitution of iron as well as to his superiority of mind for justification. He was equipped in every way. But this only adds to the evidence of such strength as a gift. Lincoln, six feet four inches tall, stooped, never weighing more than 180 pounds, and described as suggesting the consumptive, was yet able to do the same cider-barrel trick mentioned above; and who has not heard of how, in his young manhood, he occasionally took a bully in hand and chastised him as a child? Washington also was noted for his physical strength as well as his wisdom.

As we are discussing these instances of unusual strength as gifts, naturally no argument is made against the value of exercise and training as a means of promoting bodily power; certainly none against clean living, which is the explanation of why the men referred to were able to retain their strength so long. It scarcely needs to be stated that there is no gift that could be lost sooner through dissipation. But in the matter of strength, same as in music or art, training can raise the individual who "doesn't have it in him" only to a certain point of mediocrity. It is of value to all, however, through bringing them to the best within them, but their best is soon passed by those who have it in them. Yet those with gifts require training same as the others to bring them to their best.

It is like this: For years hundreds of men had been training for the prize-ring, but none rising above the ordinary. Then one day Jess Willard joined them "with something on all the rest."

IT TOOK LESS THAN A MINUTE

Lord Fisher's Briefly Eloquent Reply to Winston Churchill.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Lord Fisher's reply to Mr. Churchill occupied less than a minute in delivery.

When the House of Lords assembled his presence in the cross benches was at once remarked upon, for he is a very rare attendant. He had in his hand a small piece of manuscript. As soon as the Lord Chancellor was seated, he read his statement:

"I ask leave of the House to make a personal statement.

"Certain references were made to me in a speech delivered yesterday by Mr. Churchill. I have been 61 years in the service of my country, and I leave my record in the hands of my countrymen.

"The Prime Minister said that Mr Churchill had said one or two things he had better not have said, and had left unsaid something he should have said.

"I am content to wait.

"It is unfitting to make personal explanations affecting the national interests when my country is in the midst of a great war."

It was Lord Fisher's maiden speech in the House of Lords. He was, in fact, making his Parliamentary debut and appeared to have a certain anxiety about it inasmuch as he was in his place five minutes before the Lord Chancellor took his seat on the Woolsack.

A German whose wife was ill at the Seney Hospital, Brooklyn, called the first evening she was there and inquired how she was getting along. He was told that she was improving.

Next day he called again, and was told that she was still improving. This went on for some time, each day the report being that his wife was improving.

Finally one day when he called he was told that his wife was dead. Seeing the doctor he went up to him and said with a world of sarcasm in his voice:

"Vell, dortor, vat did she die of—imbrovements?"—"Medical Pickwick."

too conservative. There is no division of its size and peculiar geography that has done so well in the cause of the Empire, and it will undoubtedly continue to maintain its reputation for recriting and training. Col. Hemming has every reason to feel proud of the work of his division.

Kingston, Dec. 1. — The Duke of Connaught and aides arrived via C. P.R. at 4.10 p.m. to-day and immediately drove to the cricket field, where troops were reviewed. After the review the Royal party went to the Royal Military College. The train left this evening for Toronto, where the Duke is to make an inspection on Thursday.

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—Canada's offer of a third overseas division has been accepted by the British War Office, and it is understood that the constitution of the division has been arranged. It will include the Princess Patricias, the 42nd Battalion, of Montreal; the 49th battalion, of Edmonton, and the Royal Canadian Rifles, the Strathcona Horse. There will also be a brigade of mounted infantry, which is to be constituted from six cavalry regiments brought up to strength. It will be commanded by Col. Macdonnell, of Winnipeg. Other units will be selected from units now at Shorncliffe.

Stratford, Dec. 1.—Lieut.-Col. T. G. Delamere, commander of the new Perth County battalion now being organized, is opposing strongly the allowing of civilians to take part in the O.H.A. series this season. The colonel contends that any fellow capable of putting a skate on ice is capable of shouldering a rifle. Col. Delamere is attempting to have the franchise of the Stratford Hockey Club transferred to the soldiers.

London Ont., Dec. 1.—George Wilson, bandmaster of the London Salvation Army Band, has been appointed bandmaster of the new 142nd (City of London) battalion, under Lieut.-Col. Graham, and 12 members of the Salvationist band will form the nucleus of the battalion band.

Port Hope, Dec. 1. — The High School Board this evening decided to release Principal E. E. Snider for service overseas. He will enlist as major in the 139th Regiment. The board will hold the position open for Major Snider until the termination of hostilities and in the meantime, D. F. Howson, of Sydenham, will occupy the position. Principal Snider has been in charge of the High school here for years, and his services are highly valued. He is also a thoroughly trained militiaman.

With the entrance of the 93rd Battalion into barracks, the guard has been increased in size and is now in charge of a sergeant and corporal instead of only a corporal, as was the case up to a day or two ago. Sergt. Lemay is in charge of the guard today and Sergt. Theobald was on duty yesterday.

Lieut. Puyjalon and Lieut. Quakenbush of the 93rd are on recruiting duty in the city.

Physical drill in the snow at 6.3? o'clock this morning gave the men of the 93rd a royal appetite for breakfast and "The Cookhouse" bugle call was a welcome one.

No word has been received in regard to the new instruments for the 93rd Band, which were ordered weeks ago and should have been received long before this. The Bugle Band is also waiting a supply of bugles ordered some time ago. So far the band has but four bugles.

According to a letter received from Mrs. Rivers-Bulkley, head of the Canadian Prisoners of War Board, by a local lady, Pte. D. Cummings' correct address is—

Musical Festival At S. A. Temple

There will be a musical festival at the S. A. Temple to-night, at which instrumental and vocal selections will be given by a female quartette, a recitation by F. Gray, and a cornet duet by Songster selection.

A programme will be given by the Songster Brigade at Lindsay on Saturday night next, when the Brigade will assist to welcome Commissioner Richards to Lindsay. They will spend the week end there and then go to Fenelon Falls on Monday, doing a special musical festival on Monday afternoon and visiting the Commissioner at night.

All are welcome at the musical festival to-night.

WEDDING BELLS

MONTGOMERY—NOBLE.

Lillian Ethel, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Noble, of 176 Brock Street, City, was united in marriage to William Montgomery, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Montgomery, also of this city, in Winnipeg, on December 1st.

The young couple will make their home in the West.

BOTTRELL—TAYLOR.

On the morning of Nov. 3rd a very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Taylor, when their eldest daughter, Rita, and Edgard Bottrell, son of Mr. Jno. Bottrell, of Deer Lake, were married, the nuptial mass being celebrated by Rev. Father Kelly of Parry Sound.

The bride, who wore white embroidered voile with bodice of shadow lace, was attended by her sister, Hermace, who wore a beautiful dress of blue silk. The groom was assisted by Mr. Ladd. After the ceremony was performed a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served to a number of relatives and friends. The table was decorated with chrysanthemums and geraniums. The reception in the evening was attended by over seventy friends of both bride and groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a set of Alaska sable, to the bride's sister a cameo ring, and to the groomsman an engraved cigar case. Other presents were a set of Rogers' Hero spoons, from the bride's mother, a set of Rogers' Old Colony silver from the groom's brother, a gold crucifix from the bride's sister, and other presents so numerous that a second table had to be provided to hold them, all showing the high esteem in which both are held in their home circles.

The happy couple left on the morning train via C.N.O. railway for a two weeks' tour to Toronto, Detroit, and other southern points. The bride's travelling suit was of Belgian blue serge with white fur hat, with pompom to match suit. On their return the bride will receive friends at the home of her mother.—Com.

Richard Blair To Be Speaker

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—The position of speaker to succeed Senator Sproule will likely be filled by Richard Blair, M.P., for Peel, though J. E. Armstrong, East Lambton, is also a candidate for the position. The appointment of Sproule creates the eighth vacancy in the Commons.

Wants Her Husband And Lawyer Both Shot

OTTAWA, Nov. 2.—The Minister of Militia has received many remarkable letters, but the most amusing and astonishing product of the daily mail bag yet received came to hand to-day. It was a letter from a woman asking that her husband and his lawyer both be sent to the front and placed on the front line of fighting men. The ardent wish was expressed that they might both be shot. The letter also contained the declaration that the writer proposed to take a trip to Ottawa to express to the Minister of Militia why her request should be granted.

Eat Lemons.

Lemons taken internally will quench thirst, prevent overindulgence in ice water, clear the skin, assist digestion, and eventually rid one of obesity. Applied externally they are a bleach which removes stains from fingers or neck, freckles from arms or cheeks and other sallow blemishes. Pineapples will sweeten the voice and restore its quality if it has grown husky. It also aids digestion, which means improvement in the complexion.

For sagging tissues and wrinkles ice is the remedy of the present day. Try it some day after a massage, and note the wonderful change in your appearance and feelings. Do not imagine that one or two treatments will dispel the deep-seated wrinkles as if by magic, but the conditions will be improved, and continued and systematic use will bring lasting good.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 2—USING THE EYES

THERE is very little of our daily work that we can sit down and do with our eyes shut. That means that good vision is absolutely necessary for every phase of the day's routine. If the eyes tire, if it is necessary to strain the eyes to make them serve their purpose, or if there is anything at all that makes you use a conscious effort to see clearly and naturally, then the eyes need help, and can be helped by good glasses. Unless you have such good eyes that you can use them all day long, and evenings as well, without, as you might say, knowing you have eyes, you should have the eyes examined by a competent eyesight specialist. Mr. Fowler takes a delight in so fitting his patrons' glasses as to render their vision perfect under every condition.

THE LORD'S SECOND COMING IMMINENT?

Thoughtful Sermon by Rev. P. W. Philpott at Bethany Tabernacle Last Night

At the Tabernacle last night Rev. P. W. Philpott gave a most striking discourse on the second return of Christ. He took as the basis of his remarks the parable of Christ relating to the wise and foolish virgins as recorded in the 25th chapter of the Gospel of St. Matthew. Mr. Philpott declared that a great many people were willingly ignorant of many things contained in the Word of God which the Lord would have His people know. God would have His people investigate for themselves the marvellous portrayal of prophetic truth which He has recorded in His revealed Word. While baptism was only mentioned 14 times in the New Testament, the Lord's coming was referred to at least 318 times. I am a firm believer in baptism, said Mr. Philpott, but I also believe that we should give place to the teaching of the great subject of the Lord's return in proportion to the emphasis placed upon it in the Word of God.

The speaker emphasized most emphatically throughout his message the thought that we were living in a time which the Bible described as "the last days." That if people would read their Bibles in the light of events that are now transpiring they could not help but see the fulfillment of prophecy in the present condition of the world. That an ever-increasing number of notable divines, after a thorough investigation of this momentous subject, had come out boldly to declare their belief in the imminent return of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Again and again Mr. Philpott charged his audience to be ready for the return of the Bridegroom, who said he, is none other than Jesus, as is clearly set forth in the parable of the Bridegroom and the Virgins. We were living in the end of this age—at the end of the world. That as other ages had closed in Judgment, so this—the Gentile age—was hastening on world was to have a glorious peace when the Prince of Peace should return to establish His kingdom on a foundation of Righteousness. Very solemn were the moments when the speaker closed with an earnest prayer that God would include himself and his audience among the Wise Virgins, when the Bridegroom should appear.

Mr. Philpott will speak to-night on the "Judgment of Christian Service." Dr. R. J. Zimmerman of Toronto will speak to-morrow at 3 and 8 p.m. A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Young Havelock Soldier Warmly Received

Havelock Standard: Pte. Geo. Buchanan, one of the two first to enlist in Havelock arrived home on Monday afternoon, and received an ovation by cheering hundreds of our citizens and school children, that must have gladdened his heart and made him feel that his high regard for his country was thoroughly appreciated by every one in town.

Pte. Buchanan, who is only 19 years of age, was through all the big battles in which the Canadians covered themselves with undying glory. He was among those who received the awful baptism of Hun gas and was unconscious for hours from its effects at the battle of Langemarck. He was wounded at the battle of Festubert when he was hit in the knee by shrapnel shell fragments. He was taken to England in May last and has been in the hospital there until sailing for home a few weeks ago. He speaks very highly of the treatment of the troops on active service and of the kindness and consideration of the hospital staff and nurses but is extremely modest of his person prowess as a exert sharshooter. He has received his discharge papers and will spend some time recuperating from the effects of his wound and the gas the latter of which still bothers him considerably.

The warmth of his reception on Monday is but a slight indication of the high regard in which everyone in Havelock holds the youthful hero and all most sincerely hope that he will rapidly recover his health and spirits.

He has done his full duty to his country and all hats are off to him.

THE FRASER MISSION BAND of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, will hold a Sale of homemade Cakes and Candy, Fancy Bags, Aprons, etc. on Saturday afternoon, December 4th from 3 to 6 o'clock, in the lecture room of the church. Afternoon tea will be served.

RECOGNIZES HIS SISTER, THEN PASSES AWAY

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Sister Edith Alway, a Canadian Red Cross nurse, writes that while doing duty on a hospital ship plying between the Dardanelles and Malta she learned that an Australian private named Alway was lying in the Malta hospital. She visited the patient and discovered that he was a brother whom she had not seen for six years.

Private Alway was dying of pneumonia. He recognized his sister and was just able to murmur her name in greeting before he passed away.

NO OFFICIAL CONFIRMATION AS TO MONASTIR'S FATE

Athens Despatches Say That the Bulgarians Have Taken It —Communication With the Town is Cut Off Since Early Thursday Morning.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The destruction of the British steamship Langton Hall by a submarine, was announced by the Admiralty to-day. Part of the crew had been landed. The Langton Hall is not listed with Lloyds.

MONASTIR'S FATE NOT KNOWN.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Monastir's fate is not yet known. That the Bulgarians have taken it, is stated positively in Athens despatches to the Times and Exchange Telegraph Co., but official confirmation is lacking.

Salonika reported to-day that communication with the town has been severed since 7 a.m. Thursday. Practically all of the Serb population has already left Monastir. Bulgar and Greek residents, who constitute a large proportion of the total remain, however. The former have been rejoicing at the invaders' approach. The latter undoubtedly can depend on the protection of their lives and property. The Serbs' southern army under General Vassich, which has been making Monastir its base, is believed to have moved to the westward toward, or perhaps across the Albanian frontier.

ITALIAN ASSAULTS IN PROGRESS.

VIENNA, via Berlin and London, Dec. 3.—Italian assaults on Goritz are in progress more violently than ever to-day. The Italians apparently were reorganizing their forces during the lull Thursday, and resumed the assault, according to the Austrian War Office, under cover of a dense fog. With the mist so thick that the opposing troops could see each other only at short range. The Austrians are declared to have beaten back attacks on the bridgehead. The repulse is reported also of three assaults on the Austrian line in the Oslavia district, and of offensives at Tolmino and Marzlivrh.

PARIS, Dec. 3. —A newspaper despatch from the Boine, Switzerland, says two hundred persons were killed or wounded in food riots in Berlin recently.

BERLIN, Dec. 3. — The Tageblatt yesterday again issued a warning that Germany will continue practises of executing civilians who take any part in the war.

BATTLES HAVE SHIFTED TO THE MONTENEGRIN HILLS

Bulgar Campaign Against the Serbians Marks the Close of the Operations—Austria Invades Montenegro

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Only Austria remains among the Teutonic allies an active belligerent in the Balkan area. Bulgaria has announced her campaign virtually was ended with the capture of Priarend and 17,000 prisoners on Tuesday, just as Germany announced the end of her major operations with the capture of Pristina. Austria, however, still has another opponent to consider before she may say she controls the little Slav nations on her south. Montenegro still is intact, so Austrian armies have been directed against her with orders to crush her beyond all resistance.

Except for the probability of sharp conflicts later between the Germano-Bulgar armies and the Franco-British in the Vardar Valley—conflicts prevented now by the continued cold and snow, which at this time reaches the proportions of a blizzard—Montenegro now offers the only field of battle in the Balkans. Here Prince Nicholas' mountaineers, reinforced by scattering bands of Serbs who succeeded in retreating across the northern frontier, will interpose all their genius for guerilla warfare against the main Austrian columns. The struggle begon Wednesday, when the Austrians, once across the northeast border, approached and apparently are near to capturing Plevlje. Battle of some importance are in progress in that part of the Sanjak of Novibiza, which Montenegro held after the Balkan War. The Montenegrins in a foray into Bosnia say they have defeated an Austrian force at Fotcha, but this is generally regarded as a patrol action without bearing on the larger results of the campaign.

So far as official London has made it known, there is no change in the Monastir situation. The Bulgars are along the north branch of the Cerna River, which runs three miles in front of the town, but they are making no effort to cross the stream, even in the face of the comparatively insignificant Serb force which is holding the southern bank.

The Sofia announcement that her campaign is ended is cited to support the report that King Ferdinand, to avoid a dispute with Greece, has decided against the occupation of Monastir.

No news has been received of the Austrians and Germans who proceeded to Rustchuk, on the Danube River, to co-operate with the Bulgarians and Turks to oppose a possible Russian invasion through Roumania.

The attitude of Roumania still is uncertain. The latest reports say that she, like Greece, is trying to remain neutral, but with two belligerent armies on her borders this, it is believed, may prove difficult.

Greece in her reply to the latest note of the Entente Allies upon the maintenance of her neutrality and independence, and a final settlement of the points at issue between the Hellenic Kingdom and the Entente Powers is not in sight Greece object, according to despatches from Athens, to the evacuation of Salonika by her troops, the handing over of the railways to the Entente Allies and the policing by the navies of the Entente Powers of her coastal waters to circumvent the activities of German submarines.

LONDON, Dec. 3.— Correspondents from the Russian army say sanitary conditions are first class. The next move is to be in millions and not in army corps.

TORONTO, Dec. 3.— An enthusiastic inaugural meeting of the "Fifty Thousand Club" was addressed by the Duke of Connaught, who urged everyone to subscribe liberally.

France Buying Sugar Abroad

Announcement That Government Will Set Price of Sale and Limit Quantity

PARIS, Dec. 3.—The production of sugar in France and her colonies is insufficient to supply the needs of the country's population, and it has become necessary to import stocks estimated at from 300,000 to 325,000 tons. Of this amount a large proportion has already been bought in Cuba and the United States, and more will be purchased.

It is announced that the government will set the price at which the sugar is to be sold and indicate the quantities to be consumed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Secretary Lansing has refused passports to some members of the Ford party to warring nations.

Party will not be permitted to land in Great Britain without proper passports.

Hundreds of Thousands Starve In Poland's Warsaw District

WARSAW, Dec. 1.—Hundreds of thousands of the civil population of the Warsaw districts of Poland are suffering for want of food. Many are homeless, living in huts, caves and abandoned trenches.

The situation is more serious because of the immediate number of unemployed thrown out of work by the almost complete paralysis of Polish industries. Prominent Poles maintain the drastic relief measures are necessary if wholesale deaths from starvation are to be prevented.

Such flour as is now on hand is being distributed by the Germans under the bread and cake system, but only potatoes are available in quantities while there is an acute shortage of dried vegetables, meat fats and densed milk. Prices all over Poland have risen to unprecedented height.

Especially Acute.

Suffering is especially acute among the families of Russian reservists, who formerly received regular payments from the government. Pensioners now are cut off from their former incomes, and the Russians are charged with having taken with them the funds of savings bank depositors.

The country districts from Poland from one end to the other are battle scared barren and fire-swept. In the Warsaw governmental district alone it is estimated that 4000 villages were burned by the Russians.

Thousands already have died of starvation and disease superinduced by hunger. Mothers remaining alive are so under-nourished they cannot feed their children. The horror of the situation is increased by a serious shortage of coal, due in part to destruction of the mines and in part to inadequate railway facilities.

Soup Kitchens.

Committees composed both of Christians and Jews, with the assistance of the German government are conducting soup kitchens at Warsaw and Lodz, distributing food and fuel.

Lodz is trying to feed 30,000 of its half million population. The authorities are holding a tight rein on the flour supply to make it last until the next harvest.

Road building, railway and bridge work are being carried on extensively inorder that the unemployed may earn something. All these measures being only partial relief, however, because of the shortage in a number of articles of food which are imperatively necessary.

The German authorities are struggling desperately with epidemics of disease which have come as a result of sanitary conditions in the ravaged district. Cholera, typhoid fever, scarlet fever and diphtheria have been stamped out or are under control in most districts.

350,000 Being Supported.

Statistics which appear to be authoritative show that from 250,000 to 350,000 persons are being supported in Warsaw alone. This number is steadily increasing. Meanwhile funds raised for charitable purposes have been virtually exhausted. Less than one-third of the food supplies has been paid for for those who received them.

The food department of the Warsaw government, which has been selling at cost prices, has been obliged to restrict this work because of the exhaustion of the supply of foodstuffs and the impossibility of importing from neutral countries. The citizens' committee claims that all flour corn and feed materials have been confiscated by the military authorities of taken to Prussia.

Returned from Milled.

The German Government has given assurances that 80 per cent. of what has been taken will be returned when milled. The Germans have taken charge of the potato crop, which they declare is being given exclusively to the civil population in districts not occupied by the military.

The Germans are importing some rye, flour and salt and small quantities of coal and coke, into Poland.

There is great need for clothing and blankets, but the scarcity of leather and hides is still more keenly felt. The desoleing of shoes is prohibitively expensive.

Relief measures hitherto have not been as effective as they might have been because of lack of organization. Various societies have been working at cross purposes, overlapping and duplicating.

Two holiday makers in Devonshire caught a glimpse of Dartmoor prison while strolling along.

One of them thought to take a rise out of his companion. So he said:

"There, look at that!" he exclaimed. "I say, old chap, where would you be if that place hadn't been?"

"I'd be walking alone," he replied quickly.

HAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.

Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the bends of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the foulness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER FROM NIAGARA FALLS.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"I was miserable, tired out and dragging around. My legs could scarcely support me. My husband had read about 'Favorite Prescription' and he got me to use it. I used four bottles and the results were surprising. I got stronger, was less nervous, my appetite improved and I felt like a new person. It is the best medicine for women I have ever heard of." —Mrs. A. C. Brown, 39 Clifton Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont.

There is nothing that will bring comfort and renew hope to the invalid so surely as good news. When the vital forces are at a low ebb and everything seems useless, a ray of joy and assurance will stimulate the weary body to new effort and energy. A letter from a loved one has turned the tide in many a siege of sickness.

Doctor Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., has good news for every suffering woman. Write him to-day and tell him your troubles, and he will send you just the right advice to restore you to health and bring back the roses to your cheeks, and without charge. His "Favorite Prescription" has been the rescue of thousands of suffering women. Many grateful patients have taken Dr. Pierce's advice.

Mothers, if your daughters are weak, lack ambition, are troubled with headaches, lassitude and are pale and sickly, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just what they need to surely bring the bloom of health to their cheeks and make them strong and healthy.

It is not a secret remedy because its ingredients are printed on wrapper. Sold in either tablet or liquid form.

STEVENSON'S LAMENT.

A Book He Couldn't Read and the Kind of Story He Wanted.

This, from the "Letters of R. L. Stevenson," shows his aversion to reading one of his own books and the kind of story for which he yearned:

To W. E. Henley: I send you a book which (or I am mistook) will please you—it pleased me. But I do desire a book of adventure—a romance—and no man will get or write me one. Dumas I have read and reread too often; Scott, too, and I am short. I want to hear swords clash. I want a book to begin in a good way—a book, I guess, like "Treasure Island," alas, which I have never read and cannot, though I live to be ninety. I would that some one else had written it! By all that I can learn it is the very book for my complaint. I like the way I hear it opens, and they tell me John Silver is good fun. And to me it is and must ever be a dream unrealized, a book unwritten. Oh, my sighings after romance or even Shottery, and, oh, the weary age which will profince me neither!

"Chapter I.—The night was dark and cloudy, the ways foul. The single horseman, cloaked and booted, who pursued his way across Willesden common, had not met a traveler when the sound of wheels"—

"Chapter I.—'Yes, sir,' said the old pilot, 'she must have dropped into the bay a little afore dawn. A queer craft she looks.'

"'She shows no colors,' returned the young gentleman musingly.

"'They're a-lowering of a quarter boat, Mr. Mark,' resumed the old salt. 'We shall soon know more of her.'

"'Aye,' replied the young gentleman called Mark, 'and here, Mr. Seadrift, comes your sweet daughter, Nancy, tripping down the cliff.'

"'God bless her kind heart, sir!' ejaculated old Seadrift.

"Chapter I.—The notary, Jean Rosignol, had been summoned to the top of a great house in the Isle St. Louis to make a will, and now, his duties finished, wrapped in a warm roquelaure and with a lantern swinging from one hand, he issued from the mansion on his homeward way. Little did he think what strange adventures were to befall him"—

That is how stories should begin. And I am offered books instead.

What should be:

The Filibuster's Cache.
Jerry Abershaw.
Blood Money; a Tale.

What is:

Aunt Anne's Tea Cozy.
Mrs. Brierly's Niece.
Society; a Novel.

Tea-Shop Profits.

Tea-shop proprietors in Manchester have not only refused to raise the price of tea, thereby setting an excellent example to London, but have pointed out that 100 cups of tea can be made from a pound of tea, and that on the extra duty of 4d. a pound the caterers would make a clear profit of 3s. 10d. per 100 cups by adding a halfpenny to the price.

Her Comment.

Tired Business Man—Take dancing lessons! Well, I guess not! There are too many other ways by which I can make a fool of myself.

His Loving Wife—Yes, dear, but you have tried all of those.

Tactful.

Friend—Lovely. She will make a perfectly stunning widow.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, attractive folks aren't wanted around so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

NAPOLEON'S LOVE STORY.

The Great Emperor and His Sweetheart Desiree.

Napoleon, greatest of modern conquerors, made himself an Emperor, and made his brothers and two of his marshals kings. When his empire fell, these subordinate sovereigns were shaken from their thrones—all except one. The throne of Sweden, and that alone, is still occupied by the dynasty founded in Napoleon's day and by his aid. Strangely enough—romantically, if you will—this is the royal line whose first king, Charles John, was Napoleon's marshal, Bernadotte; and whose first queen, Desiree, was Napoleon's earliest sweetheart. She was, indeed, his betrothed, from whom he sought and obtained his release only when he had fallen under the spell of the fascinating widow, Josephine de Beauharnais, with whose sophisticated charms young Desiree Clary, not yet fifteen, could not compete.

A recent French writer, Jean Martelot, in a little study of Queen Desiree, has related the story of her three notable suitors and her marriage. Her father and brother were prosperous silk merchants of Marseilles. There were four daughters—two married; two, both very pretty, unmarried and at home. Little Desiree, accompanying a sister-in-law—whose husband, in the confusion of those troublous times, had been arrested—to the office of the representative, M. Albitte, to ask his intercession, was by accident left forgotten in an anteroom, where she fell asleep. After she was queen she told her chamberlain the story.

Wakened by the sudden closing of a door, she found herself alone in the dusk, and a strange man looking at her in surprise. Much frightened, she explained her situation, and her anxiety about her brother, whom she thought in immediate danger of the guillotine. He reassured her, and offered to escort her to her home. They became good friends on the way, and she invited him to call, that her mother might thank him for his kindness, adding that she should like to be able to tell her friends the name of the gentleman who had protected her.

"Very well; you may tell them that my name is Joseph Bonaparte," said he. That is the way the Clarys and the Bonapartes became acquainted.

Joseph called and soon became an intimate friend of the family; at the end of a few weeks he had proposed to Desiree that he should marry her as soon as she was sixteen, and she had consented. Soon he brought his brother Napoleon to call, and he, too, became a frequent visitor.

"His arrival," Queen Desiree related, "made a change in our plans for the future. We had not known him long when he said to us, 'In all well-managed households either the husband or the wife must be the one to yield. You, Joseph, have no decision of character, and neither has Desiree, while Julie and I know very well what we want. You will do much better, then, to marry Julie. As for Desiree, she shall be my wife.' And that was the way I came to be betrothed to Napoleon."

Joseph did marry Julie Clary; but after Napoleon's defection, Desiree, from among many suitors, chose, not unwisely, the rising young soldier Bernadotte.

"I wish Desiree happiness if she marries Bernadotte," wrote Napoleon from Egypt. "She deserves it."

She was playing an overture from the opera when the news came that she was queen. "I never touched my harpsichord afterward," she confessed, "for I thought that a queen should not play badly."

She lived to a good old age, and saw the third generation of Bernadottes upon the throne of Sweden.

Seeking the Details.

"He died of heart failure," said the doctor.

"Of course, of course," returned the perverse man. "Everybody does that. But what made his heart fail?"

Thus do the thoughtless ever make trouble for the learned.—Chicago Post.

TRANSFERRED.

'Twas Sergeant O'Malley and Sergeant McNally,
Two soldiers, both valiant and true.
O'Malley swore under the old English flag,
McNally, the red, white and blue.
The two were alike as peas in a pod,
And both hailed from Limerick, on Ireland's old sod,
But one common feeling would bind them in "quod,"
A peg one to many or few.

O'Malley, the pride of the queen's fusileers,
Was ordered to "Gib" from the highlands—
McNally, a cavalryman, it appears,
On a transport en route to the islands.
With anchors both down at the "Rock" the same day,
They met just by chance—in the usual way—
And promptly proceeded to squander their pay
On a brand of cold bottles marked "Wellands."

Said Sergeant O'Malley, the gay fusileer,
To Sergeant McNally, the Yankee,
"'Tis the fine inspiration I find in the beer—
Try another wan?" "Sure I will—thank'e."
"The point is just this: Av we sich iv change clothes
'Tis a bob to a tanner no wan iver knows!"
"That a broth av a joke," said McNally;
"It goes,
Although be th' shift ye will rank me."

McNally awoke in the fortress next day
In the clothes that O'Malley was owning;
O'Malley was far on the way to Cathay
In the brig of a transport, bemoaning.
Explanations erratic did nothing avail—
The rank only smiled when they heard the wild tale.
"Sure there's wan consolation—McNally's in jail,"
Said O'Malley by way of atoning.

Now, Terrence McNally bethought him at last
And wrote a brief line to O'Malley:
"Av ye anny respict for th' days av th' past?
Be a soldier—an' stand to the tally."
McNally, they say, made a fine fusileer,
While O'Malley stayed fast by our flag over here,
'Tis a tale that is told when there's plenty of—cheer,
And the truth? (Nonsense) question O'Malley.

Satan Terrified.

There is as great genius displayed in advertising as in the higher branches of literature. No problem daunts the modern advertising man.

In the window of a little book store in Eighth avenue, New York, was recently heaped a great pile of Bibles, marked very low. Never before were Bibles offered at such a bargain, and above them all, in big letters, was the inscription:

Satan trembles when he sees
Bibles sold as low as these.

Not a Music Lover.

"What did you think of the opera?"

"I'm not quite clear about it," answered Mr. Cumrox. "I can't make up my mind whether I couldn't appreciate it because I had a headache or whether I got a headache trying to appreciate it."—Washington Star.

An Early Riser.

Borem—I think I hear your father's step on the stairs, so perhaps I had better bid you good night.

Miss Hitts (yawning)—Oh, it can't be father. He's a late sleeper. Perhaps it's the hired girl coming down to prepare breakfast.—Detroit Tribune.

The Difference.

"Grafton calls himself a 'professional man,' and yet he takes no part in anything but politics. Is politics a profession or a business?"

"Well, when his side is in power it's a business; otherwise it's merely a profession."—Philadelphia Press.

ACTORS' FOOD.

What They Seem to Eat on the Stage but Really Never Do.

The "food" served in most stage productions is not food at all, unless it really has to be eaten before the audience.

Have you ever observed a dinner scene at the theatre, where the servant poured out a thick, creamy soup, or ladled it out, for the guests? That was sawdust.

All sorts of things were tried to get the right effect for soup. Actual colored liquid did not look right under the powerful stage lights, and it proved a difficult "prop" to handle. Finally, some clever stage-manager or property man tried ordinary sawdust. The effect was perfect, and since then sawdust has been used to represent soup at a dinner scene or gruel in a sick-room scene. Under the lights it has every appearance of a liquid.

Tempting slices of boiled ham—at least, they look tempting to the audience—are nothing more or less than pieces of ordinary linoleum, with the red, or under-side, uppermost. Salads are made from cabbage leaves, and tomatoes sliced up give every appearance of a delicious boiled lobster. Bananas are served for fish.

Chicken generally consists of a small, well-browned Vienna-shaped loaf of bread, with painted wooden legs stuck in. A turkey is made in the same manner from a larger loaf of bread.

A roast of beef is generally made from sponge cake, browned with gravy. It carves easily, and has every appearance of meat. Slices of toast, cut in proper shape and frilled with paper on one end, look just like chops and cutlets, and may be nibbled by the actors.

A steaming hot pie is a pan with a brown paper covering, and inside this is a dish of boiling-hot water or boiled potatoes. The hot water or boiled potatoes furnish the "steam" that rises from the "pie" when the paper crust is cut, and looks quite as appetising as the genuine article.

Tea serves as whisky on the stage, and when colored with grenadine, or some such coloring matter, it is wine. Ginger ale supplies the sparkling "champagne"; but when milk is called for no substitute is used, if it is to be drunk.

Even water has its substitute. Not water for drinking, however, but for wet garments. An actor might come upon the stage actually wet to the skin with real water, and aside from his dripping hair he would not look wet. To make an actor look actually wet, a great quantity of vaseline is rubbed over his clothes. Then, with hair dripping wet, and the lights reflected upon the vaseline on his clothes, he has every appearance of having just been fished out of the river.

The Parting.

Little Eva brought a comb and brush to her mother and said, "Mamma, please make a pathway in my hair."

Fighting Barbed Wire.

How to enable soldiers to overcome barbed wire obstacles is a problem of which the well-known firm, the Wilkinson Sword Company, has been seeking the solution.

The result is the "Barbed Wire Traverser," an invention in appearance more like a khaki-colored waterproof bed quilt, 6ft. square, than anything else. Thrown over a fence, the sheet transforms the barbed wire into a sort of wall, capable of being easily surmounted without risk of a scratch.

The Traverser has been tested by twenty soldiers across a barbed wire entanglement in a camp near London. The soldiers, all being athletic men, were over the fence and away long before in the ordinary way they would have started cutting the wires. Not one of them received the slightest hurt. They were mainly concerned as to any increase in the weight of their equipment if the invention was adopted by the War Office. But, as a matter of fact, it is no heavier than the ordinary ground-sheet, and is soft to lie upon, and forms a very warm wrapping.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

OUR YOUNG WOMEN

are so often subject to headache—are languid, pale and nervous—because their blood is thin or insufficient. They are not really sick and hesitate to complain, but they lack that ambition and vivacity which is their birthright. They do not need drugs—but do need the tonic and nourishment in Scott's Emulsion that makes richer blood, fills hollow cheeks, suppresses nervousness and establishes strength. Nourishment alone makes blood and Scott's Emulsion is the essence of concentrated nourishment, free from wines or opiates.

If mother or daughter is frail, pale or nervous, give her Scott's for one month and see the betterment. It has a wholesome, "nutty" flavor. Avoid substitutes. At any drug store.

From Antwerp To Bagdad

Germany's Dream of a Great Empire of the East.

LONDON, Dec. 3. — Lieut.-Commander J. Wedgwood, speaking at the Essex Hall on the subject of the Dardanelles, said that before the war the Germans had such a hold on the Turkish Empire that it was fast passing into a German colony.

One feature which must appeal to the Germans was that they wanted to re-establish their trade and their commercial supremacy. There, too they looked back on the recent history, and they said that the German Empire was formed not so much by the capture of Paris as by the Zollverein.

He was confident that it was upon her Customs Union they based their hopes in the greater German Empire of which they dreamed. From Antwerp to Bagdad had been in their minds, and if they could not get Antwerp, from Hamburg to Bagdad would be just as good. If they could force the small Balkanic countries and the Turkish empire into this Customs Union, they would be able to force Austria also.

The speaker said he did not think the Germans would risk any of their Pomeranian Grenadiers if there were any Turks whom they could send to drive us out of Gallipoli. He contends that we could hold a strip of the Suez Canal with a comparatively small force, with the latest devices, so long as they were well protected with barbed wire and with redoubts, and put trenches down well to the east of the canal.

Personally, he thought nothing could be more satisfactory than that the enemy should get well into Asia Minor. Many of them had gone before, and they had not come back.

Mr. Dan Crough Writes of West

Emilsmore Man Gives His Impressions of Alberta

Rockeyford, Alberta, Nov. 27, 1915.
Editor of The Examiner:

Dear ir,—I, Daniel Crough of Ennismore, find it convenient to write you a short sketch of my first trip to the west, which I must say is a young man's country. There are many chances here for the young man that has any energy to back him up, particularly if he has at least a fair education, but the better his education the better his chances are. The population here is chiefly made up of foreigners who cannot speak the English language readily, which places the Canadian at the head, and gives him a knowledge of all kinds of business, opening the way to success. The climate here is more than the human heart could wish for. I have been here since Aug. 28th and have seen but three light showers of rain, scarcely enough to stop stacking. I am now handling sheaves that have been in the stook three months and are so dry the grain cannot be threshed without cracking, at least five per cent. of it, which does not hurt the sale of it.

The crops here have never been better. The average yield of wheat for some farms is as high as sixty-one and three quarter bushels on summer fallow, the bulk ranging from forty to fifty. I have been in a ninety-acre field of wheat which has been disked in on the stubble for five succeeding years and they expect to thresh not less than eighteen bushels per acre which, in looks, would equal our Ontario wheat. The price of wheat in waggon loads is 78c., but in car loads is worth 87c. Oats are bringing 29 1-2 at the elevator. Oats vary in yield from 60 to 133 bushels per acre. The highest average is in the neighbourhood of Lethbridge. Potatoes are also a splendid crop and are selling for 25c. per bushel. This also seems to be a healthy climate as a person has no wet feet or wet clothes to contend with. The weather is clear cool or calm, little or no wind in this part of Alberta, as we are but one hundred miles from the mountains which can be seen from Calgary, and which, judging by appearance would seem but ten miles distant. I also took a trip to Banff, which is forty miles in the mountains and bathed in the hot springs that flow direct from the side of the mountain at a temperature of 117 degrees, and with a strong sulphured odour, with columns of steam ascending from it, also the Caven Baron, which is not unlike a volcano, but hot sulphur water has taken the place of fire and lava, where I have seen one hundred and fifty German prisoners at work under the muzzle of the soldiers' rifles. I have seen the noted mountains called the three sisters, which according to age wrinkles might be called the three old maids. I have visited the old Hudson Bay trading posts at Fort Edmonton and Calgary, where Father Lacomb spent much of his time civilizing the Indians and teaching them to farm, and who is still to be seen in the Lacomb home near Calgary, which has been donated by Mr. Pat Burns, probably the most successful cattle dealer in the west, with whom I had a private interview. All Ontario people should be proud of him as he was born in Kirkfield north of Lindsay. He has been in the east three times this season. He is now fifty-nine years of age and hale and hearty.

I have been down into two coal mines one at a depth of 120 ft. and nearly a mile under the hill, known as the Coverbar mine in Edmonton, where some twenty-eight mules and horses are at work hauling trains of coal, to the mouth of the mine, where it is hoisted by steam power and it is screened and sized and run into cars without any extra handling, also hoppers for loading wagons, which supply most of the city.

Alberta might well boast of her volunteers. There are 3,100 soldiers in Edmonton, also 150 Chinamen, who have a regiment of their own and want to go to the front, but will not be allowed to go.

I have seen 200 lady soldiers drilling for home defence. I have passed through a small town near Banff where there were 113, men and out of that number 108 have enlisted. It will probably be Christmas before all the threshing is finished, although a half dozen machines can be seen some mornings within what looks to be a short distance. But when you drive it is quite deceiving.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESSING SACQUE.

By Anabel Worthington.

This garment of comfort comes in so many ornamental designs that when one wishes something plain it is not always easy to find. The model shown combines beauty of appearance with simplicity of construction.

The sacque is cut on sacque lines, hanging in straight affect from the shoulder to the edge. There is a group of small tucks at each shoulder and the line of closing is provided with an ornamental square tab on the breast. The edge of neck and closing is trimmed with a flat band, usually of contrasting color. A belt is made of this same trimming material and is fastened at the waist line with a single button or a small buckle.

The sleeves may be made full length or they may be shortened and finished just below the elbow with a turnback cuff. If made full length the finish is a plain band, which may be of the same material as belt and edging.

For cold weather this garment may be made of cashmere, challie, outing flannel, novelty woollens and also of silk, crepe de Chine and wash materials of dainty color and pattern.

The dressing sacque pattern, No. 7,396, is cut in sizes 34 to 42 bust measure. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material with ⅝ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods.

This pattern can be obtained by sending ' ' ' to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

ITALIAN TROOPS ARE BEING RUSHED TO THE BALKANS

ROME, Dec. 3.— Italian troops are now being rushed to the Balkans, which probably will clear the Greek situation.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—After being out seven and a half hours the jury brought in a verdict of guilty against four officials of the Hamburg-American Line. Sentence is deferred. The maximum penalty is two years' imprisonment and a fine of ten thousand dollars.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 3.—It is reported the Russian troops are marching through Rumania to the Balkans.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—Parliament will probably meet Wednesday, January, 12.

ATHENS, Dec. 3.—The British coast defence gun boat was sunk in Egyptian waters by a German submarine.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The British government has requisitioned the U. S. steamship "Hecking" without formality of prize court proceedings.

LONDON, Dec. 3.— An Athens despatch claims that Monastir has fallen.

SAYS CHICAGO IS "BROKE."

City Controller Hints a Thousand Employees May Be Laid Off.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—The finances of this city are in such woeful shape according to a statement made to-day by Controller Pike, that unless the Legislature now in special session comes to the rescue it will be necessary at the end of the current month to lay off not less than 1,000 municipal employees, while many others must suffer a material reduction in salaries.

The city, according to Mr. Pike, is "broke," and must be run next year at a saving of $3,000,000 in order to keep within its revenues.

"We are making up the budget now on the basis of a big economy next year," said Controller Pike. "Supreme Court decisions have affected our revenues, the Legislature without providing extra revenues, has added new duties for the city to perform at its own expense, and now we must face the music."

A metal holder to permit paper drinking cups to be passed from one person to another without collapsing has been patented.

Uzziah's Pride and Punishment.—2 Chron., 26.

Golden Text — A man's pride shall bring him low; but he that is of a lowly spirit shall obtain honour.—Prov. 29: 23.

1. Verses 1, 2—What can you say for or against hereditary rulers?

2. What had been the character of Amaziah, the father of Uzziah?

3. Which are sons the more likely to resemble in moral character, their father or their mother, and why?

4. Verse 4—In what sense did Uzziah, and his father Amaziah, do "that which was right in the sight of the Lord?"

5. Verses 5-10—Who was the Zechariah here mentioned?

6. Do you regard it as the privilege of all spiritual people to have "understanding in the visions of God," or is it a special gift of a few, and why?

7. What did the prosperity of Uzziah appear to depend upon?

8. What are some of the things mentioned which demonstrated Uzziah's prosperity?

9. In the light of time and eternity, what do you consider the highest type of a prosperous man?

10. What are the degrees of desirability to possess (a) Wealth, (b) Honour, (c) Intellectual ability, (d) Understanding in the visions of God"?

11. Verses 11-15—Did God ever delight in war? Give your reasons.

12. Why would you say, or not, that it was God's first best plan for nations to settle their disputes by war?

13. If Jesus were king of this country, and a duplicate of Jesus king of another country with whom we had a misunderstanding, why would there be no danger of war?

14. Are the nations of the earth, as nations, guilty or innocent before God for the great European War?

15. Verses 16-18—What proportion of men are drawn nearer to God, and what proportion are driven to pride and perdition, through earthly prosperity?

16. Why is it that so many are spiritually hurt by prosperity?

17. How do you account for Uzziah's great moral lapse after he had enjoyed such remarkable experiences with God and his blessings?

18. What motive do you suppose prompted Uzziah to usurp the office of the priests of the temple?

19. What are the sins which an exalted position, or great riches, tend to develop to-day?

20. Was the disease of leprosy supernaturally inflicted as a punishment, or was it contracted by natural causes? Why?

21. Does God in these days send disease upon people in any other way than through the laws of nature? Why?

Lesson for Sunday, 12th Dec., 1915 —Jehovah Yearns Over Backsliding Israel.—Hosea 11, 1-11.

NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Stamford, Conn., Nurse Tells How She Found Health

Stamford, Conn.—"I am a nurse and suffered from a nervous breakdown. I had no appetite and could not sleep at night, and nothing seemed to help me. By chance I heard of Vinol, and after taking the first bottle I noticed an improvement, and four bottles made me well and strong, it gave me a hearty appetite, so I can sleep soundly night or day. I consider Vinol a wonderful tonic." Edith R. Forbes, Stamford, Conn.

The reason Vinol is so successful in overcoming such conditions is because it is a constitutional remedy and goes to the seat of the trouble. It is the greatest strengh creator we know—due to the extractive medicinal elements of fresh cod livers without oil, combined with peptonate of iron and beef peptone, all dissolved in a pure medicinal wine.

We have seen so many wonderful recoveries like this right here in Peterborough caused by Vinol, that we feel perfectly safe in offering to return money in every such case where Vinol fails to benefit.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE MISSING NOTE.

By LESTER DILLON.

[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

There was a period in England when the crime of stealing or forging a banknote was punishable with death. At this time there lived in Devonshire Sir Bryan Trevelyn. His estate was large, and on it were many tenants. He had but one child, a daughter Gladys, who would inherit his property, and between her and Edgar Cornish, the son of a clergyman, had sprung up an ardent love. Sir Bryan opposed the match, having higher intentions for his daughter, but she was a girl of firm disposition and gave him reason to suppose that if he did not give his consent to the match she would make a trip with her lover to Gretna Green. Fearing this, he consented, and that his future son-in-law might learn to manage the estate Gladys would inherit he made him his secretary and accountant.

One rent day Sir Bryan and his secretary were receiving the rents. When the last tenant had gone the former, leaving a fifty pound banknote on his desk, left the room for a paper he needed. On his return the note was gone. He looked for it everywhere, assisted by his secretary, but it was not to be found.

Sir Bryan went to bed that night convinced that the man who was to be his son-in-law had stolen the note. Opposed to him before, he now became determined that a thief should not marry his daughter and inherit his property. However, the next morning he had a thorough search made of the room in which the note had disappeared. It was not found, and Sir Bryan, despite the pleadings of his wife and daughter, gave young Cornish over to the authorities, preferring against him a charge of theft.

The courts in those days were not the complicated affairs they are now. The accuser stood high in the county, and his word was a power. He told the magistrate his story. He and Cornish were in the room alone together. Sir Bryan went out for a few minutes, leaving the note on his desk. No one entered during his absence. On his return the note was missing. Since inanimate articles cannot remove themselves it must have been appropriated by the only living person present. It was not found on Cornish's person, but he was not searched till he was arrested. He had had ample time to dispose of it. There was no defense made, for there was nothing on which to base a defense. The crime was committed in midsummer, and since the courts were not given in those days to spending much time over the cases that came before them the trial was concluded and sentence passed before September. Cornish was sentenced to be hanged on the first Friday in October.

Naturally every one connected with the condemned was wrapped in gloom. The lovers who had anticipations of a happy union now had before them a separation by death. Lady Trevelyn shut herself up with her daughter and would have no communication with her husband, blaming him for the horror he had brought upon his family.

It was now too late to recall what he had done. The law must take its course. Preparations were being made for the execution, and the people, as was the custom in those days, were flocking in for the spectacle.

A few days before the expected tragedy a cold rain and fog, the first of autumn, swept over England. The baron, who sought to distract his thoughts by occupying himself with his accounts, sent for a sweep to take the soot out of the chimney of his office preparatory to building a fire on the hearth. While the sweep was at work Sir Bryan entered the room, sat down at his desk and busied himself with his papers. So preoccupied was he, rather with his somber thoughts than his work, that he did not hear any sound within or without.

Suddenly he was recalled to his surroundings by a cough directly in front of him. Looking up, there stood a figure black as Erebus. It was the chimney sweep, whose extended hand held a small piece of paper so smudged with soot that its character could not be readily recognized. The baron mechanically took it and examined it. A sudden light came into his eye, a color into his cheek. It was the missing note. The sweep had found it in the chimney, where, carried by a draft of air when Sir Bryan had opened the door, it had remained ever since.

Like a cyclone of joy the baron swept through the house and stood beating on the door of the room where his wife and daughter had shut themselves in, crying: "The note! It is found! The boy is saved!" The door was flung open, and the old man rushed in brandishing the smudged note above his head. Then, when the situation was understood, Gladys fell into her father's arms in a faint.

Leaving her with her mother, the baron rushed to the house of the magistrate and before leaving had secured an order for the release of Edgar Cornish. The news spread, and when the released prisoner left the jail he was attended by a crowd of citizens. He had not proceeded far when he was met by Gladys Trevelyn, and their meeting was greeted by the shouts of the people.

Sir Bryan Trevelyn spent the rest of his life trying to atone for his fault. Had it not been for the sweeping of a chimney he would have caused the execution of an innocent man and blighted his daughter's life. As to the sweep, he swept no more. He was given the note he had found and lived for the rest of his life on the estate, enjoying a pension.

A Trap for Flies.

A certain employer once offered a prize to the driver who could show the best-groomed horse, the brightest tackle, the cleanest stable, and so forth. One of his men, Timothy by name, seemed certain of this prize, for, after a careful scrutiny, the judge was about to declare him the winner, when his eye fell on a cobweb in a dim corner of the mare's stable. Timothy saw the judge's face change and saw the cause of the change, and spoke up briskly.

"I keep that there web there, sir, to catch the flies. The way they torment the mare is something terrible."

Fifteen Rapid.

"What do you mean, man," he yelled, angrily, "wasting your ammunition like that?"

"I was only givin' 'em fifteen rapid, sir," pleaded the marksman, meekly.

"And do you think you have done any good with your fifteen rapid?" the officer snorted, sarcastically.

"Dunno, sir," said Jones; "but I overheard a German officer telling the stretcher-bearers to bury fourteen of them and take the fifteenth down to the base."

Uses for Old Velvet.

A piece of velvet is a fine cleaner for brass, and for polishing silverware it is better than chamois. It quickly removes dust from the woodwork, and if used to rub the stove after it has been blacked it will produce a high polish. There is nothing better to dust a felt hat, and silk dresses and other silk articles should always be dusted with it, for it cleans perfectly without cutting or otherwise injuring the silk.

A PAIN IN THE BACK
COMES FROM THE KIDNEYS.

When a pain asserts itself in the back you may rest assured that it comes from some derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back would be strong and well, and would be without a pain or an ache.

For backache, lame or weak back, there is no remedy to equal Doan's Kidney Pills.

They take out the stitches, twitches, and twinges, limber up the stiff back, and give perfect relief and comfort to all poor, suffering women who suffer so much from a weak, lame, aching back.

Miss Iva A. Ferris, Mill Cove, N.B., writes: "I suffered for two years from pains in my back. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged until I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I thought it would not hurt to try them. I had only used two boxes before I noticed a great difference, and after I had taken four boxes I was completely cured. I would not be without them in the house I can recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Totally Discouraged by Nervous Prostration

After Many Weeks of Doctoring a Friend Recommended Chases' Nerve Food and She Was Cured

There is nothing more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. Because of the exhausted condition of the nervous system, weakness and helplessness take possession of the body. The faculties of the mind as well as those of the body are affected and hope and courage disappear.

The patient, often appearing well, gets little sympathy, and few doctors understand diseases of the nerves well enough to treat nervous prostration intelligently. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is founded on the prescription of a great nerve specialist, and hence its wonderful success in curing ailments of this nature.

Mrs. Edith May Williams, Tilsonburg, Ont., R. R. 3, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for years with my nerves, and at one time I was confined to my bed with nervous prostration for several weeks. I cannot just explain my feelings, but I was weak and helpless and so discouraged and despondent that I thought I would lose my mind. I doctored with several doctors and received but little benefit. At last I became very much discouraged and thought I would never get better. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had finished the first box I knew that it was helping me. It took several boxes of the Nerve Food to make me well and I can truly say that it is a wonderful builder-up of the nervous system."

It is only wise to prevent such dreaded diseases as Nervous Prostration, Paralysis and Locomotor Ataxia by keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times. When you cannot sleep well, have headaches and indigestion, be warned of approaching dangers and restore the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

The Appetite of Youth Quickly Restored

Appetite is useless unless digestion is good. Dr. Hamilton's Pills make tremendous appetite and keep digestion up to the mark as well. The liver, bowels and kidneys are stimulated, the stomach strengthened, and robust health quickly follows. Dr. Hamilton's Pills instill vigor and snap into the system, make folks feel youthful and happy. You'll forget you have a stomach, forget your days of sickness if Dr. Hamilton's Pills are used. Insist on having Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, no other medicine so good.

Wapping and Its Stairs.

The famous "Wapping Old Stairs" of the ballad still exist, though in a sadly dirty and neglected condition, the stairs being covered with green slime and the refuse of the tides. They are seldom, if ever, patronized by boatmen, though members of the Thames Police find it convenient occasionally to utilize the old-time landing place. The little public-house, the Town of Ramsgate, abutting on the stairs, with its quaint low window, still exists.

The "Old Stairs" at Wapping Station, to which reference has been made in the newspapers, are the original stairs which led down to the entrance of the Thames Tunnel, constructed by the famous engineer, Isambard Brunel, between the years 1824-43. When the tunnel was used for foot-passengers, stalls of all descriptions were ranged all its length, and fairs were often got up in order to swell the funds of the languishing enterprise. The late Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort patronized one of these ventures. The present station stands immediately over the site of the old entrance to the tunnel, and the staircase has been used by the railway passengers ever since its first use was superseded. It was a common practice to turn out drunken men at Wapping Station in order that they might be sobered by a climb up its ninety-four steps.

Jellicoe's 'Awful Fight."

In his delightful book, "A Rambler's Recollections and Reflections" (George Allen and Unwin, Ltd.) Mr. Alfred Capper, the popular entertainer, relates that one of his most vivid as well as his most painful recollections is of "the awful fight" he had with Admiral Jellicoe when they were schoolfellows together at a small dame's school.

It appears that the Admiral accused Mr. Capper of unfairly possessing himself of certain very favorite marbles. From the fight which ensued, "I was rescued," says Mr. Capper, "in the very nick of time—for he (Jellicoe) was as unconquerable a hero then as Von Tirpitz is finding out he is to-day—by the interposition of his brother, the new vicar of Alresford, who was also one of my schoolfellows in those sunny, far-off days, and dear old Miss Shapcott, our mistress. And I remember well that Jack Jellicoe and I had to stand back to back in opposite corners of the schoolroom, with strict injunctions not to turn our heads towards one another. What a battle that was, and how heavy the hands, even at that tender age, and how rapid the blows of that redoubtable Admiral that was to be."

TURTLES AND TORTOISES.

Interesting Facts About These Extraordinary Creatures.

If we were not so familiar with the shape of tortoises we should think that they were, when first we saw them, the most wonderful animals in existence. And we should not be far wrong, for they are indeed most extraordinary creatures.

Apart from their strange forms they are also interesting because of their longevity, some existing for considerably more than a hundred years. For example, there is living at Port Louis, of the Mauritius, a tortoise which was imported by Capt. Marion du Fresne from the Seyschelles in 1766. That is, of course, 148 years ago, and as the creature was probably, at that time, of some considerable size (these reptiles grow very slowly), it is not unreasonable to suppose that it is, if still alive, not very far from completing its second century.

Tortoises are, also, remarkable and interesting because of their wonderful tenacity of life, which has been proved by cruel experiments. The heart of a tortoise will beat for hours after the animal has been deprived of all its blood.

M. Redi, an Italian surgeon, deprived a land tortoise of its brain, and the poor reptile after this robbery and mutilation, lived for nearly eight months; the only difference in its appearance was that it kept its eyes constantly closed.

Another tortoise lived for 23 days without a head.

Everybody knows that the speed of a land tortoise is not great; but few realise how slowly they really travel. Darwin, in speaking of the Galapagos tortoises, huge beasts, some of which weigh more than 500 pounds, and whose carapaces, as the upper shell is called, measure in a straight line five feet and a half in length, and a little more than this in width, says that the inhabitants of these islands in the Pacific, from observing marked individuals, consider they travel a distance of eight miles in two or three days.

Tortoises may be roughly divided into the four following groups: (1) Land tortoises, animals which are not willing to enter water, are bad swimmers, herbivorous, and possesses feet adapted for walking. (2) Fresh water tortoises; these reptiles are known also as pond tortoises and terrapins; they are amphibious—carnivorous, with one or two exceptions—very active, while in the water, and not nearly so slow in their movements as the land tortoises when on land. Their feet are slightly webbed. (3) Fresh water turtles; these creatures are carnivorous and very fierce; their feet are much flattened and broadly webbed. And (4) Sea turtles; these are entirely marine in their habits. Their limbs being paddle-shaped, they are able to go through the water at great speed. Some are herbivorous and the rest carnivorous. They only come to land when they wish to deposit their eggs. This group includes the green turtle, which supplies the famous soup; and the hawksbill turtle, which provides the equally well-known tortoise shell.

Land tortoises may be easily kept in domesticity in such a way that they will appear to be perfectly healthy and contented. When convenient, during summer, they may be given their freedom in a walled garden. Here they will do well, eating what they require such as grass, cabbages, lettuce, gooseberries, strawberries, and the like. When the cold weather approaches they will either bury themselves in the earth or crawl under a heap of leaves or rubbish, where they will hibernate safely until late in the following spring.

Remember the War

THE SOLDIER will never forget it---but will you help him by helping his wife and children? What will your answer be to the appeal to be made in this City, next week, in aid of

THE PATRIOTIC FUND

Every dollar distributed by business-like methods and for the assistance of the soldiers' dependents. A few of the soldiers are those whose portraits grace this page.

What will your answer be to this Patriotic Call? If you can't FIGHT you can PAY! NOW is Your Opportunity!

A Great Campaign is on the way to raise a fund of $50.000. This is the second year of the war. Let it be the second year of your Giving. Other fine men are going, in addition to those who have gone, to step into the breach and help to save the Empire. Ask yourself, what are you doing? Much as usual. If we all did that, the Empire would not be saved. The families of these men have the right to be protected while the bread-winners are in the trenches.

The Campaign to replete the Fund will be launched on Dec. 8, 9 and 10. Come on into the work. Do your bit. Measure up what has been done for you in the last twelve months and help to make some of it up to those who are settling with the Germans on your account. Subscribe—and work. But subscribe first. Then come into line. Your Fund and your City need you.

Full details of the Campaign Organization will be given in the press. Study what is printed. If you would like a place in the sun, get into the work, even if it is December. Your offer will help to stimulate others.

Be Sure to Attend the Patriotic Mass Meeting

In the Opera House, Tuesday Evening, Dec. 7th

Hear what Sir Herbert B. Ames has to say about what the Fund has done and how it is doing it. No finer story of patriotic effort and results can be conceived. Every Canadian should hear this recital. Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, will also speak. And a sprinkling of local men will say a word or two in season. There will be a few songs

ITALY TO UNITE WITH THE OTHER ALLIES IN INFLUENCING GREECE

Diplomatic Pressure Will Be Brought to Bear in Order to Secure Non-interference With the Allies' Operations in the Balkans--Steamer Metagama Arrives in England With the Canadian Soldiers on Board.

SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Pressure by the Italian Minister at Athens has been added to that of the British, French and Russian representatives to-day to secure from Greece a definite pledge of non-interference with the Allies' Balkan campaign. Italy is expected to conduct her operations from the Adriatic instead of the Aegean Sea coast, and therefore is less interested than the British and French in arranging for a clear field in Greek territory. It is to Italy's interest, however, to secure the maximum freedom of action for the forces scheduled to co-operate with her. It is believed here she will have much influence with the Athens Government, inasmuch as the latter is known to be extremely jealous of Italy's supposed ambitions in the Near East, and the Italian Minister is in a position to relieve Greek anxiety if he chooses.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—"News that the Russians have entered Bulgaria has aroused intense interest and there is much speculation as to the next development," Reuter's correspondent at Salonika telegraphs to-day. "It is expected this move will have a far-reaching effect on the international situation of Bulgaria, and will modify the whole aspect of affairs in the Balkans."

No direct and specific confirmation has been received in London of this message.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—(French Official Communique).—There has been no important change on any of the French fronts within the past twelve hours.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Judge Howe to-day postponed until to-morrow the sentencing of four Hamburg-American officials convicted of conspiracy against the United States laws. The motion for a new trial will be entertained at the same time.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—December 9th has been set as the date for the discussion of peace terms in the German Reichstag, in accordance with Socialist demands, according to despatches from Luzanne, Switzerland, to-day.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—A feature of the Canadian war loan is the number of subscriptions which have been received from Canadians now residing in the United States. These subscriptions, which will reach a considerable total, denote the loyalty of ex-Canadians and their confidence in the ability of the Allies. The loan will not be allotted until subscription lists from British Columbia and other more distant places of Canada have been received.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—There is a possibility of an egg famine in Canada this winter. There has been a big demand for Canadian eggs from Great Britain, and this is likely the cause of a shortage, which can only be made up by shipments from the United States.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 3.—Figures issued to-day show that fifty per cent. of the girl babies born in London during the past six weeks have been Christened Edith Cavell, and many of the boys are being named after British Generals.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 3.—The American barque Andrew Welch, with a big cargo of beans, is being held in the harbour of Haelmstad by Swedish torpedo boats, after an unsuccessful attempt to proceed to Germany. The Andrew Welch eluded British warships that chased her.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Following the conviction of the Hamburg-American officials in New York, Justice Department officials today turned to the case of the steamship Sacramento, whose owners and officers will go on trial December 17th in San Francisco. District Attorney Preston will conduct the case. The same charge of false manifest is made. The Sacramento, en route to Chile, transferred a cargo to German warships at sea. She was interned as a German war craft on reaching Chile.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 3.—The Canadian troop ship Metagama has arrived safely in England with 50 officers and 1,500 men of the Canadian overseas forces, including the first Pioneer Battalion, and various field artillery, railway construction, medical and other detachments from Ontario and other provinces.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—William Jennings Bryon who, it is said at peace headquarteres may yet accompany the cruise, is scheduled to call on Skipper Ford late to-day. The cruise management is confident all passports will be ready by the Oscar II. sailing hour—2 p.m. to-morrow. It is the State Department who has delayed matters. The peace headquarters do not know it. One hundred and sixty were accounted for at noon. This was considered to be very satisfactorily rapid work.

His will having been made, leaving his business interests to his son, Ford visited the Oscar II. to-day to see that all preparations have been made for his guests' accommodation. The Oscar II., it was announced, will fly the "International Flag," the suggestion of Roger Babson, the economist and international political writer. Belated applications for accommodations on the Oscar II. were thicker than ever at peace headquarters to-day. They overburdened elevators and filled corridors, but few, if any, got to Skipper Ford of the peace ship. The efficient bouncer attendants attended to them.

Diphtheria and Smallpox Antitoxine and Other Preventatives Are to Be Supplied to the Public

BY THE HEALTH OFFICERS

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Dec. 3.—Dr. J. W. McCullough, chief of the Provincial Health Department, announces an important departure. Antitoxine for diphtheria, antitoxine for smallpox, and other serums for contagious diseases will be given out by the department to hospitals, and the public generally after February, free of charge. The local health officers of municipalities will probably have charge of the distribution of supplies.

SOMETHING NEW FOR THE LADIES

Lovely Silk Dresses and Blouses for the Christmas Festivities at Barrie's Limited

What lady does not feel animated when the sentiment of beauty and taste is applied to, by something new, distinctive, beautiful and practical—especially in wearing apparel? Such an exposition is to be seen in the new silk dresses and blouses which Barries Limited have just received for Christmas. They are the "last word" in beautiful and fashionable garments—entirely different, yet embodying that something which is "good taste."

The Barrie motto is to show and put on sale only those suits, coats, dresses and blouses that are exclusive and of which no duplicates are to be shown in Peterborough. Ladies can count on our protecting them in that anything we sell in ready-to-wear is of the better class.

The stock will be found to consist of the best garments to be found in the centres of fashion, from 10.00 up to 50.00 and 60.00 dollars.

Fine furs and fashionable apparel for women in silk and cloth suits, coats, dresses and blouses; will, from now on, be the firm's strong claim for public recognition, and the service offered in return is claimed to be the best available.

The new premises in the Barrie Building, near Customs House, corner of George and Charlotte streets, is in the very centre of the city. They have a place to do business in and a fine factory second to none in Canada, for its up-to-dateness and facilities for giving good work and serving their customers with care.

All classes of good furs—furs with merit and of latest style—now to be had, and at prices lower than for some years past. The firm's buying and manufacturing capacity from four stores, in Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon and Peterborough, gives Barries Limited a prestige which enables this house to do much better than most in this line of trade. Call and see that your Christmas needs are looked after for you by Barrie's

Overseas Tobacco Fund

Canada's Contribution $76,705, ($06,820 Packages)
Peterboro's Contribution $656.00, (2,800 Packages)

Canada's total contribution to the end of October amounted to $76,705. This represents 706,820 packages of tobacco and cigarettes. Canada still heads the list of the Overseas Dominions in the amount contributed, but the sum subscribed is barely sufficient to supply each man at the front with a package of tobacco once in every five or six weeks. The number of men at the front is increasing, and if the boys are to have the comfort of a smoke regularly it is necessary that the Overseas Club should be in a position to provide at least 70,000 packages per week, even after allowance has been made for gifts of tobacco from other sources.

PETERBOROUGH MUST HAVE 2,000 REGULAR MONTHLY CONTRIBUTORS.

There is no gift more appreciated by our splendid boys in the fighting line than SMOKES. The strain on the nerves is terrific during a bombardment. Tobacco helps them to endure and hang on.

WILL YOU BE ONE OF PETERBOROUGH'S 2,000 MONTHLY CONTRIBUTORS ?

The aim of the Overseas Club Fund is to keep our brave men supplied with smokes while the war lasts. Your kind interest and co-operation will be very much appreciated.

The following letter refers to Peterborough's first contribution to the Tobacco Fund:

England.

Dear Sir,—Please accept my warm thanks for your splendid collection of £20 towards our Tobacco Fund.

I have received your postcards and they will be duly enclosed with the packets of tobacco and cigarettes sent to your Peterborough boys.

I have no doubt that the majority of the men will return the cards, but it must be remembered that this is not always possible owing to the exigencies of war.

We are now sending Canadian manufactured tobacco and cigarettes to Canadian men, and this suits their special smoke-taste as testified from the warm letters of appreciation we have received from them.

Yours very truly,
JOHN EVELYN WRENCH,
Hon.-Sec. and Organizer Overseas Club.

$50,000 the Objective For the Patriotic Fund

Workers Met Last Night and Arranged Details of Campaign---Team Captains Are Appointed---Arrangements Made For the Big Mass Meeting in the Opera House on Tuesday---Sir Herbert Ames and Hon. T. W. McGarry Will Speak.

Twenty-five to thirty enthusiastic men gathered in the City Council Chamber last night to go ahead with the work of the Patriotic Fund campaign. As a matter of fact the building was infested with committees. Committee on the exhibition grounds, another discussing the matter of assistance to disabled soldiers, a third doing the Patriotic relief work, and the biggest and most important of all, that of the Patriotic campaign in the Council Chamber. There was not much of speech or address. No one there was likely to be influenced by speeches. In fact speeches are things that most men try to dodge, except on occasion.

What should be the objective, was put to the meeting. Several whose hopes were high and whose resolution not to be daunted claimed that $60,000.00 would be a neat and symetrical figure; would just match up with the grand result of last year. Others having in view the other activities before the people claimed that 50,000.00 would have to suffice. This was finally agreed on as the objective, and will be inscribed on the banners, and will be the key to the workers for the fund

Further details of the big meeting to be held in the Opera House on Tuesday evening, the 7th, were settled. The programme will include addresses by Sir Herbert Ames, General Secretary of the Fund, and by Hon. Thos. McGarry, the Provincial Treasurer. There will be songs, in between. The orchestra will contribute and Mayor Buller will be chairman. It was intimated that the Mayor would throw into his opening remarks some ginger and spirit. This the Mayor can do, and does it well. Just as an aside it may be remarked that all our calculations as to the Mayoralty for 1916 might be upset if a lot of the friends of the Mayor get out and hustle with a round-robin asking him to consider a nomination for a third term. It may come. In fact it only needs a start.

Looking over the organization for last year the committee reached the conclusion, that good men having done well would be re-appointed in the hope that they would now do even better. Same claim, you see, as may be made for the Mayor. The list of team captains was looked over, and all being present the entire array was selected to lead the work next week. All consented. All but one. He wasn't there. Not available, this time. So Mr. Jos. Wearing was nominated, elected and placed in the line of captains. Following is the Honour Roll

Team No. 1—J. J. Turner, Jr.
Team No. 2—Walter Stocker
Team No. 3—W. J. Oke.
Team No. 4—H. J. Walker.
Team No. 5—Jos. Wearing.
Team No. 6—W. H. Dunsford.
Team No. 7—E. A. Peck
Team No. 8—Jos. Picard.
Team No. 9—G. A. Gillespie.

The names of the team-mates will be announced later, and as soon as the teams are definitely made up. Most of the old men, not old in years but in experience, will come into line. All said last time that they enjoyed the work, and association and sense of pitching in and doing something helpful. No trouble to fill up the teams. These working bodies will have a general conference, presently and get into details.

Headquarters will be open on Saturday night, at the corner of George and Brock streets, the shop recently used for recruiting headquarters. Come in and see the people there. The store will be the centre of activity for the next week, as it should be. We want people to think, talk and urge Patriotic Fund for a while. Let other matters go. The strings attached to a lot of very good activities can be picked up further on. When we have that $50,000.00 subscribed, safe and sure, other things can have an innings. For

COL. HEMMING TO PAY VISIT TO THE 93rd THIS EVENING

Officer Commanding the 3rd Divisional Area Expected To-day—93rd Battalion Will Take Part in Reception to Returned Soldiers To-morrow Evening.

PTE. JOHN GARRETT,
A Peterborough boy who left here with the 39th Battalion, and is now in France with the 25th Battalion C. E. F.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Lt.-Col Johnston received a wire from Col Hemming, officer commanding the 3rd Divisional Area this morning, informing him that he will arrive in Peterborough on the 5:20 train this afternoon. Col. Hemming will undoubtedly take advantage of the opportunity to inspect the 93rd Battalion He will be met at the station by Lt.-Col. Johnston and Captain Burnham.

Practically every room at the Armouries is now in use by the 93rd Battalion except the officers' mess of the 57th Regiment. The former office of the adjutant of the 57th Regiment is occupied by Assistant-djutant Bailey and his staff. Lt.-Col. Johnston is installed in the room formerly appportioned for the commanding officer of the 57th. The office of the 57th quartermaster is now the quarters of Capt. J. H. Burnham, the 93rd's paymaster, while the stores room next door is used by Majors Cameron and Eastwood. The Army Service Corps have their supply depot in the saddle room of the 3rd Dragoons, while the offices of the Dragoons are now the company headquarters of A and B Companies, and the cavalry stores room is in possession of Capt. Bolins, the 93rd quartermaster and his staff. All the company rooms of the 57th are in use for dormitories guard room, canteen, etc. At the west end of the building the orderly room of the 24th Field Battery has been converted into lavatories and the artillery saddle room into the battalion wash room. The small room next door is the sleeping apartment of the 93rd sergeants. B Company is housed in the artillery gun park, part of which has been turned into a kitchen, partitioned off, of course, from the sleeping apartment. Nos. 3 and 4 platoons of A Company have the artillery stores room as their dormitory while Nos. 1 and 2 are in the band room. The battalion cooks sleep in the signallers' room and the staff sergeants of the battalion in the bugle band room. The recreation room is the band's practice room and the sergeants' mess of the 57th is used for the same purpose by the sergeants of the 93rd. The band and staff men sleep in the lecture room

BIG RECEPTION FOR SOLDIER BOYS TO-MORROW NIGHT

Citizens Will Have a Chance to Show Their Appreciation of Peterborough's Heroes Who Have Returned From the Front

PARADE IS ARRANGED

The City Council in co-operation with the Speakers' Patriotic League and the military authorities, has arranged a big reception tomorrow night for all Peterborough soldiers who have returned from the front and the citizens generally are asked to turn out and show their appreciation of the efforts of the gallant men who are to be honoured. It is said that Peterborough people cannot cheer, and certainly the quietness of the crowd on other occasions of this kind would bear out that accusation. It is hoped that tomorrow night the citizens of Peterborough will show that they have lungs and know how to use them.

There will be a procession from the Armouries at 8:00 o'clock headed by the Band of the 93rd Battalion. The men of the 93rd will also march in the procession, the objective of which will be the Market Hall, where addresses of welcome will be given by Rev R. G. Peever, Lt.-Col. Johnston, and Captain Burnham, of the 93rd Battalion, and Lt.-Col. Walker of the 57th Regiment. There will be plenty of fire works and music, and all that is required is a big turnout of the citizens.

WAR CLOSES DISTILLERY.

Canadian Whisky Firm Suspends Operation for a Year.

DETROIT, Dec. 2—As a result of increasing teetotalism in Canada, largely due to the absence of many men at the Front, Hiram Walker & Sons, operating the largest distillery in Canada, at Walkerville, across the river, announced to-day that the plant would be closed for a year. During that time no whisky will be produced, and all the employees will be laid off. The announcement was made by President Franklin H. Walker of the firm.

When the European War began Mr. Walker stated, the distillery had 7,000,000 gallons of whisky on hand. Material reduction of this stock through Canadian consumption which was expected as a matter of business routine, failed to materialize

A Mecca For Alluring Gifts

Warne Bros.' Rare Diamonds, Rich Jewels, Silver Service, Watches, Clocks and Artistic Novelties

A gift of fine jewellery carries with it the welcome token of a lasting remembrance affording beauty as well as utility to the recipient.

Whether the ambition of the giver is for a diamond, or an article of refined jewellery, a watch, a wrist timepiece, a dainty pendant, a dependable sterling silver, or rich cut glass, the Warne Bros.' store affords a wealth of choice, unexcelled outside any large jewellery store.

Besides all this, there is the other strong assurance that buyers claim to have, and that is that he or she may shop with the utmost confidence and personal comfort. There is no question ing the fact that the Warne Bro. jewellery store has grown to be a favourite place at any season of the year and the fixedness of the policy of this store not to misrepresent, remains the same all the year round. It is also affirmed that you are not called upon to pay prohibitive prices just because it is the holiday season

The enterprising character of Warne Bros. is partly to be seen in their publicity methods. The members of this firm are strong believers in the value of reliable newspaper advertising proof of which may be seen every day in the Examiner. They have also perfect buying organization and a knowledge of where the best goods are to be bought right.

The Christmas shopper will not regret a visit to this Mecca for gifts this dynamo of Christmas energy where there is assembled a magnificent collection of gift goods for generous givers—next Warne's drug store

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, DEC. 3, 1915

A SENATOR SHY.

Peterborough is still a senator shy. In the compilation of the last batch of senators Peterborough again got the go-by, though it has better claims to the honour of furnishing a member of the Red Chamber than places that are thus favoured. The Examiner has, of course, no right in a party sense, nor any motive of party gain, to protest against the failure to recognize Peterborough as a plantation for senatorial timber, but it is a point of local loyalty to insist upon it. If service to the party, is to form a qualification, it is felt that Mr. Kendry has strong claims in this regard, though substitutionary personnel may account for a lack of the influence of a friend at court. If a pretty solid and continuous phalanx of government support from the Peterborough district, should "cut any ice," its claims to representation in the Senate are indisputable, even if the claims of its commercial and other importance are ignored. Peterborough is permitted to send members to the House of Commons, but not important enough to furnish a man to warm the red plush seats of the Senate Chamber.

THE "SQUARE" FORMED.

The position of the Entente Allies now presents a four square front, so to speak, to the puerile proposals of separate peace. Austria bullied by her chief ally, and effectively, if not actually, beaten, has been making overtures to Italy for the conclusion of a separate peace. The reply of Baron Sonnino, Italy's firm foreign minister, is characteristic of the man and the nation, as it has shown itself in this war. He declares that Italy is bound by the Entente agreement to make no separate peace. This decision makes impossible any separate or patch-work peace, and forbids any hope of a peace that will be founded upon any other condition than the destruction of the power of the prime originator of this monstrous war, to bedevil the national life and safety of Europe. The Allies have formed a "square"—with four mighty nations composing the four sides. Britain on one side, whose historic "square" in the field has stood the shock of mighty onslaughts; on another side impulsive and powerful France; on another, Russia, slow as a glacier, but as irresistible; and, to complete the square, victorious Italy, whose action in the war has been a continuous, if costly, victory—a triumphal progress. Against such an unyielding rock, the Central Powers, Germany, Austria and Turkey, are battling in vain; and not only vainly battling, but being broken piecemeal. The process of reduction to helplessness is slow, but the resistless circle of steel is closing in and the Balkan enterprise of desperation may represent one of the great jaws of the trap that will catch the Teutonic-Turkish trio in its fatal grip.

CANADA'S QUALITY.

Whatever the terrible effects this war has and has had upon other countries, upon conditions in other countries, it has, apart from the sad loss of life and suffering entailed by Canada's military participation in the struggle, been a tremendous benefit to Canada in many ways. In the first place it has showed our unalterable and intense interest in the imperial connection. It has showed a spirit of loyal and patriotic impulse to do its share in maintaining the integrity and protecting the menaced interests of the Empire, and the interests of humanity. It has showed our capacity for efficient service in these regards, and demonstrated the extent of our resources, both in the spirit and work of achievement, and in courage and efficiency. It has shown that we have a definite and no small place in the Empire, and that we can efficiently discharge our responsibility in respect of it. It has revealed ourselves to ourselves in a way we could not have dreamed a year ago. It has helped Canada to find herself, to realize, the extent of its liquid resources in wealth. It has furnished us with the sense of independence and shown us a justification for, and an impulse to, self reliance. It has made us have faith in ourselves, and our capacity for accomplishment.

We have in a large way been borrowing money abroad in ignorance or disregard of our own home resources. The manner in which we have subscribed, and over-subscribed our first important domestic loan, is a revelation. The Government asked for 50 millions to help finance our share in the war. This was not only over-subscribed in one day, but the public, from the capitalistic institution to the humble economist, demanded 60 millions more than was asked for; the Government had money thrust upon it. It is needless to point out what this means in the way of intensifying our self-respect, our self-reliance, and confidence in our capacity to play the game off our own bat. Canada has done much in national upbuilding, of a material character. We shall now do more on our own responsibility, and of our own resources. We shall no more, or if we do, to a lesser degree, go as suppliants to the money markets of other countries. We have found, we have shown, that we have money of our own that can be used to help ourselves, and the other members and interests of the Imperial family.

Not only has the war been of inestimable material and moral benefit to us in this regard, but it has brought us prosperity. While the clouds of war hung over Europe, sprinkling death and destruction, the clouds of divine Providence rained upon our soil the greatest crop in our history. While shrapnel destructively reaped the harvest of the fields of Europe, batteries of reapers gathered the harvest of Canada; reaped wealth while other agencies reaped destruction. The field crops of Canada, and their financial fruitfulness, demonstrate in terms of millions, the old truth that our soil is, with its handmanden and co-mate, industrial productivity, the true, unfailing, and inexhaustible source of wealth.

The war if it has not produced, has, as far as Canada is concerned, been accompanied with the most gratifying conditions of prosperity; money plentiful, and widely distributed through plentiful employment, flourishing industrial and commercial conditions, expanding revenue, and all the indications of a sound, or at least satisfactory state of nation-all interests. That it will continue is among the things we can reasonably hope. If its continuance depends, as it largely does, upon ourselves; upon our own exertions, we are encouraged to strive valiantly, by the new knowledge we have gained, both of our resources in money, and of our national adaptability to seize and use occasion, and meet responsibility.

A TRAITOROUS THING.

"While this merciless war is devastating almost the whole world and while our Allies are largely composed of members of the Catholic Church, the man who will raise his voice in attack on their religious belief is little better than a traitor and a spy. While Belgium is lying bleeding and prostrate, France fighting with heroic desperation, and Italy battling for our rights, it is monstrous that any British subject can be found to flout and jeer at them because of their religion. We try to believe that no man in his sane senses would be so misguided."—Hamilton Times.

CONCRETE EVIDENCE OF NATIONAL PROSPERITY

A Toronto firm that does a large mail order business throughout Canada received in cash for one day's business this week no less a sum than $125,000.

Toronto bank clearings for the month of November were $18,554,000 more than for October, and $86,000,000 more than for September. It is probable that the bank clearings for the week, to be published to-day, will be $5,000,000 more than that for last week.

Railway earnings, which, with bank clearings, indicate increases of 50 per cent. every week.

Toronto customs revenue for November was the highest on record, showing an increase of $1,001,106.79. Customs revenue for the whole of Canada for November showed an increase of $4,157,000.

The Dominion of Canada war loan of $50,000,000 was over-subscribed by $60,000,000.

Total revenue from the Dominion of Canada for November amounted to $17,072,456.76, an increase of $7,576,920.46, and the largest for any month in the history of the Dominion.

There was an increase of building permits in Toronto in November over the same month last year of $81,322.

Trust and mortgage companies report that there has been a marked improvement in their business. People are meeting their obligations freely and promptly.

Ask any employer of labour what are the conditions in Toronto to-day, and he will tell you labour is well employed. Good men are hard to get. Men who want work have no real difficulty in finding it.

The man on the street can see the difference for himself. Conditions that prevailed last winter no longer exist. Appeals for charity have diminished remarkably.

Conditions in the three prairie provinces show a decided change for the better. Business men are buying heavily, and a great deal of land is being sold to new settlers.

The western crop is growing every day. An immense load of debt is being lifted, and farmers are paying both interest and principal on their mortgages. The great crop has put millions in money into the hands of the western farmers. The millions of bushels of grain still in farmers' hands and yet to be marketed mean that there is still in the country vast stores of unrealized wealth.

The farmers have the money. They are meeting their obligations and paying off old scores. They are buying from the merchant and the manufacturer. All classes in their wealth benefit by the outflow of new wealth.

These are facts that carry their own convincing story. This new condition means much to Canada, not alone in its effect on present business conditions, but as evidence of what can be done. So long as Canada depends for its wealth on its productivity, it need never know hard times.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS CONTINUED

Lieut. Joseph Cools, who is attached to the 93rd Battalion here, and is on duty at the Armouries, is a native of Belgium, but is a naturalized Canadian. Lieut. Cools is a son of Senator and Madam Cools, Lierie, Belgium, and was married a few days ago to Miss Vera A. Wilmot, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Wilmot, Vancouver, B.C. The lieutenant has been a resident of Canada for four years.

There was a muster roll call of the 93rd Battalion this morning, when the men of the battalion were given their new regimental numbers.

Mr Robert Jones, 238½ Simcoe Street, has received the following letter from his son, Trooper Jack Jones, of the 8th C.M.R., at Bramshott Camp, England:

Dear Dad,—How are you and the rest of the famiy getting along? I am fine and in the best of health. We are getting lots of drill and plenty to eat, and I have taken on a lot of flesh. I weighed myself at the Y.M.C.A. yesterday and touched 147 pounds. Of course, I had my uniform on, but I only weighed 127 pounds when I enlisted.

Say, dad, don't forget to send me some of your Xmas dinner, as I expect to be in camp on Xmas Day. We are getting drilled pretty hard now, but I do not mind it at all.

I have been up to London twice with the Blake twins. They used to live there, and went to their old home to a lady called Mrs Otxman. When we returned, we had all kinds of cigarettes and candies and a shilling left in our pockets.

We are undergoing an eight weeks' course, and it takes all your strength and nerve to keep up with the work. We are going to have forced marches at night and be called out of our beds at midnight to dig trenches, or go on route marches.

Well, I guess I will close now, but I want to know if Bert Hamilton has enlisted. Well, good-bye for this time, with love to all.

Your loving son, Jack.

TORONTO, Dec. 3.—One of the most important modifications in connection with the high standard of vision required of recruits for the Canadian Expeditionary Forces was issued today in Divisional Orders, which permits the relaxation of the severe eye test that has barred thousands of young men from enlisting in the overseas forces. The changes are sweeping ones, and thousands of recruits who have been rejected because of impaired vision will now be eligible to serve.

Five hundred uniforms were received on Wednesday and the men are being outfitted as rapidly as the uniforms can be unpacked. Forty-three of the cases got side-tracked at a junction on the way, but will be in any time.—Lindsay Post.

Sergt. Cook Wride and Lce.-Corp. J. Bath of the 93rd Battalion will leave on Monday to attend the School of Military Cooking which will open its next course on Monday next, 6th December, at Tete du Pont Barracks, Kingston. Sergt.-Major Kerrison, W.O., and Sergt.-Major Rolfe will have charge of the instructional work of the school under Major Hamilton Th school will follow the curriculum arranged for Barriefield Camp. In view of the fact that so many new units are being organized in the Division, the school will no doubt be kept going and made a permanent institution, similar to the R.S.A. and the P.S.I.

Kingston Standard: The Provisional School of Infantry commenced another course to-day. This time the school has about 70 officers and 30 non-commissioned officers taking the course. This is the largest number the school has had since it was first opened at the camp, and it is the first time that it has opened its doors to non-coms. However, it has a most competent staff of instructors under Lieut.-Col. Barragar, and it will be able to give the large class the fullest possible benefits of the school. The school is located in the quarters of the old Canoe Club on Ontario Street, with additional rooms in the building formerly occupied by the 14th Club, on the Market Square, and intends using Ontario Hall for lecture purposes.

Kingston War Garrison, Dec. 2.—This morning the city of Kingston was compelled to part with two companies of the 59th Battalion which left the city at 9.50 for Gananoque and Cornwall. A Company went to Gananoque and D Company went to Cornwall, and on Saturday B and C Companies will leave for Brockville. The 59th was organized in Barriefield Camp last June by Lieut.-Col. Dawson, who took command with a nucleus formed for his regiment by the base battalion formerly commanded by Lieut.-Col. Gee. The battalion has been here for nearly seven months, and in that time has sent sufficient trained men overseas to form another battalion.

The names of Harold and Hugh Wallis and of Douglas Macdonald were omitted from the Y.M.C.A. honour roll.

In the last couple of days the following recruits have passed the medical examination for the 93rd Battalion:

William George Davidson, Birdsalls.
Chas. A. Gilders, Hastings.
Alfred W. Rutherford, 255 George street.
Archibald J. Grier, Tweed.
John McGarvey, Peterborough.
Fred Roy Wilson, Wilson Ave., Peterborough.
Geo. Wm. Lillie, Peterborough.
Geo. H. Pollock, Havelock.
Chas. Wes. Johnston, 204 McDonnel street.
Louis Howard Elliott, 485 Sherbrooke street.
John Lindsay Shaw, Millbrook.
John A. Ruttan, Trent River.
Geo. Lockington, Peterborough.

Today's Orders.

"Representative" Horse Deals in Peel County

Sir Charles Davidson's Investigation Takes the Blanket Off Some Picturesque Horse Deals

BRAMPTON, Ont., Dec. 2.—Peel County supplied 363 of the horses purchased by the Dominion Government for the first Canadian overseas contingent. "Every one of them was bought from me or my firm," said Mr. James R. Fallis, M.P.P., giving testimony before Sir Charles Davidson's Commission of Inquiry this afternoon.

Mr. Fallis gave serious evidence Learning of Canada's needs at the opening of the war, he had travelled to Ottawa and secured a letter from officers of the Militia Department recommending himself to the Government inspectors and authorizing the purchases of horses in Peel County He returned and formed a partner ship with Mr. E. J. Jones, a horse dealer in Brampton. The firm mobilized such horses as were available from farmers and others for purchase These animals were submitted to the Government inspectors. Such as were "passed" were purchased by Mr. Fallis or his firm. These were sold to the Government at an advance on the price negotiated with the original owner. Mr. Fallis testified that his profits were "less than $3,000." Mr. Jones, his partner, placed them at "about $3,500." Mr. Fallis described himself as "a live stock dealer."

The evidence given summarized gives some remarkable revelations. It disclosed that an old lame mare foaled in 1899, and sold by her owner when she was fifteen years old, for $40, part of the proceeds being "taken out in pigs," was sold to the Dominion Government for military purposes las year, on the outbreak of war, for $165.

It was shown in evidence that the white legs and white nose of an other wise black horse were "doctored," "dyed," or "painted" black, owing to the military regulation against the purchase of light-coloured animals, and the "transformed" animal sold to the Government.

Mr. James R. Fallis, M.P.P. for Peel, testified that he purchased horses from farmers after the animals had passed the Government inspection and resold them to the Government, making private profit. "So the farmers got less and the Government paid more for your intervention?" said Sir Charles Davidson, addressing Mr. Fallis.

The boys of Scrumption village had formed a football club, and all they now needed was a ball, goalposts, etc., yet these trifles troubled them.

"It's like this," explained the captain, "we must all subscribe, but them as 'as most must give most."

There being no sign of dissent—such as a kick on the shins or a smack on the back of his head—the captain continued:

"Now, there's Jimmy Simpkins. 'E tell me only the other day that every time 'e takes a dose o' cod-liver oil 'is ol' woman puts a 'a'penny in 'is money-box. 'E must be gettin' rich."

"No, I ain't!" bawled Jimmy. "W'y, I've found out it's all a swiz! When it gets ter 'arf a crown, she takes it out and buys anuvver bottle!"

REV. MR. PHILPOTT AT THE TABERNACLE

Earnest Address By Noted Evangelist Last Evening

In his address at the Tabernacle last night, Rev. Mr. Philpott stated that there were three judgments distinctly referred to in the Bible, and not merely one great general Judgment as many people have been accustomed to think. The first of these judgments would be that of the judgment of believers for rewards for service rendered to Christ, and would take place when Christ should come in the air for his Saints, as described in the parable of the talents. The second was to be the judgment of the living nations, which would take when Christ should come to establish a thousand years of righteous government upon the earth. The third of the judgments was to occur at the close of the Millenium (the thousand years of peace), when Christ would sit upon His great white throne to judge the wicked of all time.

Mr. Philpott dwelt more at length upon the first of these judgments. He said he was glad he would not have to meet his sins at that judgment, for Christ had already been judged for the sins of the believer, when their sins were "laid on Him" 'at the Cross. But the thing which concerned him now was that he should make the best use of his talents for the Master, so that when the Lord should come he would not be called upon to meet Him empty-handed.

Several local pastors, as well as others from out of the city have been present to hear Mr. Philpott's forceful addresses, and have also taken part in the services. Dr. R. J. Zimmerman of Toronto will speak tonight at 8 o'clock, and will preach at both morning and evening services on Sunday. A cordial welcome to all.

"FRIENDLY" NOTES ARE OF NO VALUE

President Wilson's Course in World War Criticized.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Criticism of the course pursued by President Wilson in the diplomatic matters arising out of the European war was contained in a speech delivered by Mr Joseph H. Choate, formerly American Ambassador to Great Britain, between the acts of the benefit performance of "Lord Dundreary," given in aid of the committee for men blinded in battle Mr. Choate is president of this committee.

Mr. Choate said: "What is our great nation doing while the nations of Europe are fighting the battles of civilization? Not much, I am sorry to say.

"We have written a few nicely worded notes and none of them has yet gone to protest. These notes are somewhat like the greenbacks that our government issued after the civil war. There is no time and place set for their redemption.

"We wish that our government had done more. We wish it had given the keynote to neutral nations when Belgium was invaded and when the great University of Louvain was destroyed."

"Johnny," said the teacher, "if coal is selling at $6 a ton and you pay your dealer $24, how many tons will he bring you?"

"A little over three tons, ma'am," replied Johnny promptly.

"No, ma'am, I know it ain't," said Johnny, "but they all do it.—"Harper's."

A NEW ENGLAND TEA AT ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH

A Very Pleasant Evening

Last evening was the occasion of another of those many pleasant gatherings, which take place in the schoolroom of Saint George's church, South Peterborough.

This one was the occasion of a "New England tea," and a very fair number attended to do justice to the fare provided.

After all had well eaten, a few willing hands quickly removed the tables and arranged the chairs for a "programme," which was opened by a pianoforte solo by Miss Evelyn Jay.

Colonel Johnston, the commanding officer of the 93rd Battalion, officiated as chairman. In introducing him to the audience, the Rector, (Mr. Price), remarked that in South Peterborough so far any way as regard the parish of St. George, there is scarcely a house but that one man at least is either fighting in the trenches, or in England and ready "to do his bit."

Col. Johnston said he was very glad of the opportunity to thank the women for the men. The contribution of their men kind was an infinitely vaster self-sacrifice than was a money contribution. The soldier takes it as a matter of fact, but it is the women who suffer, and, as a result, they are the greatest heroes in the world. The gallant Colonel's remarks were received with ringing cheers.

Sergeant Jones (of the 93rd) was then called on to detail his experiences of the Dardanelles in 1885. He has been both a sailor in the Royal Navy and a soldier in the Imperial Army. He was on board when the fatal error was made in 1883, when the Camperdown was rammed and upwards of four hundred lives were lost. Sergt. Jones at Christmas time, 1895, was at the Island of Tenedos, near the Dardanelles, his vessel being cleared for action. This was over the Turk and Armenian question. The last time, prior to this, that a man of war had passed through the narrow straits, was in 1876. Gallipoli, he described as a barren peninsula, covered with rock. Every rock is a cave, and every cave is a fortress; a desolate barren waste, inhabited only by the soldiers protecting the forts. A vast deal of shipping passed through the Dardanelles up to Odessa. In some places the Dardanelles are about three quarters of a mile wide, in other places not more than 300 yards, if so much. The straits are very heavily mined— the mines being fired, for the most part, electrically from the shore. The only way for a hostile ship to get along is to counter-mine, and blow away, or sweep and creep in trawlers. There is no chance for a ship to proceed until all mines are removed.

Finding our men of war could not get up, they were obliged to fight the forts from land. All engaged know the danger and difficulty; for being all caves and rocks, our men cannot bombard the men in them. At the conclusion of his remarks Sergt. Jones was loudly applauded.

The programme was then proceeded with; Mr. C. Coleman made the audience shake with laughter with his two songs, "I was the man they left behind," and "The Laughing Song." Miss Gladys Jay gave a recitation in good style, "When the Sewing Circle Meets," exposing the amount of scandal and gossip indulged in at these hen conventions. Mr. John received loud applause for his recitation, "The Response of the Outer Empire," as also for his rendering of "The Fringes of the Fleet," by Rudyard Kipling.

Miss Price then received considerable praise for a song, as did also Mr. Woodrow for a patriotic vocal contribution; while Mr. Farr added to his laurels by his pleasant singing.

Miss E. Jay efficiently acted as pianiste throughout.

A vote of thanks was then passed and tendered to the chairman, who received a hearty round of cheers, accompanied by "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and the singing of the National Anthem, "God Save the King," brought the proceedings to an end.

"THE WHITE FEATHER" HERE NEXT WEDNESDAY

"The White Feather," dealing with the present European conflict and described as the greatest secret service war play ever written, will be seen here at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday next. The play contains all the ingredients and thrills necessary to satisfy the most blase theatre goer, including German submarines and British warships; four German spies and two British secret service agents; a new recruit; an irascible M.P. and his daughter, who, of course, is in love with the secret service hero; a basket full of white feathers for cowards who do not enlist; a wireless outfit concealed in the drawing-room where the scene of the play is laid; a wonderful dictograph; an always-to-be-forgotten pipe; a code book of signals which falls into the wrong hands; carrier pigeons; a cane-shaped gun which works wonders at the proper time; a couple of revolvers, and a powerful modern searchlight—all add to the tremendous success and countless thrills of this big secret service war drama, making it the sensation of three continents: Britain, America, and Australia. This is not a moving picture

Birthday Party Was a Success

The birthday party under the auspices of the Canadian Kitchener League, held at the home of Mrs. William Eyres, Antrim street, on Wednesday afternoon and evening, proved a very great success. The house presented a gay appearance both inside and out. Among the decorations was a number of Union Jacks and Canadian emblems. The guests were welcomed by Mrs. Eyres and Mrs. Knox, president of the League. In the hallway they deposited birthday money in a large basket placed for this purpose. The tables containing fancy articles for sale were well patronized. The tea room presented an attractive appearance. The floral decorations of carnations and smilax under the soft light of the candles adding to the inviting tone of the scene. In an alcove off the tea room, amateur palmistry was practised by a member of the League with considerable success. The table of home made candy was a big attraction. During the evening Mr. R. J. Soden gave two readings that were much appreciated. Solos were rendered by Miss Clancy and instrumental selections by Miss S. Lennox of Lakefield and H. O. Treneer.

The thanks of the League are due to all who assisted in any way.

Special mention is due Mr. Jordan for flowers, Mr. J. M. Greene for use of Victrola and Fire Chief Howard, also to Mrs. Eyres, who opened her home for the purpose. The proceeds will be announced later.

LARGE CROWD WITNESS THE INITIAL PERFORMANCE OF "CABIRIA"

Wonderful Production—Represents a Triumph of the Film Makers' Art—Will Be Shown Again To-night.

A large and appreciative audience attended the opening performance of "Cabiria," which was given in the Grand Opera House last evening. This wonderful production will be repeated to-night and to-morrow night. Effects wholly new to the art have been devised to set forth the supreme qualities of the play. The production costs upwards of a quarter of a million dollars and is the only photo play given special audience by President Wilson and the Cabinet at Washington. "Cabiria" is a picture that should interest all students of ancient history.

The time of this vast photo spectacle is in the third century B.C., when Rome and Carthage were at war. The final success of Rome was followed by the consolidation of the Roman Empire, which shortly before the Christian era reached the apogee of its greatness. In the film, an attempt is made, and successfully, to show life as it was lived in those strenuous days. Historical characters, such as Scipio, Hannibal, Archimedes, and other great warriors and personages of the time are characterized. The Greek philosopher, Archimedes, is shown utilising the power of the sun for the purpose of creating conflagration. He burned up the Roman fleet by fixing the solar rays upon the ships. Every schoolboy knows that a double convex glass possesses the power of concentrating the solar rays. Archimedes was probably the first to discover this fact. The picture is one, therefore, that besides its tremendous spectacular and tragic interest has a high educational value. It portrays real history on the screen. It shows up the people of Rome and Carthage as they lived at that period. The producers of the film referred to authentic historical records for their facts. There is no anachronism in the picture, every detail is faultless.

Students and educators of history should avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing this work, if only to study this era of history on the screen

By-law May Be Submitted To the People

Committee Will Recommend the Preparation of a By-law Authorizing the Purchase of the Exhibition Property

30 ACRES INVOLVED

The special committee of the City Council appointed to deal with the question of submitting a by-law to the people respecting the purchase of the present exhibition property, met last evening. Ald. G. W. Green, chairman, presided. The Exhibition Board was represented by Mr. J. H. Garbutt, president, also Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., R. M. Glover and F. J. A. Hall.

Ald. Green informed the committee that he had taken the matter up with Mr. R. A. Morrow, present owner of the Exhibition property. Mr. Morrow declined to deal with the Civic committee so long as the option was held by the Agricultural Society. Ald. Green was of the opinion that the property would be a good purchase at thirty thousand dollars without restrictions. The Council was desirous that the Fair should continue, but owing to present existing legislation the city could not loan the Society any more than five thousand dollars.

The committee finally decided to submit a by-law to the people authorizing the purchase of the present grounds at a cost of thirty thousand dollars, which is at the rate of one thousand dollars per acre.

Ald. Green favoured a recommendation authorizing the purchase of a property at any suitable place for a similar purpose. The original motion carried.

Aldermen Green, Stratton, Duffus and Messrs. Denne and Glover were appointed a committee to investigate the possibility of securing some other suitable site.

Special Committee of City Council Met Last Evening to Consider Question of Caring For Returning Soldiers

The sub-committee appointed by the City Council to investigate ways and means for caring for returning soldiers, met last evening. Ald. Edgar, chairman of the committee, and Ald. Stratton, were delegated to secure additional information concerning the men who have returned from the front and take whatever action may be necessary to provide for them. Communications were read from the Soldiers' Aid Commission of Ontario, outlining the work they proposed to undertake in conjunction with the various municipalities.

His Worship Mayor Buller advised the committee that he had been in conversation with Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P., relative to the prospects of the government establishing a convalescent home in Peterborough. He had reason to believe that Capt. Burnham's efforts would be successful.

A number of local cases necessitating immediate attention, including the case of Sergt. Cooper, whose money has been delayed, were referred to the committee.

Ald. Green said that as chairman of the Board of Works he would give preference to returning soldiers when it came to a case of providing employment.

Mayor Buller and Ald. Duffus will interview Mrs. Beavis and ascertain if she would like to go to the Old County at the city's expense and see her son, who has been honoured by three countries for conspicuous bravery.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

A committee men's tea is to be served in the Y this evening at 6.30 o'clock, the object of this gathering being the reorganization of the committees to plan for the present season's work. As the alterations to the building are now nearing completion it is proposed to have an opening week from 12th to 17th December for the purpose of bringing the privileges of the Association before the young men of the city. Special events will be run off daily during this week and a membership contest will be launched, which will close about the first of January. The bowling alleys are being refinished and will be open to the members in a few days.

In the list of enlisted members published yesterday, the following names were omitted, which we greatly regret: Millord Hardill, Lt. Harry Rogers, Wm. Rue, Walker Jones, Dr. Garnet Greer, John Ridyard, Robt Rees, —. Holt, —. Farr.

An effort is being made to secure payment of the subscriptions due the Y.M.C.A. in view of the fact that money is very badly needed to meet current bills and those in connection with the alterations.

The new dormitories on the third floor have been placed in commission and four are now occupied. Ten young men roomed in the building all through the alterations, although they were put to many inconveniences. We expect by the first of the year to have our full quota of 25 rooms occupied.

170 PAIRS OF SOCKS FORWARDED TO THE BOYS OVERSEAS

The regular monthly meeting of the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held yesterday afternoon in the Barrie Building. A number of new members were enrolled. Hearty votes of thanks were tendered the Girls' Athletic Society of the Collegiate Institute for a donation of fifty dollars, to be used for the purchase of wool, the Oriental Hotel management for the use of the tea-room, and Mr. Wm. Conway for five dollars. Fifteen dollars has been devoted to the British Red Cross.

A letter was received from Gunner W. E. Graham, of the 4th Battery, gratefully acknowledging two pairs of socks.

An interesting letter from Dr. Young was read, impressing on them the need of socks.

The Knitting Committee reported 170 pairs of socks sent to Peterborough men in England and France and to prisoners in Germany. Two pairs were given one member for prisoners of war, and five pairs were sent to young men overseas for immediate use. The committee expressed its thanks to Mrs. Langford for a donation of $3, and to Mrs. Breyfogle for 13 pairs of socks.

The cost of wool during the past month was $78.80. Of this amount $17.83 was resold, leaving a cost of $60.97. One day alone 39 pairs of socks were brought in. The thanks of committee was expressed to the many faithful knitters.

A letter was read from the Regent of the Chapter, Mrs E. B. Clegg, now in England.

422 George St. Opp. Examiner

A FIFTH UNIVERSITIES' COMPANY IS ORGANIZED

The Universities' Companies are are now well known throughout Canada. A fresh company is raised, equipped and partially trained about every two months, and it is unnecessary to advertise for recruits, inasmuch as each company is made up of brothers or relatives or friends of those who have joined previous companies.

The First Company, under the command of Captain Gregor Barclay, has joined the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, and has been for some time in the trenches.

The Second Company, under the command of Captain George McDonald and Captain Percy Molson is also on the Continent.

The Third Company went overseas about 330 strong, and has gained a golden reputation at Shorncliffe.

The Fourth Company is at full strength, and has now embarked. In quality it is in no respect inferior to its predecessors.

A Fifth Company has been authorized, a large number of applicants are on the waiting list, and recruits will be welcomed at Montreal on or after 25th November.

Those who wish to join must receive a rigorous medical examination locally by an Army Medical Officer. Those who are not medically and physically fit are not wanted, so there is a subsequent examination on reaching Montreal. The recruit should also be attested locally before the nearest Justice of the Peace, and transportation from Montreal can be speedily obtained by sending a night lettergram to Captain A. S. Eve, 382 Sherbrooke Street W, Montreal. On arrival the recruit is issued without delay, his blanket, palliasse, and uniform, and his training commences on the Campus of McGill University and on the slopes of Mount Royal. As to barracks, the Canadian Northern Land Company loans the headquarters building, McGill University lends the Molson Hall, and the students not only lend the top floor of the Union, but also give the soldiers the privileges of the building as though they were students. Moreover, the Y.M.C.A. opens its quarters and places the swimming pool at their disposal. The training is varied, and includes shooting at the C.P.R. Gallery, drill, tactics, bayonet fighting, and physical training.

Nearly 1,200 men have already been raised by this organization, which is efficient, and also economical, inasmuch as there are no officers above the rank of captain.

A considerable number of young men who cannot get commissions in Canada are joining the Universities Companies with a view to commission in England. About fifty men who joined as privates have already been appointed as officers. Information has been received from London that there is room for 40 to 50 a month if suitable men are forthcoming.

Particulars may be obtained from Captain A. S. Eve, 382 Sherbrooke Street West, Montreal, who is in charge of the Depot.

Water Supply For the Month

City's Water Supply is Absolutely Pure

The city's water supply for the month of November is reported upon by Sanitary Inspector Spence as being "absolutely pure." Samples were taken from the intake, laboratory tap and the public drinking fountain outside of the Police Station.

The weather for the month was generally fine and mild, with one or two sharp frosts.

Government Has Released Its Hold

TORONTO, Dec. 3.— The Dominion Government has relinquished its hold on the wheat in eastern elevators on condition that the grain is ground into our in sOuada. This releases from eight to ten million bushels of wheat in elevators at Port Colborne, Port McNicholl, Goderich, Tiffin and Montreal.

Fight Germans In Their Sleep

LONDON, Dec. 3.— Landladies of lodging-houses near by the railroad termini, such as Victoria and Waterloo are becoming diffident to about taking in soldiers just back from the front, particularly those who have participated in recent fighting.

The landladies say the poor soldiers fight the terrible battles over again in their sleep and the shrieks and hysteria are enough to shake the strongest nerves.

Many of the men who took part in the engagement are afflicted with the most horrible dreams and somnambulistically slash and kill the Germans to the terror of all the other lodgers.

Figures are unobtainable, but the cases of nervous breakdowns during the last few weeks have reached a high figure.

Even officers have been affected, and men who have stood up under the strain since the early days of the war say that the sights during the recent offensive are too terrible for mention.

The caution of the New Englander in giving a direct answer to a direct question is proverbial. Two natives of a New Hampshire town met after the funeral, and the first asked, "Was not your father's death very sudden?"

Slowly drawing one hand from his pocket and pulling down his beard, the other replied thoughtfully, "Waal, rather sudden for him."

Local Talent At Bethany

Sergt.-Major Hartshorn and Others Took Part in the Patriotic Concert

Says the Lindsay Post: The oyster supper and patriotic concert held last night at Bethel, Emily under the auspices of L. O. L. No. 294, was a splendid success, both from the standpoint of attendance and the excellence of the programme rendered. There was a great sprinkling of khaki in evidence, and Capt. William Warren of the 109th Battalion, Overseas, and Capt. Thorne, of Omemee, were conspicuous by their presence. In the unavoidable absence of Lieut.-Col. Miller, of Peterboro, Mr. R. J. Boat ex-Reeve of Emily, occupied the chair most acceptably. Sergt. Major Hartshorn and the other boys of the 93rd Battalion, Peterboro, as well as the miniature recruiting officers and assisted by a number of ladies from the Electric City, gave a really excellent programme and vocal and instrumental music and recitations.

During the programme Capt. Sherin was called to the platform when a presentation of a ring and wrist watch was made to two Bethel boys, Ptes. Green and Harrison, who had enlisted for overseas service. The gifts were from the people of Bethel.

A feature of the evening's program was a stirring recruiting address by Capt. Warren of the 109th Batt., and also Past County Master L. O. L. who advised the young men of the Orange Order as well as those outside, to do their duty to King and Country.

During the afternoon Captain Warren and Capt. Thorne secured several recruits from the southern part of Emily township and also received the assurance that others would follow suit.

Optimist—"Have courage and persevere, and the world may yet make a beaten pathway to your door."

Pessimist—"Yes, right across my lawn, and then pick my flowers, scratch their fool names on my window panes, and chop my front steps to pieces for souvenirs. —Judge.

THE FUNERAL OF COLEMAN BLEWETT

Was Laid to Rest in St. John's Cemetery, Toronto

TORONTO, December 3.—The late Coleman Blewett, killed in a motor accident at the corner of Alberta and St. Clair avenues, was laid to rest at 3.30 p.m. on Wednesday in Norway cemetery. At 2.30 o'clock services were conducted at the son's home, 180 Rushton Road, by Rev. Jos. Odery, of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, assisted by Rev. E. E. Scott of Zion church. Special references were made to the honorable and kindly disposition of the late Mr. Blewett and the hosts of friends made during his five months' residence in the city. This was shown by the beautiful floral tokens of sympathy from friends in Peterborough and local friends. W. J. Isaac sang the hymn, "Sleep thy last sleep."

Those out of town in attendance were Webster, Josiah and James Blewett, Miss Esther Blewett brothers and sister, of Peterborough, and Samuel McKibben, brother-in-law of Lakefield, Ont.

The pallbearers were the three brothers, the brother-in-law, John Porter, and Leslie Sargineon.

The daughter, Miss Beatrice Blewett, who is serving as a nurse at the Dardanelles, has not yet received word of the death.

EARLY END TO THE WAR SAYS JOHN REDMOND

LONDON, Dec. 3.—John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, in a speech at Waterford yesterday recounted talks he had with Lord Kitchener at the beginning of the war. Lord Kitchener said to Mr. Redmond "Can you guarantee me 5,000 men from Ireland? If you can I will say thank you. If you can guarantee 12,000, I will say I am deeply obliged."

Mr. Redmond added, amid ringing cheers: "It is not 5,000 or 12,000, but 100,000 that have been sent from Ireland—a perfectly amazing performance when one considers the past history of the country and how it has been drained by emigration.

"I am convinced," continued Mr. Redmond, "that so far as the western front is concerned we have got the upper hand definitely. I am also convinced that the war will come to an end sooner than most people believe."

HEBREWS CELEBRATE IMPORTANT FESTIVAL

At sundown last night in the home of every orthodox Hebrew in Peterborough a candle was lighted on a candlestick bearing eight candles in commemoration of the eight-day festival of the Hanukkah, the emancipation from Syria of the Jews two centuries ago. The legend of the Hanukkah which is one of the minor Jewish festivals, is considered one of the most beautiful in the Jewish religion.

To-night two more candles will be lighted, and on Saturday night three, and so on until the eighth day, when there will be eight candles burning.

"BEWARE OF IMITATIONS."

("Imitation eggs and butter and many other food-disguises have made their appearance in Germany.")

If you were patient nation
Does not raise an angry shout
At each nauseous imitation
Of the things it does without;
If it shows no wish to mutter
When you bid it do its best
To eat imitation butter
With an imitation zest.

If it feels no need to question
Whether "Kultur" which ordained
Such a strain on its digestion
Is not similarly feigned;
If it really is contented
At its various dinner hours
With the masquerade presented—
That is no affair of ours.

But one thing we have a voice in,
Be your skill however great,
There is one thing we rejoice in
Knowing you can't imitate;
When the struggle is concluded
And the sounds of battle cease,
Europe shall not be deluded
With an imitation Peace.

MR. D. O'CONNELL WILL ADDRESS LADIES' "LIT."

Mr. Daniel O'Connell will deliver a patriotic address at this evening's meeting of the Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T.A.S. There will be a short musical programme, and a large attendance is expected to hear what promises to be one of the premier events of the Society's season.

JOFFRE WILL COMMAND ALL FRENCH ARMIES

PARIS, Dec. 3.—General Joffre has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of all the French armies, except those in North Africa, including Morocco and dependent Ministry colonies, President Poincare signed the decree to-day.

The appointment was made on the recommendation of Minister of War Gallieni, who in a report to President Poincare said:

"By the decree of October 28, 1915, the Government charged with the vital interests of the country alone has the right to decide on the military policy. If the struggle extends to several frontiers it alone must decide which is the principal adversary against whom the majority of the forces shall be directed. It consequently alone controls the means of action and resources of all kinds, and puts them at the disposal of the generals commanding-in-chief in the different theatres of operations."

"The experience gained, however, from the present operations, which are distributed over several fronts, proves that unity of direction, indispensable to the conduct of the war, can only be assured by the presence at the head of all of our armies of a single chief, responsible for the military operations proper.

"With that object in view I submit to your high approval the decrees attached."

Two decrees accompanied the report, one creating the post of Commander-in-Chief of the French armies and the other appointing General Joffre "Commander-in-Chief of the armies of the north-east" to the new supreme command.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE CHURCH OF IMMACULTE CONCEPTION WED. NEXT.

The first anniversary of the opening of the Church of the Immaculate Conception will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 8. $50,000 the Objective For the Patriotic Fund the present the Fund is to bat and all bases full. Make headquarters your headquarters for a few days. The chance comes only once a year. Possibly the war will be over before another Patriotic Fund canvas is held. Let us all hope that long ere another year is out, we have whaled the Germans to a standstill.

The Fund hopes to realize a substantial part of the whole amount from the givings of a large number. Last year employees in factories and shops pooled one day's wages and gave it to the Fund. Some factories did more and did well. But the man who gave a day's wage only contributed, say, $2.50, to help the Empire and the Fund. That is a small contribution to so worthy an object. So we hope for better this time. Lists have been prepared. A letter has been forwarded to the proprietor or manager of each shop, factory or store, or office, with the request that he place the lists, or by his foreman so do, before the men and workers and secure names and a definite sum per week or month for the year. We want a continuous stream of contributions coming in, and all is assured. Five cents per day will amount to $12.50 per year. Who cannot spare the price of a street car ticket or picture show admission every day to help win the war. Ten cents per week will net $5.00 at the end of the year. It will never be missed. So all workmen are asked to consider, to realize that while they are going on with daily work, in peace and comfort, that it is a duty to help out those who are in the field. If you help the wife and children that is just the same thing.

The lists will be taken to the places by the teams and a personal request made for action. Possibly, where allowed, the teams may see the men, and urge contribution. In any event the committee appeals to all workers to do a share.

A good friend of the Fund and a good worker sends in a request that a somewhat detailed statement be made public of who is on the Fund, amounts paid, how many are benefitted, that some idea be given of the extent to which the Fund has been distributed and the ground, so to speak, covered. The information will be supplied. Not all of it. The names of the families and amounts will be cheerfully supplied to any one calling at the office. It is all public property. But we must remember that these people are the dependents of the soldier who is at the front, and that those two items are in a way private. Too much publicity would only in a sense humiliate, and no one wants that. Contributors to the Fund have a perfect right to know where the money is going and in such amounts, and the information will be had at the office. All will, we are sure, concede the point taken as above. But outside of that the other information asked for will be supplied and printed, on Saturday, if possible.

In the meantime the canvassing lists are being prepared. The cards written, arranged and classified by streets and squares. From the lists the teams select those on whom they will call. All is done in good order and with a wise purpose, to get results. This part of the work is under the surface. It does not show in public. But it is there all the same, and is really the foundation on which a successful campaign is carried out. If you feel that you would like to lend a hand come on in. It is all voluntary and is appreciated.

Don't forget the reception to the returned soldiers. Saturday night. Turn out and cheer. The last time the street seemed dead, so far as any vocal manifestation of appreciation or gratitude of these men is concerned. Turn out and when the time comes cheer.

Are Feeling the Pinch of War

Prices of Food and Clothing in Vienna Becoming Prohibitive.

Zurich, Dec. 3. — After fourteen months, Vienna is beginning to realize the effects of the war, which hitherto had left little outward mark on the life of the Austrian capital But in the last few weeks prices of food have advanced by leaps and bounds. Coal is becoming scarcer and dearer, just as winter is approaching. Clothing has doubled in price.

One cause of the present high prices of food is the manipulation of speculators, who are hiding large stores of provisions and so creating an artificial shortage in the markets. When fresh butter went up to $1.25 a pound, large stocks suddenly came on the market and prices fell at once to $1.

The Vienna police have just made a thorough search of all the storage warehouses. Among the provisions concealed in these places were found hundreds of packages of rice, flour, sugar, cheese, canned goods, chocolate, currants, tea and coffee and condensed milk. The owners will be rigorously prosecuted.

Automobiles have almost disappeared from the streets of Vienna.

SMALLEST CHURCH IN THE STATES

It Is 18 x 28 Feet and Has Fifty Communicants.

What is declared to be the smallest church in America having a permanent pastor and conducting regular services has just been dedicated at Manchester, N.H. It is Saint Jean's Methodist Church, with a congregation of a little over 50 French communicants. The pastor is Rev. E. J. Palisoul, whose efforts led to the exposure and sentence to death of Oscar J. Comery for the murder of his wife about a year ago. Mr. Palisoul took up the case after the police had dropped it, and, assisted by Mrs. Alice B. Montgomery, secretary of the New Hampshire Children's Aid and Protective Society, insisted on further action and got it. When the authorities learned of Mrs. Montgomery's interest in the case she was notified that "we are handling this case and your efforts won't be necessary."

Comery poisoned his wife when he found that a high school girl with whom he had been intimate was about to give birth to a child. He is the first murderer to be condemned to the gallows in New Hampshire in more than thirty years.

Saint Jean's Church Society met for a number of years in the vestry of Saint Paul's Methodist Church. Then the leaders decided to have a home of their own, and they built the present diminutive structure. The main auditorium is 18x28 feet, with seats for about 70 persons.

VIVID DESCRIPTION OF NAVAL BATTLE

H.M.S. Tiger's Captain Gives Details of Fight with the Bleucher.

Captain Pelly, commander of the battleship Tiger, in a statement to the London correspondent of the Amsterdam Telegraaf, who has visited the Fleet, says of his great ship's part in the North Sea battle of 24th January:

"The Germans said that we broke off the fight on 24th January. But there was nothing more to fight. The Bleucher had paid the toll, and the other ships made off. Of course, we were not such fools as to be lured into the German mine-fields. My ship was doing splendidly when we saw the Bleucher keel over and go down. And all my 1,300 officers and crew were sorry that the battle was so soon over. It lasted an hour."

"There must have been great excitement on board?" I asked Captain Pelly. "Oh, no,' he said. "No one got excited. In a moment like that one needs complete self-possession. But the whole ship's company glowed with the ardour of battle, and I can tell you that we put our shoulders to the wheel from the moment the enemy appeared. The latter turned tail when they caught sight of our flying squadron.

"Our one hundred stokers worked below like troopers to get more speed out of the Tiger. We were doing 29 knots at least, although the ship was only built to do 28. We only stoke oil, and used up a good mouthful. Our 13.5's worked like fun. The firing began at 15 miles, and we never got nearer than eight miles to the enemy, whose guns did not carry so far as ours. In addition, we were faster, and we gave them the whole broadside in a minute.

"The Bleucher was terribly knocked about, and gave the Tiger her last shot, which with two other shots did us little harm. Look, here a shell struck our wooden deck, came to an iron beam which changed its direction, and it flew over the deck again and overboard. No man was hurt by it.

"Do you see that new piece of steel on the turret? There another enemy projectile made a hole. And if you examine carefully the side of the ship then you will find just above the water-line a dent in the thick steel hide of the Tiger. Here, in the armoured observation tower, an enemy shell drove in through the opening without asking permission.

"Do you see this new steel plate as a souvenir of the enemy's shot? And now I have shown you all the damage that our ship suffered."

INCIDENTALLY—

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 2.—Henry Ford's factory here on Tuesday produced 1,820 cars, and employed a working force of 21,600 men. Both figures set new records.

FOOD SPECULATORS HOIST VIENNA PRICES

ZURICH, Dec. 1.—In the last few weeks prices of food in Vienna have advanced by leaps and bounds. Coal is becoming scarcer and dearer, just as winter is approaching. Clothing has doubled in price. And altogether the immediate outlook for the great masses of the population is extremely dismal.

Much of the trouble is due to the army having taken nine-tenths of the strong, able-bodied laboring men from the city. Hardly any teamsters are left and great quantities of flour and provisions, and coal are lying in the railway warehouses and yards, causing a serious congestion. The situation is so serious that the City Council is taking steps to use the municipal street railways for carrying goods to the storekeepers in the city. Switch tracks are being laid to the mills and railway yards, at a cost of $60,000.

Another cause of the present high prices of food is manipulation by speculators, who are hiding large stores of provisions, and so creating an artificial shortage in the markets. Fresh butter recently went up to $1.25 a pound—at which price nobody could buy more than a quarter of a pound at a time—large stocks suddenly came on the market and prices fell at once to a dollar.

Convinced that huge stocks of foodstuffs were somewhere in existence in the city, the Vienna police made a thorough search of all the storage warehouses, resulting in some surprising discoveries. Among the provisions concealed in these places were hundreds of packages of rice, flour, sugar, cheese, canned foods, chocolate, currants, tea and coffee, and condensed milk. Steps are being taken to find out the owner, who will be prosecuted for conspiring to raise the price of food.

Although the new flour is now in the market, the supply in the retail bakeries is very limited. In the poorer suburbs people gather around the stores as early as 3 o'clock in the morning, and by 6 o'clock the crowds number anywhere from five hundred to a thousand persons, mostly women and children. The bakeries open at 7, and the sign of "sold out" is generally put up before 8 o'clock. Latecomers can get nothing. Many poor persons earn a couple of cents buying flour for their neighbours who do not care to stand for hours in the cold.

Since the military authorities requisitioned all the stocks of rubber tires in the country, and even took away those actually in use on the cars of private owners, automobiles have almost disappeared from the streets of Vienna. There are no more motor cabs.

CLUB WILL ENFORCE EARLY CLOSING

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Club held last evening a by-law prohibiting the sale of liquor after eight o'clock each evening was adopted unanimously. The new regulation will go into effect right away.

Spain has opened an aviation school near Madrid in which the government aids those receiving instruction.

$20,000 Will Likely Be County Grant

Either $16,000 or $20,000 will likely be the amount the County Council will decide upon as the County's contribution to the Red Cross. This will mean either $1,333 a month, or $1,666. The majority of the Finance Committee this afternoon seemed in favour of the larger sum. Some of the members in a precursory expression supported $2,000 a month. The report will be brought in Saturday, and will also deal with the exact period the collections will cover.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 2—USING THE EYES

THERE is very little of our daily work that we can sit down and do with our eyes shut. That means that good vision is absolutely necessary for every phase of the day's routine. If the eyes tire, if it is necessary to strain the eyes to make them serve their purpose, or if there is anything at all that makes you use a conscious effort to see clearly and naturally, then the eyes need help, and can be helped by good glasses. Unless you have such good eyes that you can use them all day long, and evenings as well, without, as you might say, knowing you have eyes, you should have the eyes examined by a competent eyesight specialist. Mr. Fowler takes a delight in so fitting his patrons' glasses as to render their vision perfect under every condition.

A PRECIOUS LESSON OF THE WAR.

Surprise is expressed in the despatches from London that the sudden and severe limitation of the hours in which intoxicants can be bought there has not caused anything like the amount of protest and resistance that had been expected or feared. Yet the apparent cheerfulness with which the new rules have been received and obeyed is not, after all, very surprising.

There would naturally be some reluctance on the part of anybody with a reputation worth saving to confess that the daily periods of permitted sales were not long enough for him to get all he needs or even wants to drink. And almost everybody else either belongs to the inarticulate class or his opinion is not considered deserving of attention.

Among the incalculable losses resulting from this great war there stands out prominently one benefit: It has brought to all the countries engaged in it—and to others—a realization such as they never had before of the relation between alcohol and efficiency. Something, and perhaps much, of that new knowledge is sure to remain after peace returns, for, of course, it is not only with success in fighting that strong drink interferes, or only in the war that men need to have all their wits about them all the time.—New York Times

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Howden announce the engagement of their only daughter, Florence Beatrice, to Mr. James D. Patterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Patterson, the marriage t ake place quietly the latter part of December.

The many friends of Mr. Frank Hurley, government grain inspector, Toronto, Ont., formerly of this city, who has been confined to St. Joseph's Hospital for some time, will be pleased to learn that his condition has greatly improved and he will be able to leave the hospital in a few days.

DISCOVERS HE VOTED ILLEGALLY 19 YEARS

ATCHISON, Kan., Nov. —That he is not an American citizen, but a subject of King George of England, was the discovery of W. B. Collett, a life-insurance agent here. Ever since his twenty-first year Collett, now past forty, has been voting and enjoying all the privileges of citizenship.

As a witness in the District Court, he stated he was born at Liverpool, England, but never had been naturalized because his father was an American citizen. When asked when his father became a citizen, Collett found it necessary to call his mother, and learned that his father received his final papers after Collett had passed the age of twenty-one, thus leaving the son a British subject until he went through the process of naturalization. Collett took out his first papers immediately

BROWNE—TODD.
At the St. James Methodist church parsonage on Wednesday, Dec. 1st, the wedding took place of Mr. Arthur Ira Browne to Miss Florence Todd, both of Cavan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Greatrix. Mr. and Mrs. Browne will reside in Cavan

GOODCHILD—HUNTER.
The marriage of Miss Marjorie Hunter, daughter of Mr. Joseph Hunter, Lansdowne street, and Mr. Wm. L. Goodchild of Toronto, was solemnized yesterday afternoon at two o'clock, by Rev. J. A. McKenzie, of Knox church, at the manse. The bride and groom were unattended. After the ceremony the happy couple with some friends partook of luncheon at the Empress Hotel. They left on the afternoon train for Toronto, where they will reside.

Lady Carson—Wife of Sir Edward Carson of Ulster "rebellion" fame, whose recent resignation from coalition British Cabinet became of differences of opinion on the question of the Dardanelles, nearly brought England into another Cabinet crisis.

The Serbian Army Is Not To Be Interned in Greece

Two Hundred Thousand Serbs Are Still on the Battle Line

Part of Serbian Army Cross the Frontier And Take Refuge in Greece

Will Not Be Disarmed Nor Interned But Will Be Allowed to Make Their Way Eastward Through Greek Territory and Rejoin Anglo-French Forces Near Gueveld.

ATHENS, Dec. 4.—Part of the Serbian army of Gen. Vassisch, retiring from the region of Monastir, have crossed the frontier and have taken refuge in Greece. These forces, it was semi-officially stated to-day, will neither be disarmed nor interned. On the contrary, they will be allowed to make their way eastward through Greek territory and rejoin the Anglo-French forces near Gueveli. With the fall of Monastir the Serbs have relinquished practically their last grip on Serbian territory. Both in the north and the south the Serbian armies have eluded their pursuers and have escaped intact across the Albanian frontier, fighting their way through snow-filled mountain passes. The retreat from Monastir was so well timed that only a few score of prisoners are reported to have fallen into the Teutons' hands. Those detachments from Gen. Vassisch's army that did not cross into Greece, are moving westward to form a junction with other Serb forces resting on the Albanian frontier. A picked band of Serbian comitadjis, noted for their bravery, made the last stand at Monastir and held off the hostile forces twenty times their size, Salonika despatches reported to-day. They harassed the advancing Teutons day and night leading them to believe they were opposed by a much larger force. In the final battle on the heights before Monastir this little force was slaughtered almost to the man, less than 160 of them being captured.

SLIGHTLY WOUNDED.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 4.—Field Marshal Von Mackensen was slightly wounded during the recent operations in Serbia, according to a Copenhagen despatch to the Novoe Vremya.

Two Mysteries of Present War Provided By Italy

LONDON, Dec. 4. —The Chronicle this morning in an editorial on Baron Sonnino's decuaration, says: "This tep on the part of Italy is not accompanied by a declaration of war on Germany, between whom and the southern kingdom there is still only a 'diplomatic rupture,' but the treaty robs this curious state of things of any dangerous significance. If Italy prefers not to resent formally the sinking of her ships by German submarines and the bombardment of her frontier troops by German artillery, that is mainly her affairs. She is already at war with Turkey and Bulgaria, as well as Austria-Hungary, and there is no practical likelihood of Germany's continuing at war with us after we have forced her three associates to make a peace."

Could Battery Foe's Navy.

In reference to the announcement that Italian troops are to cross the Adriatic, the Chronicle says: "These steps no doubt include such support as is necessary to buttress against Austrian attack on the heroic Montenegrins, and if they were extended to an offensive against Austria from that side they might produce considerable effect on the war. Why, for instance, Italians during all these months have permitted part of the Austro-Hungarian navy to shelter in Bocche Di Cattaro, when a few Italian heavy guns mounted on Montenegrin Mounts Lovchen could sink every one of them at anchor is one of the mysteries which we cannot pretend to fathom."

Quintuple Alliance.

The statement that Italy will not consider terms of peace until ravished Belgium and Serbia not only are avenged but made greater than ever has touched a responsive chord in London. "By this pronouncement," says the Daily Telegraph, "the quadruple entente becomes a quintuple alliance, whose troops will not cease to fight until the power of German militarism is broken and the forces of freedom triumph."

Attack on Strategic Policy.

Rome, Dec. 4.—Yesterday's session of the Italian Parliament was marked by a bitter attack upon the allies' strategic policy in the Balkans by Deputy Treves, official spokesman of the Socialist party. He asserted that "shortsightedness" had lost the advantage that the Entente powers would otherwise have had. Though the government permitted the debate to proceed without attempting to stifle the personal opinions of the members, Premier Salandra promptly replied to all attacks made directly against the Italian government.

While Treves was talking, he was interrupted by Deputy Orland, who cried: "What is our navy doing?"

Cause of War.

"The conviction is now general," said Treves, "that the war is due to antagonism between German and English imperialism, the former dominating matter, and the latter space. What is happening," he added, "is this: After the two great rivals (Germany and England) have torn themselves and covered with grief the ruins of the world, the prize of victory will be wrested from both. An outsider has arisen —the winner of winners looms in the distance. It is America."

Greece Concedes The Demands

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The correspondent of the Morning Post telegraphs from Athens:

"Greece having conceded all the demands of the Entente Powers, the military attaches of the Allies and members of the Greek general staff are conferring about the withdrawal of Greek troops from Salonika, the Allies having given a pledge that in return for these concessions the sovereignty of Greece in all the territory affected will be not only recognized, but guaranteed."

CHRISTMAS ARMISTICE AT THE FRONT

Pope Hopes to Overcome Obstacles Met With Last Year.

ROME, Dec. 4.— Hopes that Pope Benedict will be successful in his efforts to win the warring powers over to his plan for a Christmas armistice are increasing daily at the Vatican.

It became known to-day that the Papal Secretary of State is in constant touch with the Nuncios in France, Spain, Austria and Bavaria. The Pope is working to remove the obstacles that blocked his path in 1914.

Germany Seizes A Quantity of Cattle

Austria Evidently to be Fed from the Balkans.

LONDON, Dec. 4.— A Copenhagen despatch to Reuter's says that Germany has stopped all transit of cattle from Denmark and the Scandinavian countries to Austria. Local Austrian buyers state that all their transports of live cattle to Austria in the last fortnight have been seized by the German authorities.

It is the opinion that an agreement exists between Austria and Germany that as the first result of the Balkan campaign Austria should get all her supplies from the Balkans, leaving Germany the sole rights to provisions from the north.

Some ministers who may not be guilty of the same form of folly as that described in the following incident nevertheless deserve the same stinging rebuke:

A parson who paid more attention to the pleasures of life than to his sermons was taken to task for his worldliness by a Quaker friend. The rebuke was none the less effective for being tactful.

"Friend," said the Quaker, "I understand thee's clever at fox-catching."

"I have few equals and no superiors at that sport," the parson replied, complacently.

"Nevertheless, friend," said the Quaker, "if I were a fox I could hide where thee would never find me."

"Where would you hide?" asked the parson with a frown.

"Friend," said the Quaker, "I would hide in thy study."—Exchange.

Germans Give Out Report of Big Defeat of British

On the Tigris in the Fighting Between the British Forces and the Turks in Mesopotamia

BERLIN, Dec. 5. — The Overseas News Agency yesterday gave out for publication the following concerning the fighting between the British forces and the Turks in Mesopotamia:

"The Turkish headquarters report of December 2 says the Turkish troops on the Irak front are pursuing the British in order to make their defeat more complete.

"The British losses in the engagement from November 23 to November 26 exceeded 5,000 men and officers. The soldiers, demoralized, left their regiments and fled to neighbouring points.

"The British one day carried off about two thousand nine hundred wounded. Among the wounded is the political agent in the British headquarters, Sir Komel.

"The British were unable to stop their retreat in the strongly fortified town of Azizi. They therefore tried to halt fifteen kilometres (9.32 miles) southwest of this town, with their rear guards protected by monitors, but a sudden Turkish attack on the night of November 30 forced them further back in the direction of Kut-el-Amara, 170 kilometres (106.60) miles south of Bagdad.

"The Turks took, in Azizi and its neighbourhood large stores of victuals, ammunition and war material. Turkish patrols captured 100 camels belonging to the British. The enemy was unable to set fire even to a small part of his war material. The British left the personal belongings of their officers behind. This proves the magnitude of their defeat.

"The Turks captured a war motor boat lighter with foodstuffs and war material. The eeing British threw boxes of ammunition into the Tigris River.

"The British in order to conceal their defeat on the Irak front told the population of the surrounding territory that they had concluded peace. But the rapid prosecution of the fighting revealed the real state of things.

"Three aeroplanes of four taken from the enemy have been repaired and are being used against the enemy."

"Reports from the Irak (Mesopotamian) front state that British troops which on November 23 entered the region of Ctesiphon killed six persons who were engaged in service at the mausoleum of a Turkish saint. When the Turks recaptured the position three days later, the mutilated bodies of these persons were found near the mausoleum."

The Bulgarians Have Already Lost One Hundred Thousand Men

Owing to Activities of the Serbian Guerilla Parties There is No Railway Communication Between Belgrade and Constantinople—Brief Despatches.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 4.—The Government has decided to increase the loan to a hundred millions, which is already subscribed.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Sofia despatches indicate that the Bulgarians have already lost a hundred thousand men, and there is much uneasiness there.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 4.—German newspapers say Brand Whitlock, U.S. Ambassador to Belgium, will not be allowed to return in that capacity.

BERLIN, Dec. 4. — Owing to the activities of the Serbian guerilla parties there is no railway communication between Belgrade and Constantinople.

ROME, Dec. 4.—It is stated officially that two hundred thousand Serbs are still in the battle line.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—It was officially announced yesterday that the United States Government had demanded the recall of Captain Boy-Ed and Captain Von Hapen, of the German Embassy here, because of their recent activities.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Allies' transports continue to land thousands of troops on Greek soil for the Balkan operations.

ATHENS, Dec. 4.—The progress of German and Bulgarian armies through Serbia, and bad weather, delayed by Anglo-French forces.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Terrific artillery shelling by the Allies all along the western front raised the predictions of another advance.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 4.—Bad weather has prevented active operations on all parts of the eastern front.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—A Bucharest despatch last night says the Austrians have evacuated Lemberg owing to an epidemic of scurvey. The victims of the disease number two hundred fresh cases daily.

SALONIKA, Dec. 4.—The Allies have decided to take prompt measures regarding Greece, so the Greek army cannot be put into a position to menace the Allied army.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—A despatch from Gibraltar reports the sinking of a submarine in the Straits of Gibraltar yesterday by British batteries on European points.

CANADA'S EXPORTS INCREASE DURING WAR TIMES

Enterprising Drug Company is Reaching out into New Territory

Cuba, the West Indies, Central and South America Now Getting Well-Known Canadian Products.

In many lines of drugs and chemicals, Germany had the world's market in her hands. With the war, the German and Austrian sources were cut off and the prices of drugs have increased some 50, some 100 and some 1,000 per cent.

The large proprietary medicine firms have, as a consequence, had their profits greatly reduced because they have refused to increase the prices of their preparations to the public.

This has naturally caused them to make an effort to increase business by taking on new territory. As an illustration we may refer to the Dr. Chase Medicine Co., whose representative, Mr. P. R. Cumming left Toronto on Tuesday last for an extended trip through Cuba, The West Indies, Central America, including Honduras, Costa Rica and Panama, Columbia, Venezeyla, British, French and Dutch Guiana in South America.

On account of the extensive sales of Dr. Chase's medicines throughout Canada and the United States, there has developed a certain amount of direct trade in all parts of the world. The present undertaking is to consolidate this trade and by appointing agents in all these places, to establish business throughout these countries on a lasting basis.

As Mr. Cumming is well acquainted with the drug trade throughout the West Indies and South America it is expected that his trip will meet with success, and that these medicines will find a further field of usefulness.

CZAR'S LIFE IN THE FIELD

Rises Early, and Puts in a Simple But Strenuous Day.

The Czar, at the head of his armies in the field, leads a life of exemplary simplicity. General Doubensky, a distinguished member of the Imperial staff, states that the Emperor lives in a small two-storied house. On the first floor are a couple of rooms, one big Majesty's bedroom and the other his office. On the ground floor are the Aide-de-Camp General, the Court Marshal, and the Czar's private surgeon.

The servants are reduced to the smallest possible number, the Czar's valet and a few footmen. Here is an example of a day in the life of the Emperor: His Majesty rises early, and shortly after 9 o'clock leaves the house dressed in national costume—a Russian blouse, held at the waist by a leather belt, and top boots. His first visit is to the headquarters staff, with whom he confers on the situation and examines the reports which have come in from the front during the night. His Majesty, in addition to the official reports, receives telegraphic accounts of important engagements.

By his side works General Alexeieff, studying the course of events by the aid of large maps spread out before them. About midday the Emperor returns to his quarters for luncheon. Besides the ten or twelve persons usually at the Imperial table there are always some guests—allied military attaches, officers from the general staff, and other distinguished persons. Luncheon is a short and simple meal. During the meal the Emperor talks with all his guests.

About 2 o'clock his Majesty returns to his office and is again absorbed in despatches and reports. The afternoon is broken by a short Motor car excursion, and after that work continues uninterruptedly till dinner which is served at half-past seven.

At 9 o'clock the Czar retires to his room and again resumes the study of official communications from the front. This work frequently keeps him employed far into the night.

Should any important event occur after the Emperor has gone to bed, General Alexeieff immediately informs him.

Using radio-active phenomena for the basis of their calculations, two British scientists believe that the world is at least 711,000,000 years old.

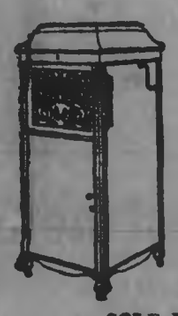
Music Through a Diamond
Mr. Edison's Secret

The Wonderful Diamond Stylus Reproducer is the secret by which Mr. Edison has made of the phonograph a real musical instrument. It brings out all those overtones and fine shades of sound that give volume, purity and richness to the tone. Creates at last what all music lovers have been waiting for—a tone that can really be called true-to-life, human and natural.

New Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph



In this perfected musical instrument Mr. Edison has finally solved all the difficulties which have baffled others in the past. He has eliminated the harshness, the mechanical timbre, the metallic sound. So marvellously life-like is its tone that, closing the eyes, one can scarcely distinguish the reproduction from the original. In Mr. Edison's own words, this is "Real Music at Last."

No Needles to Change

The Diamond Stylus Reproducer eliminates the bothersome process of changing needles, which wear out and destroy valuable records. This finely polished Diamond Stylus simply floats over the sound grooves of the New Edison records, reducing wear to a minimum. Call and hear the New Edison. Learn why it is looked upon everywhere as the beginning of a new era in music. Its tone will be a revelation to you. We will be glad to play any one of the great library of Edison Records for you without any obligation.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

AN EMPIRE CABINET IS NEEDED IN MOTHERLAND

Walter Crotch, Famous Literateur, Says Dominions Should Have Say in Empire's Future Actions

It has been abundantly manifest that changes in the Government were bound to take effect. The nation has not been at fault. The rank and file of our people have done all, and more than all, that has been required of them. To-day they are ready for any further sacrifice that the Empire's needs may demand. Tell them what to do and it will be done. They are still of that splendid bull-dog breed in whom Charles Dickens once said his faith was limitless.

And quite without wanting to say a single sentence which would encourage disruption or harass his Government, "the man in the street" was beginning to get an impression that the Coalition Government — well meaning and sincere as it doubtless was—was a little unwieldy; too large and cumbersome to effect swift decisions which appear nowadays to be inevitable for a successful prosecution of war. "But what are we to do?" has been the immediate inquiry. "We have got our best brains now; how can we do more?" Even in view of impending changes that question is not sufficiently answered. It seems to me that we have not yet exhausted all our resources or all our reserves of energy. We are still "citizens of no mean Empire," and emphatically the British race is not decadent; we are not played out. The people down at Westminster do not represent all, or anything like all, the genius of the Anglo-Saxon. Out yonder in the vast continent of Australia; across the Atlantic; on the plains of Canada, are men of proven capacity, tried grit, and high character. It is these men that I suggest we should now call to our counsels and aid.

The Solution of the Matter

Despite all the changes which have now been foreshadowed, I still stand by the suggestion I made weeks ago. Let there be a new inner Cabinet formed, representative of the whole Empire. The King has the power to appoint what ministers he choses. Let him draw on the best and most brilliant among our Colonial statesmen. They would bring fresher intelligence, newer ideas, simpler and more thorough-going methods to the task in hand. Their minds would be free from the old party obsessions, the old ane-conceived ideas that still haunt the brains of most of our politicians; above all, they would realize the need, the supreme need, of adequate action. Any paralyzing parochialism or insularity would leave them untouched. They would know nothing and care nothing for the "influences" of London society—those influences that spell too often nepotism, jobbery, corruption.

They would come fresh to their task; they would look at it with clear eyes, undimmed by party or by local considerations; they would see through to the heart, to the essential needs of the moment, and they would act—swiftly, adequately, surely!

Such an inner Cabinet as I propose would be representative of all the peoples of the Empire; as a symbol alone it would be magnificently imposing. Canada, Australia, India—all would share its labors, all would work together, loyalty typifying the strength, the solidarity, the purposefulness of the British race. Such a Cabinet should be small—and should possess executive powers. It could report from time to time to the large and existing Cabinet, which might remain for consultative purposes, but it should always be free to act with swiftness where required. Think of the elements of strength it would possess!

Old Antagonists Allied

Surely there is something stimulating, magical almost, in the idea of General Botha sitting cheek by jowl with his old antagonist Lord Kitchener! Surely there is something inspiring in the notion of Mr. Fisher, the brilliant Attorney-General (and the Premier designate) of the Commonwealth Parliament—the man who unmasked the great German conspiracy to capture spelter—coming across the seas to work for the Empire in Downing Street! Sir Robert Borden has already been "called in"—but only furtively. Surely he could be of more service if ensconced in one of the great Departments ex officio for the duration of the war!

The fact that South Africa, Canada and Australia had sent us their best, sent us men who were ready to act with the pick of our own Cabinet Ministers, would add enormously to that moral strength upon which all Cabinets and Governments rest. And India could be included also. The Empire Cabinet for which I plead be emphatically a business body. We should have the best men that our Empire could give us—and never did we need them more! For the issue before us is likely to test our Empire's strength to the uttermost.—John Bull

Settling Germany

A league to boycott Germany at once has been started by a prominent Parisian. Every member will pay a uniform sum, either monthly, quarterly, or annually, of one franc, which will be devoted to charity. In paying this subscription the subscriber will make a solemn declaration, and sign it, that he or she will not for the next twenty years shake hands with, enter into any friendly or business relations with, or willingly sit in the same room with any German, man or woman. Any backsliding will be punished with a heavy fine and social and business boycott in turn of the offender.

Aviators' Wind Guage

An aviator always lands in the teeth of the wind if he possibly can, because that is the only safe way of landing. In order that he will know which way the wind is blowing when he is in the air, and coming down, a piece of white canvas in the shape of a huge "T" is pegged out as the landing point. This "T" is about six feet across the top and six feet long, and the canvas itself two feet wide, so that it can be easily seen from a fairly good height. The "landing Tee," as it is called, is always set with the head towards the wind.

NERVOUS HEADACHE

Miss Evelena M. Risser, Dublin Shore, Lunenburg, N.S., writes:—"I suffered from severe headaches for two years. In fact, I had headaches day and night. My appetite was very poor and I frequently had pains in the back. After using a few boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food the headaches disappeared, appetite improved and I gained in health and strength. I am very thankful for the benefit obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, for I am well again after two years of misery."

The object of pain seems to be to give warning that something is wrong in the human system. For this reason, when you have a headache, for instance, you should honestly seek for the cause.

Headache is not a disease in itself, but rather a symptom. If you find other indications that the nervous system is exhausted—if you are restless, nervous, sleepless and irritable—you may rightly suppose that to be the cause of the headache.

The headache warns you that with neglect of the nervous system you later expect nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia, or some form of paralysis. Wisdom suggests the use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to build up the system, and thereby remove the cause of the headache, as well as prevent more serious troubles.

The use of headache powders is not only a dangerous practice, but the shock to the system of drugs which are so powerful and poisonous as to immediately stop pain is most harmful. The relief is merely temporary, and with this danger signal removed the disease which caused the headache continues to develop until results are serious. The moral is, when you have headaches or pain of any kind look for the cause and remove it.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is not intended as a mere relief for headache. It cures by supplying the ingredients from which nature rebuilds and revitalizes the wasted nerve cells. Some patience is required for this reconstructive process, but the results are wonderfully satisfying, because they are both thorough and lasting.

If you would be freed from headaches, as was the writer of the letter quoted above, put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test. Working, as it does, hand in hand with Nature, it can no more fail than can other of Nature's laws.

THE EISTEDDFOD.

Great Welsh National Festival—A Remarkable Gathering.

"A oes heddwch?" (Is it peace?) Such is the time-honoured question which always opens the National Eisteddfod of Wales—the great congress which has for its object the preservation and cultivation of the Welsh national music, literature, speech, customs, traditions, and patriotic spirit.

In ordinary circumstances the united shout of the audience would be "Heddwch" (Peace), upon which the chief bard, in white vestments, with a chaplet of oak leaves and acorns circling his brow and a magnificent golden collar depending from his shoulders, sheaths the jewelled sword of (Eisteddfod) state and declares the festival to be peacefully opened—"in the face of the sun, the Eye of Light."

This year the Eisteddfod opened at Bangor mid the clash of war. The sword remained unsheathed, nor was the great question put. But the enthusiasm of the Welsh for the great congress of bards and musicians is in no way abated; for it is a festival which every Welshman loves.

The Eisteddfod—pronounced ee-stethvod—literally translated means "session," and is declared by some to have existed for centuries before the dawn of the Christian era. The festival was certainly very popular before the conquest of Wales, the native princes lending aid. In very early times contests took place at Caerwys, in Flintshire, and at other towns, when degrees were conferred upon the successful competitors, the honors thus won procuring the bards ready admittance into the castles of the Welsh princes and nobles. From which it would appear that the Eisteddfod is really a survival of the old-time minstrel competitions of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. Although for nearly a couple of centuries the contests seem to have been discontinued they were ultimately revived with the greatest enthusiasm.

The Eisteddfod usually lasts three days, and is chiefly taken up with hearing and judging companies and individuals who render vocal and instrumental music. It has been the means of introducing to the public more than one famous vocalist and musician. Thus Mr. Ben Davies was a noted prize-winner at local Eisteddfodau before he went to the Royal Academy of Music; and several other eminently successful performers on our concert platform were first brought into public notice at the Welsh National Festival.

A great feature is "pennillion" singing. A performer on the Welsh harp gives the melody, probably original, at any rate unfamiliar to the singer, who must sing with the music, keeping time and tune with the harpist.

Three Brothers.

The following example of ready wit appears in "The Memoirs of Lord Charles Beresford": When in December, 1897, on the death of Sir Frank Lockwood, the seat of York became vacant Beresford stood for the election and was opposed by Sir Christopher Furness, afterward Lord Furness. The contest was close and exciting, and eventually won by Lord Charles with a narrow majority of eleven, after two counts, on a poll of over 11,000 votes. He says:

My brothers, Lord William and Lord Marcus, were helping me. Lord Marcus accompanied me to a meeting, and I told him that he must make a speech.

"I can't," he said. "I don't know what to say."

I told him to begin, because he would surely be interrupted and then, being an Irishman, he would certainly find something to say. Lord Marcus thereupon rose to his feet, and a voice immediately shouted:

"Who are ye?"

It was enough. The fire was kindled.

"Who are we?" cried Lord Marcus. "I'll tell you who we are. We are three brothers, and our names are Shadrach, Meslach, and Abednego, and we have come here to put out the burning fiery Furness."

Black and White.

To play this game one player is chosen as leader, the rest are divided into equal parties. Each player in one party should tie a handkerchief on the left arm to indicate that he belongs to the whites; those in the other division are called the blacks. The players stand around the ground, the whites and the blacks being mingled together.

The leader is provided with a flat disk, which is white on one side and black on the other, and hung on a short string to twirl around. He stands on a stool and twirls the disk, stopping on one side visible to the players. If the whole side should be visible the whites may tag any of the opponents who are standing upright.

Should the black side be shown, the party of blacks may tag the whites. Any player tagged drops out of the game. The party wins which puts out in this way all of its opponents.

How to Make a Panel Mirror.

If you have a room in which you can use the panel mirrors you can achieve charming effects. Select the space where you wish to place your mirrors, measure it and have the mirror cut at a glass cutter's. He will sell you the mirror at so much per square foot, and it will be far cheaper than anything you could purchase already framed. Buy a simple molding, set the glass against the wall, fasten the molding firmly around it, and you will have a panel mirror at half the price a decorator would have charged you.

Glasses cut to fit old picture frames make charming hanging mirrors and are easy to set.

How to Clean Bed Springs.

Take an old dish mop and dip in kerosene oil; wring it out and use in each small space of the springs. It will save your hands many a scratch, remove all dust, and at the same time prevent your springs from rusting.

To remove a ring from the finger when too tight put the finger in perfectly cold soapsuds.

Stuffed Tomatoes with Rice.

Cut a slice from the stem end of 6 round tomatoes and remove the seeds. Wash ½ cup of rice, put in a double boiler with 1 pint of highly seasoned stock and 1 tablespoon of finely cut green pepper and cook until nearly done, then stir in carefully 4 tablespoons of melted butter. Fill the tomatoes with the rice, cover the tops with buttered crumbs and bake about half an hour.

Grape Glace.

Boil two pints of water and one of sugar 15 minutes, then add two tablespoons of granulated gelatine. When cool, add the juice of two lemons, the stiffly beaten white of an egg, and four tablespoons of whipped cream. Put a little of this at a time into individual moulds and when firm cover with pitted cherries and another layer of the gelatine mixeure. Continue until the mould is full. Chill and serve with whipped cream.

Egg and Lettuce Salad.

Allow 2 eggs to each person and boil eggs 15 minutes. Chill Quarter or slice upon a flat dish or platter which has been covered with lettuce and cut in narrow strips with scissors. Slice 10 or more stuffed olives, scatter over eggs and add mounds of cooked dressing at intervals over the whole. Sprinkle with paprika and serve ice cold.

MAKE YOUR HAIR CURLY AND WAVY-OVER NIGHT!

To curl the hair without at the same time burning the life out of it, nothing equals plain liquid almerine. If a little be applied to the hair with a clean tooth brush before retiring, the loveliest wavy effect imaginable will be in evidence in the morning. It will also be found an excellent dressing for the hair.

This simple method is not to be compared with curling by means of a hot iron because instead of injuring the hair, it is really beneficial. A few ounces of the liquid, which may be procured at any drug store, will last for months. One can curl the hair in any style desired and the effect will be one of perfect naturalness. The best way is to divide the hair into strands and moisten each of them from root to tip. The hair will be beautifully glossy, yet without the least greasiness or stickiness.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7429

Simple without being severe, this dress is a very attractive one for wear in the street with the new long coats. The waist is without trimming other than the wide ornamental collar which finishes the open neck. The closing is in the centre of the front. The sleeves are plain and fitted to the arm. At the wrist they flare a trifle, coming well over the hand.

The skirt has three gores in the lower portion and these are shaped at the lower edge but straight at the upper. They are joined to the one piece yoke, which fastens in the centre of the front. For facility in fitting it may be seamed in the centre of the back, if desired, but the seamless yoke is smarter.

This is one of the many simple dresses shown for wear beneath long coats. It will be very effective in a plain color, especially if velveteen is used. The collar and cuffs may then be made of a heavy open lace, or of a fine, embroidered organdie. With serge a plaid silk will make effective trimming.

The dress pattern, No. 7,429, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3¾ yards of 44 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

WHERE REAL MEN ARE MADE

Sioux City Journal: If Mr. Average Citizen were asked to enumerate Sioux City's factories, he probably would fail to name one of the most important of all, not because he does not realize its importance as an institution, but because perhaps he does not thing of it as a manufacturing industry. Yet that is exactly what it is—the Y. M. C. A.—and its product is young men with character.

Once upon a time a poet asked the question, "What constitutes a state?" Then the habit of being not uncommon with poets, he proceeded to give his own answer, towit: Not high raised battlements or other improvements of material nature, but men—read-blooded, stiff spined, clear- conscienced men. Paraphrase the poet's query into "What makes a city?" Let the answer be—not vast stock yards, nor great packing houses, nor tall smokestacks, nor screeching whistles—all good assets in their way—but men, the same red blooded, stiff-spined, clear conscienced men

As proud as the second city in Iowa is of its home made flour and crackers and candies and cigars and pens and brooms and overalls and ice cream and butter and a thousand and one other things, in no other one product can it feel such a thrill of pride as that with which it points to the young man of the right kind who bears the label, "Made in Sioux City." It is young men of just that sort that are keeping things moving at the Y. M. C. A. That's why the Y. M. C. A. is a good thing for Sioux City and any other town.

To the Girls.

Girls, be honest, be true, be modest, but do not use affection. Take pattern from the true women around you who are living good, noble lives. Read the biographies of those good women who have made themselves great. There have been many women who have been famous who have been great in intellect and yet their lives have not been true and good.

Read good books. No one reads a good book without becoming, in some way, better by it. Some one says: "Show me what you read and I will tell you what you are." Read histories, study good authors, read fiction if you like, but let it be good moral fiction. Something that's true to life, and not sensational. Above all, read the Bible, God's Holy Word. Our guide in this life to the life that is to come.

Do you live in the country? Then learn to appreciate the blessings of a country life. There are many blessings and advantages in such a life that the city cannot have. Go to work in earnest, and make yourself what you should be. Do not live in the city? Then you, too, should be satisfied. The city, too, has its advantages. You have access to superior schools, to libraries, to lectures. Then profit by them. Throw out your good influence wherever you may be, remembering in both city and country we should work together, and that day by day we are sowing seed, either good or bad, of which we shall reap the harvest somewhere in the bye and bye

WHEN THE LITTLE FELLER GRINS.

They ain't much to a baby till it gets to know yer face
An' pesters till you take it an' lug it
'round th' place,
An' grabs at yer whiskers with pudgywudgy hands,
Th' time a gran'dad's gladness and tickledness begins
Is when th' little feller looks up at him an' grins.
His grin shows that he knows ye, and trusts ye as a friend—
A baby isn't growed-up an' never can pretend
His eyes has honest twinkles an' you somehow know they start
From 'way down in th' goodness that's beatin' in his heart
It's confidence he gives you without no outs and ins,
When he begins to dimple an' looks at you an' grins
They ain't much to a baby, but in its grin you know
You're seein' lots of sunshine you lost long, long ago;
It makes you feel religious—a baby's heart is clean,
An' when it gives its favor its purpose isn't mean—
You think th' Lord's forgiven a hull lot o' your sins
When that fat little feller looks up at you an' grins.—Nesbit.

KEEPING FAMILIES TOGETHER.

By the latest report mother's pension laws, or laws carrying the same effect have been enacted in twenty-one states for the support of children whose fathers are dead or in prison or asylums or physically incapacitated, or have deserted their families. These laws, while differing somewhat in form and application, all tend to reduce the burden on mothers left without visible means of support in bringing up their children. It is believed that these laws will have a good effect in improving social conditions by keeping together families and affording them support, where otherwise they would be separated and scattered, or they members become charges on charity directly.

When a man is a success he claims the credit; when he is a failure he finds some woman to blame for it.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

Costumes For Shopping and Afternoon Tea

HIP DRAPERIES AND PANTALETTES

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Christmas is in the air! We are reminded of its nearness at every street corner; even the most matter-of-fact among us must feel in spirit and anticipate its cheer. Safe and sane Christmas shopping has been preached for ages but, nevertheless, each year sees the same crowd in the shops and hear the same question on every side "what shall I give for Christmas?" It is easily answered this year if the intended recipient is feminine. There are all sorts of warables that may be laid at the dainty maid's door on Christmas morning to be received with little exclamations of delight.

The Shopper's Costume

If one has time to tarry a moment or two at the main entrance of one of the big shops on one of these busy afternoons, they will have a revelation in clothes. Serge rules in the matter of suits and simple frocks; furs are much in evidence and never have we had a season when they were so becoming and so much within the reach of all pocketbooks. There are wide soft collars and cuffs; small round muffs, and any number of other accessories which may be made at home if desired, and added to the suit of serge to enhance its charm and style. Scarcely a suit or frock, passing in and out of its Christmas mission, but shows this touch of fur; braid, too, is having its day of tunic and coat; one cannot but remark the wonderful varieties in collars and sleeves. The majority of the suits show the high collar, and many of the dresses too, although one often glimpses beneath top-coat, and suit-coat, a dainty sheer blouse of crepe de Chine or crepe Georgette with open throat, dainty in its softness. The flare is the thing on collars, cuffs, tunics, coat edges and skirt henms. On many of the rippling coats and skirts, tape holds the ripples gracefully in place; this tape is arranged around the lower edge of the lining and is in the same color; oftentimes too narrow taffeta or picot-edged ribbon is used instead of tape.

In the Way of Sleeves.

There is the leg-o'-mutton, the gauntlet sleeve, in many variations, the bell sleeve, the angel sleeve, and the sleeve gathered at armhole and wrist. It is quite a novelty, the sleeve gathered into the armhole; and it is true to its old-time inspiration, even to the slight puff at the shoulder.

One of the most graceful sleeves of all is the gauntlet with wide, tight-fitting cuff, flaring slightly over the hand. The ugliest hand in the world must gain in grace with such a cuff.

© McCALL

The full gathered sleeves are particularly graceful and pretty in the transparent fabrics now so much favored for sleeves in all sorts of frocks.

The serge coat dress is a general favorite for shopping and street wear. A particularly chic model is made with long, pointed tunic, gauntlet sleeves, high collar and a novel surplice closing. Blue serge trimmed with small braid-covered buttons and loops and a wide band of Hercules braid edging the tunic is the most attractive combination.

THE HOT FOOT BATH

There is nothing like a hot foot bath to tranquilize the nervous system after a siege of prolonged study, literary labour or other intellectual activity at night. The bath should be taken every night, for about 10 or 12 minutes, before going to bed, and the water should be as hot as can be borne. Let the water come well over the ankles. It will cause the blood vessels in the feet to fill and afford almost instant comfort and soothing effect, as it withdraws blood pressure from the overstimulated brain. This induces relaxation and eases the mental tension, quieting the nervous system, so that sleep is promoted, says an exchange writer.

It is necessary to keep the water up to the highest temperature at which it can be borne for at least ten minutes, by adding hot water as the temperature of the foot bath becomes lower.

Some Nice Salads

Stuffed Tomato Salad—Peel medium-sized tomatoes. Remove thin slices from top of each and take out seeds and some of pulp. Sprinkle inside with salt and let stand half an hour. Fill tomatoes with cucumber, cut in small cubes and mixed with mayonnaise dressing. Arrange on lettuce leaves and garnish top of each with mayonnaise dressing.

Hindoo Salad—Arrange four slices tomato on a bed of shredded lettuce. On two of the slices pile strand celery, on the opposite slices finely cut watercress. Garnish with small pieces of tomato, shaped with circular cutter and serve with French dressing.

Prune and Pecan Salad—One-quarter pound prunes, 1-4 pound pecan nut meats, 1-2 head lettuce, 4 tablespoons oil, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1-4 teaspoon salt or more. Soak prunes over night in cold water; let cook on the back of the range until tender and no longer), when the water should be pretty thoroughly evaporated. When cold, cut from the stones in lengthwise pieces. Cut the nuts in slices lengthwise. Mix the oil, lemon juice and salt and pour over prunes and nuts. Mix and turn upon the lettuce. Serve with roast meats or with bread and butter.

WORTH REMEMBERING

To remove stains from a tiled hearth squeeze a little lemon juice over the stain, leave for 20 minutes, then with a cloth dampened with a little warm water, wipe off the lemon juice. This will generally remove the stain; if not repeat the process. Polish afterwards with a soft cloth.

HAD LUNG TROUBLE FOR 2 YEARS

READ THIS

Copeland Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto. Four years ago I had a hemorrhage, and since then two others. I was examined by three doctors, who all said that I had consumption and was for a long time afterwards examined periodically by the City doctor and visited by City nurses. However, I continued to lose weight and showed but little sign of improvement until I read your advertisement and had taken three-quarters of the first bottle of your medicine. It was then that I brought up great quantities of phlegm and other matter from my lungs. When I was next examined by the City doctor I was told that there was but little wrong with me. From that time I have had no need to use your medicine, but have recommended it to many others, and would like to do everything in my power to help it become well known, in gratitude for what it did for me.

THE CYCLONE

THE fury and danger of the Cyclone is nothing compared to the distruction levied by the mail order business. The havoc caused by this evil will never be known. It can not be reckoned in figures. One well-known mail order house alone issued and circulated in one year twenty million catalogs. Towns have been wiped out of existence, land values wrecked, farms depopulated and business brought to a standstill. Thinking people of all classes—farmers, merchants, manufacturers—are now alive to the danger and have begun work to counteract its effects. Every town is urged to wage a campaign of education to arouse the thought of the people. The imaginary, long-distance bargain has never yet measured up to the standard and value of HOME-bought goods.

...ENDEROUS CANADA

England Recognizes Dominion's Generosity to the Red Cross

Every day brings fresh proof of the remarkable zeal with which the people of Canada have responded to the call of "Our Day," says the London Times editorially. The full amounts of their gifts are not yet known, but enough has been published already to reveal their splendid generosity. Thus in Toronto alone, as our Canadian correspondent has told us, cash subscriptions to the amount of £165,000 have been received, and the returns are still incomplete. The total figures for the Province of Ontario are expected to reach £300,000. These great totals are only typical of the liberality of other parts of the Dominion. Nor are they isolated instances of that liberality. They come to us in addition to the abundant gifts of the past year. Last March we noted the fact that, besides numerous offerings in kind, Canada had contributed £22,000 to The Times Fund. In September another £10,000 was sent. These contributions have come not only from the purses of the rich, but from the people of all classes. They are the spontaneous offerings of men and women to whom the Red Cross as a symbol pointing the way in which they may help the Empire. In this country we see daily sad signs of the wreckage that war is making of so pitifully many of the best of our men. Though the greater part of it is still hidden from us, there is enough before our eyes to keep us always aware of the bitter truth. Canadians have no such pathetic reminders. The more honor to them that distance cannot blunt their understanding or make them deaf to the call for help. Common sorrow draws close the bonds of brotherhood. So it is with us and them, for they have shown that they realise the privilege of that community and are determined to bear their full share of its burdens.

The equipment of all vessels landing passengers at its ports with wireless telegraph apparatus has been made compulsory by the Government of Uruguay.

20 MINUTES

That's all. Twenty minutes after taking a ZUTOO tablet your headache will be gone.

One of these little tablets—safe, reliable and harmless as soda—will cure any headache in 20 minutes.

Or, better still, taken when you feel the headache coming on, a ZUTOO tablet will ward it off—nip it in the bud.

No Headache

FOR BUSY READERS

For the first time on record the National Debt of England is over a thousand million pounds sterling.

Over $150,000 has been added to the Australian war funds by Mme. Melba's concerts.

The total staff of the Press Bureau is 123, including two directors and forty censors. Each director receives a salary of $5,000 per annum.

Over $7,500 has been collected in coppers in Monmouthshire for ambulance funds by the Hon. Lady Herbert and a number of helpers.

Over 2,000 members of the London Stock Exchange are either on active service or directly employed by the Government on war work.

One of the social problems to be faced after the war is that there are upwards of a million girls now between sixteen and twenty who will never be married.

Pensions for disabled Canadians vary from $75 to $265 a year. A British private can get as much as $325 a year pension for his wounds, according to their nature.

Some idea of the cost of the Red Cross organization may be gathered from the fact that the fleet of motor ambulances at the front alone costs $1,000,000 a year.

In the lonely districts of East Anglia the approach of Zeppelins is heralded by means of the wild commotion among the birds, which are sensitive to the vibration long before the airship engines can be heard by human scouts.

It is computed that 7,000 men connected with the moving picture business in the British Isles have enlisted in the new armies. Two holders of the Victoria Cross were formerly employed in the film trade, some of the leaders of which now propose to start a crusade to raise $150,000 to provide a complete motor convoy for the front.

Russian moving picture companies have received many orders from London recently for films of Russian origin. The Russian moving picture repertoire is very rich in historical dramas, but since war broke out the market has been short of comic films because they were mostly supplied by Germany. This is a good opportunity for the British companies to supply Russia with films of this kind.

New Hun Playing Cards

German war enthusiasm has recently found vent in the banishment from Berlin of the conventional playing cards, and the substitution of specially printed packs in which the traditional kings, queens, and knaves, have been superseded by portraits of war celebrities. The idea is not exactly new, similar "patriotic packs" having made their appearance during the last Franco-Prussian War. Many years later the Kaiser had a number of so-called "royal packs" printed, from his own designs. One of these bears the portrait of Queen Victoria, as queen of hearts. The Kaiser figures as the king of hearts, while to the Pope is allotted the kingship of spades. By a pretty bit of irony, the knaves are represented by four European statesmen; Lord Beaconsfield, then Britain's Premier, being knave of clubs.

Good King Germanel

Two-thirds of the total number of girl pupils at Euphrates College, the American institution at Harpott, have been taken away to Moslem harems or killed. Six out of every seven of the boys have been exiled or slain. Four of the seven professors have suffered similar fates. Professor Tenekjian was killed after the hair of his head and beard had been torn out in torture. This is the sort of thing German Kultur encourages.

MY TERRIBLE HACKING AND SPLITTING COUGH

WAS ENTIRELY CURED BY

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Clara Jackson, Huntsville, Ont., writes us under date of January 12th, 1915. "I take great pleasure in writing you concerning Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Last winter I contracted a very bad cough which troubled me all through the summer. This winter I started to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after taking three bottles I can truthfully say that I fell like another woman. The terrible hacking and splitting cough, and the dry sensation in my throat is entirely cured. I would certainly recommend it to anyone troubled with bronchitis or lung trouble. I have not words too grateful to give you."

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to the action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, combining as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs, roots and barks.

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and we claim that it is the best cure for a cough or cold that you can possibly procure. The thousands of testimonials we have received prove that our claim is right.

All we ask you is to see that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, and don't accept some no-account substitute.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c

Marimba Music

Marimba music is a new sensation to Canadian ears. Favorite compositions played on the marimba assume a new individuality—the effects obtained are brilliant and startling.

This little known Central American instrument has been one of the features of the San Francisco Fair, under the able presentation of the Hurtado Bros. of Guatamala, and the Columbia Company is the first to present its novel music in record form.

The marimba, as pictured above, is over twelve feet long and has wooden keys as in the xylophone and is played in a similar manner. Unlike it, however, each key of the marimba is equipped with a novel "resonator"—a triangular, wooden tube that reverberates with tremendous sonority as the key is struck.

Columbia Double-Disc Records No. A-1832, Suppe's "Poet and Peasant," and "Pique Dame," and No. A-1845, Strauss' "Blue Danube," and "The Three Jewels," two-step by Moreno are genuine musical novelties of extraordinary interest. The resonant, booming base-accords; the sparkling, vivid "trilling" as the scale is sharply ascended; the new impressiveness or gaiety each passage gains in this unique interpretation are delightful indeed and will give you that new thrill—marimba music at its best.

Your nearest Columbia dealer will gladly play them for you, without obligation, at your request. Price, 85c. each.

ITALIAN ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

Italian Alleged to Have Been Shot By His Employer.

PARRY SOUND, Dec. 4.—Arthur Richord Cassan, of Ryerson Township, is on trial before Chancellor Boyd for the murder of James Degeorge, a young Italian, who went to work for Cassan, at making railway ties, on September 8, and boarded with the family consisting of Cassan, his wife and little daughter. On September 14th Degeorge was in Whitehall for supplies, and this is the last seen of him alive, except by the Cassans. Action for the repossession of a horse and outfit bought by Degeorge partly on lien, led to a search and the body was found in a well. At the inquest the little girl testified that "Daddy shot Jimmy Degeorge."

Charles Rue, a neighbour, swore Cassan confessed to shooting the man with a revolver and, not killing him, had gone a mile and a quarter to borrow a rifle. He returned to find Degeorge trying to get up, and then shot him in the back.

Cassan, in his evidence, admitted borrowing the rifle, but flatly contradicted Rue as to the confession, seeking to infer that two other men named had committed the deed.

Frenzied Fiance

A thrifty farmer approached the stamp window at the village post-office. "Hev ye got eny postage cards?" he drawled.

"Yes."

"How much be they?"

BANISH BILE!

A bilious condition of the system is the result of inaction of the liver, often causing severe headache through the eyes and temples, culminating sometimes in nausea and vomiting, which is frequently followed by a bilious diarrhoea.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, when taken as directed, stimulates the peptic glands of the stomach and increases the contraction of its muscles from above downward. This action is communicated to the intestines and increases the flow of the intestinal juice, thus stimulating the ducts of the liver to pour out the bile, when it can be carried downward by the laxative action of the Salt, instead of remaining to clog up the liver and flow back into the stomach.

Thus, if a person who is subject to Biliousness and Bilious Headache will use Abbey's Effervescent Salt, the natural action of the Stomach, liver and intestine will be kept up and no bile can accumulate in the system.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE KISSING FETE.

By ROBERT C. WARNER.

The fete was a great success. Long before the hour announced for the beginning of the festivities crowds of people were flocking to the entrances of the park, and during the evening many thousands came and went. Of these there were the young and the older, married, the former as participants, the latter as spectators.

And what was the occasion of the fete? An edict had gone forth that between the hours of 8 and 12 any young man might kiss any girl in the park provided he wore in his cap a green feather. This provision was introduced to enable any girl opposed to strange embraces to take to flight on the approach of a would be kisser.

As the clock struck 9 two young girls entered the park arm in arm. One was tall and stately, with very black eyes, a cable of plaited black hair hanging down her back. The other was smaller, a blue eyed beauty, with hair of spun gold drifting in the breeze. They had no sooner passed the gate than green feathers began to flutter in their path. Many a young man approached, but was deterred by a repellent glance from the queenly brunette. For an hour the pair walked about the park watching the others. Now and again some young girl would suddenly dart away on seeing a youth approach whom she wished to avoid or to appear to avoid. Here and there would be heard suppressed screams and giggles, while smacks resounded like pistol shots.

But the two girls walked untouched. Many persons noticed them, but no one seemed to know them. It was supposed that they were of high degree, daughters of noblemen who had come to witness the kissing without taking part in it, and it was even whispered that they were from the court. But there were men present from the court, and none of them had ever seen the girls before. The people wondered why these gallants dared not offer to kiss two such beauties.

Near midnight a man with a black beard entered in company with one who appeared to be his son. It was apparent that both were disguised. Passing the two girls, they turned and looked at them, then, walking in a circle, met them again. At this second meeting the younger man darted toward the blue eyed girl. Seeing him coming, she left her companion and ran away. Those watching these unknown people then saw the older man approach the girl who was left. They expected that she would wither him with a glance. What was their surprise to see her after a faint resistance submit to be kissed. Then when he offered his arm she took it, and they walked on together.

"You are very bold," said the lady.

"Such beauty as yours would inspire boldness in a coward."

"You had no right to kiss me. You do not wear the green feather."

"True. I never thought of that. But such beauty as yours makes one forget."

"You may have a ladylove."

"Such beauty as yours would win me from her in spite of my best resolution."

"You do not deny that she exists."

"I do not. Whatever or whoever I am, I am no liar."

"But would you break a heart for a stranger?"

"It is she who is the stranger. I have never seen her."

"Never have seen her! What manner of man are you who woos without seeing her you woo?"

"I see her I woo. I have not seen her I have intended to make my bride."

"There comes my friend with your boy. I must rejoin her. This is but the adventure of an evening. Farewell."

"We will not part without the pledge of another meeting. Tell me when and where I may communicate with you tomorrow."

"You may call upon me tomorrow evening." She gave him the location of a villa where she said she lived. "But you will not. You will think of this affair overnight and resolve to be true to that which I surmise is to your interest."

"Wait and see."

The next evening the stranger drove up to the villa in question. He was ushered in by lackeys with every evidence of profound respect. He seemed surprised. In a sumptuous salon he was received by the lady who had so suddenly inspired him. She was smiling at him with an air of triumph.

"I am surprised to see your majesty," she began, but he interrupted her.

"Majesty!"

"Yes. You were known to me from the first."

"Who are you?"

"First let me know your royal decision. For me will you break with the Princess Margaret?"

"The Princess Margaret! What do you know of the Princess Margaret?"

"Will you cast her off for one you have seen but once?"

"I will wed no one at present. I ask to be permitted to pay my addresses to you with a view to raising you to a throne."

"So you are not so sure of this newborn love after all?"

"I am. I wish time to prepare my people for the change."

The lady turned her head aside. The king took one of her hands in his and poured forth a torrent of words. Suddenly she stopped him.

"I am the Princess Margaret."

"You the Princess Margaret!"

Grated Pumpkin Pie.

Half a pint of grated raw pumpkin, two and a half tablespoonfuls of good molasses. Put the molasses and the pumpkin on the stove and heat till hot. Add a cupful of sugar and mix a rounded tablespoonful of flour in two-thirds of a cupful of sweet cream and stir into the pumpkin, which has been cooling. Beat an egg and stir in last, season with nutmeg. Bake in one crust till done.

Hot Milk Cake.

Two eggs (yolks and whites beaten separately, then together), add one cupful sugar and beat with a spoon five minutes, one cupful flour, with one teaspoonful baking powder sifted in it, salt and a few drops lemon extract, one-half cupful quite hot milk with a piece of butter the size of a walnut melted in it added last. Mix well and bake in a slow oven.

Red Cabbage, Flemish Style.

Trim and quarter a red cabbage. Scald, drain, and chop fine. Simmer for an hour in a covered saucepan with a tablespoonful of butter, a chopped onion, a bay leaf, two cloves, salt and a small piece of red pepper. Stir occasionally, take out the bay leaf, add a tablespoonful of butter, and serve very hot.

The new water cure for bichloriditis will doubtless prove effectual if the patients are fortunate enough to rally from the water.

Washington is to stop the use of profanity on the streets. This is a cold and unsympathetic world for disappointed office seekers.

It is reported that King George liked the first poem of Poet Laureate Bridges. Possibly the king liked it because it was rather short.

Had Palpitation
OF THE HEART
ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WOMEN WHO ARE ALWAYS TIRED

May Find Help in This Letter.

Swan Creek, Mich.—"I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. When through neglect or overwork I get run down and my appetite is poor and I have that weak, languid, always tired feeling, I get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it builds me up, gives me strength, and restores me to perfect health again. It is truly a great blessing to women, and I cannot speak too highly of it. I take pleasure in recommending it to others."—Mrs. ANNIE CAMERON, R.F.D., No. 1, Swan Creek, Michigan.

Another Sufferer Relieved.

Hebron, Me.—"Before taking your remedies I was all run down, discouraged and had female weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash, and find today that I am an entirely new woman, ready and willing to do my housework now, where before taking your medicine it was a dread. I try to impress upon the minds of all ailing women I meet the benefits they can derive from your medicines."—Mrs. CHARLES ROWE, R. F. D., No. 1, Hebron, Maine.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

CONSCIENCE STRICKEN.

Well, anyhow, the things I said
To make the babies go to bed
Were well deserved! They romped and played
Until their mother seemed afraid
They never would turn in and rest
Away to Slumberland, and so
I did speak sharply to the two.
When I tell them what they're to do
They are supposed to do it—yet—
Why is it that I can't forget?

Why can't I banish from my view
The way they looked, the grief that grew
In their two faces, overspread
Their countenances? Curly Head
Stuck her wee underlip way out,
And sister girl stopped as in doubt
If dad had truly said the word
That she imagined she had heard,
And then they slowly backed away.
Too grieved for good night kiss or play.

Darn this month's magazine! Not one
Of all the stories that they run
Is worth the paper and the ink!
Don't people who write stories think?
Have they no brains? Have they a thought
That they can dish this sort of rot
Out to the public all the time
And always get the nimble dime?
I'll show them—wish I hadn't said
The words I did to Curly Head!

I wish I'd waited for awhile!
My babies' broken hearted smile
When they understood their dad
Had scolded them makes me feel bad.
It wouldn't have hurt me to do
A romp and play at peekaboo
With them awhile. It would beat this
I guess I'll go and sneak a kiss
If they're asleep in their white beds.
Lord bless their tousled curly heads!

As an Example.

"Photography is a strange profession," mused the young man.

"Because it develops negatives?" asks the young woman, with a knowing look.

"Not that exactly. But, as an example, the other day I had my picture taken in my riding togs—not on a horse, you know, but just standing in my riding outfit, with my crop held in my hand. And today the photographer writes me that the pictures are ready for me and that they are all mounted."

The Robins' Epitaph.

The two little granddaughters of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell were showing a new governess their treasures of house and garden. Behind a box hedge they paused.

"This is the place where our birds are buried," said one of the children.

At the head of a tiny grave was placed a white board. Printed on it in irregular characters with a lead pencil were these words:

"Here lie our Robins, one a week old, one only an egg."—Lippincott's Magazine.

More to Be Desired.

"That mountain," said the pessimistic director of the new railroad, "seems to have blocked our progress effectively."

"Oh, no," replied the chief engineer. "We still have faith in our ability to tunnel through it."

STATUE BLUNDERS.

Remarkable Errors in Inscriptions Placed on Memorials.

Most egregious blunders are often perpetrated on public monuments where one would think the utmost care would be taken to guard against them. When the statue to the Duke of Cambridge, for instance, which stands in the middle of Whitehall, opposite the War Office, was unveiled, it was found that its inscription simply bristled with errors.

Curiously enough, the memorial to the duke in the Guard's Chapel was similarly mistake-haunted. The name "George," by which he was best known, was omitted; "division" dropped one of its "i's"; and "commanded" appeared instead of "commander." Yet nobody noticed these solecisms until King Edward's eagle eye spotted them.

A bust was placed in the Law Courts some years ago in memory of that great divorce judge, Lord St. Helier. One would have thought lawyers would have been the last men in the world to let an inscription go unrevised, yet they proved even as other men.

He was described as "C.G.B.," when there "ain't no sich" honor; and, more amazing still, he was described as President of the Admiralty Division!

Exeter is rightly proud of its equestrian monument to the fine Devonian, Sir Redvers Buller, but it suffered from a perfect epidemic of mistakes when it was first unveiled. On it appears a list of the battle honors of the 60th King's Own Rifle Corps, and there the carver came a cropper. He spelt Salamanca, "Salamanca"; Toulouse was given a double "o"; and Vimiera appeared in the disguise of "Vimieta."

Quite lately, when the statue of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was unveiled in Westminster Abbey, it was found that the letter-carver had made that statesman three years too young, for he was born in 1836, and the inscription turned the six into a nine!

Potash Deposits of Alsace.

Twelve billion dollars' worth of potash deposits are within grasp of the French army in Alsace, and will pass into possession of France if the province is sold after the war. This acquisition alone will largely compensate France for its huge war expenditures. The deposits are known as Nonnenbruch mines. They are situated on a strategic road from Thann to Mulhouse.

His Explanation.

Returning from his visit to the seashore, little Dean told the family about the ocean.

"Why," he exclaimed, his eyes big with excitement, "it jumped and leaped all around! I brought some home to show you. Now just look," and he produced a big bottle, the contents of which he poured into a pan, where it lay inert and lifeless.

"Huh. That's funny," he said. "It must have died coming home."—Ladies Home Journal.

THE WAR BIRD.

Skimming the air and dodging the clouds.
Wrapped in a transparent moving shroud
Flys the Aerial British Spy—
He is going to win or he is going to die.

Far beyond is the "Zepp." in sight—
In and out of the sun's red light—
All of a sudden, a terrible flash!
Down to earth goes the "Zepp." with a crash!

That will cause his "Highness" some bitter words;
His command, "Go, guard the sky!"
Can't be done with the British nigh.

IN FIVE MINUTES! NO INDIGESTION, GAS OR SOUR, ACID STOMACH

The Moment "Pape's Diapepsin" Reaches the Stomach All Distress Goes

"Really does" put bad stomach in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach regulator in the world.

Obey Your Own Impulse

Eugenics and Reason Do Not Make Perfect Race Says Psychologist.

After all the eugenists have spun their theories, follow your own inclinations and marry the one of your choice.

This in a nutshell, is the theory of Dr. Camuel C. Kohs, psychologist, author and mender of human derelicts.

"The compelling desire for a mate, the longing that will not be satisfied until a certain girl or a certain boy is won," Doctor Kohs says, "is the best known test for matrimony, so far as the race is concerned. Conscious reasoning may point out the faults of the young woman to the man, or the other way around; friends may show each wherein the other is temperamentally unfitted to serve as a mate, but in the long run the non-reasoning desire that drives you to want just one person has a sound foundation."

The workship of Doctor Kohs in the Chicago House of Correction. There he is applying his talents to mending the slightly damaged mental engines of young prisoners.

"I confess that the idea of mating human beings with the purpose of breeding for points does not impress me favourably," he continued. "We know something of the results that may be achieved with horses and other animals, of the physical points that we know are transmitted; but in dealing with human beings and the mating problem we have more than bodies and physical points to consider. The physical and psychic—the mental and moral—are so interwoven that we must consider all the factors that go to make up a human being as distinguished from an animal before we are ready to say that this and that will result from any marriage.

"The lives of men and women are not worked out by conscious reasoning We do and say things — we shape our lives — on impulses. We are using a greater, and I might be bold enough to say, the better part of our minds when we act on those impulses. Those impulses are the co-ordinated experiences of ourselves and perhaps of our race. Whatever we, as a race, or as individuals, have learned, makes its impressions on our nerves and brain. And the result is reflex actions that tend to profit by those experiences."

TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary, liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Over 100,000 Now Engaged in Making Shells

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—Some idea of the stupendous proportions to which the munitions industry in Canada has grown was given to the members of the Ottawa branch of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers at their monthly luncheon here to-day by Gen. Alexander Bertram, of the Imperial Munitions Board.

At present nearly 100,000 persons are employed on orders amounting in all to 20,000,000 shells. The steel required for the industry from now till the end of next year is 800,000,000 pounds, which will tax the capacity of the Dominion steel plants to the utmost. Nearly 45,000,000 pounds of copper and brass are used, and 100,000,000 pounds of lead. This is more than Canada can produce of these metals, and the surplus must be imported.

Fifteen hundred thousand pounds of tin and 10,000,000 pounds of resin are also required. The value of the shell orders up to now has been $320,000,000, with additional orders of about $160,000,000, making $475,000,0000 in all. The number of shells shipped to England so far has been 3,500,000.

General Bertham also told how the first Shell Committee was formed. General Hughes has invited ten or twelve Canadian manufacturers to his office and asked them if they could handle an order for 100,000 18-lb. shells which he had been commissioned to place in the Dominion. A sample shell was placed before the men, and after a lot of argument they were prevailed upon to undertake what looked to them to be a very difficult job. General Bertram as military man was asked to take charge of the organization of the work. He had nothing to work on but an old blue print, and had no guages. The manufacturers had to be fairly dragged into the business, as nearly all were afraid to touch something none of them knew anything about. General Bertram's own company was doubtful about it, and their patriotism that enough manufacturers it was only after appealing to fasturers were persuaded to fill the first order.

General Bertram referred to criticism of the price charged. He said that the first price of $6.55 per shell was fixed by experts from Quebec and England, as the manufacturers were such absolute greenhorns they did not know what to ask. This price was submitted to the War Office and accepted.

Wife Has A Right to Tango

Police Justice Du Frane of Mount Kisco, Westchester County, New York, settled a dispute between Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Osborne as to whether she has a right to tango against his objections. The court ruled that she has.

Osborne rebuked his wife for going to a dance in Mount Kisco. When she insisted that tangoing was one of a wife's privileges, she alleges, he boxed her ears. She summoned him to court and asked the justice if she hadn't a right to tango if she wished.

Winning her point, she made a complaint of assault Osborne was found guilty and placed on probation for six months. Mrs. Osborne boasted as she left court that she would dance now all she pleased.

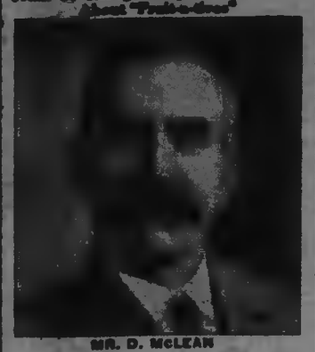
GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY

Try This! Hair Gets Thick, Glossy, Wavy and Beautiful at Once

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

WILL WE EVER WALK ON AIR?

Talk Of Thought Inspired By a Letter About "Fruit-a-tives"



MR. D. McLEAN

Orillia, Ont., Nov. 26th, 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. I tried several medicines, but got no results and my Headaches became more severe. One day I saw your sign which read 'Fruit-a-tives' make you feel like walking on air. This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. Now I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely, I cannot say too much for 'Fruit-a-tives', and recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends". DAN McLEAN.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is daily proving its priceless value in relieving cases of Stomach, Liver and Kidney Trouble—General Weakness, and Skin Diseases.

A CHILD GETS CROSS, SICK AND FEVERISH WHEN CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated Clean Little Liver and Bowels

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if the breath is bad; stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company.

PATRIOTISM BEING EXPLOITED, CLAIM WOMEN WORKERS

Formal Charges and Complaints Filed With British Labor Board By Henry Wood.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Women Munition workers of England say they are being sweated and that their patriotism is being exploited to satisfy employers greed. The women's formal charges, just filed with the Labor board, add to the labor muddle in the United Kingdom.

The women usually are not affiliated with the regular trade unions, whose domains they have invaded, but in this case their charges coincide with the allegations of the laboring men. The English working women, like the men, persist in their efforts to get a hearing when the life of the nation is at stake, they say, because, although they declare themselves patriotic they cannot permit their patriotism to be exploited.

While the manufacturers grow rich out of the government war contracts, the working women insist their wages remain nnincreased while the cost of living is constantly ascending. The men charged this too, and the women add that their employers are taking advantage of their inexperience to sweat them.

One advantage the women have is that government boards were appointed to investigate conditions under which they might be called upon to work. These boards have responded to the cry for help and are, after investigation, lending the weight of their authority to the protests.

The complaints centre largely in the Manchester district where thousands of women are employed and hundreds are being added weekly. It was found that many factories are installing lighter machinery for the women, but are not paying them men's wages, nor nearly so much.

The wages were found to vary from a maximum of about $8 for a 48-hour week down to $3.50 for a 51-hour week. Despite the minimum wage of seven cents an hour fixed many concerns paid less.

The women demand factory canteens so the women night workers may have a hot meal. A demand is also made for a shift schedule that will not permit a woman to work more than 9 hours at a time.

Another protest was against heavy work being given to the women. One young girl handled an 18-pound shell every minute throughout the day. Other girls were found working on rough cast shells weighing 23 pounds.

The report of the government's committee was that women could not be employed on heavy physical work of this nature for the period of hours now required to permit of proper food and nourishment.

SWEDE SHIP STOPPED IT

American Steamer Was Heading for Germany After Many Adventures.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—A Copenhagen despatch, to the Exchange Telegraph Company says: "The American steamship Andrew Welch has become a centre of attention in Scandinavia. After being chased by British patrol boats in the Atlantic and by British submarines in the North Sea, crippled by a series of storms, she put into Bergen in distress. Norway granted permission to return to England, but she started for Haelmstad, Sweden. Again experiencing bad weather, she took refuge outside the Skaw, finally arriving at Haelmstad, where it was found there was no receiver for her cargo of beans valued at $150,000. The vessel remained quiet for some days, but Wednesday night a steamer arrived from Lubeck to convoy her to Germany. A start was made in the night, but a Swedish torpedo boat arrived and forced the Welch to turn back to Haelmstad."

By using finely powdered ingredients and great pressure cement articles have been made to resemble porcelain.

Japan is now producing about 6,000,000 pounds of camphor annually, a little mare than half the world's supply.

"CASCARETS" FOR A COLD, BAD BREATH OR SICK HEADACHE

Best For Liver and Bowels, For Biliousness, Sour Stomach and Constipation

Get a 10-cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Colds, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing, and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a ten-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver, and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

CHICKEN FASTS FOR 22 DAYS

Twenty-two days without food or water and still living is the remarkable record of a Plymouth Rock hen at Georgeville, Pa. On October 20 someone put a hen on the back of J. H. Stewart's buggy and closed the flap. Mr. Stewart drove home, put the buggy away and did not use it until 22 days later, when he accidentally discovered the chicken. The fowl, reduced to a skeleton, is recovering rapidly.

Macedonia A War Base For The Allies in the Balkans

Greece Has Given the Allies the Free Use of All Railways in Macedonia and of All Aegean Harbours, According to a Berlin Report---Steamer Saxonia Arrives With More Canadian Troops in the Old Country.

HENRY FORD'S PEACE JITNEY SAILS TO-DAY

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 4.—Greece has agreed to give the Allies the free use of all railways in Macedonia and all Aegean harbours, including that of Kavalla, according to the Berliner Tageblatt.

"This mean that practically the whole of Greecian Macedonia is delivered to the Allies as a war base," said the Tageblatt.

"Greece, however, has refused to disarm the troops of the Central Empires if they drive the Allies back into her territory."

PARIS, Dec. 4.—(French Official Communique)—Torrential rains along the Western front hindered the work of the artillery throughout yesterday and last night. Near Vauquois Plateau, this afternoon's communique reported, French sappers successfully exploded a mine beneath the German works. Artillery exchanges occurred near Sapigneul and east of Grenoy.

BERLIN, Via Wireless, Dec. 4.—A German commander of a division has been captured by the Russians in the fighting south-west of Plask, it was officially admitted this afternoon. The War Office, however, denied that any other German officers were captured at the same time.

THE PEACE JITNEY OFF.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Eighty-three peace pilgrims dashed excitedly about the Baltimore Hotel early to-day in a frantic effort to collect their faculties and baggage before Henry Ford's peace ship set sail for Europe this afternoon. Fifty-three newspaper correspondents and three movie photographers joined in the scramble, or looked on in wonder. Special measengers returned from the State Department during the morning with passports for Ford's guests who arrived late yesterday. Despite all efforts to take care of every invited delegate, at least a dozen, it was said, had arrived in New York too late. Their passports could not be secured in time.

Hundreds of peace pilgrims' friends were to see them off at the dock at a o'clock this afternoon. Wm. Jennings Bryan, who conferred at length with Ford late yesterday, promised to shake hands with every member of the party and wish them luck. He will remain in America for several weeks to fight preparedness, but will join the party later at The Hague. Ford himself planned to go to the ship about noon. Mrs. Ford and their son, Edsel, will remain at home and will leave New York for Detroit probably to-morrow. The son will have complete charge of the great automobile plant.

NO WELCOME IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Henry Ford's peace ship sails from America to-day with no note of welcome from the British press. On the eve of Ford's departure London newspapers to-day re-affirmed the position of the Government that there can be no peace in Europe except on the conditions imposed by Premier Asquith in his famous Guildhall speec hon Nov. 9, 1914. They quoted at length from the Asquith statement, and declared that the principals then enunciated still obtain. Alongside these declarations were other comments ridiculing the Ford enterprise. Some of the newspapers printed long special despatches from New York, unmercifully "kidding" the peace cruise. There are no signs that either the British officials, the press or the public are wavering in their determination to carry this war on to a successful end. It is true that a few newspapers are occasionally suggesting peace, but they form only a negligible section of the press, with small influence. Recent statements in the Berlin Reichstag concerning peace discussions are considered by London newspapers as a certain indication that Germany at last realizes she has passed the zenith of her power, and is now on the down grade.

An editorial in the Spectator to-day is typical of the newspaper expressions. "We must not only conquer the Germans but conquer them so thoroughly as to make it impossible for them to relight the flames of war in Europe," said the Spectator. "We must muzzle the savage dog after tying him up and so prevent him from fastening his teeth in any part of the Globe. Peace must be the real peace, not merely a breathing space wherein we prepare for fresh wars."

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Henry Ford's passport is good only for the Neutral European countries, but he is going to visit the belligerents nevertheless.

"I shall assert my rights as an American citizen," he said to-day, on the verge of his peace ship's departure. His tour will include all the warring nations," he added. Specially he mentioned England and France. In the former country he explained he intends opening a new factory at Southampton. "My last word to America," he concluded, "is everyone try for peace, down with preparedness."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Henry Ford is embarking for Europe with more definite knowledge of the conditions there than many of his prominent critics, was the declaration to-day of Meyer London, Socialist member of Congress. Ford, he said, is to participate in a peace conference of European Liberals, to be held December 14 in a neutral country, the name of which London said he was not at liberty to disclose. The discussion of peace terms by the Reichstag on Dec. 9th, said London, is only a preliminary step forced by the Socialists toward the International Conference, Dec. 14.

ROME, Dec. 4.—Cardinal Hartmann, of Cologne, is said to have brought the Vatican proposal that Germany will evacuate Belgium and Northern France and agree to an autonomous government for Poland if the Vatican will make a determined effort at the present time to bring about peace. The Cardinals representing the Allied countries are said to have replied that Germany's enemies would not countenance half measures in any programme of peace.

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM DREW UNITED VOTE

County Council Transformed Division Over Patriotic Contribution Into Unanimous Support of the $1,650 Monthly Grant--$1200 Was Other Figure

REEVE COBEN LED THE WAY

A stirring incident shook the County Council out of its staid and regular methods of procedure yesterday afternoon in the final discussion of the County's contribution to the Patriotic Fund. Two motions had been duly proposed, one that the sum should be $1,200 a month and the other that it should be $1,650. A rather slim majority favoured the larger grant and during a moment of hesitation that marks the affairs of every Council, Reeve Coben of Galway rose to his feet and began the National Anthem with its inspiring first line, "God Save Our Gracious King." The effect was electrical. Immediately all those who had supported the $1,650 contribution joined him, and in a twinkling the whole Council was singing "God Save the King," ensuing a scene that formed a grand finale to the patriotic enthusiasm of Wednesday afternoon's county deputation.

The Council's action is simply this. For the present month $1,250 will be added to the $400 previously provided as a patriotic grant and will be sent to the Patriotic Fund office in Ottawa, and the recommends to the 1916 body that $1,650 be contributed monthly during the coming year. It is felt by the present members that this is a fair proportion from the rural section. On the basis that $7,000,000 is required from the whole Dominion for the Patriotic Fund this year, this amounts to one dollar per capita, since the total population is about seven millions. The county's population is approximately 20,000, and the proposed grant for next year totals $20,000. Hence the county paces itself on the basis of the rest of the country, and is accepting a proportionate share of the present burden.

NEW INDUSTRY FOR PETERBORO'

Peterborough Metal Products Company Will Soon be Under Way

What is known as the Peterborough Metal Products Company is to locate in the premises formerly occupied by the Canadian Cordage Company on Aylmer street. The company is installing machinery and it is understood, will commence the manufacture of metal products at an early date.

THE CHILDREN'S FESTIVAL AT RICH. HALL & SONS

"Toyman's" Shop All A-Hum With Children's Voices and Merry Laughter

If you have Christmas stockings to fill, you'll find what you want in "Toyman's Shop"—second floor of Richard Hall & Son's big store. Such a busy, merry place, where the sights are so gladdening, and where so much shopping can be done for so little money.

Every day there are children galore choosing presents for their little friends, giving hints to their grown-ups, meanwhile, as to what they would like themselves. There are parents giving mysterious instructions to the salespeople right over the noses of the little people for whose stockings the purchases are intended. And above all there is the prevailing influence of the Christmas spirit, which ever breathes the joy of giving. Put the "Toyman's Shop" on your list 1d-1w-49

DON'T FORGET TO TURN OUT TO-NIGHT TO CHEER

Don't forget and get out for the reception to the soldiers to-night. Winter weather will be no obstacle. It wasn't when we celebrated the relief of Mafeking and Ladysmith. All arrangements have been completed. There will be music by the 93rd Band, flags waving, fireworks being fired, and cheers for the boys. Adjutant McElhinny has a corps of energetic flag wavers and these will dispense the fireworks. Judicially, of course. But it will be just as well if skittish horses are tied to the posts on side streets. Automobiles that will stand without hitching may be drawn off the line of march.

The procession will start from the Armouries and come down the street with great eclat. There should be cheers. If not, then we are a dispassionate people. At the Market Hall there will be the formal reception, not too formal, you'll understand, but just homey and cordial. Some remarks, of course. But we all want to see the boys who have come back after a most wonderful experience.

Arrangements have been made to bring from their homes the returned men, and take them back after the reception. Cars have been placed at the service of the committee by Messrs. Duffus, Coulthard, Fiske, Langford, Green, and Dean. The heroes of the hour will be in these cars. Turn out and welcome the boys.

408 Families Have Been Helped By Fund

707 Children Included in the List--A Summary of What the Local Branch of the Patriotic Society Has Done During the Past Year---Some Interesting Statistics.

As noted yesterday a good friend and worker for the Fund called at the office and asked questions. Not in an inquisitive way. Just the questions that a man would ask who had worked for the Fund, and will work again, but who wants to be in a position to say in the course of the canvas as to the facts. Getting some ammunition.

It will be understood that the lists of the Fund as used in the distribution are never stable. That is that they change from week to week. Names are added. Others taken off for reason. Discharged. Bought off. Gone to England. And other tenable reasons. So to give a fair idea of the work, and what is more material, where the money has gone, note is made of the state of the lists for and at December, 1915, the present month. Also the following note of the number that have been on the Fund and removed from time to time. When these figures are considered together it can be seen that a large number of souls have benefitted. And with the prospect of new enlistments many more will no doubt be added.

33 wives, each having no children in family.
68 wives, one child.
55 wives, two children.
48 wives, three children.
35 wives, four children.
9 wives, five children.
7 wives, six children.
1 wife, seven children.
4 wives, eight children.
1 wife, nine children.

This, so far makes up a total of 256 wives and 582 children.

Then we have another series, the mothers. Mothers whose sons were in many cases the sole support, and who have given up the son to the ranks and trenches. A most deserving and commendable section. In several cases these mothers have the care of children, either their own, or coming to their care by the death of a father, the son of the mother.

41 mothers, no children.
1 mother with two children.
1 mother with four children.
This figures out to 43 families more, with six children.

And we come to still another section. Those who have been on the Fund and removed for reasons, many of which are valid and good. These had been on the Fund for varying periods, from two months to twelve or fifteen. We repeat, as before:
30 wives and no children.
25 wives with one child.
22 wives with two children.
18 wives with three children.
7 wives with four children.
3 wives with five children.
3 wives with six children.
1 wife with seven children.
1 wife with eight children.
1 wife with ten children
1 mother, no children.
1 mother with one child.
2 mothers with two children.
1 mother with ten children.

This list gives a total of 111 wives or mothers and 209 children. Placed together, these sections would show that 408 families have had the allowances from the Fund, and that in these families are and were 797 children.

These figures are given to show, if possible, the extent to which the Fund has been used to support and assist those who were placed in the care of the people of the city. While so many as fifty-four of these families are on the lists from outside the city limits and in the country, the Fund makes no distinction. All are welcome so long as the money lasts. As to the grading of the allowance, that is another matter. The committee make a thorough enquiry into the status of the family and apportion a sum sufficient, in nearly all cases, to bring the income coming into the family, up to, and in many cases better than what it was before the enlistment of the husband or son. In cases where the committee do not do so the soldier has been in receipt of a wage, or salary, above the average, and which the commtitee could hardly undertake to make up without leading to recrimination from others who might feel that they, in turn, were not being so well treated. It will be remembered that single men, unless the sole support of a mother, do not come under the Fund.

One hundred men are needed, Ten of these have come forward. The captains of the teams. Many of the workers on the teams will enlist for next week's campaign. But there will be gaps in the rangs of the old guard. The captains will endeavour to fill these gaps up. How would you like to be one. Don't be backward in coming forward. Just look over the captain's list, see whom you would like to work with, 'phone, write or send word that if a call is send out for organization purposes. We can't have too many on you will be on the line Wednesday night at 5:30. At headquarters. Before the work. Every factory, store, shop, office, garage, etc., is to be visited. The workers are none too many as it is. While they give up the whole of three days many have to keep their own details of business going. Hence substitutes are needed. Say the word, and presto, you will be enrolled.

Just as well be frank about it. The teams and committees have to eat while they work. So provision is made. It has been found that a critical thing is to keep the men together to plan, discuss and get ready for the work of the day following. So the evening meal will be served at headquarters Wednesday, at 5:30 o'clock. And on Thursday and Friday both dinner and tea. Friday night will take care of itself. There will be a revival of last year's hurrah when it was seen that the appeal for a Fund had been oversubscribed, much the same as happened with the Canadian war loan.

COL. HEMMING IS WELL PLEASED WITH THE 93RD

D. O. C. Visited the Peterborough Battalion To-day and Made a Thorough Inspection of the Armouries and of the Men of the Battalion---Recreation Room For the Men.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Col. Hemming, the officer commanding the 3rd Divisional Area, paid an official visit to the 93rd Battalion last evening and to-day. Col. Hemming arrived on the 5.30 train yesterday and last evening made a thorough inspection of the barracks. This morning the D. O. C. inspected the men of the 93rd in the armouries. His inspection was not a formality, but a thorough scrutiny of every man in the battalion. Particular attention was paid to the boots of the men and many of the soldiers were questioned as to the wearing qualities of the footgear and their ability to keep out water. Col. Hemming took a half hour in looking over the battalion and afterwards went to the parade grounds and watched them go through some platoon drill.

Although the visiting officer did not make an address to the 93rd he was manifestly well pleased with their bearing and appearance and expressed himself so to Lt.-Col. Johnston, commenting on the clean-cut appearance of the men. Col. Hemming was particularly interested in the equipment of the men and advised the securing of more supplies of clothing and a new issue of boots immediately.

The D.O.C. also imparted the information during his visit that all recruiting is to be done henceforh through the officers of the 93rd Battalion without extra pay, instead of through the militia units as has been the case. This system is being adopted throughout the division, the officers of the overseas unit being responsible for the recruiting.

The room at the armouries which is used as a practice room by the 93rd Band is to be converted into a recreation room for the use of the 93rd. A meeting was held to-day at noon by the non-coms of the battalion with a committee composed of Hon. Major Davidson, Capt. Gilmour and Lieut. Crisp. A piano will be installed, writing tables and material provided, as well as books, magazines, etc., so that the men will have a cosy, comfortable room in their own barracks where they can drop in for a smoke, to write a letter or have a sing-song

To-days Order's.

The following Battalion orders by Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E.F., Peterborough, Ont., were read this morning:

Headquarters,
Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 4, 1915.

I, Duties—
Orderly officer for to-day—Lieut. O. F. Newlands.
Orderly officer for to-morrow—Lieut. L. J. Stuart.

ASSAULT CASE WAS WITHDRAWN BY COMPLAINANT

Small Docket For This Morning's Session of the Police Court--Glasses Broken in Fracas

FINED TWO DOLLARS

An assault case that was to have been heard in this morning's Police Court was withdrawn at the request of the complainant. The latter looked as though he might have collided with a sledge hammer. He volunteered the information that his glasses were broken in the melee.

Magistrate Dumble decided to permit complainant to withdraw the case, providing the costs were paid. These amounted to $3.35.

Fined Two Dollars.

Fred Eastland favoured the Court with one of his periodical visits. He pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness, and was given ten days in which to pay the fine of two dollars. Eastland is working in the country at the present time.

MRS. BEAVIS WILL ACCEPT OFFER

Last evening His Worship Mayor Buller visited Mrs. George Beavis James Street, for the purpose of ascertaining whether she would care to go to the Old Country at the city's expense for the purpose of seeing her son, who has been honoured by three countries for conspicuous bravery.

Mrs. Beavis signified her desire to visit the Old Country and see her son.

The matter will be taken up at Monday night's meeting of the City Council.

County Gives $400 To Regimental Fund

The 93rd Battalion's regimental fund receives a contribution of $400 from the County Council as the result of a motion passed at yesterday afternoon's session. It was first proposed to give it to the 93rd band fund, but Reeve Anderson said that Col. Johnston had spoken of the needs of the regimental fund, which is applied to the whole battalion.

SAVED OVER FIFTY LIVES

The death occurred recently of John Crook, of Blackburn, England, who held a remarkable record for life-saving. He formerly kept an inn on the banks of the Ribble, and at various times had saved over 50 persons from drowning. On one occasion he rescued seven Blackburn people whose boat had overturned.

SATURDAY, DEC. 4, 1915

NIGHT TIME NOMINATIONS.

The proposal of the Trades and Labour Council to hold the nomination meetings at night is a good and sensible one. If for no other reason that it will remove, or help mainly one of the most serious obstacles, next to the ward system, to the election of our best qualified citizens to the position of alderman. As has often been pointed out, the indifference of the electors as to whom they select or elect is one of the fruitful causes of inefficiency of representation and consequent inefficient and unsatisfactory service.

At present, and for a long past, candidates for election to municipal position have not been selected. For the most part they are pitchforked, or pitchfork themselves into the ring. Par parenthese, in the ring, is a sporting phrase and seems to be a good one, because we have in it hint at the best way of forming municipal rings from which this and other municipalities are not always, if ever, free.

Here is something like the present system works and is worked. Nominations are held at the busiest hour of the day, in the busiest period of the year, when few can spare the time from the demands of their occupation, or from their other personal and social duties. There is a small gathering of electors, who with no particular occupation or interest in city government, are not well fitted to choose representatives from the great mass of citizens, who lead busy lives and do the business that keeps the city going and growing.

This handful of naturally indifferent citizens come together with no idea of candidates in their mind. The official charged with staging the farce-comedy of nominations calls for nominations. Then after a painful pause, some one nominates somebody, at random, with no more thought, or idea, or knowledge, of qualification, except of property qualification, of his nominee than he has of the quality and brand of the underclothing he is wearing. Or some one with explosions is brought into the running by a cut and dried arrangement with a fellow conspirator against the public interests.

So the thing as a rule goes on till the list is completed, or it is time to go to dinner. There is no time or desire for anything but farcial discussion of the candidates' qualifications, or their knowledge of civic questions and issues.

Then the electors have a batch of candidates thrust upon them, of many of whom they know nothing or little, and care less. And here is the great fault, public indifference, as to the selection of candidates whom they are compelled to blindly elect with the risk of drawing a blank in the lottery, or reject at the risk of "turning down" men that by remote possibility would make good aldermen.

This public indifference might be greatly lessened by having nominations at a time when somebody that is busy in day time, building up the business or industries of the city; who has a real interest in its good government, could conveniently give, to the selection of men to the election of men, to manage their civic business, which directly, their business interests, is almost as much as they would give to the selection of managers of their own personal or corporate business.

No business man would accept as manager the first man who offered himself with no other guarantee but the applicant's own assurance that he could fill the bill. Yet that is what is practically done under the present system of nominating candidates, and the present condition of public indifference to the qualifications of the men for whom the public is compelled to vote—compelled to elect.

This indifference can be shaken up by holding nominations at a time when a large number of electors can be present, and by their presence arouse an interest and give importance to the most important duty of selecting the managers of their civic business.

It may be urged that the law doesn't permit the holding of evening nominations. A fig for the law; if it interferes with the promotion of your interest, get it changed. It's your precious law that is responsible for the routine, "go-as-you-please" gamble in aldermanic stock; that, with the accompaniment of popular indifference, is, next to the ward system, the greatest obstruction in the way of securing the best available representive elements to govern us.

The proposal of the Trades and Labour people touches the quick of a question that is worthy of the best attendon of the best of our citizens; and in view of its importance; in view of the fact that much more can be said about it, The Examiner will welcome correspondence on the subject, which should be brief and pointed, so that space may be found for as many expressions of opinion as possible. No matter whether the letters are pro or con—anything to shake the general citizenship from its apathy, and arouse interest in the selection and election of the managers of this $300,000-a-year civic business.

If it were possible to libel a whole body of citizenship, The Examiner would gladly risk a suit for libel if it would excite public interest and kill the deadly public indifference to the question of the public control of the management of our city affairs. The increased efficiency that would result would in a few years save in taxes the cost of half a dozen libel suits.

"CANADA COMFORTABLE"

Not only the extraordinary avidity with which the public of Canada snapped up the $50-million loan, but the bank statement for October joins with other evidences to prove that Canada is very comfortable in her finances and condition of prosperity. The bank statement for October shows deposits—the people's money—to the immense amount of 1093 million of dollars, and increased business activity is indicated by the the call of loans in Canada, showing a large increase, and call loans abroad a very large decrease.

PREPOSTEROUS PEACE.

The preposterous "Peace Ship," Oscar II., with its cargo of dreamers, is scheduled to leave New York this afternoon for The Hague; and its arrival will in meaning represent the preposterous superfluity of the announcement that "the Dutch have taken Holland." From its very outset the expedition is doomed to failure. Nobody that feels the interests of Christianity, humanity and human freedom, wants peace—will listen to talk of peace, while the arch disturber and enemy of peace possesses the power to break the peace of nations. As Hon. Mr. Lemieux says: "We are waging war to destroy war"; and the war must go on till the war spirit is laid, and peace on a permanent basis be made possible. The peace ship and its impracticable cargo of visionaries could expect as much success from their voyage if they set out with a fleet of chromatic ships for their cargo. We all want peace, we pray for peace; but it must be a peace "which passeth understanding" of the war lords that have slain peace with the sword. Christmas came to us with the declaration of the Prince of Peace that He came not to bring peace but a sword. That sword we have unsheathed in the name of the highest human things Christianity stands for, and it will not be laid down till its work is done.

"My Year of the Great War"

If one wants to read a book that, once begun, the reader will find as hard to lay down unfinished as to drop the handles of an electric battery, let him read Frederick Palmer's "My Year of the Great War." The comparison is just, for the book is a "live wire" of interest, every page and almost every paragraph of gripping appeal. The first of the many factors in this condition is the fitness of the author. As correspondent and observer, he has been through many wars, and when Lord Kitchener selected him as the only American correspondent to go to the British headquarters in France he got a man whose sympathies were not only openly with the Allies, but an observer trained on the battle scenes of many wars to see things; with a rare gift of expression. His style is simple, direct, terse, and even epigrammatic. An example of both is found in the close of his reference to British achievements:

But she has done more. Through centuries of experience she has learned the strength of moderation. What she has won by war she is holding by wisdom. If some one must guard the seas; if some one must have dominion over brown or yellow races, she was well fitted for the task. Wherever she had dominion, whether Bombay or Hong King, there was freedom in trade and in development for all men. We who have travelled recognize this.

We may have followed the war in the newspapers, but when we see things of the war as Palmer tells them we also see that we have learned nothing but the bare facts, or fiction, of results, without gaining any clear idea of what it all was or how it was done and who did it. The writer's vivid style, with a punch like a bayonet, etches battle scenes in bold lines till they stand out to the eye like pictures on a wall. He does the same whether he takes us through the British lines in Flanders, over the battlefields of the Marne, or with the French in Lorraine; or in the chapter, "The Maple Leaf Folk," with the Canadians, whom the "Yankee" writer calls home folks to him. "All I asked of the Canadians was to allow a little of the glory—they had won such a lot—to rub off on their neighbours," is the terse tribute he pays, by way of sample, to the Canadians. Only as a sample, however; for the chapter is full of thrilling incident of Canadian achievements and praise for Canadian valour and resourcefulness. Every Canadian recruit should read the chapter where are visualized the scenes and conditions he will see when he gets "somewhere in France," and every Canadian should read it so that he can follow the boys and see where and how they live and fight and where and how some of them bravely die.

Much more could be said of the merits of the book; but a volume would give no idea of its splendid interest, unless the volume were Palmer's "My Year of the Great War." Description can no more tell its charms of appeal it holds than a picture of a peach can give the taste of a peach. There is a temptation to give extracts. Here is one, as much as space will allow:

"My thanks to the Canadians for being at the Front. They brought me back to the plains and the North-West and they showed the Germans on some occasions what a blizzard is like when expressed in bullets instead of snowflakes by men who know how to shoot. I had a continental pride in them. They had the dry, pungent philosophy and the indomitable spirit which the air of the plains and the St. Lawrence Valley seem to develop."

"My Year of the Great War" is the book of the year and of the time.

COMPATIBILITY OF THE WAR WITH CHRISTIANITY

It must be deeply felt that the condition of the world; especially of the Christian world, at the present day, is in strange contrast with the message of Christmas, and with the characteristics of a gospel of peace. When that glorious star born the promise was heard of "peace on earth, good will toward men," but where, men have constantly asked, is the promise of His coming? For how many years together since that promise was heard has the world, or even that part of the world within which the Gospel was preached been at peace? For how many years has it been at peace in our own time? Within the memory of men and women now living great wars have shaken Europe to its foundations, and a still more terrible one is raging now; a tremendous and fratricidal struggle has convulsed the United States, and we ourselves have been incessantly engaged in war and bloodshed in one part or another of our Empire. Some of the fairest countries of Europe are, at this moment, wrapped in "blood, and fire, and vapour and smoke."

Let us, however, remember that if this contrast between the promise of the Gospel on the one hand, and the facts of history and of the present day on the other, seems so glaring and distressing, it cannot be greater than the contrast between some of the sayings of our Lord, and the promise with which He was announced. The angels proclaimed that His birth meant peace on earth. His Himself said to His disciples that He came not to send peace, but a sword. The natural inclination of our Lord's followers is to apologise for war, and the bloodshed, and the struggles which have followed Christianity. He, on the contary, declared that warfare was one of its natural and inevitable consequences. "Think not," He says, "that I am come to send peace on earth. I came not to send peace, but a sword" (Mat. x., 34). The words are a prophecy which has received a terrible fulfilment. Within a few months after they were uttered, He Himself had suffered as the first victim in the great war between right and wrong which He set on foot. His own nation was broken up by a deep and fatal division which culminated in some of the most awful scenes in history, in the destruction of Jerusalem; and the Christian church began a career which, although, for three centuries at least perfectly peaceable on its own part, and in which, during that time at all events, it never retaliated, yet led to the sacrifice of torrents of blood in the attempt of the pagan world to repress it. When that attempt failed and the Church became dominant, a brief period of comparative peace followed, but the world was soon overflowed by a new and more vigorous paganism, and for several centuries afterwards its history is that of incessant conflict and bloodshed. Sixteen centuries after the death of Christ, half Europe was desolated in the Thirty Years' War in the cause of religion. The same cause has lain at the root of many a fierce struggle since then, down to our times; and besides these public wars, they have prevailed, through the whole long and weary period of struggle, those private and social and family wars, of which our Lord went on to speak. "For I am come," he said, "to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foe shall be those of his own household." The law of life by which the world has advanced has accordingly been one of sacrifice, such as our Lord went on to say of: "He that loveth father and mother more than Me is not worthy of Me, and he that loveth son or daughter more than Me is not worthy of Me. He that findeth his live shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for My sake shall find it." These stern sayings correspond to the facts of life. They describe its realities. Those realities may be veiled for a time, or forgotten, when the King whose mission it is to put them in force, withdraws for a while, as he said, into a far country. But too often when He returns, when the living and present voice of the Prince of Peace is really heard, we hear Him also obliged to say: "Think ye that I am come to send peace on earth? I came not to send peace, but a sword."

What is the meaning of this strange contrast? Did the Saviour mean to take away with one hand what He gave with another? Is the promise of peace an unreality? The answer is contained in one other word of our Lord, when He said to His disciples, "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you." What was His peace? Not a peace consisting of the absence of the war and of conflict, but a peace won by war. The cardinal point in His mission was that He came to save His people from their sins, and He proclaimed that He could bring them peace by no other means than that of extirpating those sins. He began by proclaiming the coming of the Kingdom of Heaven; but, as the condition of their enjoying that Kingdom, He called on them to repent. He brought them no message of easy or of facile deliverance from their evils, but He cut into their conscience with His two-edged sword, and demanded the most bitter sacrifices from them—sacrifices equivalent to cutting off the right hand and plucking out the right eye, and "taking up the cross." In thus asserting the truth, and in thus forcing it upon their conscience He sacrificed His own life, "He resisted unto blood, striving against sin." "For the joy set before Him He endured the cross." By this warfare it was, by this bloodshed, by this sacrifice, that He won His peace; and the history of the world since His time shows that if it is ever to win a similar peace, it is destined to win it, to a large extent, by the same means. There can be no peace, no real peace, as long as right and wrong, truth and falsehood remain side by side Like antagonistic chemical elements they may remain for a while in apparently harmless contiguity, but some slight touch, some trivial collision, brings them into contact, and there is an instant explosion. Being mixed up, as they are, in strange confusion, the explosions and concussions to which their conflict gives rise are similarly confused. As you observe the struggles of the world, its wars and revolutions, you can rarely, if ever—perhaps the early struggles of the Christian Church are the only exception—say that all the right is on the one side and all the wrong is on the other. Like the elements of Nature that are fermenting together in a great tumult, and for a time the issue is utterly dark; but, as we watch, the better element gains the mastery, and earth emerges the purer from the fire. It is by this process, or at least not without it, that our Saviour promises that peace will ultimately be won. Neither the re-union of nations nor the re-union of churches can be accomplished by the avoidance of conflict. Human nature owns that this necessity is bound up with its present condition. There is said to have been once a man who had the character of being for peace at any price; but the occasion came when he spoke and voted for preparations for war; and when taxed with inconsistency, a brilliant paradox escaped from him. "I am, indeed, for peace at any price, even at the price of war." This is the price at which peace has too often to be won. The peace which the Saviour offers us was won at the cost of His own life. The early Church won its victories by a similarly unrelenting war with evil, and by similar sacrifices of precious blood; and for this reason it is that the Prince of Peace still has to send on the earth, too often, "not peace, but a sword."

What is the main lesson to be learned form these considerations? Is it that we are not to look on war as an evil, and that we are not to regard it as a thing utterly inconsistent with the ultimate purpose of God for man? God forbid that we should ever cease to think of it with horror as the greatest scourge of our race. What it behoves us to learn, and firmly to confess, is that the only means by which war can be avoided, and the scourge removed, is by the repression of evil and falsehood and covetousness of all kinds. As long as these things exist on the earth, so long as there is a righteous God, and that He is living and working among us, we are certain from time to time to have outbursts of war, and to suffer, and, alas, to inflict all its miseries. Sooner or later such passions and vices bring their own penalty upon them. The God of righteousness rouses the conscience of mankind against them, and a great revolution suddenly or gradually renews the face of the earth "From whence," says St. James, "come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members? Ye lust, and have not; ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain; ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not. Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts."

Let us, then, take to heart more earnestly than ever that the best way of all, the only way by which we can permanently contribute towards realising the Christmas promises of peace, is by subduing in ourselves, and helping to subdue all around us, the sins by which we are beset in our private lives, and banishing the falsehoods, private, social and political, by which we and others are deluded. It is not by any political schemes, however statesmanlike, that such dangers can be averted, but solely by the growth within the souls of men and women of the truth and righteousness and peace of the Christian character.

Every Dollar You Refuse to Give is a Help to the Enemy

OUR MEN ARE IN THE FIELD — FIGHTING FOR YOU. HERE AT HOME WE ALL FEEL NONE OF THE STRAIN AND THE STRESS OF THE WAR. IF WE HAD TO GO, HOW UNWILLINGLY A WHOLE RAFT OF US WOULD MAKE A START. IF YOU CAN'T GO, IF YOU ARE UNWILLING TO GO, THEN HELP THOSE WHO HAVE GONE. THE MAN IN THE TRENCHES IS THINKING OF HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN. YOURS ARE UNDER YOUR EYE. THEN SEE TO IT THAT HE WILL HAVE NO DOUBTS. YOUR ACTION IN GIVING WILL ALLAY HIS FEARS. LET YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TO THE PATRIOTIC FUND BE AS LARGE AS YOUR ABSOLUTE MEANS WILL ALLOW. BUT BE SURE THAT IT REFLECTS YOUR ABILITY TO GIVE. HARDLY ANYTHING ELSE WILL BE OF AVAIL.

The Patriotic Fund Has an Implied Contract With Married Soldiers

"GO AND FIGHT," it said, "and we will take care of your wives." The boys in khaki went away with a confidence that the trust would be fulfilled — and it will be, though Nine Millions will be required to meet the calls for the next twelve months.

Don't place confidence in "Peace" rumors. The peace Germany wants isn't the kind of peace our Canadian soldiers propose shall be allowed. We will make peace when our boys are on the streets of Berlin, Prussia.

The reward you get in giving the Patriotic Fund a lift is that you are doing your bit for the Empire. Every stay-at-home can and must give, and might as well do it with personal satisfaction. There is a place for each — at home or in the field. Let us see to it that those who have gone are supported in their work by a sense of confidence that the wife and kids are being looked after.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND

appeals to you to renew your pledges. It asks you if we have the right to lie secure in our beds, decently fed and warmly clad, while the women who sent their men and the children whose fathers have gone are in a less favorable position than when the bread winner was at home. In this crisis they are as much our dependents as those who left and leave them to go to the war. Shall the men who have come back, and who are watching you and those who we trust will come back, worn and weary with the fearful life and strife in the trenches, find that we, accepting their defense for ourselves, have neglected the defence of their dependents. Their struggle is our struggle, their sacrifice must be matched by ours. Don't let the poor excuse that families are as well or better off than before suffice to keep your pocket closed and check books hidden. Their men are fighting, and they deserve some comfort. Would you or yours and your family exchange places. Not much. Not any. Size up the situation, do your bit and GIVE.

Attorney Says Boeing Lied in Conspiracy Case

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 — [illegible] Wood, in his address to the jury in the conspiracy trial of Dr. Karl Buenz and three associates of the Hamburg-American line, [illegible] the first spreadeagle eloquence of the defence counsel Rand as the pumping of hot air for which Rand is famous."

Wood then outlined the charge which, he said, was not the violation of neutrality, but the infringement of international laws, and the violation of the statutes and regulations of the United States. "These men paid us for our hospitality by constantly violating our laws," he said.

Wood then launched into an analysis of the government's evidence. "Gantz now dead," he said, "told these conspirators that he could get them the ships they wanted, but they would have to clear them. All right, they would clear them. And they got Kuelenkampf to clear the Berwin and the Lorenzo. Why Kuelenkampf? That has not been answered. Why not some Hamburg-American line officials? They do not tell us.

Opinion of Buenz.

"Dr. Buenz, a lawyer, a judge, a diplomat, does not know what a clearance paper is. I have been challenged here time and again to tell what I think of Dr. Buenz. I'll tell you what I think of Dr. Buenz. I think he lied."

Wood then took up the other defendants. "There is Koettter," he said, "thirty-one years with the Hamburg-American line. Yet he says he did not know the details of a clearance paper. I think Koettter lied.

"Take Poppenhusen, the purchasing agent, 38 years with the greatest steamship company on earth, and he says he thought these million dollars worth of supplies for German war ships were ship's stores. I think Hachmeister lied.

Only One Told Truth.

"These defendants are like the school boy about to be spanked, who said: 'Father, I did it, but I meant no harm, and I am sorry.'"

Wood said that Poppinghaus told the truth. He said he knew that if he had a United States clearance he had a valuable document in the event of a ship being boarded by an enemy officer. Wood said it was easy for the defendants, after they were caught, to go on the witness stand and say they meant no harm.

That Missing Agreement.

"They knew," said Wood, "all three of them, that ships needed clean papers. They knew that American clearances were passports. They challenged them on the seas and they sought by foul and dishonest means to obtain those papers that would have been withheld had the true destination of the supplies aboard been declared.

"They have told of an agreement with the German government made in the fall of 1915 whereby these defendants were to send out supply ships to the German fleet. We called in vain for them to produce that agreement. Why didn't they? Where is it? They took it, these defendants, to the German Embassy at Washington where the U. S. government cannot get it. Why? I venture to say that in that document are the details of this whole scheme, that the plans are laid for obtaining these false clearances, that the contents of that document would incriminate the defendants.

In Hiding.

"Why didn't the defendants do as they have challenged us to do, and come out into the open? We have done so — where are they? Hiding. Hiding behind whatever skirts are convenient. Hiding behind Kuelenkampf in clearing the first ship they sent out; hiding behind the Berwind-White Coal Company in the case of other ships; still hiding, finally behind the German Embassy at Washington which we want to learn of this agreement they themselves told of first."

"Gentlemen of the jury," Wood concluded, "be big enough to lie to the nations at war: 'Lie to each other, if you will, but do not lie to the United States.' Be men enough to bring in a verdict to show to the nations of the world that the laws of the United States are to be enforced and upheld, war or no war."

Judge's Charge.

In his charge to the jury, Judge Howe said: "You will consider that it was lawful for the defendants to carry coal and other articles to the German warships, although the coal and other articles were liable to capture and confiscation. This, however, does not concern us, except in so far as it may or may not bear upon the motive of the defendants in what they did or omitted to do in making out their manifests. You should eliminate from your minds all questions of neutrality or international law. The government of the U. S. has said to the world: 'Your vessels may come and go and use our ports; but when you go must have a clearance, and to get your clearance you must tell us the truth in a manifest as to where you intend to go and what you have on board. You must not intentionally deceive us as to what you have on board or where you are going.'"

"The Last Judgment"

The impression which the George Street Methodist Church choir has made by the oratorios presented during the past few years was well sustained last night in "the Last Judgment," the work of L. J. Spohr. The title anticipates the character of this composition, with its introductory hymn of praise, followed by the gradual approach of Jehovah, the awful judgment and climactic destruction of Babylon, and the dissolving vision of the blessed abode of the departed. Around this theme the author has woven a vivid setting that requires more than average choral powers to reproduce. The action gathers in the preliminary scenes that bring tidings of the Redeemer, hurls its force in the majestic hour of the judgment, fades and disappears in the mystic light of the new heaven and the new earth.

To interpret through the medium of music these mighty events is an endeavour worthy of the art of the world's masters of oratorio. In this particular work, the author has achieved a notable performance, and George Street Choir won new laurels in its presentation. Mr. Renwick perceived the imagery of the music which the choir reflected in a clear and convincing manner. But apart from its appreciation of the dramatic values, the choir's choral work was most satisfying, and it was a pleasure to realise that there has been no recession from the standard which this organization previously established. This oratorio apparently presented greater demands than were encountered on former occasions. The work was heavier, there was at times a predominance of minors, and the music frequently and rapidly changed from key to key. But the choir rose to the demands confidently and successfully.

The first chorus was a splendid promise of subsequent episodes, the feature of which was probably that commencing with the line "Destroyed is Babylon the mighty."

It was splendidly sung, and revealed the choir's capabilities. The soloists acquitted themselves very creditably indeed, but the choral passages leave the keener impressions. Mr. Renwick has most effectively welded the individual voices. Their ensemble work shows precision, is well balanced, is nicely finished, is equally satisfactory in piano and forte, and above all possesses that essential resonance or depth uncommon among other than metropolitan choirs.

Very pleasing also was the rendition of the chorus "Blessing, honour, glory and power," with Mr. Edward Jones taking a tenor solo, and the chorus "Holy, holy, holy." The opening and closing choruses were inspiring pieces, intricately arranged, and must have received careful attention in rehearsal from the perfection attained in the presentation. Certainly the choir deserved a larger audience than that of last night, not only in the excellence of its work, but also in the devotion of its time and talent for a patriotic object.

Mrs. J. H. Renwick, who had a major portion of the solo work, sang with fine dramatic effect where required. She was in good voice last night, and apart from her solos, contributed to several quartettes. She also sang well in the beautiful duet with Mr. Jones, "Forsake me not." Miss Charlotte Hanson had a number of opportunities which afforded new evidence of the vocal advancement she is accomplishing. Her voice is sweet and clear, with well rounded tones and fine texture. Her enunciation is a pleasing feature of her work. Miss Evelyn Bentley's solo was capably sung, and Miss Sanderson, Mrs. Rehill, and Miss Etta Kemp were very satisfying in their respective parts. One would like to have heard more of Miss Kemp's singing. Mr. Edward Jones carried the tenor solos that left little to be desired. His singing was a real feature. Mr. Fred Miles and Mr. Charles Thorpe divided the bass solos and Mr. Asa Huycke was heard in several quartettes. Without exception the incidental quartettes were splendidly rendered with fine blending of the well-balanced parts. Mr. Miles' solo "The day of wrath is near," was sung with strong dramatic tone and phrasing. Mr. Thorpe and, Mr. John Anderson completed the group of soloists, who individually and in unison reflected credit upon the abilities of local talent.

Regarded from the standpoint of melody, the quartette "Blest are the departed," sung by Miss Hanson, Miss Sanderson, Mr. Jones and Mr. Huycke, was a happy musical idea.

Miss Pearle McKee as pianiste and Mr. Renwick at the organ provided a beautiful accomapniment. Their descriptive interlude after the judgment scene heightened the dramatic effect attained by the chorus. In brief, there was scarcely a flaw in the whole performance, and the choir may rest assured that they have enhanced their position in the musical opinion of the city.

Soprance—Mrs. J. H. Renwick, Mrs. V. R. Henry, Mrs. Wand, Miss E. Bennett, Miss E. Bentley, Miss D. Evans, Miss G. Evans, Miss K. Fanning, Miss M. Higgins, Miss C. Hanson, Miss L. Hill, Miss G. Huycke, Miss F. Jackson, Miss E. Kemp, Miss W. McIlmoyle, Miss L. Smythe, Miss E. Worth.

Altos—Mrs. M. Rehill, Mrs. W. R. Widdess, Miss L. Burke, Miss E. Elliott, Miss B. Fallon, Miss E. Fusse, Miss W. Heaslip, Miss V. Hinds, Miss R. McKee, Miss E. McIlmoyle, Miss I. Sanderson, Miss M. Telgmann, Miss M. Wright.

Tenors—Mr. C. B. Adair, Mr. John Anderson, Mr. E. Jones, Mr. J. Miller, Mr. H. Payton, Mr. J. Spencer Mr. Roberts, Mr. Wright, Mr. E. Walton.

Basses—Mr. D. D. Brown, Mr. W. H. Cunningham, Mr. W. Dartnell, Mr. V. R. Henry, Mr. A. Huycke, Mr. Iredale, Mr. G. Ivey, Mr. F. Miles, Mr. T. Stratton, Mr. C. Thorpe, Mr. C. C. Parsons.

TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT EASILY AND QUICKLY

If you are overstout the cause of your over-stoutness is the lack of excess-carrying power in the blood and faulty assimilation of food. Too little is being made into the hard-working tissue of muscle and too much into little globules of fat. Therefore you should correct the mal-assimilation and increase the oxygen carrying power of the blood. To do this go to any good druggist and get all of orthoma-only sold in original packages and in one-male form, and take one capsule after each meal and one at bedtime. Little by little weight is reduced to what it should be on all parts of the body. The effect of all of orthoma to organize form is remarkable as a weight reducer and it is perfectly safe. —H. J. T.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address: H. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1208, Montreal, Canada.

Rev. R. G. Peever's Subjects To-morrow

The officers and men of the 83rd Battalion will attend service at the George Street Methodist Church tomorrow morning. Rev. R. G. Peever will preach on "The Qualities of a Soldier's Endurance." At the evening service Rev. Mr. Peever will discuss the question whether Billy Sunday is a fraud or a prophet of God.

Discovery of the German Wireless Instrument Hidden in the Fireplace. Albert Brown and Aline Temple in a Tense Scene in "The White Feather" at the Grand Opera House Next Wednesday Night, Dec. 8th

WHO WILL WRITE THE MUSIC FOR THIS SONG?

Here is a chance for some local music-writer. Lt.-Col. Johnston has received the following communication:

"Somewhere in Peterborough,"
Nov. 30, 1915.

Dear 93rd,

If you like this and think it would do to sing, will someone please set it to music? I'd just love to hear some of you or all of you sing it:

There's a little valley in a land of plenty
Where the sun shines bright and birds sing sweet above;
In that valley, in a home, a mother's waiting
With a heart that's brimming with a tender love
For her boy has heard his King and Country calling,
And has left his home and love and gone away;
And although she pleads with him to do his "bit," still it
She waits with lonely heart to hear him say:

"I a coming back to Canada and you, dear;
I am coming where the sun will always shine;
When the Germans leave Berlin
I am coming back to you, dear mother mine."

There's a little valley 'cross the wide blue ocean
"Somewhere in France." A soldier brave and true
Is fighting for his Country's Right and Freedom,
And is thinking all the while, mother, of you;
For amid the shrapnel's din and cannon's thunder
He has sent this message, full of love and cheer:
"We are pressing daily on to Tipperary,
And we'll be in Berlin ere another year."

"I am coming back to Canada and you, dear;
I am coming where the sun will always shine;
When the Germans leave Berlin
And the Britishers get in,
I am coming back to you, dear mother mine."

GOOD WORK OF CAPT. RITCHIE AND C.G.E. BOYS

The Victoria Colonist, in the course of an elaborate article upon what has been accomplished in military organization and work in the 11th Military District, in British Columbia, refers in complimentary terms to the work of Capt. Ritchie, who went from Peterborough about a year ago, taking with him twelve or fifteen members of the staff of the Canadian General Electric Company — a combination that goes far to account for the efficiency shown. The Colonist says:

One of the most important branches of the headquarters service is the Royal Canadian Engineers, which is commanded by Captain Hazen Ritchie, who is a member of one of the oldest and best known Eastern Canadian families. Since the beginning of the mobilization of troops for overseas service he and the men of his corps have had many onerous duties to perform. They are charged with the care of barracks, drill halls, and other militia buildings. In the establishment of camps they must look after the water supply, the installation of drains and other facilities, both for the convenience and for the safeguarding of the health of the troops. The work performed at Vernon Camp alone, apart from their activities in many other parts of the Province, is sufficient evidence of their efficiency.

Driver Blamed For Accident

Finding of Coroner's Jury Respecting Death of Coleman Blewett

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—After hearing the testimony of automobile expert Visick that the car which struck and killed Coleman Blewett on St. Clair avenue last Saturday night was travelling over twenty miles an hour the coroner's jury inquiring into his death brought in a verdict of incompetence on the part of the driver.

Mr. C. Powell, the driver of the car, said that he was proceeding slowly, probably at the rate of ten or twelve miles an hour and that he didn't see the man until he struck him because the headlights of the car were dimmed in compliance with the new police order. Visick based his theory of the car's speed on the fact that the car would not have travelled so far after hitting the man.

PTE. CROZIER IS RETURNING HOME

Lindsay Soldier Was Taken Prisoner and Subsequently Exchanged

LINDSAY, Dec. 4.—Pte. Charles Crozier, one of the Lindsay heroes of the European War, is expected to arrive home to-day, and will be given a public reception.

It is also expected that two or three other Lindsay soldiers will be on the same train, although nothing definite can be ascertained.

Pte. Crozier is one of the many brave Canadians who answered the first call. He was severely wounded at St. Julien and was taken prisoner, later being exchanged and transported to England. He has since been in valided home, and it behoves the citizens of Lindsay to give him a right royal welcome.

Lt.-Col. Fee, O.C., 109th Battalion will have a guard of honour to welcome Pte. Crozier, and the regimental band will also be on hand. Citizens are asked to turn out in large numbers for the occasion.

Why It Is Dark.

Dr. Jackson is often asked why Roman Meal is dark in colour compared with other breakfast foods. It is because the nutritious parts of the grains are not removed when making this cereal food.

Dr. Jackson's Foman Meal consists of the whole grains, the dark parts as well as the light. It is the most nourishing food known to science. Guaranteed to relieve constipation or your money back.

Do not stir after making Roman Meal porridge or you spoil it.

WORK OF THE OUTFALL SEWER

The Advent of Winter Will Not Prevent Continuation of the Work

Satisfactory progress is being made in connection with the construction of the outfall sewer. The work has been extended into the city limits. There is very little change so far as the condition of the soil is concerned. The latter presents many difficulties to the men employed on the work. It has a tendency to run to quicksand. Steel piling is used to support the sides of the trench, while a concrete cradle is used to support the thirty-inch pipe that is being laid. Each day's work is kept open for a specified length of time until it is determined that the pipe has properly settled in its bed of concrete.

The work will be continued throughout the winter months.

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try putting a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a fact result worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel, or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman, we believe, can easily add from 5 to 8 pounds in the first 14 days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with food it aims to turn the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat, producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. Leading druggists in Peterboro and vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in each large box.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 to Sargol Co., 94 St. Antoine Street, Montreal, Que., and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid.

Typewriting Contest At Business College

An interesting contest and trial of typewriting speed of an instructive nature took place in the Peterborough Business College on Wednesday last. It demonstrated the improved efficiency of students at this College in the typewriting section.

The result of the test showed that the old records of speed in this school were broken. The old record was 47 words net per minute on the type writer. This was a ten-minute test and gave the following results:

Miss Bowie wrote, with errors deducted, 50.5 words per minute.

Miss Mabel Patterson wrote 49.1 words per minute.

Miss Elsie Taylor wrote 44.5 words per minute.

The speed attained by these students is considered very satisfactory, and entitles each to the initial certicate of proficiency received through the Peterborough College. Silver and gold medals are given for higher rates. The above students have only spent five months at this work.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy withor without glasses but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

By treating them with certain gases a Frenchman has succeeded in keeping eggs fresh for 10 months.

WHAT OTTAWA THINKS OF "WHITE FEATHER"

Here is what the Ottawa Citizen has to say of "The White Feather," the war play to be see at the Grand on Wednesday night next, Dec. 8th:

When Christopher Brent in "The White Feather," neatly turns the tabels on Carl Sanderson, the German spy, and saves the lives of many British troops, he proves that he does more than an ordinary "bit" for his king and country, and also concludes two hours of good acting in a clever play. For Mr. Albert Brown in the role of Christopher Brent really gives a remarkable performance, and the play, allowing for the extenuating circumstances furnished by the war, is really a remarkable play. If it does play upon the national vanities, if it is a little far-fetched, it does afford immeasurable amusement and quite a lot of food for thought and shows itself to be an ingeniously constructed and carefully thought out piece of work.

"The White Feather" has been here before, and the fact that there was an unusually large audience last night seems to indicate that the last time it was here it was liked and talked about. It was greatly appreciated by those who were present last night, and for the two remaining nights and Saturday matinee on which it will be seen again, there should be crowded houses. If only to see the acting of Albert Brown as Brent, a visit will be repaid, for he is the one character which is the life and soul of the play. It was an exceedingly clever idea of the authors, Lechmere Worrall and Haro Terry to make their hero outwardly a complete "ass," but actually a very resourceful and plucky British secret service an. Nothing could be more delightful than to watch how he fools those Germans with no sense of humour. In the presence of others he is just a good-natured fool, but the moment the coast is clear be momentarily changes to a quick-witted alert, and masterful man. Happily, only the audience is permitted to see both sides of his acting. The last scene is one of the most effective yet written.

To lavish praise on the part of Christopher Brent is not to say that the other parts are in any way overshadowed to extinction. The contrary is the case. Such characters as Mr. Preston, Carl Sanderson, Fritz, Miriam Lee, and Fraulein Schroeder are strong and well drawn, and in a less notable play would call for special praise. Mr. Brown's personation of Brent was a repetition of his success of the last occasion, with a little more added. Arthur Elliott as Preston, M.P., who flies into paroxysms of rage at the slightest provocation, is a fine piece of acting. One of the most convincing parts is that of Fraulein Schroeder, which is played by Louise Muldener with unqualified success. The part of Carl Sanderson, the spy and traitor, was acted with distinction by Stapleton Kent. He left a feeling that after all there was something of the gentleman in him. John Burkell as Fritz responds to the part with realism and force. Paget Hunter as Percival Pennicuick was quite up to the standard required to make the acting noteworthy.

Olive Temple as Mrs. Lee was excellent. Her acting left nothing to be desired. She was always winsome and brave. The character of Molly Preston was capably interpreted by Geraldine Beckwith, who wore lovely dresses and looked the part. Vira Rial, and Clementine Randolph as Mrs. Sanderson and Daphne Kidlington are two other very clever young ladies in the cast who lost no opportunity to make their parts convincing. The staging was faultless.

Trades and Labour Notes

BY THE O. S.

The first Wednesday falling so early in the month was probably the cause that kept the members away from the meeting this week; the scant attendance looked as if something had taken the boys unawares. President Hartley called the meeting to order at 8.30, and the chief topic of the evening was the consideration of the proposed change of hour for nomination of mayoralty and aldermanic candidates, the report of which has already been published.

Next meeting, December 15th.

BASKET SOCIAL AND ENTERTAINMENT

Held Last Evening at the Lily Lake School-house—A Good Programme

A basket social and entertainment was held last evening at the Lily Lake school house, under the auspices of the Union Sunday School. A large number was in attendance and the affair was a great success.

The programme was as follows:
Instrumental Solo—Mrs. Young.
Vocal Solo—Mr. Ernest Hopwood.
Recitation—Miss Irene Young.
Solo—Mr. Walter Farr.
Bachelor's Reverie—"Old Sweethearts."
Solo—Miss McIndoo.
Recitation—Miss Pentland.
Solo—Mr. Paul.
Recitation—Miss Stella Huston.
Monologue—Mr. Ernest Hopwood

At the conclusion of the programme the baskets were auctioned, and the sale, besides bringing good prices, created a great deal of merriment.

THE WEDDING OF PRESIDENT WILSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The wedding of President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt will occur on 18th Dec. it was announced at the White House to-day.

The White House statement is as follows:

"As previously stated, the ceremony will be performed at Mrs. Galt's home, 1308 Twentieth Street Northwest. The only guests will be Mrs. Galt's mother, her brothers and sister, the President's brother and sister, his daughters, and the members of his immediate household. No invitations will be issued."

ERNIE MARKS STOCK CO. COMPANY

Supporting Miss Kittie Marks

The attraction at the Grand Opera House, which will come for a stay of 3 days, commencing Thursday evening, Dec. 9, and for the balance of the week, with Saturday matinee, will be that noted and romantic attraction, the popular comedian, Mr. Ernie Marks, supported by his popular company, who have surrounded themselves with an exceptionally clever company of people, that are not only engaged for their dramatic ability, but as well for their knowledge of the musical experience they also have. The advance seat sale opens on Tuesday at the box office, and it is expected that this attraction will do banner business of the season. For the initial offering the company will present that well-known popular comedy-drama, "The Call of the Woods." The drama also has a sparkling comedy and many thrilling scenes, and the theatre-goers very rarely have an opportunity of witnessing a play of its class at the popular prices.

MRS. J. WILSON 372 GEORGE STREET, 'PHONE 35

"THE MESSIAH"

This immortal oratorio was composed by Geo. Frederick Handel in 1741, and the first performance was given in Dublin under Handal's own direction. Handel was English in everything but the accident of his birth, he had himself "naturalized" as an Englishman and he wrote nearly every one of his notable works in England and to English words.

English oratorio is one of the most successful branches of musical art. There is nothing in existence that can be called an English oratorio before Handel, and if it was necessary or us blindly to bow the knee to one single work, no doubt "The Messiah" would be our wisest choice.

No musical work has had such long continuous and enduring popularity as the Messiah. Much of the veneration with which it is regarded is doubtless owing to the subject, but much also must be attributed to the splendid music, some of which, "The Hallelujah Chorus," "Glory to God" and "Amen" is not for an age, but for all time. After all possible allowances have been made for associations, the "Hallelujah Chorus" remains one of the most colossal things in art. The effect on the London audience (on its early production) of the unison passage in the chorus, "For the Lord God omnipotent reigneth" was electrical; the whole audience along with the King rose to its feet and remained standing. This custom has been kept up ever since, and wherever the chorus is sung the audience all rise.

While writing the "Hallelujah Chorus" Handel said, "I see all Heaven open before me and the great God himself." He knew his Bible so well that for several of his oratorios he was his own librettist.

No composer has ever understood so well how to extract from a body of voices such massive effects by means so simple and yet so skilfully conceived.

In oratorio at least, Handel is the peoples' composer and such he must remain so long as oratorio holds its place with the public.

Handel possessed a mastry over a particular kind of choral technique, and no one but him has been able to procure that extraordinary balanced clearness of sound. His chords ring out like bells, and he can hurl himself straight through the rules of professorial orthodoxy with an effect astonishing in its brilliance.

"The Messiah" is the great Christmas oratorio and embodies the promise of the Messiah, the preparation for His advent, His titles and character, His birth, passion, death resurrection and ascension, and concludes with the triumphant song of the redeemed Heaven.

The Peterborough Choral Society will render this immortal masterpiece in St. Paul's church on Tuesday, 14th December.

PIMPLES SO BAD ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Also Terrible Rash on Arms. Itched and Burned. Used Cuticura. Eruption All Disappeared.

Creamy, Ontario.—"For a long time I suffered from pimples and blackheads the worst way and I got a terrible rash on my arms. When I got in bed at night and got warm I would have to scratch my arms till blood came. The pimples all came to matter festers and then they broke leaving lots of little marks on my face. I was ashamed to go out with my friends. They also itched and burned until I could have torn my face and arms. I could not sleep at night and I rubbed my arms till they bled.

"I thought I would try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I found great relief and in a short time my pimples and eruption all disappeared." (Signed) George W. Kay, Aug. 10, 1914.

WHY DID HE REFUSE TO HELP RED CROSS?

MORE CURLERS THAN EVER THIS SEASON

The Curling Rink will be opened on Monday morning for the convenience of members.

The new season opens with more members than were on the list when last season closed. A special general meeting of the whole club is called for Friday, 10th December, to ballot on 42 proposed new members. Mighty good prospect, isn't it, in view of the unusual conditions now prevailing?

The following curling skips were selected for the season by the management committee which met last night: T. Brightman, D. Davidson, J. H. Ferguson, R. Neill, Dr. T. N. Greer, A. R. Moore, J. W. McDermid, R. G. Sturgeon, R. M. Waddell, Dr. Wightman, S. J. Stubbs, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, W. H. Denham, W. D. Campbell, W. G. Ferguson, R. Harstone, H. F. Foote, G. H. Giroux, W. G. Morrow, W. M. Lang, F. M. Dela Fosse, J. H. Connal, Alex. C. Kay, R. P. Best, H. R. Martin, George Hill.

The skips will meet on Monday, 13th December, to draw members for their rinks.

DISCOLOURED OR SPOTTY SKIN EASILY PEELED OFF

The discoloring or roughening by which many skins are subject at this season, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolised wax spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There's no more effective way of banishing chaps, blotches, pimples, freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weather, worry or illness, are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in 1-2 pint of witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvellous transformation.

CLARKE'S NEW JEWELRY STORE

Brisk Christmas Business Coming to the Bright New Charlotte Street Jewelry Store

The new jewellery store of Mr. Frank W. Clarke, on Charlotte street, is already receiving a good share of the Christmas gift shopping. Christmas buying has set in earnestly at this store, and selections are made with enthusiasm and laid aside for Christmas. The show cases and wall fixtures gleam with handsome holiday presents, and the jewellery trays sparkle with fine and rare diamonds and precious pearls and stones. Sterling silver, and silverware brighten the display; while the array of rings, world famous gold watches, fobs, neck chains, clocks, cut glass and fine ebony goods give the shopper an unmatchable selection. The prices and variety make this new store a most satisfactory placeto buy, as it is claimed one can purchase here and make a substantial saving, as compared with the prices in the higher rent streets. The store will remain open in the evenings for the convenience of those who cannot do their shopping in the day time.

YOUR BRONCHIAL TUBES

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes with that rattling, choking cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head jars with every cough and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the inflamed membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from harmful drugs. Refuse substitutes.

APPLES AND FOWL PLENTIFUL ON THE MARKET

Potatoes on the Up-Grade—Eggs Quite Scarce—Hardwood Made Its First Appearance

The market this morning was more popular than ever, thanks to the weather man.

Prices, on the whole, continued firm, with potatoes on the up-grade. Several farmers were disposed to take advantage of conditions affecting the outside quotations and were asking $1.60 a bag. Some were offered at the old price of $1.50 a bag, while one dealer specified a price of $1.45 in five-bag lots.

Turnips brought 30 cents a bag. Onions $1.25 a bag. Beans 12 cents a quart. Live fowl $1.00 each. Dripping 30 cents a pound. Pears 40 cents a basket. Cabbage 40 cents a dozen. Pork 14 and 15 cents. Lamb 18 and 17 cents. Beef 10 and 11 cents a pound.

Basket Section.

Butter sold at 30 cents, though one woman was asking $1.

Eggs continue to be scarce and brought 40 cents a dozen. Several lots were offered at 38 cents, and one lady asked 37 cents, but she very obligingly explained that they were not laid this week.

Fowl still form the centre of attraction for the majority of buyers, and were offered at varying prices.

Perhaps there is no section of the market where such a variety of prices obtain. This may be accounted for by the fact that some vendors do not weigh their fowl before coming to town. For example, one lady was asking $1.30 for an 8-pound goose, or 20 cents a pound, while everywhere else on the market geese were not bringing any more than 12 or 13 cents a pound.

The following are samples of prices asked: Chickens, $1.00 to $1.40 a pair. A three-pound bird, dressed, brought 65 cents, while a 10-lb. pair, undressed, were quoted at $1.40.

Geese, 10 lbs. $1.35, 11½ lbs. $1.50, 11 lbs. $1.45, 14 lbs. $1.50.

Turkeys, 10 lbs. $1.35, 9 lbs. $1.75, 11 lbs. $2.00, 8 lbs. dressed, $1.90, 15 lbs. $2.00.

Another Method of Testing Fowl.

Last Saturday we ran across the pin-test of determining whether a fowl were young or ancient; to-day we saw another demonstration equally as unique. A worthy citizen with many whiskers was disposed to doubt the word of a good lady from the farm that her chickens were youthful. Taking a bird by the legs she bent them forcibly at the knee-joints. An audible cracking noise was heard which made the cold shivers run down your back. "There now," triumphed the lady, "if it had been old could I have done that?" We wonder!

Apples Galore.

The chief feature of the outside section this morning was the large quantity and variety of apples offered for sale. Jack Frost, no doubt has quite a bit to do with hurrying them to market.

The following are a few of the quotations:

Wolf Rivers $1.50 a bag, Snows $1.50 a bag, $3.00 a barrel, Wealthies $1.25 a bag, Russets $4.00 a barrel, Greenings $4.00 a barrel, Canada Reds $3.00 a barrel, Northern Spies $4.50, $5.00 and $6.00 a barrel; a few lots of second quality were offered at $3.50 and $4.00 a barrel; Kings $3.50 a barrel, Pewaukee $1.25 a bag, $3.00 a barrel, Bellflowers $1.50 a bag, $4.00 a barrel, Talman Sweets $2.00 a barrel, Baldwins $2.75 a barrel, Wagners $3.00 a barrel, Wallbridges $4.00 a barrel.

Special Features.

Head cheese made its initial appearance and sold for 15 cents a cake, each cake weighing a little over two pounds.

Hardwood appeared for the first time and sold at $6.00 a cord in 18-inch lengths.

Home-Made Cooking.

The ladies of Mrs. Kendry's Co-Workers' Bible Class of the George Street Methodist Sunday School occupied a table at the south end of the Market Hall, where they sold samples of their culinary art in and of the new sunday school building.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—General Townsend's forces that marched northward toward Bagdad are now retiring toward their base at Kutelamara, about 100 miles south-east of Bagdad, it was officially admitted by the India Office this morning.

Greatly superior Turkish forces caused the retirement, it was officially stated, thus ending for the time being the attempt to capture Bagdad. "Our casualties in Ctesiphon fighting totalled 4,167," the India Office announced. "On Tuesday night General Townsend fought a rearguard action and was forced by superior enemy forces to continue his retreat, losing 150 men. General Townsend's forces are now within a few miles of Kutelamar.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Geneva despatches to-day asserted that the Russian troops west of Riga have taken twelve miles of German trenches and 2,000 prisoners.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—It is understood here that General Joffre's new responsibilities will include that of co-ordinating all the Allied armies and directing operations on all fronts. [illegible] show that an Austrian submarine sunk the rescue boats of the steamer Algerian after they had been lowered when that vessel was torpedoed on November 25th.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The London press to-day applauded the action of the American State Department in requesting the recall of Captain Boy-Ed and Captain Von Papen, and agreed unanimously that the action was thoroughly justified. The Globe joined in this note of approval, but commented rather sarcastically.

"It is quite refreshing to find the American Government acting with vigor and independence," said the Globe.

"Notes, followed by notes, and then followed by nothing, had gravely lowered the dignity of the United States in the eye of friendly nations. It was time Washington did something more than display an admirable literary style."

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The British steamers Middleton and Clan McLeod have been sunk by submarines. Four of the Middleton's crew were killed. The Middleton was a 2,506-ton steamer from the port of Hull. The Clan McLeod was one of the great fleet of Clan liners, owned in Glasgow. She displaced 4,226 tons.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Dec. 4.—The recall of German Attache Boy-Ed and Military Attache Von Paper will be followed immediately by the demand for a recall of seven important Austrian diplomatic agents in America, the Providence Journal says to-day.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Despite current rumours, it is authoritatively stated that no successor to General Joffre will be appointed to take command on the Western front at the present. The above despatch from Paris is the first intimation that any successor has been considered for the French Commander-in-Chief, and comes as a distinct surprise. Only this week General Joffre was appointed to the supreme command of the French forces in Europe.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Advices received here to-day from usually reliable sources, say that the Austro-German forces in Serbia have now been reduced to scarcely more than 70,000 men. The majority of the Austrians are reported to have been detached and sent hastily to the Goritza front to withstand the hammering attack of the Italians.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Canadian transport Saxonia has arrived safely at a British port with 83 officers and 2,415 men aboard, including the 58th Battalion and a number one seige artillery from Ontario, and the 54th Battalion from British Columbia.

"CABIRIA SHOULD" BE SEEN BY ALL

Wonderful Photo-play at the Grand Opera House—Last Production To-night

"Cabiria," one of the most wonderful film productions ever done here, will be shown for the last time this evening, and should be greeted with a capacity house.

A large audience witnessed it at the Grand last evening. It ranks high as a picture of artistic beauty and of extreme educational value. Readers and students of ancient history will freshen their acquaintance with the stirring times of early Roman days. Many of the characters shown in the play are well known in history.

Apart from the historical association of the production, it is well worth going to see the wonderfully beautiful scenes of mountainous and in parts desert country. The film is being shown again this evening, and should not be missed.

SALE OF BATHROOM FIXTURES

The Christmas sale of bathroom supplies at R. G. Sturgeon & Co.'s, 202 Charlotte Street, furnishes a seasonable opportunity to add to the home adornment at a small outlay. These bathroom accessories were bought before the rise, and are offered now at much less than regular prices on account of the stock being too large. The finest of material is used on these fixtures. They will make Christmas gifts that will be valued. See advertisement in another column.

RED CROSS SOCIETY MONTHLY MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Red Cross Society will be held in the Teachers' Room of the Public Library, on Monday evening, 6th Dec., at 7.30 o'clock.

Notices of this meeting have been sent to presidents of societies doing Red Cross work, and it is hoped that all interested will attend.—Laura J. Davidson, Secretary.

Hitherto unknown properties have recently been discovered in peat. As fuel it has been in use from immemorial days, and it finds a peculiar favour as a certain beverage which no one may treat another to, now. But Professor Butlerley of King's College, London, has found out a new virtue in the humble peat. He has demonstrated its efficiency as a foreign power for vegetable growth. Two potatoes were planted in a box filled with peat and placed on a roof of King's College, one equal weight was sent overseas, each box of heatherised peat every week, and the box in row on foot as it could be with peat potatoes. This marvellous manifestation of growth in peat combined the gastronomic just has been equally marked in other vegetables. Radishes and tomatoes have been grown in pure peat entirely with the pure extract. 72 cucumbers, weighing 1 lb. each, have been sent from 10 original plants after a 10 days growth, and sold at Covent Garden before being grown to the ordinary way were ready to sell.

The new discovery opens up a wide vista of possibilities. Professor Butterley can no reason why peat extract should not prove equally efficacious in fattening our grazing cattle. The Government is interesting itself in the investigations, and has made a grant to King's College for a continuance of the experiments.

MG. PATCHWORK'S PEACE.

In France, as in Britain, the whole mind of the people is set upon victory, and victory which will secure for them and for Europe the end they grew more and more determined to achieve. The French are as opposed to any premature or patched-up [illegible] we see. Their losses have been far heavier than ours, and they know well the same effect on both sides of the Channel. On both, therefore, the means their dead are determined vain.—London Times.

WHAT OTTAWA THINKS OF "WHITE FEATHER"

Here is what the Ottawa Citizen has to say of "The White Feather," the war play to be see at the Grand on Wednesday night next, Dec. 8th:

When Christopher Brent in "The White Feather," neatly turns the tabels on Carl Sanderson, the German spy, and saves the lives of many British troops, he proves that he does more than an ordinary "bit" for his king and country, and also concludes two hours of good acting in a clever play. For Mr. Albert Brown in the role of Christopher Brent really gives a remarkable performance, and the play, allowing for the extenuating circumstances furnished by the war, is really a remarkable play. If it does play upon the national vanities, if it is a little far-fetched, it does afford immeasurable amusement and quite a lot of food for thought and shows itself to be an ingeniously constructed and carefully thought out piece of work.

"The White Feather" has been here before, and the fact that there was an unusually large audience last night seems to indicate that the last time it was here it was liked and talked about. It was greatly appreciated by those who were present last night, and for the two remaining nights and Saturday matinee on which it will be seen again, there should be crowded houses. If only to see the acting of Albert Brown as Brent, a visit will be repaid, for he is the one character which is the life and soul of the play. It was an exceedingly clever idea of the authors, Lechmere Worrall and Haro Terry to make their hero outwardly a complete "awse," but actually a very resourceful and plucky British secret service an. Nothing could be more delightful than to watch how he fools those Germans with no sense of humour. In the presence of others he is just a good-natured fool, but the moment the coast is clear he momentarily changes to a quick-witted alert, and masterful man. Happily, only the audience is permitted to see both sides of his acting. The last scene is one of the most effective yet written.

To lavish praise on the part of Christopher Brent is not to say that the other parts are in any way overshadowed to extinction. The contrary is the case. Such characters as Mr. Preston, Carl Sanderson, Fritz, Miriam Lee, and Fraulein Schroeder are strong and well drawn, and in a less notable play would call for special praise. Mr. Brown's personation of Brent was a repetition of his success of the last occasion, with a little more added. Arthur Elliott as Preston, M.P., who flies into paroxysms of rage at the slightest provocation, is a fine piece of acting. One of the most convincing parts is that of Fraulein Schroeder, which is played by Louise Muldener with unqualified success. The part of Carl Sanderson, the spy and traitor, was acted with distinction by Stapleton Kent. He left a feeling that after all there was something of the gentleman in him. John Burkell as Fritz responds to the part with realism and force. Paget Hunter as Percival Pennicuick was quite up to the standard required to make the acting noteworthy.

Olive Temple as Mrs. Lee was excellent. Her acting left nothing to be desired. She was always winsome and brave. The character of Molly Preston was capably interpreted by Geraldine Beckwith, who wore lovely dresses and looked the part. Vira Rial, and Clementine Randolph as Mrs. Sanderson and Daphne Kidlington are two other very clever young ladies in the cast who lost no opportunity to make their parts convincing. The staging was faultless.

Trades and Labour Notes

BY THE O. S.

The first Wednesday falling so early in the month was probably the cause that kept the members away from the meeting this week; the scant attendance looked as if something had taken the boys unawares. President Hartley called the meeting to order at 8.30, and the chief topic of the evening was the consideration of the proposed change of hour for nomination of mayoralty and aldermanic candidates, the report of which has already been published.

Next meeting, December 15th.

"THE MESSIAH"

This immortal oratorio was composed by Geo. Frederick Handel in 1741, and the first performance was given in Dublin under Handal's own direction. Handel was English in everything but the accident of his birth, he had himself "naturalized" as an Englishman and he wrote nearly every one of his notable works in England and to English words.

English oratorio is one of the most successful branches of musical art. There is nothing in existence that can be called an English oratorio before Handel, and if it was necessary or us blindly to bow the knee to one single work, no doubt "The Messiah" would be our wisest choice.

No musical work has had such long continuous and enduring popularity as the Messiah. Much of the veneration with which it is regarded is doubtless owing to the subject, but much also must be attributed to the splendid music, some of which, "The Hallelujah Chorus," "Glory to God" and "Amen" is not for an age, but for all time. After all possible allowances have been made for associations, the "Hallelujah Chorus" remains one of the most colossal things in art. The effect on the London audience (on its early production) of the unison passage in the chorus, "For the Lord God omnipotent reigneth" was electrical; the whole audience along with the King rose to its feet and remained standing. This custom has been kept up ever since, and wherever the chorus is sung the audience all rise.

While writing the "Hallelujah Chorus" Handel said, "I see all Heaven open before me and the great God himself." He knew his Bible so well that for several of his oratorios he was his own librettist.

No composer has ever understood so well how to extract from a body of voices such massive effects by means so simple and yet so skilfully conceived.

In oratorio at least, Handel is the peoples' composer and such he must remain so long as oratorio holds its place with the public.

Handel possessed a mastry over a particular kind of choral technique, and no one but him has been able to procure that extraordinary balanced clearness of sound. His chords ring out like bells, and he can hurl himself straight through the rules of professorial orthodoxy with an effect astonishing in its brilliance.

"The Messiah" is the great Christmas oratorio and embodies the promise of the Messiah, the preparation for His advent, His titles and character, His birth, passion, death resurrection and ascension, and concludes with the triumphant song of the redeemed Heaven.

The Peterborough Choral Society will render this immortal masterpiece in St. Paul's church on Tuesday, 14th December.

BASKET SOCIAL AND ENTERTAINMENT

Held Last Evening at the Lily Lake School-house—A Good Programme

A basket social and entertainment was held last evening at the Lily Lake school house, under the auspices of the Union Sunday School. A large number was in attendance and the affair was a great success.

The programme was as follows:
Instrumental Solo—Mrs. Young.
Vocal Solo—Mr. Ernest Hopwood.
Recitation—Miss Irene Young.
Solo—Mr. Walter Farr.
Bachelor's Reverie—"Old Sweethearts."
Solo—Miss McIndoo.
Recitation—Miss Pentland.
Solo—Mr. Paul.
Recitation—Miss Stella Huston.
Monologue—Mr. Ernest Hopwood

At the conclusion of the programme the baskets were auctioned, and the sale, besides bringing good prices, created a great deal of merriment.

The White House statement is as follows:

"As previously stated, the ceremony will be performed at Mrs. Galt's home, 1308 Twentieth Street Northwest. The only guests will be Mrs. Galt's mother, her brothers and sister, the President's brother and sister, his daughters, and the members of his immediate household. No invitations will be issued."

ERNIE MARKS STOCK COMPANY

Supporting Miss Kittie Marks

The attraction at the Grand Opera House, which will come for a stay of 3 days, commencing Thursday evening, Dec. 9, and for the balance of the week, with Saturday matinee, will be that noted and romantic attraction, the popular comedian, Mr. Ernie Marks, supported by his popular company, who have surrounded themselves with an exceptionally clever company of people, that are not only engaged for their dramatic ability, but as well for their knowledge of the musical experience they also have. The advance seat sale opens on Tuesday at the box office, and it is expected that this attraction will do banner business of the season. For the initial offering the company will present that well-known popular comedy-drama, "The Call of the Woods." The drama also has a sparkling comedy and many thrilling scenes, and the theatre-goers very rarely have an opportunity of witnessing a play of its class at the popular prices

The Royal Theatre has cut out Vaudeville for some months. Still, this theatre has now secured a Vaudeville act of thrilling interest and mirth provoking character for Monday, Dec. 6th, Dec. 7th and Dec. 8th. This unparalleled attraction is entitled "McGlynn's Masquerade." This show includes a company of well-known actors in a big comedy hit, including trained dogs. These are war times, so the Royal is putting on a 60-cent show for 10 cents including new pictures.

PIMPLES SO BAD ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Also Terrible Rash on Arms. Itched and Burned. Used Cuticura. Eruption All Disappeared.

Creasy, Ontario.—"For a long time I suffered from pimples and blackheads the worst way and I got a terrible rash on my arms. When I got in bed at night and got warm I would have to scratch my arms till blood came. The pimples all came to matter formers and then they broke leaving lots of little marks on my face. I was ashamed to go out with my friends. They also itched and burned until I could have torn my face and arms. I could not sleep at night and I rubbed my arms till they bled.

"I thought I would try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I found great relief and I think they pimples and eruption I all appeared." (Signed) George W. Aug. 10, 1914.

WHY DID HE REFUSE TO HELP RED CROSS?

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Who is the man employed in the Car Inspector's Department of the G.T.R. who refused to give his share each month to the Peterborough Red Cross? Does the appeal of the Patriotic Society "to fight or pay" not strike him? How can he expect to be respected in a community where every man alike is expected to do his bit?

MORE CURLERS THAN EVER THIS SEASON

The Curling Rink will be opened on Monday morning for the convenience of members.

The new season opens with more members than were on the list when last season closed. A special general meeting of the whole club is called for Friday, 10th December, to ballot on 42 proposed new members. Mighty good prospect, isn't it, in view of the unusual conditions now prevailing?

The following curling skips were selected for the season by the management committee which met last night: T. Brightman, D. Davidson, J. H. Ferguson, R. Neill, Dr. T. N. Greer, A. R. Moore, J. W. McDermid, R. G. Sturgeon, R. M. Waddell, Dr. Wightman, S. J. Stubbs, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, W. H. Denham, W. D. Campbell, W. G. Ferguson, R. Harstone, H. F. Foote, G. H. Giroux, W. G. Morrow, W. M. Lang, F. M. Dela Fosse, J. H. Connal, Alex. C. Kay, R. P. Best, H. R. Martin, George Hill.

The skips will meet on Monday, 13th December, to draw members for their rinks.

DISCOLOURED OR SPOTTY SKIN EASILY PEELED OFF

The discolouring or roughening to which many skins are subject at this season, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolised wax spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There's no more effective way of banishing chaps, blotches, pimples, freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, strikingly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weather, worry or illness, are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in 1/2 pint of witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces A truly marvellous transformation.

CLARKE'S NEW JEWELRY STORE

Brisk Christmas Business Coming to the Bright New Charlotte Street Jewelry Store

The new jewellery store of Mr. Frank W. Clarke, on Charlotte street, is already receiving a good share of the Christmas gift shopping. Christmas buying has set in earnestly at this store, and selections are made with enthusiasm and laid aside for Christmas. The show cases and wall fixtures gleam with handsome holiday presents, and the jewellery trays sparkle with fine and rare diamonds and precious pearls and stones. Sterling silver, and silverware brighten the display; while the array of rings, world famous gold watches, fobs, neck chains, clocks, cut glass and fine ebony goods give the shopper an unmatchable selection. The prices and variety make this new store a most satisfactory placeto buy, as it is claimed one can purchase here and make a substantial saving, as compared with the prices in the big great streets. The store will remain open in the evenings for the convenience of those who cannot do their shopping in the day time.

YOUR BRONCHIAL TUBES

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes with that paralyzing tickling cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head jars with every cough and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from harmful drugs. Refuse substitutes.

APPLES AND FOWL PLENTIFUL ON THE MARKET

Potatoes on the Up-Grade—Eggs Quite Scarce—Hardwood Made Its First Appearance

The market this morning was more popular than ever, thanks to the weather man.

Prices, on the whole, continued firm, with potatoes on the up-grade. Several farmers were disposed to take advantage of conditions affecting the outside quotations and were asking $1.60 a bag. Some were offered at the old price of $1.30 a bag, while one dealer specified a price of $1.45 in five-bag lots.

Turnips brought 20 cents a bag. Onions $1.25 a bag. Beans 15 cents a quart. Live fowl $1.00 each. Dripping 30 cents a pound. Pears 40 cents a basket. Cabbage 40 cents a dozen. Pork 14 and 15 cents. Lamb 18 and 17 cents. Beef 10 and 11 cents a pound.

Basket Section.

Butter sold at 30 cents, though one woman was asking $1.

Eggs continue to be scarce and brought 40 cents a dozen. Several lots were offered at 38 cents, and one lady asked 37 cents, but she very obligingly explained that they were not laid this week.

Fowl still form the centre of attraction for the majority of buyers, and were offered at varying prices.

Perhaps there is no section of the market where such a variety of prices obtain. This may be accounted for by the fact that some vendors do not weigh their fowl before coming to town. For example, one lady was asking $1.00 for an 8-pound goose, or 20 cents a pound, while everywhere else on the market geese were not bringing any more than 15 or 18 cents a pound.

The following are samples of prices asked: Chickens, $1.00 to $1.40 a pair. A three-pound bird, dressed, brought 65 cents, while a 10-lb. pair, undressed, were quoted at $1.40.

Geese, 10 lbs. $1.35, 11½ lbs. $1.50, 11 lbs. $1.45, 14 lbs. $1.50.

Turkeys, 10 lbs. $1.35, 9 lbs. $1.75, 11 lbs. $2.00, 8 lbs. dressed, $1.90, 16 lbs. $3.00.

Another Method of Testing Fowl.

Last Saturday we ran across the pin-test of determining whether a fowl were young or ancient; to-day we saw another demonstration equally as unique. A worthy citizen with many whiskers was disposed to doubt the word of a good lady from the farm that her chickens were youthful. Taking a bird by the legs she bent them forcibly at the knee-joints. An audible cracking noise was heard which made the cold shivers run down your back. "There now," triumphed the lady, "if it had been old could I have done that?" We wonder!

Apples Galore.

The chief feature of the outside section this morning was the large quantity and variety of apples offered for sale. Jack Frost, no doubt has quite a bit to do with hurrying them to market.

The following are a few of the quotations:

Wolf Rivers $1.50 a bag, Snows $1.50 a bag, $3.00 a barrel, Wealthies $1.35 a bag, Russets $4.00 a barrel, Greenings $4.00 a barrel, Canada Reds $3.00 a barrel, Northern Spies $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00 a barrel; a few lots of second quality were offered at $3.00 and $4.00 a barrel; Kings $3.50 a barrel, Pewaukee $1.25 a bag, $3.00 a barrel, Bellflowers $1.50 a bag, $4.00 a barrel, Talman Sweets $3.00 a barrel, Baldwins $2.75 a barrel, Wagners $3.00 a barrel, Wallbridges $3.00 a barrel.

Special Features.

Head cheese made its initial appearance and sold for 15 cents a cake, each cake weighing a little over two pounds.

Hardwood appeared for the first time and sold at $6.00 a cord in 16-inch lengths.

Home-Made Cooking.

The ladies of Mrs. Kendry's Co-Workers' Bible Class of the George Street Methodist Sunday School occupied a table at the south end of the Market Hall, where they sold samples of their culinary art in and of the new sunday school building.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—General Townshend's forces that marched northward toward Bagdad are now retiring toward their base at Kutelamara, about 100 miles south-east of Bagdad, it was officially admitted by the India Office this morning.

Greatly superior Turkish forces checked the retirement, it was officially stated, thus ending for the time being the attempt to capture Bagdad. "Our casualties in Ctesiphon fighting totalled 4,567," the India Office announced. "On Tuesday night General Townshend fought a rearguard action and was forced by superior enemy forces to continue his retreat, losing 150 men. General Townsend's forces are now within a few miles of Kutelamar.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Geneva despatches to-day asserted that the Russian troops west of Riga have taken twelve miles of German trenches and 2,000 prisoners.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—It is understood here that General Joffre's new responsibilities will include that of co-ordinating all the Allied armies and directing operations on all fronts. [illegible] show that an Austrian submarine sunk the rescue boats of the steamer Algerian after they had been lowered when that vessel was torpedoed on November 25th.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The London press to-day applauded the action of the American State Department in requesting the recall of Captain Boy-Ed and Captain Von Papen, and agreed unanimously that the action was thoroughly justified. The Globe joined in this note of approval, but commented rather sarcastically.

"It is quite refreshing to find the American Government acting with vigor and independence," said the Globe.

"Notes, followed by notes, and then followed by nothing, had gravely lowered the dignity of the United States in the eye of friendly nations. It was time Washington did something more than display an admirable literary style."

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The British steamers Middleton and Clan McLeod have been sunk by submarines. Four of the Middleton's crew were killed. The Middleton was a 2,506-ton steamer from the port of Hull. The Clan McLeod was one of the great fleet of Clan liners, owned in Glasgow. She displaced 4,220 tons.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Dec. 4.—The recall of German Attache Boy-Ed and Military Attache Von Paper will be followed immediately by the demand for a recall of seven important Austrian diplomatic agents in America, the Providence Journal says to-day.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Despite current rumours, it is authoritatively stated that no successor to General Joffre will be appointed to take command on the Western front at the present. The above despatch from Paris is the first intimation that any successor has been considered for the French Commander-in-Chief, and comes as a distinct surprise. Only this week General Joffre was appointed to the supreme command of the French forces in Europe.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Advices received here to-day from usually reliable sources, say that the Austro-German forces in Serbia have now been reduced to scarcely more than 70,000 men. The majority of the Austrians are reported to have been detached and sent hastily to the Goritza front to withstand the hammering attack of the Italians.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Canadian transport Saxonia has arrived safely at a British port with 83 officers and 6,412 men aboard, including the 58th Battalion and a number one siege artillery from Ontario, and the 54th Battalion from British Columbia.

RED CROSS SOCIETY MONTHLY MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Red Cross Society will be held in the Teachers' Room of the Public Library, on Monday evening, 6th Dec., at 7.30 o'clock.

"CABIRIA SHOULD" BE SEEN BY ALL

Wonderful Photo-play at the Grand Opera House—Last Production To-night

"Cabiria," one of the most wonderful film productions ever seen here, will be shown for the last time this evening, and should be greeted with a capacity house.

A large audience witnessed it at the Grand last evening. It ranks high as a picture of artistic beauty and of extreme educational value. Readers and students of ancient history will find their acquaintance with the stirring times of early Roman days. Many of the characters shown in the play are well known in history.

Apart from the historical association of the production, it is well worth going to see the wonderfully beautiful scenes of mountainous and in parts desert country. The film is being shown again this evening, and should not be missed.

SALE OF BATHROOM FIXTURES

The Chiffmas sale of bathroom supplies at R. G. Sturgeon & Co.'s, 202 Charlotte Street, furnishes a seasonable opportunity to add to the home adornment at a small outlay. NO PATCHWORK PEACE.

In France, as in Britain, the whole mind of the people is set upon victory, and victory which will secure for them and for Europe the ends they grew more and more determined to achieve. The French are as opposed to any premature or patched-up peace as we are. Their losses have been far heavier than ours, and they have had the whole effort in both wars of the Channel. On both, those who mourn their dead are determined vain.—London Times.

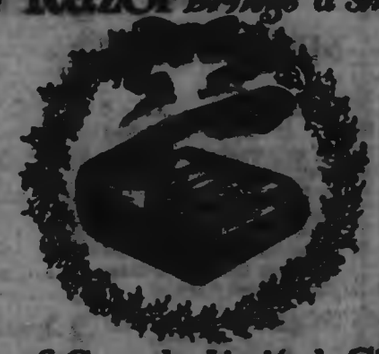
Tied with Ribbon and Holly
The Gillette Safety Razor brings a smile on Christmas Morning

What lucky thing can you do for a young man than to put within his reach—FREE—every day, the finest shave in the world!

That's what the gift of a Gillette means! The new "Bulldog", with its sturdy grip and splendid lightness, makes a strong appeal to the young man. Or perhaps he'd like an "Aristocrat" or a Pocket Edition.

Gillette "Bulldog", $5.00—"Aristocrat", $5.00—Standard Set, $5.00—Pocket Editions, $5.00 to $6.00—Combination Sets, $5.00 up.



Christmas also gives you a chance to put Father or Uncle in touch with real shaving luxury in the form of a Gillette Combination Set.

If he has never had a Gillette, its velvet shave will be a revelation and a daily delight.

If he already has a Gillette, the Combination feature will be an added convenience, particularly when he is travelling.

About the finest "little gift" for a Gillette user is a Packet of Blades—50c. and $1.00.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

ELECTRICS ARE ADMITTED INTO THE O.H.A. RANKS

At the meeting of the O.H.A. executive last night, the two new hockey clubs in Peterborough, the Electrics and the 93rd Regiment teams, were admitted into the Intermediate O.H.A. series.

The Electrics were represented by Messrs. C. N. Gordon, Don. Shook, M. J. Maher, and Bert Rose, who appeared before the executive and took up the matter of a new club for Peterborough with them.

Mr. J. P. Bond, a member of last year's executive, also appeared before the committee, and after hearing his statement, the O.H.A. executive raised his suspension and restored him to good standing.

Many O.H.A. Men Are Now In Khaki

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—Retiring President Charles Farquharson's address at the O.A.H. convention to-day was well received. Mr. Farquharson said that notwithstanding the unsettled conditions existing throughout the country, the O.H.A. had a very successful season. With very slight exception we were favoured with ideal hockey weather throughout the entire season, and the result was that there were very few postponements, most of the games being played according to schedule. The President added:

"The legislation offered to permit and allow our soldier boys to participate in our games is particularly worthy, and no doubt will receive your sanction and approval. We who have been actively associated with the affairs of this association have every reason to feel proud of the record of the various clubs in responding to the country's appeal for men to volunteer for active service. From information which our secretary has gathered together, we find that very few clubs in the association are not represented, and the ranks of most of them have been greatly depleted by the men who have answered their country's call. All honour to them and to all our Canadian boys who have shown the right spirit and have not lagged when the call was sent forth."

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President — James T. Sutherland, Kingston (acclamation.)

First Vice-President—Sheriff J. Paxton, Whitby (acclamation.)

Second Vice-President—R. M. Glover, Peterborough (acclamation.)

C.A.A.U. Governor—Francis Nelson, Toronto (acclamation.)

Treasurer—Dwight J. Turner, Midland (acclamation.)

Secretary—W. A. Hewitt, Toronto, (acclamation.)

Executive Committee—A. E. Copeland of Midland; Geo. B. Dawson, of Sarnia; Frank Hyde, of Woodstock; C. L. McNabb, of Orillia; two to be selected by the Association.

A change was made in the rules, whereby enlisted players no matter where located, may play with their home team, their regimental team, or with any team in the town in which their company is or battalion is located. The O.H.A. will see to it that only men who are properly enlisted and passed for overseas service are granted these options.

An amendment proposed by James T. Sutherland of Kingston, automatically reinstating all suspended hockey players who enlist, was carried.

GOOD HEALTH

(By Charles F. Thwing, LL.D., Pres. of Western Reserve University.)

Modern life is dynamic, not static. It is largely, perhaps too largely, competitive. It spells force. The demands made on it and the demands which it makes, within two generations, have increased fourfold. The strain to which one is subjected is constant and mighty. The crises through which one passes are intense. The fit survive, the unfit perish.

For bearing one's part in this competitive struggle, for doing one's work in this day and world, for making one's self fit, good health is an absolute necessity. This necessity is most apparent in the character and service of the modern executive, in business or politics. The business executive has been largely created in modern times—created by immense and complex industrial processes.

His rewards in money and in other satisfactions are large. For his service good health is a primary requisite. His success depends on soundness of judgment, on energy, on patience, on fact, and, above all else, on a certain staying power which must hold good and strong beneath all strains and in all crises.

I notice that the most outstanding railroad officers in America have large necks and heavy shoulders. The same characteristics are found in the members of the House of Commons. Good health, embodied in staping power, seems to spring from neck and chest.

One should have enough of health to burn, and yet never burn it; enough of health to carry one over crisis, and ye crises should never be courted; enough of health to stand the daily racket, and yet disturbance and annoyance should never be invited; enough of health to give an impression of reserve power, and never use up the reserve.

For evidences of any lack of good health one should be on the alert. Nervousness, undue anxiety and irritability are among the signs.

"I must take a vacation," said my friend. "I get cross too easily." It is a happy condition that many industrial and mercantile concerns are keenly alive to the physical soundness of their associates. Health is communal, and not simply an individual matter.

This precious asset may be conserved and increased in five ways:

1. By proper food, enough and simple.

2. By proper sleep, eight hours at least.

3. By proper exercise, an hour a day at least in the open air, in rapid walking or riding or golfing.

4. By one day of rest each week, a rest day which shall not mean lassitude and idleness, but downright change of one's thinking, doing and interests.

5. By an avocation carried on with one's vocation. Each avocation should help the vocation, the vocation the avocation.

These suggestions make the five-pointed star which stands over the cradle of sound health.

Orderly officer for Monday—Lieut. W. B. Marling.

2, Parades—

The Battalion will parade to-night at the armouries at 7.45 p.m. for the purpose of tendering a reception to returned soldiers from the front.

The Battalion will leave at 8 o'clock, the Band leading, followed by motor-cars and carriages, the Battalion proper in rear of motor cars and carriages.

The route will be as follows: From the Armouries, Murray street to George, George to Market Hall.

All soldiers are cordially invited to attend the reception this evening.

Divine Service.—

The Battalion will parade for divine service to-morrow as under:

Protestants— Will parade for divine service to George street Methodist church at 10.30 a.m. the 5th inst.

The Senior Officer present will take command.

Roman Catholics—The Roman Catholics will parade for divine service at 10 a.m. Sunday, 5th December under command of Lieut. R. P. A. Crisp.

3, Retreat—

Retreat will sound for the ensuing week at 4.40 p.m.

4, Strength—

The following men having enlisted are taken on the strength of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F. and posted to the companies placed opposite their names from the dates mentioned:

Pte. John McGarvey—'A' Co'y, Dec. 2nd, 1915.

Pte. E. W. Bird—'A' Co'y, Dec. 4th, 1915.

5, Promotions—The Commanding Officer has been pleased to make the following appointments, provisionally:

To be lance corporal—Pte. J. Lemay.

To be lance corporal—Pte. R. Lavery.

6, Spitting—

The habit of spitting is as a rule unnecessary and is a disgusting habit, besides being a menace to the public health, and is contrary to the city ordinances.

7, Obscene Language—

Obscene, bad or boisterous language is strictly prohibited and every effort should be made to suppress it. There is nothing a person can do to show their depravity and degeneration more, and every effort will be made to eliminate this vile practice.

8, Loitering in the Streets—

The practice of loitering on the streets in public must be stopped at once and any N.C.O. or man refusing to obey an order by either the military or civil police commits a punishable offence and after this order has been read no excuse will be tolerated.

9, General Behaviour—

The general behaviour of the men has a great influence on recruiting, and the Commanding Officer hopes that the splendid name of the 93rd O.S. Battalion, C.E.F., will be as good if not better in the future as in the past. It is the duty of any soldier to check any semblance of rowdyism on the part of his comrades on the street.

10, Wastage of Food—

It has been brought to the attention of the Commanding Officer that there has been a serious wastage of food and in some cases an insufficient supply.

This question is probably a difficult one to overcome at the present moment, but care should be exercised that too much is not served to any individual at once. There is plentiful supply and it is considered that if a normal helping was served for the first time then if any man wished to have his plate replenished it is a small matter for him to send to the kitchen for it.

As the rations supplied are considered to be of the very best quality and the supply ample for all, a little judgment on the part of those serving will ensure each and every man a generous sufficiency.

11, Board of Officers—

The Board of Officers detailed in Battalion Order No. 20 of 29th November to report upon and inquire into the condition of the boots condemned by them of the 24th ult will re-assemble to take further evidence on Monday, 6th ult.

12, Leave of Absence—

Leave of absence has been granted to Capt. James Rollins from 10 a. m. Dec. 5th to 1 p.m. Dec. 5th.

W. G. BAILEY,
For Lt.-Col. Johnston,
O. C. Commanding 93rd O.S. Battalion, C.E.F.

Twenty-one men of the 14th Regiment, Kingston, who have been on guard duty in Kingston have been transferred to the 109th Lindsay Battalion. Must be former residents of Victoria or Haliburton, or how do they get in under the new regulations that county battalions must recruit in their own counties!

Lieut. J. A. New, of Peterborough is in charge of the 139th Battalion recruits at Warkworth, who number some twenty-five men. The 139th hope to raise a full company in the Warkworth district. Sergt.-Major Oxley of Peterborough has been on duty there, but will shortly return to Cobourg, where he has been appointed regimental sergeant-major.

A CHEERFUL NOTE.

Writing to his brother who resides on Rogers Street, East City, Sergt.-Major James Hamon, of the Royal Garrison Artillery, sounds a cheerful note. He writes: "I'm very much alive still, and enjoying excellent health; and further—we are winning You can take that from me. . . . Weeks and months roll by, and if it was not for a calendar we would not know the day of the month. All days alike, and little more noise at times than others, but that continuous hitting and receiving without ceasing day and night, and the continual good cheer underlying the stern resolve to win. We hold the master hand now; it is only a matter of time, and I have a strong impression it will be short."

The writer of the above is with the new siege artillery which General French referred to so highly a short while ago as a weapon that would blow the Boches out of anywhere.

Mr. P. G. S. Webb has received an interesting letter from Sergt. F. A. Thomas, of the Peterbosough detachment, 21st Battalion. Sergt. Thomas states they are in reserve about one and a half miles to the rear of the firing line. At the time of writing there were no Peterborough casualties. The writer describes the manner in which the Canadian dead are disposed of. A cemetery for this purpose is maintained at the rear of the line. Each grave is marked and duly registered for identification purposes.

Norwood has undertaken to raise a quota for the 93rd Battalion. Already twenty men have expressed their willingness to join, and it is expected that the required twenty-five will be secured in a day or two. The men will be quartered in Norwood and receive their training there. It is likely the 93rd Band will visit Norwood in a short time and a route march of at least part of the battalion to Norwood may also be arranged later on. The men would sleep at Norwood and return to Peterborough the next day or the day after. The Norwood quota will form part of one of the new companies of the 93rd.

A squad of twenty Peterborough artillery men in the 33rd Battery, who have been chosen to go in the next overseas draft, are home on their final leave from Kingston, saying good-bye to their friends. The members of the draft will take part in the reception to the returned soldiers to-night and are asked to meet at the Allies' Rifle Parlours, corner of George and Charlotte streets at 7.45 o'clock this evening. Lieut. Hamilton of Peterborough, is going with the draft.

Pte. E. Bird, one of the Peterborough members of the 33rd Battery, has been transferred to the 93rd Battalion, and was on duty to-day.

Pte. W. Hicks of Burleigh Falls, reported for duty with the 93rd this morning.

Has Returned.

Private Louis Spence, of the forty-eighth Highlanders, Toronto, is in the city, the guest of his brother, Mr. C. A. G. Spence, Sanitary Inspector. Private Spence enlisted with the First Canadian Contingent, and seeing considerable service in France and Belgium, was gassed. He has partially recovered from the effects of the poison. Private Spence served his King and country during the South African war.

SHE GAINED 26 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 26 pounds in

Y. M. C. A. WILL BE HEADQUARTERS FOR MEN OF THE 93rd

That is the Plan of the Officers of the Y. M. C. A.—Soldiers Will Be Entitled to Enter Teams in the Different Events.

RECEPTION DEC. 18th

Twenty-five committee men gathered at a supper conference in the new dining hall Friday evening, at which time the re-organization of the committees for the present season was completed. The committee chairmen are as follows: Social, W. B. Warne; Membership, M. W. Lytle; Educational, J. J. Howden; Physical, H. R. Cowan; Religious Work, Jos. Wearing; Finance, Thos. Barrie; Property, J. H. Connal. The re-organization of the last two committees was not required as they have been fully organized and actively engaged in the work. The President, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., was in the chair and opened the discussion with a short address.

Wm. Richardson, on behalf of the Property committee, stated that it was expected that the alterations to the buildings would be completed about December 15. The Gen. Sec., C. N. Meserve, offered a few suggestions on behalf of the members of the staff and a general discussion followed, the result being that December 12 to 18 was agreed on as an opening week for the building and it is expected there will be a great rallying of the members and friends of the Association. There will be events on each afternoon and evening, closing with a reception to the 93rd Batt. on Saturday evening, December 18, if this date is agreeable to the officers and men.

An invitation is to be extended to the 93rd Batt. to have representative teams in basketball, bowling, checkers, chess and other competitive events which will form a part of this year's schedule. Special membership tickets will no doubt be issued to the men of the 93rd Batt. so they may be free to use the Association privileges during their leisure hours. If he full programme is carried out as planned more than 75 events per week will be carried out during the winter season. Last year's daily attendance averaged 250, but it is expected that as a result of stationing the 93rd Batt. in Peterborough the building will be one of the busiest spots in the city, and will experience a most successful season.

The careful checking of the Association records and information received from friends of the Association has increased the honour roll to 130, the latest addition being Lang Thompson, an active member of the Association who left Peterborough for Winnipeg last spring and who has now enlisted with the Strathcona Horse. We trust that the friends of the Association will help the secretaries in keeping the honour roll correct, for it is a difficult job to keep an exact note of the addresses of our 600 or more members and some have enlisted from other cities than Peterborough.

Monday evening at 6.30 o'clock the Boys' Cabinet of the Association will serve a banquet to the 10 members of the Association who are home from Kingston for the last time prior to leaving for overseas. It is expected that an enjoyable time will be spent by all.

Important To Property Owners and Intending Purchasers

The undersigned respectfully announce the opening of a real estate business in the premises formerly occupied by C. J. Carroll & Co., at No. 372 Water Street. All branches of the business will be carefully and systematically attended to, and with an experience of several years in the real estate business avoiding any serious misunderstandings in the past by a thorough explanation of every detail in connection with a transfer of property or other important matters connected with the business. We hope that by a strict adherence to those principles, which include equity and justice, to merit a share of public patronage.

RECRUITING ERRORS.

Among curiosities arising out of Lord Derby's appeal is the case of an interned alien who received a circular. But the most incongruous of all is where six wounded soldiers in a London hospital have been requested to "consider" their "position"! URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

WEDDING BELLS

ELLIOTT—LA VASSEUR.

A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at All Saints' Rectory on December 2nd, when Miss Eva M. La Vasseur became the bride of Mr. Vincent Elliott. The bride looked very becoming in her travelling suit of navy blue, with black picture hat. Miss Annie Chapman made a pretty bridesmaid, while Mr. Stuart Doig supported the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott received many useful gifts, showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held by their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott will reside on Olive Avenue, city, where Mrs. Elliott will receive after the New Year.

GOODCHILD—HUNTER.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 2, in Knox Presbyterian church, Peterborough, when Lillian Marjorie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hunter, Lansdowne street, was united in marriage to William Carl Goodchild, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Goodchild, Toronto.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked smart in a semi-military blue travelling suit and wore the groom's gift, a set of wolf furs, with corsage bouquet of lily of the valley, roses and sweet peas.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. MacKenzie, B. A., and choice music was rendered by Mr. Kenyon.

Afterwards a reception was given at the Empress Hotel. Only immediate friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Goodchild left on the 3.43 train for their future home in Toronto.

OBITUARY

JOHN LEAHY.

The death occurred yesterday at the residence of his brother, Mr. David Leahy, Lot 8, Concession 6 Douro, of John Leahy, at the age of 48 years. He was born in Douro, and had resided in that township until his death. He was unmarried, and is survived by several brothers and sisters.

The funeral will take place on Monday at 9.30 from the above residence to St. Joseph's Church. Interment in St. Joseph's Cemetery.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 2—USING THE EYES

THERE is very little of our daily work that we can sit down and do with our eyes shut. That means that good vision is absolutely necessary for every phase of the day's routine. If the eyes tire, if it is necessary to strain the eyes to make them serve their purpose, or if there is anything at all that makes you use a conscious effort to see clearly and naturally, then the eyes need help, and can be helped by good glasses. Unless you have such good eyes that you can use them all day long, and evenings as well, without, as you might say, knowing you have eyes, you should have the eyes examined by a competent eyesight specialist. Mr. Fowler takes a delight in so fitting his patrons' glasses as to render their vision perfect under every condition.

Portugal Openly For the Allies

New Cabinet Makes Declaration Before Parliament Pledging Co-operation in Cause of Justice

PARIS, Dec. 6.—Sympathy for the Allies was expressed in a declaration of the new Portuguese Cabinet, which appeared before Parliament Thursday, says a Havas despatch from Lisbon. The Ministry declared it would abstain from all party politics and adhere strictly to a national policy, adding:

"The government will make strong efforts to execute the laws passed by Parliament upon the subject of the attitude of Portugal in the present war, safeguarding thus the dignity and interests of the nation, lending co-operation to right and justice defended by England and her allies, whom the Portuguese people assured of their full oral sympathy at the beginning of the war and several times since then."

With the Fall of Monastir Bulgars Are Ready For A Rear Attack on the Allies

Germans Will Be Used in Main to Hold Roumania in Check and Meet the Russians—London Predicts a Flank Assault.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—With the fall of Monastir and the complete success of the Kaiser and his allies in driving the northern Serb army from its own soil the attention of London has been forcibly drawn to the situation of the Anglo-Franche forces along the Vardar and Cerna rivers. The Teutonic occupation of Monastir, unless all military indications fail, leaves the left wing of the allied contingent "up in the air," with two moves only open to General Serrail, who is in command. One is to draw his extreme left toward the south and let it rest on the Greek frontier, where it will have the Monastir-Salonika railway a few miles in its rear. The other is to evacuate the Vardar River front and straighten his line, which now resembles an inverted V, and thus reduce appreciably the danger of envelopment.

The veil of secrecy has been drawn over this theatre by the war offices and the confusion in the press despatches has made it extremely difficult for the observers here to accurately sum up the situation, but there is no doubt a concentrated effort to crush the Allies will be made as soon as weather conditions permit; that the Bulgarians, their whole army now virtually released for operations in the south, will bear the brunt of the work, and that the greatest effort will be made from the direction of Monastir. It is this forecast of future movements on which is based the belief that General Serrail's task will be to avoid envelopment.

The Bulgars, it is believed, are in greatest force in the triangle Monastir-Prilep-Krushevo, and at the former town they actually are in the rear of the French left if the last known French positions have been maintained. These positions occupied the right bank of the Cerna from a point seven miles from Monastir on the east to its junction with the Vardar. The position along the Cerna is of natural strength and is well held, increasing the conviction that the main attack will come on the flank.

The Austrian army, while the Bulgar operations are in progress, is expected to continue its drive through Montenegro, while the Germans, with the Turks and what Bulgar and Austrian units can be spared, will be used to keep Roumania in check and meet any Russian advances the future may develop. Rustchuk, on the Danube west of the Roumanian frontier, seems to be the principal point of concentration for the Germans.

A report from France that part of the German army is going to the Gallipoli Peninsula to assist the Turks in a great effort to drive the Entente Allies from the peninsula is hardly credited in military circles here, where it is not believed they can spare the men, guns and ammunition for such a venture. The Turks, it is true, have been displaying more activity recently in the Dardanelles, but this they are believed to have been doing more with ammunition which they have been collecting during the quiet period than with any fresh supplies from Germany.

There is conflict in the speculation here regarding the position of Greece. Some despatches say a satisfactory agreement has been reached between the Entente Allies and the Hellenic Kingdom, while others aver that the situation is so unsatisfactory the Entente Allies have re-established their restrictions on Greek commerce.

PETROGRAD (Official) Dec. 6.—An attempted German offensive on the Dvinsk front has broken down. There is no change in Caucasus.

Does Tea or Coffee Bother?

Anyone who has headaches, bilious attacks, heart flutter, or some other of these common ills, had better look to tea or coffee drinking; and remember that there's one sure, easy way to be rid of tea and coffee troubles—quit both tea and coffee—and

Use

INSTANT POSTUM

—the Pure Food Drink

A level teaspoonful in a cup of boiling water makes a delicious drink—instantly. The rich, snappy flavour of Instant Postum makes the change easy.

But more important, Instant Postum, made only of wheat and a bit of molasses, is free from the drugs, caffeine and tannin, in tea and coffee, or any other harmful element. Old and young alike may drink as much as they desire with no bad "after effects."

No bother to prepare—
No bother to health.

FAREWELL ADDRESS PRESENTED WARDEN BY COUNTY COUNCIL

At Closing Session on Saturday —Expression of Appreciation of His Work and His Character

The following farewell address from the County Council was presented to Warden Kindred by County Clerk Ed. M. Elliott at the concluding session on Saturday:

H. C. Kindred, M.D., Warden.

Dear Friend,

We, your colleagues, cannot let the opportunity of recognition of your services as Warden pass without well-deserved reference.

Your demeanour as well as your integrity has added weight to the body corporate, namely, the County Council.

The county as a result of your tenure of office has more than held its place among the counties of the Province. It is with the utmost regret that we are apprised of the fact that your connection with us is about to be severed; at the same time, our loss is some other corporation's gain.

In saying farewell, you must rest assured that you are severing your connections with friends, and our most earnest desire is that you may gain friends elsewhere as you did here. We trust that the thoughts you may have in the future of us will be consistent with the thoughts that are bound to be held by us of you.

Signed on behalf of the Council,

ROBT. SHAW,
Reeve of Harvey.

Council Chamber,
Peterborough, Dec. 4, 1915.

In reply, the Warden said he had already referred to the bond of sympathy and fellowship which existed between the members of the Council and himself during his term. "I will always cherish the highest regards for the members of this Council," he concluded.

SMOTHERED BY A CAVE-IN.

Sudden Death Comes on Wm. Ryan While Digging a Well.

PORT HOPE, Dec. 4.—William Ryan, a well-digger, who resides on the outskirts of the town, met with a tragic death yesterday afternoon. He was recribbing a well on the farm of Christopher Smith, near Osaca, about ten miles from Port Hope, and the earth caved in, burying him alive. His son George, who was working with him, summoned help immediately, but when the body was recovered life was extinct. The deceased, who was seventy years of age, was the father of a large family and highly respected in the neighbourhood.

HAD BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

So Badly Man Could Not Lie Down—Cured by Vinol.

For years and years we have been telling the people of Peterborough that Vinol is a wonderful remedy for bronchial troubles. Here is positive proof:

Tilden, Ill. "For five years I suffered from bronchial asthma. In the winter time I was obliged to sit in a Morris chair all night, as I could not lie down, owing to that dreadful choking sensation. I tried nearly every known remedy, but nothing gave me any relief until one day I met the Station Agent at Williaville, Ill., and he said he had been a sufferer for years, but had been cured by Vinol. I at once commenced to take it, and the result is my cough is gone, my appetite has improved, and I can lie down and sleep all night, and my experience leads me to believe that Vinol is a certain remedy for bronchial asthma."—John H. Condell, Tilden, Ill.

The reason that cough syrups fail in such cases is because they were palliative only, while Vinol removes the cause, being a constitutional remedy in which are combined the healing elements of fresh cod livers, together with tonic iron and beef peptone. I strengthens and revitalizes the entire system and assists nature to expel the disease.

SPECIAL VAUDEVILLE AT THE ROYAL THEATRE

The Royal Theatre has cut out Vaudeville for some months. Still, this theatre has now secured a Vaudeville act of thrilling interest and mirth provoking character for Monday, Dec. 6th, Dec. 7th and Dec. 8th. This unparalleled attraction is entitled "McGlynn's Masquerade" This show includes a company of well known actors in a big comedy hit, including trained dogs. These are war times, so the Royal is putting on a 50-cent show for 10 cents including new pictures.

BULGARIANS WERE USED AS CATSPAW

SALONIKA, Dec. 4.—In Bulgaria the intelligent classes feel they have been made a catspaw of by Germany in the perilous adventure. Much greater help was expected from the Germans.

It had been hoped that the price of victory against the Serbs would be limited to about 10,000 casualties, but Bulgarian reports place them as high as 100,000.

Rigid martial law prevails throughout Bulgaria, repressing all news of war except the official statements. Relatives are not allowed to see the wounded or to receive news from them. No one is permitted to leave a town without permit.

It is believed the peasants will not fight against the Russians, and that if a Russian landing on the Danube bank is made the Mohammedan Bulgarians will be used to bring about a religious war.

In Constantinople the casualties at the Dardanelles are estimated at 200,000.

A combination ladder, stepladder and staging has been invented, mainly to aid in picking fruit.

A CONVINCING ARGUMENT

By ELIZABETH WEED

Walter Dixon was graduated with the highest honors and, having shown remarkable promise in a literary way, was sent abroad to study the literature of different countries, then given the chair of that department in his alma mater. But Walter was a delicate fellow, and his physicians told him that if he cared to remain on earth he would better find some occupation to take him out of doors. Walter took the hint and set himself up for an advertising broker.

One morning he stepped into the store of John Hobson & Co., importers of foreign fruits, etc., presented his card to the senior member of the firm and asked for patronage.

"Young man," said Mr. Hobson, who was uneducated, "I'm agin advertising. There's so many advertisements that there isn't anybody reads 'em."

"If people didn't read them, Mr. Hobson, the periodicals and newspapers would have to close up."

"I say people don't read 'em, and that's all there is about it. I'm busy; get out o' here."

"I see, Mr. Hobson, that I can't do any business with you without first proving to you the value of what I have to sell. I will give you an advertisement free for that purpose. Kindly mention the name of some article you have for sale."

"Oh, take our preserved ginger and let me alone. I've more important work on hand than staving off solicitors."

Several days later Mr. Hobson noticed that his mail was much larger than usual. The first letter he opened contained an advertisement cut from a newspaper of Hobson's prepared ginger. Mr. Hobson first read the letter inclosing it:

Dear Sir—I would call your attention to the fact that ginger does not grow on trees, especially in northern climates. It is a root and is indigenous to tropical countries. Yours respectfully,
MARIA L. WILBUR,
Principal of the High School.

Mr. Hobson glanced at the ad. with surprise and vexation. It read as follows:

Our ginger is growed especially for us in Norway, picked from the trees and cured on the spot. There ain't no ingredients in it that would hurt a baby. It's all carefully peeled and put to soak in vinegar, after which it's boiled in lemon juice and put into jars. In this way we git a flavor that there ain't no discount on.

Mr. Hobson colored and his eye fired. He opened another letter:

[illegible] and beg to call your attention to the fact that there is no "pearl" in ginger. Yours truly,
MARGARET ARMSTRONG,
Of the Highest Cookery School.

Other letters were as follows:

That ad. of yours is a corker. I don't know anything about ginger, whether it is from a Norway or a South American tree; but, having a thorough knowledge of the English language, I should like to write your ads. for you.

In the second advertisement you have used the word "growed" incorrectly. It should be "grown."

This ad. is ridiculous. You might as well try to get walrus fat out of the Caribbean sea as to try for ginger in Norway.

Mr. Hobson had opened and thrown into the wastebasket a hundred letters from lawyers, doctors, housewives, merchants—indeed, all sorts of persons—and was about to get at his daily work when the postman came in and unloaded another bundle. And such was the case whenever a batch of mail was delivered. Mr. Hobson was obliged to open the letters lest he should throw into the wastebasket something of importance. The next day there were but two or three comments on the ad. and the day following none.

On the third day Dixon appeared. Mr. Hobson faced him and said:

"What do you mean by disgracing my business by putting in that ad. about my preserved ginger? Only an ignoramus would have said what you did."

"The question is not as to the writing of the ad. I don't pretend to know anything about ginger. I wished to prove to you that ads. are read."

"Young man, I'm convinced that people do read ads. But I'd like to know where you got your learning."

"I'm a college graduate."

"Well, all I've got to say is that they'd better burn down the college where you graduated. A college graduate as don't know any more than you about ginger and how to write common language had better put his head to soak."

"If you are convinced that advertisements are generally read and will give me an order you can write the next ad. yourself."

"You bet I'll write it myself. I don't want no more such wrong information and bad writin' about my goods. Set down there a few minutes and I'll talk to you."

Dixon "set" awhile, but it paid him. He left the store with a thousand dollar order for advertisements. And Hobson was convinced from the sudden dropping off of the letters he had received about the last ad. that advertisements must be repeated to be of value. The order was continuous.

The business thus gained proved the foundation for a large clientele that was very profitable to Dixon. Constantly out in the air he grew rugged and well to do at the same time. The ingenuity he displayed in getting Hobson & Co.'s business was developed in other directions, so that it was not long before he had all he could attend to. Finally having established his health he gave up his calling and resumed his chair at the university.

Nearly always sulky children are the smartest, have the keenest minds, the best mental habits. The child who has a fit of real anger at a disappointment loses self control and ought to be very kindly treated, shown the reason why it cannot have its wish, taught lovingly the lesson of self control. Its anger is a sign of weakness, but its sulks are an acquired accomplishment. The fit is well removed out in this way:

The child thinks that the mother is loving in nature, does not like to see it unhappy, is miserable herself, and, though there may be good reasons why she refuse what it wants, yet if it persists in its ugliness, then the mother will sacrifice her judgment to the child's obstinacy and give it what it wants, even to its own hurt.

Amply Protected.

Lord Alvanley was always ready with a joke. Once traveling with Berkeley Craven in a postchaise and four they were upset. Naturally very indignant at the catastrophe, Berkeley Craven determined to give the first postboy a "taste of his quality," but finding him an old man simply remarked, "Your age protects you."

Lord Alvanley "went for" postboy the second, but, finding him young and determined looking, wisely retired with "As for you, sir, your youth protects you."

A Caustic Retort.

An Englishman of somewhat questionable reputation, who was criticising the American way of spelling, once turned to Maurice Barrymore, the actor, and said: "I'll leave it to Mr. Barrymore. Is it right to leave out the 'u' in such words as harbor, neighbor, honor, candor, etc.?"

"Well, about harbor and neighbor I am not sure," replied Barrymore, "but when it comes to honor and candor I leave you out."

How to Disinfect a Sickroom.

The best disinfectants ever invented are pure air and sunshine. A sickroom well ventilated after the close of a case; the bedding, carpets, rugs, and so on exposed to the blessed sunshine; plenty of soap and water for scrubbing up—these factors will, for most infectious diseases, be all the disinfection necessary.

Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and one box helped me fine, so I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. Always see that our trade mark "The Maple Leaf" appears on the label and wrapper.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE VIA DOLOROSA.

Jerusalem's Queer Old Street Is a Mecca For Pilgrims.

"The Street of Pain," or the Via Dolorosa, in Jerusalem, is justly described as the most sacred thoroughfare in the world.

Through it hundreds of pilgrims every year slowly and tenderly linger over its stones as they follow its zigzag course to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, firmly believing it to have been the way our Saviour walked to suffer an ignominious death for the sins of mankind.

During Holy Week, especially, it is crowded with Russian pilgrims, many of whom painfully make the journey upon their hands and knees.

The Via Dolorosa really consists of four streets, which exhibit every characteristic formation of the streets of Jerusalem; the narrow arched passage, the open way with the latticed windows, and the steps that show the rise and fall of the hills on which the city is built.

Fourteen stations mark the various episodes which are supposed to have distinguished the painful journey of our Lord, commencing with the traditional "Palace of Pilate," now the Seral. The so-called holy steps, Scala Sancta, from the Judgment Hall, were removed to the Church of St. John Lateran at Rome, where they may now be seen. Near the Seral the narrow road is spanned by an arch, known as the Ecce Homo Arch.

According to a monkish legend, it marks the spot where Pilate said, "Behold the man." It is part of a triumphal arch of Hadrian, and near to that part of it built in the School of the Sisters of Zion, on the right-hand side, are some curious stone cylinders of solid rock of undoubted antiquity, on which the town crier used to stand when proclaiming the loss of certain articles or announcing some particular event of public interest.

Through the arch the street passes the Austrian Hospice at the bottom of the hill, then crosses another street at an angle, leaving the "House of Dives and Lazarus" on the left hand, and ascends the next hill through arches and a vaulted passage, crossing the street from the Damascus Gate before it reaches the German Hospice. Then mounting step by step higher up the hill, turns at right angles through the vaulted roof of a prolongation of Christian street, where an old entrance to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre stood.

Various crosses and other religious emblems serve to remind the pilgrim of the sacred spots along the route; the place where Christ sank under the Cross, and where Simon of Cyrene was called upon to bear it; where Jesus leaned against the wall for support; where Veronica wiped the sweat from His brow, and His features became imprinted on her handkerchief; and the many other holy places that are annually kissed and wept over every Easter.

The last four stations are in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre itself. It should be added, perhaps, that it was not until the fourteenth century that these sacred sites became known, and there is no historical evidence whatever to prove their identity. Indeed the destruction of Jerusalem under Titus was so complete, that neither streets nor houses could be identified afterwards.

Nevertheless thousands of pilgrims visit the Holy City and follow the road which Christ is said to have followed on the way to Calvary.

Arousing the Sleepers.

One evening the good dominie of a western church was eloquently addressing his congregation on the beauty of sticking to the straight and narrow path, when he suddenly paused, glanced around the room and beckoned to the sexton.

"Jones," said he, as the sexton approached the pulpit, "open a couple of windows on each side of the church, please."

"Beg your pardon, sir," returned the sexton with a look of surprise, "Did I understand you to say open the windows?"

"Yes," was the cold, hard rejoinder of the dominie. "It is not healthy to sleep in a warm room."

A Check on Her.

"At my last place," said a cook, "I should have been very comfortable if the master hadn't been a photographer."

"Why, what difference could that make?"

"Why, at the dinner-table he used to photograph the joints before they were removed to the kitchen."

Anything But That.

"I suppose you have high ambitions for your boy?"

"Well, I wouldn't say that exactly, but I do hope that he won't turn out to be the male assistant to a female dancing teacher."

CRISCO
For Frying For Shortening For Cake Making

There are four sizes of Crisco packages:

1½ lb. 6 lb., 3 oz.
3 lb., 1 oz. 9 lb., 5 oz.

These are sold at net weight instead of gross weight. The weight of the can is not included. This should be taken into consideration in counting the cost.

It is more economical to order the larger sizes of Crisco, for Crisco keeps perfectly.

Made in new, sanitary, sunlit factories at Hamilton, Canada

It was the custom in the village for the well-to-do inhabitants to make good any loss which the villagers might sustain through the death of any live stock. A retired millionaire recently settled in the village, was ignorant of this laudable practice, and was considerably puzzled by the visit of a laborer's wife, who explained that she had lost a pig.

"Well, I haven't got it," said the bewildered millionaire.

"What I mean, sir, of course, is that the pig died," nervously explained the woman.

"Well, what do you want me to do?" cried the thoroughly exasperated man. "Send a wreath."—"Harper's."

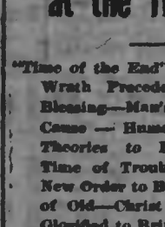
PRESENT FORECLEAMS OF COMING GLORY

Kingdom of Messiah Is at the Threshold.

"Time of the End" Here—A Day of Wrath Precedes the Reign of Blessing—Man's Selfishness the Cause — Human Plans and Theories to Prove Abortive—Time of Trouble Now Begun—New Order to Be Set Up on Ruins of Old—Christ and His Church Glorified to Bring in "The Desire of All Nations."

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lec-ture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arrang-ed for its publication.]



Dec. 5.—Pastor Russell gave a masterful ad-dress here to-day from the text, "What hath God wrought!" (Numbers 23: 23.) He said in part:

We are living in a most won-derful period of the world's his-tory. On every side are contriv-ances for man's blessing. Evidently the time is near when all the world may enjoy such assuagement of hardship, such re-leams from excess of toil, and such blessings and comforts as mankind has never before conceived. Yet these things have come upon us so gradually, so stealthily, as it were, that we scarcely realize what pro-gress has been made.

As the Bible foretold twenty-five hundred years ago, so it is true, that all these blessings and comforts have come in "The Time of the End." (Daniel 12:4.) As Bible students we find that this term, "The Time of the End," applies to a period that be-gan with the year 1799 A.D.; and so for more than a century we have been living in "The Time of the End." Within this time many won-ders have come to mankind. Once we thought that this "Time of the End" meant the end of the world, as all of the creeds of Christendom de-clare. But that is not the thought of the Bible when rightly understood.

The Time of the End is the end of this present Age. It is the end of the long reign of Sin and Death. We are now coming into a New Era, in which all these evil conditions which have oppressed man for six thousand years are to terminate. Soon the great Sabbath of rest, the Golden Age of blessing long sung by prophet and bard, will be ushered in. Indeed, it has already been ushered in, in some respects.

While these blessings are designed to be for all mankind, they have in a natural way gravitated into the hands of a certain few, because of man's ingrained selfishness. This has caused more or less of pride on the one hand, and of jealousy on the other. This is now about to precipi-tate a fearful conflict. Already we see a great conflict of nations along commercial lines, each endeavoring to get the lion's share of the bless-ings which the Lord has provided in these latter days. They have be-come jealous and envious of one an-other as they see the opportunities of wealth and power opening up before them. This awful war now raging across the sea has resulted, costing millions of money and of lives.

How broad and how noble in con-trast is the view which the Bible holds out to us; namely, that God has made loving and bountiful provision for His blessing to reach all the fam-ilies of the earth—yea, every indiv-idual! And the time is now about ripe. How glad this knowledge makes our hearts! We whose eyes of un-derstanding have been anointed to see are greatly blessed in that we are privileged to be ministers of God, to tell of all His mercies and favors planned for mankind. God has per-mitted us, as members of the Body of Christ, to be co-workers with Him in the proclamation of His Truth. Then, when glorified with our Re-deemer, we shall share with Him in the great work of bringing blessing to the whole world. It is a blessed thought, an inspiring thought, a com-forting thought, one that lifts us far above the present strife and ambi-tions of the world.

Present Blessings From God.

While considering all these bless-ings which surround us, and noting what imperfect man has been able to attain even under present conditions, by the blessing of God, let us not lose sight of the fact that these things did not come by man's ingenuity. Let us take note that men just as brainy, just as brilliant, have lived in the past. Where is there a man to-day who can pen such words of wisdom as the proverbs of Solomon? What poet to-day can produce the equal of the Psalms of David, the sweet singer of Israel? Let us remember, too, that though Shakespeare lived cen-turies ago, he remains unsurpassed in his line by any writer of our time.

Let us assure ourselves that we are not the brainiest people who have ever lived, that the blessings of our day have not come to us because we are of superior brain capacity to those of past generations. They are here because this is God's "due time." He is now letting in the light of the dawning New Dispensation, That God has done all that is the firm belief of careful Bible students. And I believe that you all agree with this sentiment.

Behind this thought is another. When I consider what mankind have done in their imperfect condition, I reflect, "What will man do when he is made perfect, in the image of God: under the Messianic Kingdom?" Then my mind turns to our great Creator Himself; and I say, "If feeble creatures that God has made can accomplish so much, can pro-duce such wonderful things, even in their fallen estate, who can measure the power of the Almighty God—of Him who is perfect in Wisdom, per-fect in Power, perfect in Justice, and perfect in Love? How thankful we are to get this broad, comprehensive view of our God, and to see that He is not only great and powerful, but wise and infinitely loving as well!"

God's Marvelous Wisdom and Power.

So as I ponder over what man has done, and what God has done and has planned to do, the words of the Pro-phet David come to mind: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handi-work." (Psalm 19:1.) All that mankind have done or ever will do will merely be copying the infinitely greater skill manifested by our Great Creator in His works. As we note the stars revolving in their orbits, we are amazed, not only at the mighty power that can swing these wonderful systems of worlds, but at the wisdom and ability displayed in preserving their perfect order.

But when we consider what God hath wrought in connection with hu-manity we are still more astonished. Think of the human body. This great piece of machinery has power to oil itself, to feed itself, to manipulate itself, to will for itself, to think for itself, to direct its own course. If mankind could make such a machine they would have something of which to be proud. But the best that we can do is to copy feebly the works of our Creator and to work in harmony with His laws. When we realize that all the machinery and the inventions of our day are but imperfect copies of what God has done—that man is only using principles which God has employed in the past, to the extent that he is able to understand them—we see the more clearly that man was made an earthly image of the Heavenly Creator.

Justice and Love Most Essential.

Yet some who are inventors or who have talents of one kind or another may be very deficient in such grand characteristics as justice or love. We are coming to look upon these quali-ties as the ones most desirable to cul-tivate; and by the grace of God we are seeking to develop these quali-ties more and more. As the work of transformation progresses in our hearts and lives, we see more clearly what a great blessing will come to the world when these principles of Divine justice and love will operate everywhere.

We look across the water to our neighbors in Europe; and we say to ourselves, "Alas, that they do not have sufficient appreciation of justice to be willing to observe the Golden Rule—to do unto others as they would have others do to them!" Selfishness is behind such a spirit as they manifest. One declares, "We will have our share of trade!" An-other replies, "You shall never get it if we can keep you from it, if we have battleships enough to take the trade from you!" And so the cruel war goes on, to show which can the more successfully exercise their self-ishness to the disadvantage of the other.

Let us ask, "Is this copying God's ways?" Let us take the nobler, high-er standard of Divine justice, and do to our neighbors as we would wish them to do to us. Let us promote this principle wherever we go. Let us make known the character of God wherever we have an opportunity, by showing forth His justice, His sym-pathy, His kindness. Let this charac-ter be manifested in our own lives. As children of God, let us be burning and shining lights, to the glory of our Father in Heaven.

Light Breaking Through the Darkness.

While realizing God's great Wis-dom and Power as manifested in nature, we have been seriously han-dicapped by false doctrines which grossly misrepresent our Creator and show Him as a God devoid of justice and of love. It seems a wonder that we were not all turned aside from Him. Not one of the human family is totally depraved; yet we have had pictured to us a totally depraved God. This misconception of the Heavenly Father we got from the Dark Ages. Thank God, the New Age now at the threshold is bringing blessings not merely of a temporal kind! It is scattering the ignorance and super-stition of the past, and is bringing in the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, which is ultimately to fill the whole earth.—Isaiah 11:9; Habakkuk 2:14.

We are beginning to see the light; for we are awake. But to see clearly we must look in the right direction. There are people to-day who are quite awake, but they are looking to-ward the west for the sunrise. We see great college professors, learned men who have given their lives to study and who have knowledge on many subjects, making the mistake of thinking that Evolution is our God; that a microbe started to squirm and has been evolving up-ward gradually, until our race has reached the station which it occupies to-day. They do not see an intelli-gent God in this matter. Their mis-conception is that Evolution is man's only hope. They say that ultimately there will be "the survival of the fit-test."

Think of the present conditions in Europe! There the fittest are the ones who are falling in the trenches and on the battlefields. The unfit—the old, the weak, the crippled, and incompetent—are left at home to propagate and rear the families of the future. That is the science of Evolution, the philosophy which hopes that in millions of years hence mankind may have learned how to cook and to eat so that they will not need to die, and that thus they may have everlasting life. Evolutionists believe that this may be true of their posterity somewhere in the dim, dis-tant future. They do not stop to think that at the present rate of increase in population the world would be vastly overcrowded before that time, that the coal and oil fields would be exhausted, and that a limit would be reached in other directions—that things cannot continue as at present for any great length of time.

But the Bible points out that man's extremity will be God's opportunity. After permitting mankind to have all these blessings of our day, He will allow them to dash themselves to pieces in a great cataclysm of trou-ble, and make shipwreck of all this boasted twentieth century civiliza-tion. Before the complete destruction of mankind, however, the Kingdom of Messiah, God's dear Son, will in-tervene and will speak peace to the nations. After the terrible storm there will be a great calm. Christ will take to Himself His great power and establish His glorious Reign.

God's Jewels Now Being Gathered.

According to the Bible, God has for nineteen hundred years been select-ing from every nation, people, kin-dred and tongue the Church of Christ, a class which He is about to exalt in the eyes of the whole people. He will use this class for the blessing of the world, for the enlightening and the uplifting of all mankind. Thank God for this truth! I trust that by the grace of God many whom this discourse shall reach may be of this jewel class, those who will fully submit themselves to the hand of the great Creator. May He work in us and upon us and through us, to the great blessing of ourselves now, as well as to the future blessing of all the families of the earth!

Through testings, through trials, through the opposition of the world, the flesh and the Devil, our God is shaping, polishing, preparing this class for their future great work of human uplift. All these things of the present time, which would natur-ally work to our disadvantage in many ways, the Lord will overrule to our spiritual development. He has promised that all things shall work together for good to these, the called ones according to His purpose, who are making their calling and elec-tion sure. (Romans 8:28.) How we rejoice in the precious promises that all of life's experiences shall thus be caused to work for our blessing!

God's New Creation.

I remind you of the creation of God thus far. First was the Logos, our Lord Jesus in His prehuman condition. As the great Agent of Je-hovah, He created all things. As we read, "All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made." (John 1: 1-3, 10; Revelation 3:14; Colossians 1: 15.) The Power was of God, exer-cised through the glorious Word, the Logos. (1 Corinthians 8:6.) God's final creation was man. Then sin blighted this fair creation. For a time God allowed it to remain as sin had marred it. But in due time, ac-cording to God's prearranged Plan, Jesus came into the world to be the Saviour of men; He took upon Him-self human nature. As a man He gave Himself a Ransom for Adam, and thus for the race that fell in Adam's loins. The price was laid down, even the precious blood of the Son of God. —1 Corinthians 15:21, 22; Romans 5:12,18,19; 1 Timothy 2:5,6.

But before the time for the bless-ing of the world, the Father had a further feature of His great Plan—the making of a New Creation, dif-ferent from angels, cherubim, sera-phim, or any other creature. From amongst the fallen sinner race He in-vited a class, redeemed them by the precious blood of Christ, to become members of this New Creation, and thus joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord. God is working in these New Creatures. Who are they? You are one, if you are a member of the Body of Christ. If you have given yourself wholly to the Lord under His terms, you are one of the jewels which He is preparing, polishing, and perfecting for future glory.—Malachi 3: 16-18; Isaiah 62:3.

When this New Creation is com-pleted, they will be the Channel which God will use for the restora-tion of all mankind. Because of their own experiences with evil, and because they have learned how to overcome weaknesses and imperfec-tions in themselves, they will be well fitted for encouraging, instructing, and uplifting the human family to the perfection which God designs for them, and which Adam originally en-joyed. They will be able to deal sym-pathetically with the poor world. This blessing will go not only to the living, but to those also who have gone down into the tomb. All these will be awakened. God will not awaken them now, because it would be to their disadvantage. He will keep them in the sleep of death until the Kingdom of Righteousness is thoroughly established. Then they will come forth to learn of God's in-finite goodness, and to receive His salvation, whosoever will, at the hands of the New Creation.

Beyond this, God gives no further revelation. We are merely informed that at the conclusion of Christ's Millennial Kingdom, when all the willing shall have been made perfect, and when all the wilfully wicked shall have been destroyed, Christ will turn over the Kingdom to the Father, "that God may be all in all." (1 Corinthians 15:28.)

In conclusion, let us reflect that so wonderful a Day as that which the Scriptures declare is coming should be prepared for. So wonderful a sunburst should give considerable dawning light before the Sun of Righteousness Himself floods the earth with beams of glory and bless-ing. And is this not just what we find? Is not the whole world awak-ening from the ignorance and super-stition of past centuries to a new-ness of thought and intelligence, to an enlightenment never before known? Is not this the only reason-able explanation of the wonderful progress along every line of inven-tion, mechanics, chemistry, etc.? Is not this the fulfilment of the prophe-tic declaration that in this Day of God's preparation, this Time of the End, many would run to and fro and knowledge would be increased? In that glorious Millennial Day the Scriptures declare, "The inhabitants of the world will learn righteous-ness." They will learn that the ways of righteousness are the ways of the Golden Rule.—Habakkuk 2:14; Mal-achi 4:2; Matthew 13:43.

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affect-ed in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and sourring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Phmsrascop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skillful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FRUIT, THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

Healing Powers of Fruit Proved by "Fruit-a-tives"

The simple juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, when transformed into 'Fruit-a-tives' will relieve diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Skin.

The truth of this statement has been proved in thousands of cases of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Chronic Headaches.

The enormous sales of 'Fruit-a-tives,' are the best proofs of the value of this fruit medicine.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa

In Tropical Countries Liver Chill Very Common

In Northern latitudes also the liver is a very unruly organ and requires careful watching. The concentrated vegetable juices in Dr. Hamilton's Pills act directly upon the liver and stimulate its action to a normal basis. The blood is purified, the skin grows clear, headaches disappear and robust health is firmly established. No me-dicine for the stomach, liver or kid-neys can compare with Dr. Hamil-ton's Pills, 25c. box all dealers.

He Knew.

Mr. Fred Jane, the writer on naval subjects, tells a story of an old gentle-man, an enthusiastic Navy Leag-uer, who visited Portsmouth and stood on the Hard and looked at Nel-son's "Victory" lying in the harbour. A bluejacket passed. The old gentle-man seized him, and pointed to the "Victory" floating in the glory of the sunset.

"D'you know what that ship means, my man?" he exclaimed.

"Rather," replied the bluejacket; it's the old tub they hold courts-mar-tial in!

Fruit Roll.

Nothing is nicer in the way of pas-try desserts than the various fruit rolls. Make a good baking powder biscuit pastry. Roll in a long sheet and spread with finely sliced peaches, apples, or any kind of berries. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Roll up like a jelly roll, then bake in a moderate oven for twenty min-utes. Serve either hot or cold and with or without cream or pudding sauce.

SAILORS' SUPERSTITIONS.

Widespread Beliefs That Show a Curious Persistence.

Of all men it is probable that the sailor is the most superstitious.

Why a sailor hates a cat is not very evident, but nautical tradition is against the little animal, and Jack Tar will have none on board. To carry a cat is a sure way to prepare for the vessel a full share of disas-trous gales. There is a curious amount of evidence in one form or another to show how sailors object to cats. To those things he dislikes the mariner applies the name of the ani-mal he hates. Weak tea is unpalat-able, and the sailor styles it cat-lap; a short sleep is unsatisfactory, and he calls it a cat-nap; a breath of wind, not enough to move a vessel, is a cat's-paw, a greater amount of breeze is a cat's-skin.

In olden times sailors had a great veneration for odd numbers, a belief still to be seen in the number of guns fired for salutes. Sneezing to the left was a serious matter, though a sneeze to the right was not so bad. Themistocles, the great Greek, once detained his ships on account of the bad luck that he feared would follow a sneeze. Shetlanders are particular-ly sensitive on this point.

Th sailor firmly believes that a ship's bell will toll, however firmly lashed, when the doomed vessel sinks beneath the wave.

The origin of the belief that one can raise the wind by whistling is un-known, but the belief is widespread, and has been held in Greenland, In-dia, China, Sweden, and Europe gen-erally. We came across it repeatedly in literature.

It is held that care must be taken to whistle at the right moment. If it be done in a calm a pleasant breeze will come, but if it be done when there is already wind it will rouse a hurricane. "Whistles rash bid tempests roar," says Sir Walter Scott.

Everybody knows how much atten-tion sailors pay to the presence of the birds known as petrels, or Mother Carey's chickens. It is probably be-cause of the great sensitiveness of sea birds to weather, their mysterious presence far from land, and their supposed communion with angels, that so much attention is paid to them, and that prophecies of fair or foul weather are founded on their movements.

Mother Carey's chickens have the additional advantage of a name which in itself is enough to account for the respect in which the birds are held. It is a corruption of a title of the Virgin—Mater Cara. The other name, petrel, is an Italian diminu-tive for Peter, and bears witness to the belief of that nation that the birds represent St. Peter walking on the sea. Their appearance near a ship is taken as a sign of storm.

His Only Guide.

The distinguished and well beloved bishop of a certain southern state is so absentminded that his family is always apprehensive for his welfare when he is away from it.

Not long ago, while making a jour-ney by rail, the bishop was unable to find his ticket when the conductor asked for it.

"Never mind, bishop," said the conductor, who knew him well, "I'll get it on my second round."

However, when the conductor passed through the car again the ticket was still missing.

"Oh, well, bishop, it will be all right if you never find it!" the con-ductor assured him.

"No, it won't, my friend," contra-dicted the bishop. "I've got to find that ticket. I want to know where I'm going."

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffer-ed greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made complete cure. With a grateful heart write you this letter."

The Meaning of "Muff."

The record of the fact that muffs were once worn by more men than women in Paris suggests the old in-genious definition of a muff as "a soft thing that holds a lady's hand without squeezing it." "Muff's ap-pears to have come to us from Ger-many, in which language, curiously, "muff" means not only a hand com-forter, but also a sulky person or a growling dog. These seem, however, to be two different words. Was our own metaphorical "muff" an allusion to the effeminacy of muff wearers or simply an intimation that the per-son was distinctly "soft?"—London Chronicle.

Decorating Candles.

Candles can be easily decorated by the following method: The designs can be selected from paper prints tightly wrapped around the candle with the design in contact with the wax. Strike a match and play the flame over the back of the paper. Allow time enough for the melted wax to harden and then remove the paper. The print will be transferred to the wax. Select designs that are not larger than the circumference of the candle. A good impression of ink on thin paper works best.

Looking For Publicity.

"George," she said, "before we go any further I must insist that the word obey be dropped from the mar-riage service."

"Oh, pshaw!" he replied. "Why bother over that. It's a mere form-ality. Nobody expects it to be bind-ing any more."

"That's all very well. But if we have it dropped the papers will give us a much more extended notice than they would otherwise."

Fairy Tales.

"I say, mamma," said little Tommy, "the fairy tales always begin with 'Once upon a time!'"

"No, dear; not always," replied his mother. "They sometimes begin with, 'My love, I have been detained at the office again tonight.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Color, Gloss, and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and lux-uriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractive-ness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so natur-ally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

His Father's Photo.

Two British officers were motor-ing back to headquarters from the front recently when they noticed a Tommy truding along looking very exhausted and ill. They immediately stopped the car and told the man to get in.

The officers soon put him at ease and talked freely with him, with the result that he gained confidence and began to speak of his parents and his dancee, and finally brought a photo of the latter from his pocket. The officers congratulated the Tommy on his good luck, and he ventured the remark: "I suppose you, too, carry a photo of someone about with you."

The younger of the two officers colored slightly and replied, with a smile, "Well, I've got my father's photo with me, and I'll make you a present of one if you like," and the young officer took a sovereign from his pocket and slipped it into the man's hand. Tommy's companions were the Prince of Wales and a brother-officer.

A Wonderful Job.

During the battle of Neuve Cha-pelle a young officer, a lieutenant in a Highland regiment, had his face half turned upwards, when a piece of shell struck the left side of his face and blew away most of the lower jaw. Incredible though it may seem, Lieut. Valadier, a military den-tal operator, put a new floor to the man's mouth, actually induced two inches of bone to grow on the lower jaw, fixed complete artificial teeth, and healed the remains of the lips, with the result that now the man is as normal as ever, and the only result of his mishaps is a slight scar by the mouth.

Christmas Appeal
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allow-ing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

In the 40 years of the Hospital's ex-istence there have been treated within its walls 26,106 children as in-patients; 231,768 as out-patients; a grand total of 257,876 in and out-patients.

The Hospital for Sick Children gives a province-wide service, for little patients from every section of On-tario have sought its aid. Last year 499 patients were admitted from 232 places outside the city of Toronto. In 1914 there were 894 from 210 places.

Of the 2,838 in-patients last year 1,771 were medical cases and 1,067 surgical. In the orthopedic department of the 2,838 in-patients, 264 were treated for deformities, 21 Pott's dis-ease of the spine, 10 lateral curvature of the spine, 16 bow-legs, 57 club-feet, 17 dislocations of hip, 42 tubercular disease of knee, hip, ankle, wrist and elbow; 76 infantile paralysis, 8 wry neck, and 21 miscellaneous.

Our battle is never-ending—is one that will continue while the world lasts, for it is the fight between the armies of life and death, to save the child life, the sick little ones, sons and daughters not only of our soldier men, but of the fathers and mothers still in this home-land province.

The Hospital is beating back dis-ease and death, the enemies that as-sail the lives of little children as the British Empire is beating back Ger-many, Austria and Turkey, the ene-mies that assail the life of liberty.

So we appeal to the generous people of Ontario not to forget those so near and dear to us, who lie in the beds and cots of this great charity.

Will the people at large, as of old, respond to our call? Will they remem-ber that every year is a war year for the Hospital, every day a day of battle, and that the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the chil-dren's sake?

The Hospital has waged its war for forty years. The people of Toronto and Ontario have been its friend, and this year of all years it requires help. Surely you will give to a charity that cares for every sick child in Ontario, for only as your money reaches the Hospital can the Hospital's mercy reach the children.

Every dollar is a link of kindness in the chain of mercy that joins the money in your pocket to the miseries of some child's life, some mother's heart.

Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secre-tary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees,
Toronto.

The slack student had been told that the instructor would ask for a list of the Kings of Israel in the examination, so he learned this list, and went to the examination in high hope. To his horror, the questions contained no reference to the Kings of Israel, and he looked in vain for a question that he could answer.

The last question was : "Distinguish between the major and minor Prophets."

In answer he wrote, "The Lord forbid that I should draw distinction between these holy men, but the Kings of Israel are these." Then followed the list.

Mine Companies Getting Out.

The new budget, which provides for a supertax of 50 per cent. on the profits of all British companies, has already caused the removal of the headquarters of several companies representing South and Central American gold mines. Mining men assert that unless the tax is reduced this movement will become so great that London will cease to be the mining capital of the world.

Mines whose production is just beginning are particularly hard hit. Unlike tea and rubber companies, mining companies have not been enabled by the war to raise their prices. The excess of profits is determined under the new ruling by subtracting from the income for the current year the average income for any two of the last preceding three years. Mining companies just coming into the field have no such opportunity, and will be compelled to pay 50 per cent. of their total profits for the year.

The tendency to remove headquarters is becoming so pronounced that mining interests in Britain are bringing pressure to bear on the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Reginald McKenna, to have the supertax modified in favor of gold mines.

Marshmallow Creams.

Just Suits My Needs
Building Up the System

This is the Way Thousands of Women Are Speaking of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food," writes Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholmville, Que., "and I am never without it in the house. I was so nervous I could not sleep, but now I sleep soundly at nights and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I used the Nerve Food for months and found that it just suits my needs and has built up the system wonderfully. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition and am thankful for it.

"My husband was a great sufferer from itching piles and has been entirely cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

We are constantly receiving letters like this in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Everywhere it is being used because of its great restorative and reconstructive influence on the nervous system. Men and women who are run down in health, tired, nervous and discouraged, find in this great Food Cure the means of nourishing the exhausted system back to health and vigour.

Headaches, indigestion, sleeplessness, nervous irritability, lack of energy, and vigour — all tell of nervous exhaustion, and indicate the need of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Instead of affording mere temporary relief by stimulating the nerves, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food builds up the system by supplying the ingredients from which Nature forms new, rich blood and revitalizes the wasted nervous system. Put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test when you are feeling tired out and discouraged, fill the body with new rich blood and new nerve force and you will realize again the joy of good health. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

7456

Plain waists with high neck and long sleeves are recognized as the smartest because the latest in bodices. The example shown has a group of tucks at each side of the centre front closing and this is made in a box pleat folded into the material of one side.

At the neck there is a small, straight collar with the ends turned back in front, much in the manner of a man's wing collar, showing just a bit of the throat in front. The sleeves are plain and fitted to the arm, but they have a little fulness above the cuff which buttons at the back of the hand. There is also a little frill which lies upon the hand, but this may be omitted if preferred.

Such a waist as this may be made of taffetas, satin, velvet, crepe fabrics and the like. It is also a good design for wash materials, especially voile and the mercerized cottons. If cut from plaid the tucks will be more effective if the plaid be used on the bias for the front of the waist.

The waist pattern, No. 7,456, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3¾ yards of 27 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending ... to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

"CASCARETS" BEST IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS, SICK, CONSTIPATED

Best for Liver and Bowels, Bad Breath, Bad Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headaches, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet, breath right, complexion rosy and your liver and bowels regular for months.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Not Easily Set Off by a Match, But It Is Not Advisable to Try.

Although experiments are not to be recommended, science now declares that in 99 cases out 100 there is practically no danger of lighting powder or other high explosives with a match. But accidents will happen science admits, and it isn't advisable to attempt proving this theory. Unconfined explosives, touched with flame, burn comparatively quiet.

The characteristic of high explosives is the extreme violence and suddenness of their detonation. Water is an explosive when it is heated and when it becomes steam, but the expansion is so slow that explosive results do not usually follow unless there is gross negligence.

Gunpowder of the old type expands more rapidly than water and produces a large volume of gas, but again it acts with comparative gentleness. High explosives, on the other hand, pass instantly from a solid or liquid form to gas and act with terrific energy, tearing to pieces any vessel which contains them. To make them act in this manner they usually require a detonator, which applies a violent shock to them and starts the explosion.

Almost without exception high explosives are composed of some organic substance, which means some form of carbon, treated with nitric acid. Without nitrogen, which is the chief ingredient of nitric acid, it might be said that there can be no explosives. Yet by a paradox nitrogen is one of the most inert gases known, and the chief ingredient of the air we breathe.

The most famous modern high explosive and one of the most powerful is lyddite, which is very similar to the French melinite and the Japanese shimose. Lyddite is simply picric acid melted with a little vaseline. Picric acid is a yellow crystalline substance largely used as a yellow dye and also very serviceable in medicine for the treatment of burns. It is intensely poisonous and a powerful explosive.

Picric acid is prepared from coal tar—the refuse of gas manufacture. When the heavy oil of coal tar is boiled and chemically treated, phenol or carbolic acid, separates from it. The carbolic acid is taken, boiled in strong sulphuric acid, and into the evil-smelling liquid strong and pure nitric acid is carefully poured. The resultant is picric acid. It has great virtues as an explosive, but also some vices. Its virtue is that it is not easily exploded when pure and dry that it can be dropped or even thrown about, and that it does not act violently when lighted. To make it explode it needs a powerful detonator, which usually contains fulminate of mercury and tetryl. Its chief fault is that it is intensely acid, and when moisture is present attacks lead and many other substances, forming exceedingly explosive compounds which go off quite unexpectedly.

THOUSANDS STARVE TO DEATH IN POLAND

4,000 VILLAGES IN ASHES.

Germans Charged with Confiscating Supplies and Transporting Them to Prussia.

WARSAW, Nov. 25.—Hundreds of thousands of the civil population in the Warsaw district of Poland are suffering for want of food. A considerable percentage of this number still are homeless, living in huts, caves and abandoned trenches.

The situation is more serious because of the immense number thrown out of work by the almost complete paralysis of Polish industries. Some workers have emigrated to Germany where employment is plentiful, but the great majority prefer to remain near their homes in the hope of better days. Prominent Poles in all walks of life contend that vigorous relief measures are necessary if wholesale deaths from starvation are to be prevented.

Such flour as is now on hand is being distributed by the Germans under the bread card system, but only potatoes are available in quantities, while there is an acute shortage of dried vegetables, meat fats, and condensed milk. Prices all over Poland have risen to unprecedented heights but cannot be checked by the establishment of maximum prices, it is asserted, because of the fear that importation then would cease altogether.

Russian Pensions Cut Off.

Suffering is especially acute among the families of Russian reservists who formerly received regular pay ments from the Government. Pensioners are now cut off from their former incomes, and the Russians are accused of having taken with them the funds of savings bank depositors.

The country districts of Poland from one end to the other are battle-scarred, barren and fire-swept. In the Warsaw governmental district alone it is estimated that 4,000 villages were burned by the Russians. Many of the inhabitants who at first fled with the Russians returned and threw themselves on the mercy of the Germans.

Thousands already have died of starvation and diseases superinduced by hunger. Mothers remaining alive are so undernourished they cannot feed their children. In Warsaw and Lodz women now rise at 3 o'clock in the morning to get good places in the bread lines and not miss the chance to obtain some food at least. The horror of the situation is increased by a serious shortage of coal due to the destruction of mines and inadequate railway facilities.

Committees composed of both Christians and Jews, with the assistance of the German Government, are conducting soup kitchens at Warsaw and Lodz, distributing food and fuel. Eighty-one kitchens are running full blast in Warsaw, while many asylums and homes for young and old are in operation.

300,000 Dependents in Lodz.

Lodz is trying to feed 300,000 of its 500,000 population. The authorities are holding a tight rein on the flour supply to make it last until the next harvest. Lumber and tools with which to erect houses before winter are being given to homeless peasants who are living in dugouts near their old homes, cooking on improvised hearths. The City of Lodz is paying pensions to the wives of reservists on the chance of being reimbursed later.

Road building, railroad and bridge work are being carried on extensively in order that the unemployed may earn something. All these measures give only partial relief, because of the shortage in articles of food which are necessary.

The German authorities are struggling desperately with epidemics of disease caused by sanitary conditions in the ravaged district, and are making slow but sure headway. Cholera, typhoid fever, scarlet fever and diphtheria have been stamped out or are under control in most districts.

Statistics which appear to be authoritative show that from 250,000 to 260,000 persons are being supported in Warsaw alone. This number is steadily increasing. Meanwhile funds raised for charitable purposes virtually have been exhausted. These funds, amounting to several million rubles, were given by Polish and Jewish organizations, neutrals and the Russian Government.

With this money it has been possible heretofore to distribute 1,250,000 portions of soup, meat and bread monthly. Less than one-third of these food supplies has been paid for by those who received them. The cost of the food distributed free has amounted to 115,000 rubles a month.

The food department of the Warsaw Government, which has been selling at cost prices, has been obliged to restrict this work because of the exhaustion of the supply of foodstuffs and the impossibility of importing from neutral countries. The greatest need is for fats, butter, peas, rice and beans. The Citizens' Committee asserts that all flour, corn and feed materials have been confiscated by the military authorities or taken to Prussia.

The German Government has given assurance that 80 per cent. of what has been taken will be returned when milled. The Germans have taken charge of the potato crop, which they declare is being given exclusively to the civil population in districts not occupied by the military. Exportations from one district to another are forbidden. The Germans are importing some rye flour and salt and small quantities of coal and coke into Poland. A monopoly for tobacco has been introduced and others for liquors and illuminants are contemplated.

Flour costs 37 kopecks a kilogram, rice, 125 to 150; peas and beans, 100 to 112; salt, 27 to 35; crystal sugar, 105; lump sugar, 125; coffee, 325 to 500; butter, 325 to 370; bacon, 280. (A kopeck, equals about half a cent and a kilogram 2.20 pounds.)

Clothing and Leather Needed.

Only the sale of bread has been regulated, but the regulation of sugar is contemplated. There is a great need of clothing and blankets, but the scarcity of leather and hides is felt still more keenly. The resoling of shoes is prohibitively expensive.

Relief measures hitherto have not been so effective as they might have been because of lack of organization. Various societies have been working at cross purposes, overlapping and duplicating.

10 POUNDS OF BLOOD

is the average quantity in a healthy adult, but it is the quality of the blood that determines our strength to resist sickness. With weak blood we find cold hands and chilly feet; in children an aversion to study, and in adults rheumatic tendencies.

In changing seasons get abundant fresh air and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals, because Scott's Emulsion is a rich blood-food that will increase both quantity and quality of the blood while it warms the body and helps carry off the impurities.

When multitudes of people are today taking Scott's Emulsion to avert winter sickness, and are giving it to their children, it is careless to neglect its benefits. Look out for substitutes.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

WOUNDED WAR HORSES.

Almost as Careful Attention Given to Them as to Soldiers.

It is a magnificent tribute to the skill and efficiency of the British Army Veterinary Corps that 50 per cent. of the horses wounded in battle are cured and sent back to the fighting line. Wherever it is possible, wounded horses are given almost as careful attention as are the soldiers, and the same methods are adopted as with them.

To every division and cavalry brigade is attached a mobile veterinary section. Each consists of 1 officer and 22 trained men, mounted and fully equipped. They are the connecting link between the field units and veterinary hospitals, and relieve and remove sick and inefficient animals. The patients, after proper first-aid treatment, are conveyed to the nearest railway and dispatched by train to the advanced veterinary hospital, a party of the mobile corps accompanying the patients on the journey.

The veterinary hospitals are situated at different points along the line of communication, and each is organized to deal with a hundred cases. The patients are first treated in the advance hospital, and from there drafted, according to the severity of their wounds, to the hospitals farther down the line. Cases which end in complete recovery are discharged to the remount department for re-issue to the fighting troops, while those which need further rest are sent to the convalescent horse depot.

Horses are given chloroform and other anaesthetics before they are operated upon by skilled officers. The convalescent depot of the Allies has been established in one of the healthiest spots in France, and it covers an area of 20 miles. Here the patients run to grass in small, well-sheltered paddocks, receiving extra feed, and are constantly under the supervision of the officers of the Army Veterinary Corps. By this means a very large number of animals, which would otherwise be lost to the state, are saved and again become thoroughly efficient troop horses.

Sago and Apple Pudding.

Pare six apples and punch out the cores. Fill the holes with cinnamon and sugar, using two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon to a cup of sugar. Take one tablespoonful of sago to each apple, wash it thoroughly, and let soak an hour in water enough to cover the apples. Pour water and sago over the apples and bake an hour and a half. Serve with cream and sugar.

SURGICAL MAGNETS.

In the hospitals of England magnets have been developed that will draw fragments of shrapnel to the surface from a depth in the flesh of even six inches, and steel-jacketed bullets have been drawn out from a depth of more than two inches.

At the Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., are many as wonderful electric machines, high frequency currents, X-ray, violet rays. Then Dr. Pierce has equipped the Sanitarium with every known device to aid the sick and in the Surgical Department every instrument and appliance approved by the modern operator. The permanent cure of rupture is accomplished here without pain and with local anaesthesia. Gravel removed in many cases without pain and the patient can return home cured in a few days.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, nearly half a century ago, devised and used two prescriptions which were almost unfailing. They were made without alcohol or narcotics, extracted from roots and herbs by using pure glycerine. The ingredients are made public.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a tonic and blood purifier that cures pimples, blotches, sores, humors, eruptions and diseases of the skin.

Nothing stands as high to-day in the estimation of thousands of women as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—this is a soothing nervine. For girls about to enter womanhood, and for the days of middle age Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription should always be on hand. In liquid or tablets. Write Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, cloth-bound, sent free to you on receipt of 50c (or stamps). Customs duty and mailing prepaid.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little Liver Pills. These tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules—the smallest and the easiest to take. One little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic.

The Costliest Christmas-Card.

What romance lies behind the story told to the writer recently by Sir Adolph Tuck, of the most expensive Christmas-card he has ever produced!

Some time ago a gentleman called at the offices of the firm of which Sir Adolph Tuck is the head, and asked the price of an exclusive Christmas card. It was to be designed from a special painting, and motto, finish, and size were to be unique. The gentleman stipulated that only one copy was to be made, the design being immediately destroyed after the copy was completed.

After a little consideration an estimate of £25 was presented to the gentleman, who promptly paid the money; and a few days later, when he called, he took away with him the costliest Christmas-card in the world. This he placed in a box, addressed it to a lady, and, forty-eight hours afterwards, left England for a distant country. Whether the card was a token of admiration or a farewell gift, it is impossible to say; but, at any rate, the recipient can boast of having received the most costly Christmas-card which has yet been produced.

Had the late Lord Tennyson, however, accepted an offer once made by Tuck's, this £25 card would not have been a record; for the Poet Laureate was offered a fee of 1,000 guineas if he would write twelve verses of eight lines each for them to print on their cards. Lord Tennyson, however, declined the commission in a courteous letter which is now in the archives of the firm.

Murder of Children.

The murder of children for their ornaments is a common crime in some parts of India. The Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces recently issued an appeal to the people recommending that small children should not be allowed to wear valuable ornaments outside the home. By removing the temptation it is probable that the murders would cease.

President at $15 a Year.

The President of the republic of Andorra, in the Pyrenees, gets the smallest salary paid by any civilised government. It is only $15 a year. He thinks of asking for a 10 per cent. increase.

THE FIRST GENERAL WAR COUNCIL OF THE ALLIES IS HELD TO-DAY IN PARIS

All the Allied Nations Represented at the Conference --Henry Ford's Peace Ship Supplies Some Amusement For the House of Commons--Delegates Are Not Wanted in England---Election of New Greek Parliament Favourable to King Constantine's Policy Seems Certain.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS, Dec. 6.—The First War Council with all the Allies represented was held here to-day, with General Joffre presiding. General Gilineski represented Russia, General Porro represented Italy, and General Stefanovich, Serbia. A previous War Council of the British and French military chieftains have been held, but to-day's meeting was the first session of the Greater Allied Council. The name of the British representative was not given.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The House of Commons laid aside the cares of war this afternoon to poke fun at Henry Ford's peace cruise. Replying to the question as to whether the peace advocates would visit England, Lord Robert Cecil, the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said that since Ford's guests had passports only to neutral countries, it would be unnecessary to inform them that they were not welcome in England.

"But," insisted Sir Edward Cornwall, "since they have sailed amid a storm of ridicule, will you convey to them the information that they are not wanted here at any time?" When the cheers subdued Lord Robert answered: "I think it would be undignified to send any statement to a lot of ladies and gentlemen who, whatever their merits, are not particularly important." "But haven't we the right to send them to the asylum?" demanded Will Crooks, the Labour leader. "Cannot we commit these people?" Crooks' question went unanswered in the storm of laughter.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—The election of a new Greek Parliament entirely favourable to King Constantine's policy of non-intervention appears practically certain in view of advices from Athens to-day. Former Premier Venizelos, whose party had a majority in Parliament, has advised his followers not to participate in the Dec. 19 elections, declaring it illegal. Athens advices to-day predicted a crisis when Venizelos and his followers are compelled to make known their attitude as regards the new Government elected on Dec. 19.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Part of the Serb forces that retreated from Monastir across the Greek border have joined the Anglo-French expeditionary forces, according to a News Agency despatch from Salonika.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The British passenger liner, Japanese Prince, escaped from a German submarine after a five hours' chase, in which she was heavily shelled, the Press Bureau announced to-day.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—(Official).—The night passed with no important developments on any of the French fronts, to-day's communique reported.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Hereafter postal authorities will refuse to pass picture cards addressed to neutral countries, as spies have found it comparatively easy to impart important military information by clever interlineations on such mail matter.

ROME, Dec. 6.—General Trombi was killed in the fighting before Goritz, it was announced officially this afternoon.

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 6.—The British steamer Carlton, sugar laden, from New York to Queenstown, is here to-day with a fire blazing in the hold. An examination to discover the origin of the blaze has begun.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—General Townsend's forces retreating from before Bagdad have succeeded in reaching their base at Kut El Amara, 105 miles south-west of Bagdad, without further fighting, the India Office announced this afternoon.

By Chas. P. Stewart.

ABOARD THE PEACE SHIP OSCAR II., Via Wireless to Siasconset, Mass., Dec. 6.—Skipper Henry Ford to-day set in motion the machinery by which he hopes "to bring the boys out of the trenches." Ford began organizing peace committees from groups of clergymen, students and other classes about the peace ship. Even the newspaper men were drafted into service. Each of these committees will meet a corresponding committee from the neutral countries at the coming Peace Conference. They will work together in choosing an international commission to sit for the remainder of the war to receive or offer suggestions for peace. The commission's business primarily will be to give the widest possible publicity to all peace suggestions in contract to the secret methods of diplomats. It now appears certain that at least some of the peace pilgrims, including the leaders, will attempt to cross Germany, en route from Denmark to Holland. They believe the authorities of no belligerent nation would dare interfere with their movements, despite the fact that they lack passports for Germany. The International Peace Commission probably will sit in Copenhagen instead of The Hague, because of better cable facilities.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Nineteen-year-old youths, constituting the class of 1917, will be called to the colours in Russia early next year, according to Petrograd despatches to-day. Presumably they are to take the place of the reserve regiments who are to participate in Russia's expected offensive.

EXPLOSION IN FACTORY RESULTS IN TWO DEATHS

Boiler Exploded in Plant of Grey Machinery Mfg. Co. in Toronto This Morning With Terrible Results

OTHERS BADLY HURT

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—While seventy-five men knelt at prayer in the Grey Machinery Mfg. Co., Church and Wellington streets, at 7:30 this morning, there came the sound of a terrific explosion, grinding tearing noise of splintered steel, and the hiss of escaping steam. In the boiler-room adjoining two men lay dead, another in dying condition, and two others badly injured. A steam valve on top of the huge boiler which heated the plant had blown out and the five men who were smoking in the boiler-room, while their fellow workmen attended daily services, which are a feature of the Grey Works were caught in the scald-steam.

SENSATIONAL EVIDENCE OF GERMAN PLOT

Examiner Special:

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6. — Sensational evidence of pro-German munitions plots on the coast was expected to be given by witnesses before the Federal Grand Jury here to-day. Indictments of at least three men already arrested on charges of attempting to destriy commerce with the Allies were promised by the authorities.

Money payments by Baron George Witheim Von Brincken to C. C. Crowley and Lewis J. Smith were subjects of the Grand Jury's investigation. Brineken's alleged connection with the local German Consul Bopp was probed.

EVERYTHING READY FOR TO-MORROW'S BIG MEETING

The arrangements for the big Patriotic Meeting in the Opera House, to-morrow night, are filling out. There will be ample attraction. Besides the main object of the gathering, which is to enthuse people to give to the Patriotic Fund, the committee have been asked to allow of some other matters being placed before the meeting. So the arrangements have been changed to allow others to participate.

The Patriotic Choir, Mr. J. W. Worth, president, and Mr. J. H. Renwick, conductor will sing. The choir will be there at 7:30 o'clock and give selections before the opening of the meeting, and also further on and at the close. Several fine places have been prepared.

A presentation will be made to Miss Mary Harstone, who has won the $5.00 gold piece offered for competition among the school girls for the best essay on "Why We Are at War." The presentation will be made by Sir Herbert Amos.

It is expected that Lt.-Col. J. Mills, of the 2nd Battalion, will be present. He arrives during the afternoon and will be invited to attend the meeting and speak briefly on the situation. Colonel Mills will bring first-hand information.

Get there early, you understand. Come at 7:30. The whole evening will be an interesting one. The house should be filled, and the general result accomplished, people convinced that it is right to give and help.

LT.-COL. JOS. MILLS TO ARRIVE HOME TO-MORROW AFTERNOON

Peterborough Officer Who Has Been at the Front With the 2nd Battalion and Who Has Been Brought Home to Take Another Important Appointment Will Reach Here on the 3:43 C. P. R. Train on Tuesday Afternoon ---Rifles Issued to the 93rd Battalion---To-day's Military News.

Lt.-Col. Jos. Mills of the 57th Regiment, and quartermaster of the 2nd Battalion at the front ever since the first Canadian contingent went to France, will arrive in Peterborough on the 3.43 C.P.R. train from the east to-morrow afternoon. In view of the fact that not only is Lt.-Col. Mills returning from the front, but that he has also been recalled to take an important position with the Canadian forces, it has been deemed fitting that his appointment should be recognized by a reception. The Reception committee of the City Council met this afternoon and in consultation with the military authorities arranged the details.

Col. Mills will be met at the station by civic representatives and the band and officers and men of the 93rd Battalion and escorted to the armouries, where addresses of welcome will be presented to him. Col. Mills will also attend the patriotic meeting in the Grand Opera House on Tuesday night and will be asked to give an address. If it is possible, Sergt. Allan of the 4th Battery, who is expected home to-morrow, will be included in the reception.

Recruits are coming in steadily for the 93rd Battalion. Since Friday afternoon up to noon to-day, the following had passed the medical examination:

Sam Rathwell, 486 Cambridge street.
Edgar Donald, Westwood.
Albert Simpson, Brighton, Ont.
Robert Hills, Port Hope.
Arthur W. Green, Port Hope.
W. J. Darbourn, Peterborough.
J. Windover, Hall's Bridge.
Geo. W. Carr, Apsley.
Wm. B. West, Hastings.
Fred Crickland, Warsaw.
Frank W. Burch, 292 Charlotte street.

Arrangements are being made for the transference of the 93rd Battalion canteen from the company room where it is located at present, to the stores room of the 57th Regiment, next door to the medical officers' room. The new quarters will be larger and will give Sergt. Mackin a chance to transact business more easily.

Major General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia was in Peterborough for several hours last night on his way through from Lindsay to Ottawa. A number of citizens visited him in his private car at the C.P.R. station during the evening.

The many friends both in and out of the 93rd Battalion will be glad to hear that Capt. R. P. Watt, O.C. A Company of the 93rd has been promoted to the rank of Major in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. The good news was received in advices from headquarters this morning and Major Watt is being congratulated on his promotion.

The men of the 93rd Battalion are being issued with Ross rifles and slings this morning. A course of musketry training is to be inaugurated in a few days, as soon as the sergeant instructor arrives from headquarters.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, paymaster of the 93rd Battalion, has been made a life member of the Peterborough Red Cross Society.

A member of the Examiner staff has received the following interesting letter from Driver Morris Montgomery, who is at the front with the 2nd Divisional Ammunition Column. Driver Montgomery has four other brothers serving the Empire. Four of the five were residents of Peterborough and two enlisted here, two others in Toronto and one in England. Driver Montgomery, who will be remembered as a starter in the Examiner road races on several occasions writes as follows:

France, Nov. 19, 1915.

Just a few lines to let you know how things are here. Well, there is a heavy bombardment on and there have been air duels all day. The enemy's aeroplanes came over our lines, but they don't stay long before they are chased back or brought down. I tell you it is a sight to see the ambulances going to and fro some days, and the transports. You would wonder where they all came from. I was up to the front one day and we waited till dark, and the shells were flying all over so we could not get all the way up. It was fierce that night. We never got all the way up at daylight, with our horses, as we can easily be seen by the enemy. It is alright on a foggy day. Well, the way things look to me, I can't see how it can last much longer without it makes a change, and I don't see how the enemy can break through our line, as we are too strong for them. I saw my brother just before he went into the trenches, and several more Peterborough boys. I know they all are well. There are six of us brothers and I got a letter from my mother, saying the whole six will be on active service in a few weeks' time. I have a brother who lived in Peterborough for years, and he worked at the Peterborough Canoe Co. He was home to see mother, and he is in England drilling. He is in the C.M.R., and another one is in the Home Guards. He joined in England, so I expect them all here soon. I met the Leal boys one and they are both bomb throwers. I also saw Horace Ballard. I came out to Canada with him, "Dibbie" Davidson wishes to be remembered to you; he is here with me.

Yours truly,

Sergt. Instructor Dawes of the 57th Regiment who has been on duty all summer at Barrisfield camp and is now doing instructional work with the 80th Battalion at Belleville, was home for the week end. He attended divine service with the 93rd Battalion yesterday.

One pressing requirement for the 93rd Batt. is a comfortable recreation room where the men of the regiment may write letters, play games and enjoy music. Already writing materials and a few games have been provided in the two small rooms on either side of the stage. These rooms and the recreation room are unfurnished except with tables and chairs. It is suggested that individuals or church societies might contribute furnishings

CITY COUNCIL TO BE ASKED FOR A GRANT

Deputation Representing Patriotic Fund Will Wait on City Fathers To-night to Ask for Renewal of Grant—Prospects Are Bright for Successful Campaign This Week

SOME BREEZY NOTES

Looks as if there would be a successful Patriotic Fund campaign. Why not? People are contracting the giving habit. Good thing, too, so long as the objects are for the public good. No use to say we have not the money. There is always money in the country when the proper inducements are offered. This is the time of need. Red Cross, Patriotic, supplies, comforts, etc., are all for the care and help of the soldiers in the field and camp. Surely, then, for the public good, go loosen up. Make an investment. If the Germans got the upper hand you'd make the sacrifice whether you wished it or not. Better make one now and stand off the Hun.

To-night a deputation will form up at the headquarters and wait on the City Council. The object is to ask for a renewal of the grant to the Patriotic Fund of last year. It will be remembered by all whom it may concern that the deputation of that day went to the Council and proffered a request. The Council, being forewarned and in a somewhat receptive mood, had decided in such a mind as it had that a grant of $8,000 would be symmetrical, ample and satisfactory. By Jinks, they were surprised into making the allowance $10,000. Several of the aldermen were uneasy. Did not know if the electorate would endorse the proposition and action. Is there a man, woman and citizen at large who pays taxes hat would now say that that fine grant was misplaced. That it was out of proportion with the need of the day and hour. Not much. Paid without a grumble. No whining, no bewails that the taxes were going up. Up they will go. We can't run a war from our end of the game, any more than we can run a horse race without money. And it must come from those ultimately benefitted, the whole people. So gentlemen of the city, taxpayers, tenants, owners and poll tax evaders, get ready. There will be beyond question another grant. Lucky if you get off with $20,000 this time. For the needs of the Fund are growing every day with the rapid enlistment of married men. We must keep our contracts so far as we can and we will do so so long as the money holds out.

A natural thing for the Council to

POSITIONS ARE PROMISED FOR THE HEROES FROM FRONT

Col. Hemming Makes Important Announcement at the Reception to Returned Soldiers in Market Hall Saturday Night

A BIG CROWD OUT

Although apparently Peterborough has yet to learn how to cheer properly the largeness of the crowd which turned out on Saturday night for the reception to the Peterborough soldiers who have returned from the front recently must have revealed to the gallant lads the fact that their fellow citizens were not only proud of what they had done, but were sincerely glad to welcome them back. George street was a solid mass of humanity as the procession moved down from the armouries and the crowd overflowed into the road, so that the parade had to pass down a narrow lane.

The procession was headed by the band of the 93rd Battalion, followed by the invalided soldiers. Then came the fire brigade, in charge of a display of fireworks, and then the officers and men of the 93rd Battalion and the members of the 33rd Battery. Here and there along the route, a little group would cheer as the motor cars containing the soldier heroes passed but for the most part the huge crowd was silent. It was not until the procession came to a halt in front of the market hall that the pent up enthusiasm was given vent to in an outburst of cheering as the soldiers were helped out of their cars.

The heroes who were the centre figures in the demonstration were:

Sergt. J. R. Cooper, 4th Battery, C. F.A.
Corp. John Playford, British Army Service Corps, who is now a sergeant in the 93rd Battalion.
Corp. Chas. Payne, 1st Wiltshires, now a corporal in the 93rd.
Corp. P. T. Martin, Rifle Brigade.
Corp. Harry King, 4th Battery, C. F.A.
Gunner M. McGill, 4th Battery, C. F.A.
Pte. Wm. Levoir, 2nd Battalion, C. E.F.
Pte. Gordon Fallen, 14th Battalion, C.E.F.
Pte. Louis Spence, 15th Battalion (48th Highlanders), C.E.F.
Pte. H. Fitzclarence of the 2nd Battalion, was ill and unable to attend the reception, while Trooper Percy Parrington of the Strathcona Horse, who was also to have been included, was out of the city.

At the Market Hall.

The market hall was quickly filled on the arrival of the procession from the armouries. His Worship Mayor Buller presided, and after briefly welcoming the heroes of the evening, called upon Col. Hemming of Kingston, the district officer commanding, for an address. Col. Hemming was greeted with three hearty cheers.

"It was a great pleasure," he said "for him to be present to help in welcoming the returned soldiers and an unexpected pleasure." The speaker paid a tribute to the work done by the boys, who were being honoured, and then made an announcement that was received with great applause.

"If any one of these men desire it," remarked Col. Hemming, "I have home duties for them, such as guarding the prisoners at Fort Henry and Petawawa, guarding our canals and so on. They can come to me at any time if it is their wish. The positions are always open to them.' (Cheers.)

"Now that they are home," continued Col. Hemming "I hope they will do their best to help us to stimulate recruiting. We still want men and more men, and I have found that the men who have been to the front can bring twenty recruits for every one that somebody else might get. And again, if the health of any of these men will not permit them to take up the duties I have outlined, I don't think there would be any objection if I were to put them on recruiting duty and give them three stripes to wear on their arms. (Loud cheers.)

In conclusion Col. Hemming said

A FOOLISH AND FRUITLESS MISSION.

The peace ship which sailed from New York on its ridiculous voyage, is said to have had its cabin "decorated with stuffed doves and olive branches." The absurd and untimely peace propagandists may be able to force chalk ducks upon innocent pigeons, but they will find that they can't stuff the Allies with any fairy tales, or catch such birds, old in honourable estimation, with the chaff of an untimely peace, inadequate and dishonouring to the cause they are fighting for. While the peace ship was leaving the United States to pretend to bring about peace, the Allied powers were renewing a compact not to conclude peace separately, which means that the Allies are to stand four-square together till the foundations of peace are laid in victory complete and final, the only victory that will justify the conclusion of a peace that will be permanent.

CONGRATULATIONS.

The members of the County Council are to be congratulated upon closing their term of office with an excellently patriotic contribution to the Patriotic Fund. It shows practical appreciation of the needs of the situation to increase the county's monthly contribution four-fold — from $250 per month to $1,000 per month, a total of $12,000 per year. It is to be confidently assumed that if the members return to their constituents for re-election their action will be warmly endorsed. The vote was unanimous owing to the complete absence of partisanship and hostility displayed by Mr. Reeve Colton of Galloway, whose timely starting of the National Anthem brought every member to his feet. We have not at hand the figures given by other counties; but, if some county contributions are larger they are made by much more populous counties. The needs of the Patriotic Fund, by the increased demands placed upon them, are about four times larger than they were last year, and is multiplying its contributions by four Peterborough County Council has pretty well measured up to the call of the hour. This war brings demands for service and even sacrifice, to all elements of our population; to the rural residents as well as the city dwellers; and the burden will be more easily borne if its weight is evenly distributed; if every one according to the measure of his ability does his share in the way he can do it. The call is loud for three chief things, men, munitions and money. Those who cannot fight, can many of them make munitions, and those who cannot do that, can pay—pay something; be the sum small or great, it is welcome if it represents the individual capacity for this form of service.

WHAT WE ARE FIGHTING FOR

If a good name is better than riches, Germany is bankrupt in reputation. From this time henceforth, and forever, the name of German and Germany will stink in the nostrils of the nations. It will stand as a symbol, a logotype, of all that is faithless, deceitful, and lying. "Punica fides," has come down to us through thirty centuries as a synonym of deceit and unfaith; but it pales its sinful light before the evil faith of the Christian nations—to this time the German people who have surrendered soul and body to the domination of the German war spirit, which has no more respect for solemn treaties, than for plighted word, whose worthless are enmeshed in lying, spying, every imaginable form of crookedness, and regardless of the mercy of humanity. If the devil, as reported, is the father of lies, he has a big family in Central Europe. To combat and crush this spirit this awful war is waged.

On the contrary the name of Britain, which towers as rugged and firm, and immovable as Canada's Cape Chidley, at the outpost of the St. Lawrence, stands at the very forefront and pinnacle of the roll of honour as a keeper of plighted faith, as a school of honour and honourable dealing. It stands for right and national righteousness; as the antithesis of wrong, as the champion of the oppressed, and the symbol of the highest expression of human freedom, national and individual, and, of thought for the welfare and uplift of humanity. There never was a time in the world's history when parents can teach their children lessons of honesty and honourable principles with such a high object lesson, such a fascinating example of heroic spirit, and practical godliness, the privilege of these United States, Great Britain and Germany. They represent respectively the highest realization and the lowest degradation of human ambition — the great good to be sought, and the great evil to be shunned.

Parents should drive the lesson home, and it can be no better impressed in one way than by urging upon our sons of military age that to keep the one, and to crush the other, is the aim and purpose of this war; and that the best way to achieve these objects is to join the fighting ranks—those who can fight, or fight, and those who can't fight, but can pay, to pay. This war represents a fight for life — the national life and the happiness of every man, woman and child in the Dominions and Empire, and in the whole world. We talk of enlistment sometimes as if it applied only to able-bodied men; but this mighty struggle affects everybody. That is why we are busy day and night with the branches of the Red Cross; that is why we are raising a great Patriotic Fund—to give an opportunity of enlistment to all, to give everybody a chance to fight in the only way he or she can fight—with the knitting needle, or with the silver bullet, or with rifle, machine gun, and hand grenade.

"PUTTING IT OVER" AMERICANS.

All around the globe Germany has broken faith with the other nations. Wherever the slightest opportunity has appeared of gaining an advantage over friend or foe by foul means of the utmost has been made of that opportunity. The trial of leading Hamburg-American officials in New York on a charge of violating the neutrality of the United States by making that country a sort of coaling and supply station for German warships is the latest instance to be brought home to the traitor among nations. This plot is shown to have been carried out at the direct instance of the German Government, and the German Embassy, through the military attache, Capt. Boy-ed, was undoubtedly the intermediary.

What with the forging of American passports—also a function of the Embassy—with the establishment at Sayville of a German Government wireless system, for naval and military purposes under pseudo-American auspices; the activity in the United States Senate of German members who act as though they are the appointees of the German Government; the placing of infernal machines on American ships; the slaughtering of hundreds of innocent American citizens at sea; and the bombing out rates with which the German Government are trying to terrorize the American people—well, when with all this it must be said that the Americans are a very patient, complaisant, and long-suffering people. But, after all that has occurred, any American in high mind over plain faith in German honour again, he ought to be placed on exhibition as a freak of Nature.

DEGENERATED.

It is not such a great number of years ago since Bismarck wrote to the Kaiser's grandfather, apropos the Turks: "With such barbarians it is difficult to be on good terms diplomatically, and I think that all Christian Powers must be indignant." But that was in the days when Germans had not set themselves to the task of beating the Turks at the game of barbarity.—Montreal Star.

OUR MORAL IMPERATIVE.

There are two aspects of this struggle—each of which is imperative. One is that we are fighting for the country and the Empire; the other is that the country and the Empire are fighting against an enemy who, in the King's words, "has transgressed the Laws of Nations and obscured the Ordinance that binds civilized Europe together." The appeal which the King makes is to free men to come forward voluntarily in defence of freedom and civilization. Herein is a moral imperative which is deeper and stronger than any physical compulsion, and we cannot doubt that it will yield the necessary result.—Westminster Gazette.

SOMEWHAT MISREPRESENTED

Any quadrupedal man has only to keep his eyes open to realize that the great mass of civilized humanity views the German strafe as being unmistakably misrepresented by the unscrupulous agitators. Apart, in great measure, from the question of allegiance to the United States, are giving it unprejudiced consideration. Those who came to this country to seek peace and to enjoy the liberty which they could get their own. Many of them fought for the Union in the Civil War. Their spirit is as good Americans as any that can be found between the Atlantic and the Pacific. To assert that the great mass of them would be disloyal to the country of their adoption is either a gross libel on a type of citizen which has done quite as much to create the wealth of the country and to set fine examples of plain and right living.—New York Herald.

CITY COUNCIL TO BE ASKED FOR A GRANT

do is to say that the proposed grant is something to be dealt with in the incoming Council for 1916. If it were any civic expenditure such delay would be perfectly proper. But this is a national emergency. To think is to act. It is beyond question that every alderman has a charter from his constituents to act in a virile and forcible way and push through such civic appropriations as will sustain the Fund by the tax contributions of the people who are in the end benefitted. It is their war. Those men are fighting for them. They have no power to raise money for effort. On each behind the gun rides all the risk. Measure out that risk for yourself in dollars and then tell your alderman to stand to the line and support a liberal and liberal gift.

There is a paragraph that may interest those who may be affected, and their friends. It is not generally known that the Federal Government supplies artificial limbs free to soldiers who have lost limbs while serving on active service. Therefore any such cases to be brought to the attention of the Patriotic Fund, the local branch, application will be made to the Director-General of Medical Services, Ottawa, for artificial limbs.

The Canvass has done fine for the Fund. $20,000 for the next twelve months will probably be practically $12,000. That will brace things up to about March and leave a little over for the soldiers of the Dominion not to well off to assist, but willing to send the men to the front. The county grant will be supplemented by individual grant from the well-off men of the county, who should by all odds give more that would be represented by the amount placed on the tax roll. Take the action of Mr. Robert Deyell, of Otonabee, as an instance. One that is repeating itself and will be repeated all over the county. He comes in on Saturday. He was one of the deputation that waited on the County Council. Mr. Deyell says, "I am a man well on in years. My good wife is also getting into the end of the sixties. I have 100 acres to work and make my living. I have one son with me. He wants to go to the war. I can hardly restrain him. But if he goes, what will I do. The farm work must continue which I cannot well do. So my son, at my earnest wish, stays, though he knows, and I know his duty is elsewhere. I will most cheerfully do any amount the county sees fit to assess on me. Here in addition is something more that I feel I should do." And Mr. Deyell laid on the table a handsome cash subscription to the Fund. Who will be next.

Team captains and team mates will rally at headquarters to-night (Monday), to form a deputation to the Council. Be on hand early. Lots of business at the closing out meeting of the year.

Sir Herbert Ames, who will address the patriotic meeting on Tuesday evening, will arrive by the Montreal-Toronto train. He will be the guest of the committee and will be looked after in the hands of Mr. R. R. Hall. An inspection of the armouries, etc., will fill in the interval until the time of meeting. Hon. Mr. McGarry will not arrive from Toronto until the early evening C.P.R. train and will come to the meeting direct from the train.

List of team captains. Omission made of Adjt. McElhinney as captain of Team No. 14. Sorry. The Adjutant is a good scout. He will be on the job. He's the happy and lucrative faculty of getting even the most reluctant to contribute. Takes a helping hand in many an enterprise, and to its ultimate benefit. Apologies to the Adjutant for commission of name and title.

In view of the change in arrangements at the Opera House, it is expected that with the choir on the platform, that room will be found for those invited to the platform, and the teams and captains in front seats, which will be reserved to a reasonable number.

Three Candidates For the Deputyship of North Monaghan

A three-cornered contest is promised for the deputyship of North Monaghan, according to the present rumours. Reeve McIntosh, Deputy-Reeve Forster and ex-Reeve W. G. Howden, are generally mentioned as the township's claim to lead the Council. These men would certainly make a close run, and it is more than likely that all three will face the music. Councillor H. B. Rye is mentioned as a probable candidate for the deputy-reeveship.

Time Munitions Board Replaced Dominion Shell Committee

In the purchase of shells abroad, the first thing which Great Britain has to do is to find the money. Then, when the money is assured, it is an elementary principle of business that the British officials do not go ahead and distribute orders wholesale, regardless of what the total cost will be. They make appropriations—a quick is set aside for purchasing shells in the United States, so much for purchasing shells in Canada, and so on. Now, as a basis of argument, let us suppose that a certain sum is set aside for the purchase of shells in Canada. Obviously, if the prices were fair, that would buy a full $500,000,000 worth of shells. But as the prices were darned near what they might to be, it would only mean an $80,000,000 worth of shells before the bring, like, and if they were five times what they ought to be only $100,000,000 of the shells that should go from Canada to serve the guns would go.

Therefore, if it is true that a certain class of shell could be profitably manufactured at $1 per shell, and if, say $2,000,000 had been set aside for this work, then that money would pay for machining five million shells. But if, for machining that class of shell $5.15 was demanded, then it is obvious that only one million shells should be machined for the $5,000,000 of British good money. Consequently, instead of five million shells being sent to the front for the use of the gallant British boys in the trenches they are waiting for us all, less than one million shells would be. And four million shells less would drive on the German trenches. Think of it! Four thousand rounds of shells less! Enough to turn the tide of any battle in which our brave defenders are engaged.

Did the Dominion Shell Committee name of this when they fixed the prices at $5.15?

Supposing that, as a result of certain happenings, the original charge of $5.15 were reduced to $2.50 on subsequent orders, then for $5,000,000 Britain would get nearly twice the number of shells to hurl at the Germans. Now supposing some responsible contractor came forward and offered to machine the shells for $1.40, then instead of close on two million shells between three and four millions would be procured.

[illegible] Shell Committee [illegible] ... they turned down an offer to machine the shells at $1.40 and ordered the shell-machining at [illegible] reduced price of $2.50 by contractors in which the "manufacturing members of the community were interested."

Take another instance. Take the machining of the 8-inch shells. If $12,000,000 were to be paid for machining 8-inch shells in Canada, then at $15 per shell, which [illegible] would be a fair price, one million shells would be machined. But if $15 per shell were charged there would be less than 800,000 shells for the $12,000,000—a big difference to the British taxpayers who have to find the money, and to the brave men who have [illegible] to hold the lines against the German [illegible].

The Shell Committee [illegible] of millions they fixed the price of machining 8-inch shells at $94?

The orders for war munitions in Canada have run into the hundreds of millions. If [illegible] are representative examples of the way in which the work of the Shell Committee has restricted the supply for the armies at the front, what appalling restriction of the supply of war materials is represented by the Expenditure of say, $200,000,000 by the Shell Committee? The mind is staggered at the contemplation of what misery, what death, and destruction, the lack of the full quota of shells entailed that the money sent to Canada might have bought, has meant to those who are [illegible] of our blood.—Montreal Herald-Telegram.

A [illegible] duty, much admired by a [illegible] at the show books, was [illegible] duty that calls her soldiers to her [illegible] nation.

"If you dare to kiss me again," she said, "I shall tell my father."

But her hapless lover did.

Quite true she fled to her father's room, where she happened to find him examining a gun.

"Oh, papa," she exclaimed, "do run downstairs and show Mr. Mudlove your gun. He is so interested in guns."

"Very well, then," was the good natured reply, "and don't worst the unsuspecting father. At the sight of the girl's parent armed with the gun the young man fled precipitately.

The artist was painting—superb, red with blue circles and green dots. The old rustic at a respectful distance was watching.

"Ah," said the artist, looking up suddenly, "perhaps to you, too, nature has opened her sky-pictures page by page? Have you seen the brilliant flame of dawn leaping across the vivid east; the [illegible] sulphurous [illegible] floating in the lake of fire in the west; the [illegible] clouds at midnight, black as a fiend's wing, blotting out the shuddering moon?"

"No," replied the rustic, shortly; "not since I signed the pledge."—Tit-Bits.

ROME, Dec. 6.—The Pope to-day held in the Consistoral Hall one of the most important conclaves in the history of the Church. From the allocution delivered to the cardinals by His Holiness, it was hoped in Vatican circles would develop the moves that would bring an early end to the world war. It was the first secret consistory of the present Pope. He created his first cardinals, seven in all. It was known that His Holiness would exhort the cardinals to renewed efforts for peace and would detail at length the horrors of war. All the principal belligerent nations were represented.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—The German War Office reports this afternoon that "on the Western front there were artillery, mine and grenade engagements at several places. Near Bapaume two English aeroplanes were shot down and their occupants killed."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Preparedness and "war" measures galore were in the flood of bills introduced to-day in the House. Rep. Meyer London, the Socialist, introduced his resolution, proposing a peace conference of neutral nations. The Government construction of war munitions and their taxation were proposed by many members.

ATHENS, Dec. 6.—The 105th German Division has been rushed to Rustchuk, presumably to meet the Roumanian concentration near that point, and to repel an expected movement of the Russian troops.

The Greek military authorities received word to-day that Germany is sending heavy artillery to the Roumanian border from the Western front. The Roumanian order commandeering all foreign shipping in Roumanian ports, "in the interests of the national defence," was scheduled to go into effect to-day. It was expected to give rise to trouble at once along the Danube. If the Roumanian authorities seize Austro-Hunparian or Bulgarian cargo boats, King Constanfine, it was reliably reported to-day, is about to assure the Allies that their demands will be met in full. Greece may not openly state her position to the world, but the assurances will be of such definite nature as to remove all doubt in London and Paris. Only minor clashes with the Teutonic advance guards are now marking the Serbian retirement into Albania. The most severe fighting in the Balkans is going on south of Plevlje. In this region the fierce resistance of the Montenegrins is reported to have checked the Austrian invasion.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The State Department to-day asked for a warship to rescue an American vessel, name unknown, which wirelessed from the northern coast of Africa on Friday that she was being attacked by a submarine. The cruiser Desmoines and the collier Caesar, now in Mediterranean waters, will search for the vessel.

Pekin, Dec. 6.—An attempt to launch revolutionary movement in Shanghai has been promptly suppressed and the rebels imprisoned, according to official dispatches received here to-day, Chinese cruiser Chao-Ho which was recaptured from the mutineers, who have been placed in irons and will be executed. The land forces easily repulsed a rebel attack on Shanghai arsenal the rebels, Shanghai dispatches said admitted that their purpose was to start an anti-monarchial movement.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—The good people of the Dominion and the militia authorities will this year provide 75,000 Christmas dinners for the soldiers training in Canada. Every soldier will have a dinner of turkey and plum pudding. In England also all Canadian soldiers in training will be served with a genuine Christmas dinner.

BERLIN, via wireless, Dec. 6—Bulletin.)—That the Serbs and Montenegrins have at last halted the Teutonic offensive along the Montenegrin and Albanian frontiers was indicated by this afternoon's official statement. The War Office spoke only of attacks by Montegrin and Serb detachments south of Syenica and east of Ipek.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The Government of the United States wants a billion and a quarter dollars for running expenses in 1917. This estimate to-day was transmitted to Congress by Secretary-Treasurer MacAdoo.

Administration's estimate of cost of running the Government in 1917 amounts to nearly $9 for every man woman, and child in the United States.

The estimates are an advance of 167 millions over 1916 appropriations. The increases are largely owing to the War and Navy Departments.

Major Davidson, the chaplain of the Battalion, is chairman of the Recreation Rooms committee and may be consulted as to what is needed. Crimson curtains, table covers, a gramaphone, late magazines and small tables will all be useful. At resent the men have only their sleeping quarters and the main drill hall for their leisure time, and the need for something corresponding to a well furnished parlour will be readily seen. Efforts are being made to secure a piano which have not been successful as yet.

Belleville, Dec. 5.—Lieut.-Col. W. G. Ketcheson, O. C. 80th Battalion, has secured the services of Lieut. H. A. Stares, Mus. Bac., of Hamilton, to take charge of the 80th Battalion Band, with the rank of Lieutenant. He will come to Belleville in a few weeks and assume direction. Lieut Stares was for many years the conductor of the 91st Canadian Highlanders' Band of Hamilton, from the time of organization of that regiment, in which capacity he won much distinction. He is director of Christ Church Cathedral choir, Hamilton. He is also the only military band conductor in Canada to have been honoured with the degree of Bachelor of Music. His appointment assures the 80th Battalion one of the finest musical organizations in Canada.

Two Peterborough officers, Lieuts. Beresford Hamilton and Douglas Huycke, have been selected to go with the next draft from the 33rd Battery which is to go overseas in a short time. About thirty Peterborough artillerymen have been chosen. Some of those who are going in the draft and who are at present on their last leave home are Sergt. Bishop, Bombardier Roy Harper, Bombardier Hake, Gunners Cummings, Elcombe, Manley, Copp, Thorndyke, Hamilton, Jones, Perry, J. Sabatino, C. Sharpe, Coone, Ramsden, Ramsey, Godfrey, Smith, Drummond, Leach, Whitney, Nicholls, Burke, Parks, J. S. Sharpe, and Turner. They leave for Kingston to-morrow night.

Sergt. Geo. W. Allan, of the 4th Battery, invalided home from the Front, is expected home sometime to-morrow. He is to-day in Kingston, having been in charge of seventeen wounded soldiers from this division who had to be taken to the Convalescent Home in Kingston. Sergt. Allan, who was wounded seven months ago telephoned to-day from Kingston that he would arrive here via G.T.R. either to-morrow morning or evening.

Mr. G. N. Gordon has received a letter from Lieut. A. B. Colville of the 39th Battalion, stating that he was in London on a short leave after four months in the trenches. Lieut. Colville is a Campbellford boy and is well known in Peterborough. He was counsel for the Seymour Power Co., and his last legal service was in connection with the arbitration proceedings between this city and the Peterborough Light and Power Co., for whom he was acting.

Attempted To Steal a Ride

Thomas Bell Was Fined Five Dollars With the Option of Ten Days in Gaol

Thomes Bell, resident unknown appeared in this morning's police court on a charge of attempting to steal a ride on a railway train. He pleaded guilty and was fined five dollars, with the option of ten days in gaol. He will accept the latter.

Peter Henderson pleaded guilty to a charge of being found drunk in a public place. He was placed on the blacklist at his own request.

Mr. H. Rush and Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., two Justices of the Peace performed the duties of the court this morning.

CANON DAVIDSON BADE GODSPEED TO BATTERY

At St. John's church yesterday Rev. Canon Davidson made a strong appeal yesterday on behalf of the Patriotic Fund. He also bade Godspeed to the members of the 33rd Battery who are in the draft for overseas leaving Canada within a short time. Canon Davidson also read a letter received from Lt.-Col. Mills, a church warden of St. John's, to the effect that he had landed in St. John's, N.B., and was expected in Peterborough in a few days. It would be a pleasure, Canon Davidson said, to welcome Col. Mills home again. The rector also presented the needs of the Northwest missions and urged that the church's giving be fully made up this month.

"FREE SHOT" ON GOAL FOR FOULS

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—The N. H. A. adopted the soccer "free kick" principle ,when the directors last night drew up a rule which allows of a shot at the goal when a man is prevented by a foul from a chance to score. When a foul of this kind occurs the team of the offending player must line up behind the nets, leaving the goalkeeper alone to receive the shot made from the spot where the offence occurred. Another new rule adopted deals with overtime matches, it being decided that with the points system prevailing this winter there would be no more than twenty-minutes of overtime in any game.

It was also decided to change the counting in the championship table. Hereafter a win will count two points and a draw one.

Red Cross Concert, In North Monaghan

A concert in aid of the Red Cross was held in Byersville Salvation Army Sunday school on Friday night, when Reeve McIntosh presided. It was a success in every respect and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed. Sergt. Major Hartshorn and Sergt. Traynor contributed to the programme, other numbers of which were as follows:

Song—Mrs. Scholey.
Recitation—Mr. John.
Recitation—Mrs. S. Thomas.
Piano duet—Miss A. Lee and Miss E. Jay.
Banjo solo—Mr. Parkins.
Address—Pte. Stenson.
Duet—Miss Booth and Mrs. Cooke.
Piano duet—Miss Simmons and Miss Patterson.
Recitation—Mrs. Thomas.
Violin solo—Mr. E. Lee.

The ladies desire to thank Adjt McElhiney for the use of the hall.

Sodality Reception at St. Peter's Last Night

Nineteen young ladies were received into the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin at St. Peter's Cathedral last night. The ceremony was an impressive one, and Bishop O'Brien preached a special sermon for the occasion dwelling upon the purity of the life of the Blessed Virgin and urging the ladies of the sodality to emulate her virtues and as far as possible to model their lives after hers. Rev. Father Phalen assisted in the service.

In the three Catholic churches yesterday appeals were made to the respective congregations to support the Patriotic Fund as liberally as possible. The duty of providing for the soldiers' dependants was particularly emphasized.

St. Nicholas' Day

The Prototype of Santa Claus is Commemorated This Day —A Patron Saint of Many Countries—On the Eve of This Day Christmas Presents Were Formerly Made.

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

Nicholas, or Nicolas, for his nat. is spelt indifferently, had his life wrapped up in an obscurity that is but little lightened by fable. He was Bishop of Myra in Lydia, but all the accounts that have come down to us are of a purely legendary character, and it is next to impossible to confirm any in history.

This saint is regarded as especially

and more particularly of scholars. In England, in former times, his feast was celebrated with great solemnity in the great schools, e.g., Eton, Harrow, Charterhouse, and elsewhere. In Germany, even nowadays, on the eve or vigil of his feast, a person in the appearance and costume of a bishop assembles the children of schools and families, distributing amongst them gilded nuts and sweetmeats, and other presents as a reward of good conduct to such as deserve them; to the naughty ones the punishment of the birch, known as the "Klaubauf."

St. Nicholas is also the patron saint of seamen, travellers, merchants, and robbers.

Patron Saint of Many Countries.

St. Nicholas is one of the most popular saints of the Greek as well as of the Latin churches.

The following countries hold him as their patron: Russia, Holland, Greece, the ancient kingdoms of Naples, Sicily and Lorraine. Many cities also look upon him in the same light; for instance, Liege in Belgium Kampen in Holland, Corfu, Freiburg and Moscow.

St. Nicholas' Life.

St. Nicholas first embraced the life of religion by entering a monastery near Myra. As time went on he was raised to the dignified office of abbot, making himself for many years conspicuous by his many acts of benevolence and piety. As a testimony to the faith he, under the persecution of the Emperor Diocletian, was imprisoned, but escaped actual death by martyrdom.

St. Nicholas belongs to the fourth century of the Christian era. At his death his remains were preserved with great honour at Myra.

His Bones Translated.

But towards the end of the eleventh century his coffin was broken open, and his bones carried to Bari in Italy, where, on this day, down to the present time, great feastings and rejoicings take place. The feast of St. Nicholas at Bari is one of the greatest of ecclesiastical festivals of Southern Italy. It lasts for several days; great processions, illuminations, and bonfires play a big part in the festive period. Stores are brilliantly hung with coloured festoons, and innumerable lights hold great sway.

In Art.

St. Nicholas is usually depicted in full archiepiscopal vestments, mitre on head and crozier in hand standing beside a tub of naked children.

A Tradition.

has it that two well-born youths, having to make a journey, had to pass through Myra where Nicholas was archbishop. Their father desired them to call on the evening of their arrival, on the holy man and receive his blessing. But the young men deferred their visit until next day, meanwhile taking up their abode at an inn. The rapacious landlord, in order to possess himself of their belongings, murdered the unfortunate youths in their sleep. He cut the bodies to pieces, and placed the mutilated remains in a pickling tub in which were some pieces of pork. But came to the archbishop, he went to the inn, where the guilty man, finding his crime discovered, confessed his guilt. St. Nicholas prayed over the remains, making the Sign of the Cross over them. Scarcely had the saint finished his prayer, when the mangled remains wer re-united, and the two young men rose alive out of the tub. St. Nicholas then ordered them to return thanks to the Almighty, gave them his benediction, and sent them rejoicing on their journey.

A Vision

Origin of Santa Claus Gifts.

St. Nicholas was blessed with ample means, and being very charitable was in the habit of bestowing many gifts. From one of these incidents in his life arose a practice of the elder members and friends of a family placing sweetmeats and other little presents in the shoes or the stockings of the younger members on the eve of his feast day. These presents were popularly ascribed to the benevolence of St. Nicholas. In convents the young ladies hung up their silk stockings at the door of the apartments of the abbess with a paper commending themselves to the great st. Nicholas. The next morning they would be called together to receive the candies which the saint was supposed to have placed in the hose.

A Good Paper at St. John's.

These points of connection between St. Nicholas, Christmas gift giving, and Santa Claus do not appear to be generally known. Therefore, it was with some pleasure that the writer attended, some three years ago, an entertainment in St. John's Schoolhouse, on which occasion a paper on this very subject was read by the able lady superintendent of the primary classes of the Sunday School belonging to that church. Descanting on the high merit of this paper in writing up an article for the Examiner next day, he said that "the young lady trested with the festivities in vogue in Holland on St. Nicholas' Eve, observance of which,

and of windmills, practically ushers in Christmas. In a facile, graphic manner the authoress of the paper told how that Dutch children hang up on St. Nicholas' Eve their stockings in the large old-fashioned fireplaces; how that the saint—a rough-looking, shaggy-bearded old man, clad in red relieved with ermine—comes along in his reindeer sledge, accompanied by his satellite, makes his descent by way of the chimney, distributing good gifts to good children, and the punishment of the birch to the naughty ones," etc., etc.

Gifts at Christmas a Modern Practice

The popular custom of giving presents on Christmas Eve is of comparatively modern invention. The original practice was to present these tokens of love and affection on the eve of St. Nicholas (December 5th) when in Holland more particularly Christmas may be said to begin. However, it was generally found more convenient to transfer the custom to Christmas proper.

The Name "Santa Claus" an Americanism.

This practice of gift-giving gave rise to the association of Christmas Day with Santa Claus, which is nothing more or less than an American corruption of the Dutch form of Saint Nicholas, San Klaus, the custom having been taken to America by the early Dutch colonists.

Cult of St. Nicholas.

In England there are nearly four hundred churches dedicated to St. Nicholas, a standing evidence of his great popularity.

County Council Urges Taxation of Incomes

The County Council passed a motion on Saturday urging the Government to enact legislation whereby incomes shall be proportionately taxed for patriotic purposes. Reeve Squire of Norwood, introduced the idea, and his motion was seconded by Reeve McKee of Smith. The opinion of the Council is that not only should property bear the burdens of war taxation, but also investments and other income producing methods.

CORRESPONDENT ENDORSES NIGHT NOMINATIONS

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In response to your invitation to your readers to give their opinion of the proposed change in the hour of nominations of municipal candidates, I, as a delegate of the Trades and Labour Council, am strongly in favour of it. I believe it is the first step towards getting the citizens to take an interest in their own business—the good government of our city. To the majority of the electors the man they vote for, either as mayor or alderman, is simply a name, owned by a person they have never seen or heard. The fact that the nominations are held at mid-day makes it impossible for many of them to attend. Because a man is not very well known is not proof that he would not make a first-class administrator, but if the nominations were held in the evening, to be followed by a public meeting, it would give a chance to many of the electors to see and hear the men who are asking for their support. The apathy and indifference of the citizens towards municipal matters is really appalling. During the past year the average attendance of the public at the City Council meetings was about three. At other times when there has been a deputation asking for a grant for some purpose, I have noticed that as soon as their request has been considered, and in most cases has been granted, the members of the deputations get up and get out of the Council chamber as if they were afraid of the plague. During the past year I have made it my business to urge all I have come in contact with to attend the meetings of the City Council, but the reply invariably was, "Who is going to waste an evening listening to their claptrap." It is not all the fault of the Aldermanic Board, for indifference and apathy are no doubt contagious, and an indifferent electorate will mighty soon produce an indifferent Council. It is to be hoped that the City Council will agree to the proposed change, and I can assure you that it will not be the fault of the Trades and Labour Council if the electors do not take a more lively interest in municipal matters in the future than they have done in the past.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours truly,

R. MITCHELL,

Socks Knitted in Peterborough Are Sent To the Trenches

A Small Proportion of the Supply is Sent to Red Cross Hospitals and Prisoners of War—The Peterborough Red Cross Society's Great Need of Socks.

Peterborough, Dec. 4, 1915.

Sir,—Some confusion has been created in the minds of the women of Peterborough, who are rendering such splendid service to our soldiers by knitting socks, by a letter or article written by Mrs. Knox, the president of the Kitchener Patriotic League. Many inquiries have been made as to how the Red Cross can send socks to the trenches when all socks knitted for that society (whose Peterborough headquarters are located at the Public Library) are for sick, wounded and convalescent soldiers and for Canadian prisoners of war. In endeavouring to smooth out the existing misapprehension, the Peterborough Red Cross desire to again emphasize the fact that all socks knitted for them go to various Canadian Red Cross Hospitals in England, France, Belgium, Egypt, the Dardanelles, and to the foregoing may be added Serbia and Salonika.

The misunderstanding has arisen through the misuse of the term "Red Cross" in the designation of Mrs. Knox as "President of the Red Cross Club."

The Red Cross Society is under Royal Charter, and it is a criminal offence for any to use that term excepting affiliated branches, auxiliaries, and societies sending Red Cross supplies through this splendid and wonderful organization.

There are many societies and clubs in Peterborough doing an excellent work in sending socks and other articles (which come under the heading of "bed comforts) direct to the trenches where the need is great, and we all agree that those fighting our battles are worthy of every help and comfort we can extend to them, but we desire to point out that there is a far greater proportion of socks going direct to the trenches from Peterborough than is going to the hospitals and prisoners of war. In addition to those sent by the various societies and clubs, there must also be included the very large number sent by individuals to relatives or those in whom they have a personal interest, but the only society in Peterborough sending socks to the sick and wounded is the Red Cross Society and those who send through its agency, and surely the sick, wounded, and convalescent soldier and the prisoner of war deserves as well of us as those who are able to continue in the firing line.

Dr. Ryerson says, "Socks, socks, socks."

Those of us who heard him speak recently know how dire and urgent is the need of them. His description of the state many of the men were in when admitted to hospital, their clothes literally blown off them, almost naked, mud-covered, weary and sore, moved us greatly, and we realised then, as perhaps never before, what it means to a man in such a state to reach one of our hospitals, to be washed, his wounds dressed, and fresh, clean clothes put on him. It means a restoration of his manhood, a realisation of the fact that not even in this terrible and awful conflict is everything hateful and ugly, but that there are glimpses of the beautiful to be caught, that human kindness and goodness of heart is a wonderful thing after all, and that knowledge brings to the spent and brave fighter a strange but sweet comfort in his weariness.

The local Red Cross will be glad to give wool to good knitters, who will knit socks for our sick soldiers and prisoners of war.

There must be many more in Peterborough who could "do their bit" in this way, and perhaps in no other. The need is so great that in our last Red Cross Bulletin issued by our Toronto headquarters, they plead for expert knitters to confine their attention solely to socks and let less expert knit wristlets, mufflers, etc.

Will you respond to our appeal and help us in this work? If you will, your aid will be gladly welcomed.

Signed on behalf of the Publicity Committee,

Annie F. Allen, Convenor.

200 ACRE PLANT RISES IN MONTH FOR SHELL FACTORY

GLASGOW, Dec. 1.—It might be assumed that to expand more than two-fold the great shipbuilding plants on the Clyde, so far as employees and output is concerned, would be all that is expected of this centre in the way of munitions. But it is not all that the Scotsmen on the western coast are contributing by any means, for here, as in other parts of the United Kingdom, new workshops are being erected for munitions and plants intended originally for other purposes are being turned into shell factories.

"'Somewhere in Scotland' to-day I saw a two hundred acre filling plant which has grown up in a little more than a month, like a magic city with its scores of separate structures. There are no less than eleven miles of trolley track to carry shells from place to place. The plant will be finished soon and workers for it are now being trained elsewhere.

"The plant is being erected by contractors who will make no profit and on a tour of munition plants much of that sort of thing is seen. Engineers of large experience and reputation and owners of big establishments are doing their bit' without a thought of personal gain.

As in the case of the famous Armstrong works at Newcastle, plants engaged in shipbuilding on the Clyde were open to inspection. The shops on the Tyne and the Clyde are playing their part, and a tremendously impressive part, too.

In Glasgow as elsewhere, the participation of women in the industry is apparent on every hand. In their khaki or blue aprons, with dust caps of the same colour, they are busy at the lathes and swarm in and out in thousands at the shift periods. Every foreman with whom I talked was enthusiastic about the application and efficiency of the women workers. Of course, they are not set to work at the heavy machines, and they are chiefly given tasks requiring only few days' experience. In every establishment, as the women workers learn how to work the machines for the lighter shells, the men are taken out for the manufacture of heavier munitions.

"What the permanent effect of all this change in the working operations of women will be after the war is not concerning the employers now, though they appreciate that it will bring its chain of problems for solution later. To the women it is already bringing more money than they ever had in their lives before and a sense of independence never experienced.

"This alteration in the industrial fabric by women's increasing activity and broadening opportunity is perhaps the most vivid impression left on the mind of one who devotes a week to a tour of the munition plants, second only to the comprehension of the enormous scale of production that the Ministry has projected. It is in all probability the biggest engineering and labour enterprise in modern history.

"Perhaps the construction of the Panama Canal equals it in the expenditure of wealth, but it surpasses it neather in the number of persons employed nor in the diversity of machinery necessary.

75 FLOATS FOR THE BRIDGE AT CHEMONG

The following are some of the recommendations of the County Council's committee on roads and bridges:

That 75 floats for the Chemong bridge and 10 floats for Gannon's bridge be procured by the Warden and Reeve Coben.

That Messrs. McKee, Crough and Jobe be a committee to investigate charges made by Mr. Jobe regarding floats from Chemong bridge lying along the shore, the same having been put in during 1915.

That the following gentlemen be a committee to confer with the city and Victoria county with a view to have them send representatives to the Dominion Government for assistance for Pigeon Creek bridge, and any other matters that may arise—the Warden, Messrs. Coben, Crough, Deyell and Shaw.

That Mr. McLean be authorized to procure material for Coon's bridge with a view to reconstruction next year; that Mr. Bullied be authorized to procure material for Purdy's bridge; and Mr. McKee be authorized to procure material for Darling's bridge.

The following are some of the Finance committee's clauses:

That H. Fowler's account re Swinton's bridge, be laid over.

That the Warden and Chairman interview the solicitor and banker to ascertain what provision could be made for the present to make a grant for December of this year equal to the recommendation to the succeeding Council considering the $400 now provided for.

That Wm. McKelvie be granted a free pedlar's license.

That Mr. Squire be instructed to secure a single telephone line for the county office.

That A. Moore's telephone be paid by the County for the next six months, commencing January 1st, 1916.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT BOBCAYGEON

Herbert Nichols Accidentally Shot While Out Hunting—Bullet Went Through Body

BOBCAYGEON, Dec. 6.— The first serious hunting accident that we have had for some years took place, when Mr. Herbert Nichols, son of Constable Nichols, was accidentally shot. Mr. Nichols was out fox hunting at Hugh Given's in Harvey, and in some unaccountable manner slipped on the loose snow, throwing him against the muzzle of his gun which he was carrying on his right shoulder. The bullet entered his side, passing as we understand, through his liver. The rifle was a 303 Savage, and the bullet a soft nosed one. It entered the front and passed out through his back. He was alone at the time, about noon, and crawled up on a log and shouted for help. Mr. Givens came to his assistance and later started to the village for medical assistance. When he arrived at Peter Graham's he telephoned for Dr. Thorne, who was taken down in Richard Junkin's auto. Mr. Nichols was brought into the village about six o'clock and then sent direct to the Ross Hospital, Lindsay. His brother Richard and Dr. Thorne accompanied him. Mr. Nichols is unmarried.

Last reports give Mr. Nichols' condition as serious, although he is doing as well as can be expected.

BELIEVE ITALIANS ARE IN ALBANIA

ROME, Dec. 6. — (Delayed in Transmission).—The statement by the Foreign Minister, Marone Sonnino, concerning Albania and Italian assistance for the Serbian army is interpreted in some quarters here as meaning that an Italian expedition to the eastern coast of the Adriatic is in the course of transport.

In some instances mention is made even of the number of troops already landed on Albanian soil, which according to the rules of the Italian censorship, it is not permissible to state.

GREECE LOSING ON THEIR POSTAL MONEY ORDERS

PARIS, Dec. 6.—A difference has arisen between the United States and Greece in regard to settlements on international postal money orders. The American government has been paying balances in favour of Greece, according to the usual procedure by check on Paris. The international postal convention provides that these obligations are "payable" in gold by check on Paris.

The Greek government contends that on account of the decline in exchange rates it has lost more than 500,000f. ($100,000), and has presented a bill for the amount to Washington.

It is understood here that the American government declines to make this payment. The Greek government now offers to submit the question to international arbitration, but Washington thus far has not accepted the suggestion.

FRENCH INDUSTRY MUCH IMPROVED

Paris, Dec. 6.—A report made to-day by the Minister of Labour, as published in the Matin, shows an improvement in industrial conditions in France. Of 43,784 factories, the number in operation last year decreased to forty-eight per cent. of the total, but has now risen to eighty-one per cent. The number of employed working-men fell to thirty-one per cent. of normal last year, but now stands at seventy-four per cent.

In some industries operations are now as wide as before the war. This is true of the metals, chemicals, leather and transportation industries. Others continue to show depression. Operations in the textile industry at present are only eleven per cent. of the normal, compared with forty-eight per cent. last year.

There has been a marked improvement in the manufacture of clothing. Parisian dressmaking has shown an unexpected revival.

that it was not permitted to all to get to the front. He himself was anxious to go, but until the powers that be released him, he would have to accept their decision.

Capt. J. H. Burnham.

Capt. J. H. Burnham said that although he appeared in the King's uniform he had not the right to address them as a soldier. There was a privilege that he felt was reserved for the men who had come back from the front. In this connection Capt. Burnham added a tribute to the gallant conduct of the guests of the evening. Speaking of the war generally, he condemned the men and the newspapers who misled the people with the idea that the war nearly over. The British people did not need that kind of assurance. "We can fight, and we will fight," said the speaker, amid applause. "Thank God we have the men willing to come forward and play their part."

Rev. R. G. Peever.

Rev. R. G. Peever, of George street Methodist church, brought the greetings of the Ministerial Association. He was heartily glad to join with the rest of the citizens in extending a welcome to the boys who had returned. He looked upon them as missioners who had come back to stir up and stimulate recruiting. There were three things that he was sure was in each of their hearts, gratitude to God for bringing them home from the midst of dangers, consciousness tha they had done their share; and lastly a yearning that many others should go in their places. In this connection, Rev. Mr. Peever expressed the hope that for every man back from the front, seven, yes twenty times seven, would answer the call. He told of a message he had received a day or two ago from his son, notifying him that on the following day he was putting on the King's uniform and starting drill in readiness to go to the front. There was a sadness for a parent in such a message, but there was also a feeling of pride. In conclusion, Rev. Mr. Peever said that there should be a spirit of kindly helpfulness abroad in the land in regard to the heroes who had come back from the firing line.

Lt.-Col. Johnston.

Lt.-Col. Johnston of the 93rd Battalion expressed on behalf of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Peterborough battalion, their great pleasure in welcoming the boys from the front. The men who were being welcomed, he said, had established the highest possible standard for the soldiers of Canada. "We have over 400 men up in the armouries," he remarked amid great applause, "who are going to do their best to maintain that standard. We have the best band in the division, we have 400 of the finest men in the division, and by next spring we want 700 more of the same kind." Lt.-Col. Johnston expressed his hearty thanks to the citizens of Peterborough for their kindness and co-operation, without which, he said, it would have been impossible to get the quantity or quality now representing the 93rd Battalion. He also took advantage of the opportunity to thank on behalf of the sergeants of the 93rd, the sergeants of the 57th Regiment for their kindness in turning over their quarters to the 93rd, and for making the latter a grant of $50.

Lt.-Col. Walker.

Lt.-Col. Walker, O. C. 57th Regiment, was the next speaker. He remarked that the citizens had turned out in large numbers to welcome the returned soldiers, and rightly so; for they had earned it. "They have also earned an easy conscience," remarked Col. Walker. "They are an example to all to go and do likewise. Let us do it."

In conclusion, Mayor Buller asked the heroes of the evening to accept the freedom of the city, after which the meeting was brought to a close with three cheers for the returned soldiers and the singing of the National Anthem.

More Things Are Wrought By Prayer Than This World Dreams Of"

Sunday Morning Service at St. Paul's—Eloquent Sermon on the Subject of Prayer by the Rev. Mr. Pegue

Seek, and it shall be given you," (Matt. 7:7) was the text chosen yesterday by the Rev. Mr. Pegue in his series of Sunday morning discourses on the subject of Prayer, wherein he considered that position known as the petition.

In the Lord's Prayer we have first the address: the One to whom we present our petition, "Our Father." Then, to assist us in thinking of Him in some definite location, we speak of Him as being "in heaven," at the right hand of God. We do not talk to space but to "Our Father in heaven." Third, we adore His name—"Hallowed by Thy Name." Then, we submit ourselves to His will—"Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." When these are said we are ready to be delivered from sin and temptation.

Of these petitions only one concerns the temporalities of life, all the others have to do with our spiritual relations, therefore, our prayers should be petitions for our spiritual good rather than for temporal blessings. It is, indeed, a sad discovery when we review this work and find the majority of our prayers have to do with things temporal. Very few of us ever get beyond the horizon of our own family. When we bend the knee and bow the head it should be done in unselfishness.

What are we to petition God specially for? "In everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God." There is no place in life in which we are independent of the help of God. Therefore, in all, our petitions we should ask for His presence, guidance and help. "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." We must talk to God about everything that enters into our experience. It exalts God and gives us a better conception of His majesty and holiness. God is intimately related to His creatures, created in the likeness of His image. There is a tendency on the part of some writers to belittle this relation. One said: "All sensible people can see how absurd it is to air our egotisms in God's presence." Such a man declared this preacher, did not know his New Testament. "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father. But the very hair of your head are all numbered. Fear ye not, therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows." Nothing is trivial in the eyes of God. Then why not talk about the little things of our lives.

Our requests may become personal. He desires us to speak to Him about our necessities, about our physical comforts as well as our souls. If it is right to desire things of God, it is proper to ask His blessing on the things required. "Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. "If we ask anything according to His will, He heareth us."

"Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him." "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." All our prayers should be according to the will of God. "Not My will but Thine be done."

Some critics maintain that all prayer for the temporalities of life should be ruled out altogether, claiming that in the world all matter comes under natural law. Mind is as much the subject of law as the body, yet we ask him to intervene. The intervention of God in the world of matter is as consistent as in the realm of mind. Therefore if temporal things are for our good we may ask for them with the same assurance as for siritual things.

Sometimes, however, in our shortsightedness, we ask for things believing them to be for our good which would be disastrous. We have an example from Jeremiah, a man close to God, pleading earnestly for material blessing for Judah. A grievous drought had visited the land and Jeremiah prayed for rain, but God, thoroughly tired of Israel's sins and repentings, replied, "Pray not for this people, I will consume them by the sword."

We must not expect God to give us physical deliverance if it would not be for our own good. In the case of Israel God saw that further repentance would be useless. They were joined to their idols, and He allowed them to be carried into captivity, where they would think of Him, and he cried forever of their sin of idolitry.

There are, however, many experiences in history where God has come down and wrought deliverance, such as the miraculous preservation of the life of the Prince of Wales (Edward VII) in 1871, when by the special intercession of a united people he was raised from a bed of fever and saved to the nation. There have been many experiences in our own lives which should encourage us to present definite petitions to the Almighty.

If individuals have achieved wonderful things from God what might numbers achieve if their supplications were made jointly? The greater the number of strands in a rope the greater its strength. God meets with two or three, but let the prayers of two or three be multiplied by hundreds and there would be a force and power in the church which nothing could resist.

—Paul Penman.

Members of 93rd Battalion Attend George Street Church

Men Were Enjoined to Have Regard to the Question of Endurance Which is Based on Three Qualities—A Fight For Christian Liberties.

The 93rd Battalion paraded to George Street Methodist Church yesterday morning, where they were addressed by the pastor, Rev. R. G. Peever. The speaker took for his text 2nd Timothy 2, 3: "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," also the fourth verse, "No man that warreth, entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier."

Referring to the question of endurance, the speaker said that endurance was based on three qualities—the first being a due sense of recognition for the gravity of the situation. Without this a man could not fully appreciate the cause for which he was fighting. Then it was necessary that a man should realize the justness of the cause which in the present case represented an effort to preserve the traditions upon which this great Empire is founded, and which the enemy was seeking to destroy. To successfully fight the good fight, a man must of necessity be inspired with confidence and a spirit of sacrifice. In the words of the text, "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the things of this life." He holds himself free and in readiness to do his utmost when necessary.

In conclusion, the speaker impressed upon the men the necessity of developing the moral side of their lives. The present war was based on a struggle for the preservation of Christian ideals and Christian liberties.

Serbs "Win or Die" Declares Diplomatist

ROME, Dec. 6.—The Giornale d'Italia prints an interview with Mr. Riatch, Servian Minister to Italy, concerning a rumour that Serbia might capitulate. The Minister is quoted as follows:

"I absolutely deny that there will be any capitulation, this word being unknown in Serbia. There the people either win or die. The Serbian people and government are irrevocably determined to fight to the bitter end beside their allies. Serbia will be loyal to her last man. In a short time Serbia will have a fresh army of more than two hundred thousand men, full of enthusiasm, to throw on the flank of the enemy. She needs only supplies of arms and ammunition.

A Song For The Campaign

The following verse and chorus, sung to the tune of the 83rd's marching song, "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," adapted from a parody sung at a meeting of the 50,000 Club in Toronto, is suggested for use during the local Patriotic Fund campaign:

Soldier boys have bravely joined the colours,
Soldier boys have gone to fight the foe,
Soldier boys have died to help their brothers
Retain the land they love and cherish so.
Soldier boys have left a home and mother,
Left a wife, a son, a daughter too;
Soldier boys must look to you to comfort
The heroines who let them die for you.

Chorus:
We'll never let the loved ones call
For the comforts we owe them all,
We've come here to-night
To show our might,
Let's Pay! Pay! Pay!
Or Fight! Fight! Fight!
The Fifty Thousand Dollar plan
Makes the appeal to every man;
Till peace shall come
Give a small sum,
A little bit each week. That's all.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. William Galbraith, 310 Rubidge street, yesterday received a wire telling him of the death at Sudbury, of his brother, Mr. George A. Galbraith, who is known to many here through frequent visits. The death must have been sudden as no previous intimation of illness had been received. Mr. Galbraith left this morning for Sudbury. The deceased, Mr. Galbraith, was born about 48 years ago in Camden East, near Napanee, where the family resides.

The Winnipeg Free Press, in reference to a former well-known and very high esteemed Peterborough lady, Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun, records her election as president of the Winnipeg Women's Canadian Club, and prints her portrait with the following legend:

WEDDING BELLS

FORSYTH—CLYDSDALE.

At high noon on Wednesday, Dec. 1st, a pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Clydsdale, of Harwood, when their daughter Lena was united in marriage to Stanley James Forsyth, Warsaw. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. L. Hinton, of Warsaw.

The wedding march was played by the bride's sister, Miss Elizabeth Clydsdale.

The bride was attired in white crepe de chine and veil, carrying a bouquet of flowers; she entered the parlour on her father's arm.

After the ceremony the young couple left on an afternoon train for Toronto, where they will reside. The bride travelled in navy blue serge and hat to match.

She will be greatly missed by her many friends. Previous to her marriage she was a member of the Warsaw Methodist church choir. She received many costly and useful presents. Best wishes follow the happy couple to their new home.

THOMAS—BUCKHAM.

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at All Saints' Church on Dec. 4, the contracting parties being Miss A. Buckham, late of Coventry, Eng., and Private Arthur Thomas of the 93rd Batt., late of Bridgenorth, Shropshire, Eng.

Miss Doris Wood made a very pretty bridesmaid while Corporal Wilfred Wood, of the 76th Batt., Toronto, made a suitable and efficient groomsman.

The bride who looked charming in a gown of battleship grey trimmed with white fur and hat to match, was given away by Lance Corporal H. Wood of the 93rd Batt. After the ceremony the bridal party adjourned to the home of Mrs. Wood, 477 Bolivar St., where supper was in waiting.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas were the recipients of many handsome and useful gifts amongst which was a beautiful cut glass water set, the gift of the employees of the Colonial Weaving Co. The Rev. E. R. Grobb, M.A. rector of All Saints, was the officiating clergyman.

DOWNEY—MELLOR.

(From the Victoria Colonist.)

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at Holy Trinity Church, North Saanich, on Wednesday, November 24 at 11 a.m., with the Rev. T. Des Barres officiating. The contracting parties were Allen D. Downey, of Deep Cove, North Saanich, and Lucy Alice Mellor, late of Peterboro, Ont., and the eldest daughter of the late Mr. H. F. Mellor, Esq., of Avondale House, Lakefield, Ont. The bride, who was given away by Mr. R. C. Gale of Geneva, looked charming in a suit of Delrian blue cloth trimmed with becoming tones of black and white velvet with sable furs, and she carried a prayer book bound in white leather. The bride's sister, Mrs. J. S. Quartermaine, acted as matron of honour, wearing a becoming suit of blue grey cloth with large velvet hat, and she carried a bouquet of pale pink carnations; while the two little nieces of the bridegroom, Kathleen Downey and Isabel Dallain, both daintily dressed in white and carrying baskets of pink carnations, acted as flower girls. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. J. H. Downey. After the ceremony the party motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gale, where refreshments were partaken of, and later Mr. and Mrs. Allen Downey left on a short visit to Vancouver. On their return they will take up their residence at Deep Cove.

OBITUARY

MISS H. GAMBLE.

The death occurred at Nicholls Hospital this afternoon of Miss Harriett Gamble at the age of forty years. The deceased had been ill for the past three months. She was born in Ireland, where her father still resides. She had lived in Peterborough for four years. Her father, two brothers and three sisters survive her.

The funeral will take place from the residence of Mr. Robt. Wilson, 164 Charlotte street on Wednesday at 2.30 to the Little Lake cemetery.

REV. ISAAC CAMPBELL, D. D.

A well-known minister of the Presbyterian Church, Rev. Isaac Campbell, D.D., and a native of this county, passed away in Ottawa after a brief illness, on Friday, December 3rd, at the age of 70 years. He had been in failing health for some months, and only became seriously ill on Tuesday last, when he was first confined to his room. His condition became every day more critical, and death closed the scene on Friday morning at 9 o'clock at his residence, 73 Rochester Street.

The deceased gentleman has been a prominent member of the ministry for forty-one years. He was born in North Monaghan, and was the last of a large family that for many years was prominent and highly respected in that township; and here received his early education, and after attending Toronto University, where he graduated with the degrees of Ph.D. and D.D., he received his theological training at Knox College, Toronto, and entered the active work of the ministry forty-one years ago. His first charge was Kilbride, Halton County, and the next Kirkwall, near Galt. In succession he occupied charges in Richmond Hill and Listowell, closing his ministry at Ottawa, where he was pastor of Erskine Church. A year ago he was given leave to retire on account of ill-health.

Rev. Dr. Campbell was married in 1874 to Frances A. Stratton, eldest daughter of the late James Stratton. Her death took place in 1876. In 1882 he was again united in marriage to Miss Thom, eldest daughter of Rev. James Thom, Richmond Hill, who died in 1902. Dr. Campbell is survived by two sons, Mr. Bert Campbell of the Bank of Ottawa, and Mr. Douglas Campbell at home.

The intelligence of the late Dr. Campbell's death will be received with deep regret not only by the many in the various fields where he faithfully laboured and was "esteemed very highly in love for his work's sake," but by very many in Peterborough, where he was a warmly welcomed annual visitor for nearly all the years of his long ministry.

GRACE CRAWFORD.

The news of the death of Miss Grace Crawford, who passed away this week in Toronto, came as a shock of personal bereavement to her many friends in Ottawa. For several years Miss Crawford had been connected with the Department of the Interior as one of the secretaries to the Minister, and was held in very highest esteem by all with whom she came in contact. Possessed of a brilliant mind and very high principles, she proved herself a most valuable public servant, while her buoyancy of spirits even during her physical sufferings was remarkable.

Through several changes within the Department, she kept her place, and was regarded by all with the deepest affection and respect.

Miss Crawford, who was born in Toronto, was a niece of Judge Mosgrove, and has other relatives in town, besides a very wide circle of friends. Her brother, Dr. Hamilton Crawford, of Marmora, at one time practised medicine in Ottawa, and it was at his solicitation that she went to Toronto a couple of weeks ago for medical treatment, which was unfortunately unavailing. While in Ottawa she was a faithful attendant at St. Georges Church. She was keenly interested in all questions affecting the public welfare, and was a strong supporter of the cause of women suffrage.

The funeral took place in Toronto among those who were present from Ottawa being her cousin, Miss Sixsmith. Several beautiful floral tributes were sent by friends, including Hon. Dr. Roche, the staff of the Ministers secretary, the Department of the Interior, and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Saunders.—Ottawa Citizen.

OVER $200 MADE AT ALPHABETICAL FAIR

Held on Friday and Saturday Under Auspices of C.L.A. of Charlotte Street Church

The Alphabetical Fair held on Friday and Saturday last in the Sunday school hall of the Charlotte street church, under the auspices of the C. L.A., was an unqualified success and was also one of the most unique affairs ever held in the city. As a result of the success attending the efforts of the young people of this society the splendid sum of over two hundred dollars was realised. The hall was prettily decorated with green and red, emblematic of the coming of the festive season. Everything useful and suitable for Christmas was on sale, there being twenty-six booths, one for each letter of the alphabet. For instance A represented aprons, B bakery, C candy, and so on down the list, covering a wide variety of splendid things.

On Friday evening the boys of the society served a bean supper that was well patronised, and thoroughly appreciated by all.

This organization is to be congratulated on the success of the event.

WILL BEGIN CASE PENDING A YEAR

It is understood that the preliminary steps for the hearing of Mr. G. N. Gordon's charges against Mr. W H. Hill, made previous to the elections last year, will be considered before Judge Huycke on Saturday next at 11 a.m..

An electrical atomizer for medical purposes has been invented that heats the liquids it uses and delivers them in vapour form instead of spray.

NOTICE

The annual regular meeting of Division No. 1 A.O.H. takes place on Thursday December 9th 1915.

In addition to the Election of officers another important matter affecting the interest of every member is to be dealt with. Every member is expected to attend.

SHRAPNEL EXTRACTED FROM MAN'S BRAIN

A remarkable fight for life has just terminated in the death, which occurred at Thorpe Hospital, Norwich, of Private Albert Szepel, 2nd Leicester Regiment, who is believed to have been of German birth.

At Ypres on June 6 he received terrible injuries from shrapnel. His skull was pierced, his right side completely paralyzed, his left shoulder and knee were smashed, yet from the time he was picked up on the battlefield until he died in hospital he never once lost consciousness—excepting, of course while under anaesthetics.

The doctors opened his skull and extracted a dozen pieces of shrapnel—varying in size from a pin's head to a large pea—all of which were imbedded in the brain itself.

MAN WITH ACID INDIGESTION LEARNS WHAT TO EAT

PHYSICIAN: "Eat meats, fruits, vegetables, nuts, graham bread and any other plain foods you like and take a little bisurated magnesia after each meal."

PATIENT: "But, doctor, I've tried moderate, plain meals and they cause distress, belching, sour stomach, bloating and headaches."

PHYSICIAN: "You have nothing but hyper-acidity—excess acid secretion in the stomach—and the plain bisurated magnesia will neutralize the excess acid and stop all trouble."

PATIENT: "Is bisurated magnesia harmless?"

PHYSICIAN: "Absolutely."

NOTE—The bisurated magnesia is a palatable, inexpensive, antacid which can be purchased at any druggtore. It gives immediate relief in all cases of sour stomach, acid indigestion, and other troubles due to hyperacidity. And most ordinary stomach disorders are due to excess acid. Nearly everybody is subject to attacks of acid indigestion because nearly everybody eats fancy foods, eats too hastily, and has an occupation which prevents living the active, natural, outdoor life that Nature intended. So bisurated magnesia is needed to help nature restore normal digestion. A teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water should be taken after each meal. As there are several forms of magnesia be sure to ask for bisurated magnesia.

Germans and Bulgars Furiously Attack Anglo-French Troops

Have Started a Vigorous Campaign in the Dvinsk Region

London Press Demands Despatch of 500,000 Men For Balkan Operations

Strongly Endorsing Expeditions to Gallipoli and Salonica—Newspapers Say Government Must Send Great Army to Insure Help of Roumania and Rehabilation of Serbia

LONDON, Dec. —Though the attitude of Greece still is a subject of solicitude to the Entente Powers, I am informed that the negotiations have reached, in one respect at least, a satisfactory end. This is evidenced by Greece permitting elements of the Serbian army to form a junction with the Anglo-French forces. Further, I am told that, despite all reports to the contrary, the Serbian northern and southern armies, nearly intact, have retired into Albania, where, when they are succored and re-equipped by France and Great Britain, they will strike again.

The newspapers this morning, emphatically indorsing the expeditions to Saloniki and Gallipoli, demand that the government shall send at least half a million men to this theatre of war in order to insure the adherence of Roumania to the Entente cause.

Despite the maunderings of the pessimists there is an ineradicable belief that though Serbia is overrun, the Central Powers have dismally failed in the Balkans as well as on the eastern and western fronts. No doubt we are on the eve of tremendous developments. All the military experts, including those who have been the most pessimistic, agree that the forces of the Central Empires are beginning to crumple up, despite their ephemeral triumphs.

The action of Greece in submitting to the Allied demands and permitting the use of Greek soil for Serbian reorganization, while it eliminated one cause of unrest, has not settled other questions. On these matters the negotiations still drag on at Athens, new hitches seemingly arising as the old ones are smoothed out. One day it is reported a settlement has been reached, only to be followed the next by denial or accounts of fresh difficulties confronting the diplomatists.

An Athens despatch says that after the Premier, Mr. Skouloudis, had conferred with the French and British Ministers on Saturday he called a meeting of the Cabinet and then conferred with King Constantine. It is reported in Athens, the message says, that the subject under consideration by the Cabinet was a fresh proposal made by the Entente Powers in the hope of reaching some definite agreement on all the points in controversy.

The people of the allied countries, particularly those of France and Italy, are becoming impatient over the continual delays, and the press is demanding that stern action be taken to demonstrate to King Constantine and his Ministers the determination of the Quadruple Entente to obtain all the assurances demanded.

The attitude of Roumania also remains undecided. Since the despatch announcing the closing of Roumanian ports to foreign trade was received silence has descended upon Bucharest, and Europe is awaiting anxiously the next move which will give a meaning to this order. The general belief here is that the Roumanian government is waiting for the concentration of a sufficient Russian force in Bessarabia and a large enough Anglo-French army in Southern Serbia to make victory certain before joining the Allies.

Germany and U.S.A. Relations Nearer Breaking Down To-day Than at Any Time

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Relations between the United States and Germany to-day are nearer breaking down than at any time since the war began, or Germany is making a colossal diplomatic bluff. The outcome is uncertain with serious eventualities possible.

A breach of diplomatic relations with the recall of Ambassador Bernstorff possibly voluntarily by his own government was gravely discussed. The deadlock over Germany's demands for reasons prompting this Government to ask the recall of Captains Boy-Ed and Von Papen showed little signs of an immediate solution to-day. Secretary Lansing is adamant on the proposition that this Government is not required to state its reasons and that the mere fact that it indicates Von Papen and Boy-Ed are persona non grata makes acquiescence by Germany in their recall imperative.

ROME, Dec. 7.—Italy will delay sending troops into the Balkans to aid Serbia till Roumania declares her action, was the statement following a Cabinet meeting yesterday.

Peace Only On Allies' Terms

Germany Can Have it as Soon as She Likes—Hungary Crying For It

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Germany can have peace as soon as she likes, remarks the Morning Post editorially, "but only on the terms of the Allies."

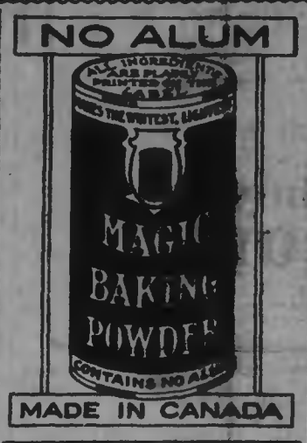
"The right answer to the German peace conspiracy," the editorial continues, "is for the Allies to determine what shall be the terms of peace to be dictated when the right moment comes. In the case of Great Britain representatives from the overseas Dominions must be called into council."

The Morning Post's Budapest correspondent dwells on the peace talk there.

"In political circles in Hungary," the correspondent says, "one hears nothing else but an early conclusion of the war." The return of Count Albert Apponyi from Copenhagen is eagerly awaited. He has been taking part in the Red Cross conference, and also had an unofficial mission regarding peace possibilities.

"The Ford Peace Mission is highly lauded in Hungary, the Pesti-Hirap saying Mr. Ford is the first American millionaire to invest money in a respectable scheme for humanitarian aims."

The Hungarian Grand Lodge of the Masons has voted to begin a ceaseless work in favour of peace. The Feminist Society, at a meeting held in honour of the late James Keir Hardie, has issued an appeal for peace on economic grounds, stating "we have had enough of murder and starvation."



British Casualty List Includes 208 Canadians

Chiefly in the First Battalion—Sixty-eight Are Reported Dead—Renewed Offensive Reported at Gallipoli

TORONTO, Dec. 7.—A despatch published yesterday says the latest British casualty list includes 208 Canadians, with 68 dead.

They are in the First Battalion mostly.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—A British submarine sunk a Turkish destroyer and five supply ships in the Sea of Marmora, says the Admiralty.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The Chamber of Deputies yesterday applauded a resolution that there would be no peace till Alsace-Lorraine and Northern France were wrested from Germany.

ATHENS, Dec. 7.—A renewed attack on the offensive in the Gallipoli is reported to have made heavy gains.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Lord Cecil, in the Commons yesterday, said the relations with Greece were so delicate that no statment could be made.

ATHENS, Dec. 7.—M. Guillemin, the French Minister to Greece, was received in audience by King Constantine yesterday. A long conference ensued.

Investigations, Indictments and Trials of Pro-German Propagandists in U.S.A.

Government's War Against Campaign of Strikes, Violence and Violation of American Neutrality—Labour's National Peace Council Under Investigation.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—A continuous series of investigations, indictments and trials of alleged pro-German propagandists in the government's war against the campaign of strikes, violence and violation of American neutrality was promised to-day by Federal officials.

Numerous fire aboard the steamships leaving American ports are believed to be accounted for with the indictment of "Lieut." Robert Fay and his associates. Strikes are now being taken up, and munition factory fire probes will follow.

Labour's National Peace Council, of which Congressman Frank Buchanan of Illinois, for a time was head, is now admitted to be under investigation. According to Oistrict Attorney Marshall, the principal work of the organization was the fomenting of strikes. He charged that tie-ups were financed by Imperial German funds, distributed in the United States by a series of German and American agents. Samuel Gompers, Marshall said, disapproved of the Labour Council's plan.

Gompers was expected to-day to be served with summons to tell the Grand Jury what he knows of the relations of the Labour Council to series of sudden and costly strikes in American industrial plants. Indictments were looked for to-day or to-morrow.

SPECIAL VAUDEVILLE AT THE ROYAL THEATRE

The Royal Theatre has cut out Vaudeville for some months. Still, this theatre has now secured a Vaudeville act of thrilling interest and mirth provoking character for Tuesday, December 7th and December 8th. This unparalleled attraction is entitled "McGlynn's Masquerade." This show includes a company of well known actors in a big comedy hit, including trained dogs. These are war times, so the Royal is putting on a 50-cent show for 10 cents including new pictures. 3d-131

Captured 50,000 Germans, 21 Large Cannon and 1000 Machine Guns

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Von Hindenburg's forces have started a vigorous offensive in the Dvinsk region.

GENEVA, Dec. 7.—The Russians during the month of October captured fifty thousand Germans, 21 large cannon, and a thousand machine guns.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—The Canadian Mounted Rifles have been in action. Capt. Mackay, Oakville, has been killed, and Lt. Sifton, headquarters' staff, has been wounded.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Large numbers of German troops and guns have been pouring into France and Belgium for the last week. A big battle is expected.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Hungarian and Bulgarian troops have clashed at Nish resulting in a serious loss of life.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—Canadian soldiers in the trenches will be served fish dinners twice weekly.

ATHENS, Dec. 7.—King Constantine says the Allies will fail in the East, and promises the Entente troops safe conduct if they will get out of the Balkans when driven back into Greece.

SALONIKA, Dec. 7.—Germans and Bulgarians are furiously attacking Anglo-French troops in Southern Serbia.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—The Department of Militia has no confirmation of reported heavy losses to the First Battalion in recent engagements.

ATHENS, Dec. 7.—Uprisings are reported from several Greek maritime provinces, the result of an economic crisis.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The Allies have threatened to send an ultimatum to Greece if the Greek reply to the second note is not satisfactory, said high officials to-day.

DUG UP $300,000 BURIED IN GARDEN WHILE UNDER FIRE

Mr. H. Warner Allen, representative of The British Press with the French Armies, in a long dispatch descriptive of the shell-shattered city of Arras, declares that of its 25,000 inhabitants, perhaps 800 remain in the place.

The writer tells a story of a wealthy resident who, when driven out of Arras, buried under a tree in his garden £60,000 in notes and stocks and shares.

Later he returned to dig for his treasure. He dug and dug and dug, and still his spade did not strike the leaden chest in which he had hidden his fortune.

Perspiration poured down his face, he tore his hair and bewailed his fate, quite regardless of the fact that the Germans had just begun to bombard the town with exceptional violence.

Then suddenly he looked up, seized the spade, and began to dig madly under another tree. A minute or two later his efforts were rewarded, and he brought to the surface the still unopened chest. In the excitement of the moment he had forgotten the tree under which he had buried it!

This Frees Your Skin From Hair or Fuzz

(Toilet Tips)

The method here suggested for the removal of superfluous hair is quick and certain and unless the growth is extremely stubborn a single application does the work. Make a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water; apply this to the hairy surface, and after about 2 minutes rub it off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To avoid disappointment be sure your druggist sells you delatone.

THAT GOLD MINE

By M. QUAD

"Abner Day, you am an old fool. You don't know enough to come in when it rains!"

Abner Day, farmer, had heard these words hundreds of times in the fifteen years since he had married the Widow Winters, and his reply had always been the same:

"Wal, some folks are born that way and can't help it."

On a portion of Abner's farm was a range of hills. It was a limestone ridge, but there was a legend that gold had been found there years before—a nugget of gold as big as a teacup. That legend never died. When other news was scarce it was brought to the front, and it was generally believed in Abner's grandfather had meant to open the hills some day in search of other nuggets. So had his father. So had he. The trouble was to find time. There was plowing and dragging and planting and hoeing and reaping, and he never got a day to himself.

The widow began to poke at him as soon as married, but it did no good. She would go on to tell how many tons of gold were probably hidden away in those hills and how, if dug out, they could have the clock cleaned, a new door to the shed and the ceiling stairs repaired.

"I'll get around to it some day, Sarah," he would reply.

"But why not tomorrow?"

"Mebbe I can."

But he didn't. His farm work interfered. As he finished his morning meal the wife would say:

"Now, Abner, that gold mine today. You can dig half a ton of it as well as not, and we need new fenders and a washboard."

"Yes, I know."

As the day passed and he sat down to supper she would ask:

"Dig any gold today, Abner?"

"Nope. I had other things to see to."

Of course the gold mine legend was gossip for many miles around. Once a month at least some one came along and wanted to dig on shares. They would see the wife first and she would readily agree. All she wanted was that a lawyer should draw up the agreement so that it would hold water. She had been cheated by a tightwad and was once and she didn't propose to be again. Visitors came, but Abner was equal to the occasion. He kept a corpse of the cellar cleaned out to stem the gold fever, but it was never used. The strangers would go down into the hole and talk with Abner, and after he had winded himself he would hear the farmer say:

"These taters has got to be hoed, and you come around some other time."

"But don't you want to be a rich man?"

"It would be kinder nice."

"You could go to Europe."

"Yaas."

"You could build a fine house and have your carriage and servants."

"I see."

"Perhaps you'd be elected governor."

"Shoo."

"And I'll have a lawyer draw up the contract and bring it here tomorrow to be signed. Digging will begin at once. Within a week"—

"Yes, I know, but those taters"—

It was always so, and when Abner sniffed up to the house at sundown it was to find his wife in the sulks or in tears, and she usually ended up with:

"And if you don't go to digging the first thing in the morning I will"—

There, of course, began a quarrel, and not a hole made in the hillside. The storekeeper, many have been, a persistent, determined woman to stand by. But stand it she did. She would conquer or die. One day, after her many disappointments, she fell ill. The doctor pronounced it typhoid fever, and she became a very sick woman. At times when she was out of her head she would babble about that gold mine. At length, to prevent further worry, the M. D. advised Abner to go to digging and ease the mind of the patient.

"But I've got to plow and corn and hoe and reap," was protested.

"Never mind your corn. You get a couple of men and open those hills or you'll cease be a widower."

"Do you think it'll be safe to have several tons of gold around?"

"Quite so. When I call again I want to see you at work."

In a lucid interval the patient was told that digging was to begin. She was very ill, but she heaved up enough to say:

"Tell Abner that if he finds any old glass points or wagon tires mixed up with the gold he must can use them. He's an awfully careless man."

Abner and his hired man dug and dug and dug. They dug here and they dug there, and people came for ten miles around to see them throw out shovels of gold. But there was no gold. There was neither gold nor silver nor copper nor iron. There was simply one thing, and nothing but. I therefore, bishop as he was. When this was found the patient had passed the crisis of her fever and was mending. Abner was permitted to go to her bedside and exhibit his find.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Didn't you find the petrified skeleton of a bird to go with it?"

"Nope."

"But why not?"

"Didn't dig long enough, I guess."

"Abner Day, you are an old fool. You don't know enough to come in when it rains!"

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

ANCIENT AS MONEY.

Hundreds of Persons Insist That Spirits Did Appear.

Did a vision of St. George's legendary bowmen, who centuries ago saved the English at Agincourt, again appear at the battle of Mons? Did soldiers in the rush of battle really see the spirit legions here throw back the enemy? And did the enemy fall down by thousands without visible marks of injury? A London journalist so wrote it after the memorable retreat from Mons. He admits it was a fiction.

But letters from hundreds of persons who "know it actually happened," have been printed in the past ten months. Mothers of sons who fought at Mons have told the story over and over again as "actual fact." No one has come forward who actually saw the vision. Correspondents have written of a band of angels with luminous halos grouped against the horizon at the apex of the battle. A silent band of [illegible] in ancient mail trod their silent way with the Valiant Dead fell [illegible].

The highest authority to vouch for the shadowy existence is a lieutenant-colonel in Northern France who, "actually saw" [illegible] and who [illegible] refuting the allegation of the writers of the "Bowmen" that no one has yet, first hand, testified of the most amazing event of his life. The lieutenant-colonel writes:

"I tell you my experience during the retreat without exaggeration, without embellishment.

"On August 26, 1914, was fought the battle of Le Cateau. We were into action at three. We fought until dusk. We were heavily shelled and had a bad time of it, but our division retired in good order. We were up the march the night of the 26th and on the 27th, with only two hours' rest.

"My brigade was rearguard. We took up many positions to cover the retirement and by the night of the 27th we were worn out bodily and mentally fatigued.

"No doubt we suffered from shock; but the retirement continued in excellent order, and I felt sure our

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED
SWORN STATEMENT
Of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Who Gratefully Gives All Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It is one thing to make big claims for a medicine and quite another thing to produce irrefutable evidence that it actually cures in serious cases.

We prefer to let the cured ones speak for themselves, and that is why you find in almost every newspaper the report of someone who has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. To-day we present the sworn statement of Mr. Wesley Maxwell. When a man goes to this trouble in expressing his gratitude there can be no question of the benefit he has received. Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must tell you that before I started using them I could only make water with the greatest difficulty and had many severe pains in the back. I am completely cured now by the use of these pills. Before that I used a lot of doctors' medicine without any benefit that I could see. I am thankful for being cured, and can recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills very highly."

SWORN STATEMENT.

"This is to certify that I, Wesley Maxwell, of the Township of Caledon, was cured of kidney trouble by taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Wesley Maxwell."

(Sworn before me as correct this 5th day of January, 1914. — Wm. Hawkins, Esq. Justice of the Peace).

This statement is also endorsed by the Rev. Geo. W. Robinson, who is Mr. Maxwell's pastor.

This cure will interest a great many people who are suffering as Mr. Maxwell was with kidney and urinary troubles. It will only cost you a quarter to buy a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and put this medicine to the test. We are sure that you will be thankful to the writer for describing his cure to you. Cross of St. George for Nurse.

For the second time in Russian history a woman has been awarded the coveted Cross of St. George. Unfortunately, Myra Ivanova, sister of mercy upon whom it was conferred, did not live to receive it. At a critical moment during a battle, she heroically led a charge of infantrymen, whose officers had been killed, and doubled them to defeat the enemy. During the achievement she received a mortal wound.

The first female recipient of the Cross was the famous Trooper Durova, who fought in the war of 1812; she received the award, not as a woman, but as the officer Alexandrov, under which name she served; therefore, strictly speaking, the late Sister Ivanova was the first woman thus honored.

Would Give Dreadnought.

Major Sir Sahjah Singh, Rajah of Ratlam, who is serving in France, has written to the Bombay Press advocating the presentation of a Dreadnought by Indian princes and peoples to the Imperial Navy, in recognition of what the Navy has done in the war, and also in return for the protection of the Indian coasts and commerce. "Should we leave it wholly to a little Island like Britain to find the money spent for the safety of us all?" writes Sir Sahjah.

Antiquities.

The discovery of Roman relics on the site of the old General Post Office in St. Martin's le Grand in London, recalls the fact that a fragment of the old Roman wall was laid bare in 1881, fixed by is "London Stone," one of the most interesting remains of that period. It is believed to be the "milliarium," or milestone, from which were measured the Roman roads all over England.

Suffered From Nerves.
Could Not Sleep.

To the thousands of people who are tossing on sleepless beds night after night, or who pass the hour with nerves unstrung, and to whom sweet sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound, refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres, thereby producing peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and will cause you to get up in the morning feeling that you have the strength and vitality to go through your day's work.

Mrs. Hollis King, St. John, N.B., writes: "I suffered greatly with my nerves, I could not sleep at night, nor work, and the least little thing worried me. Last winter I thought I would go out of my mind. I would screech out, and my mother really thought I was going crazy with my nerves. So mad as trouble I would lose my head and cry. I tried two doctors, but they did not do me any good. I thought I would tell you that to-day I am perfectly cured by using three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can recommend them to all sufferers from nervous troubles. You can tell everyone that they are the only thing that did me any good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for nearly a quarter of a century, and are universally known as the best remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

Price 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WHO STOLE THE JEWELS?

By DAVID WALTER CHURCH

I was taking dinner with my friend Horace Jones and his wife the other day. Jones has accumulated a snug sum hunting up rascals. In other words, he is a detective. When we were drinking our coffee and smoking I asked him to give me the most important case in which he had ever been employed.

"You mean the most important to my employer or to me?"

"Well, let it be the most important case to you."

"All right. I'll give you the Williams case."

I saw his wife look up at him, evidently with an intent to stop him, but he told the story all the same.

"Mrs. Williams, came to the office one day—she was a widow—and stated that something was occurring in her house she wished investigated. She possessed a number of valuable family jewels, which she kept in a safe imbedded in the wall on the second story of her dwelling. She alone knew the combination, and yet the jewels were gradually disappearing. She had a governess for her children, a Miss Elizabeth Ward, whom she suspected. I having been detailed on the case, she was giving these facts to me. At this point I interrupted her.

"'I thought you said, Mrs. Williams, that you alone knew the combination. How can Miss Ward open the safe without it?'

"'Possibly in this way: She has a brother who is a skilled mechanic in the service of a safe and lock company. He visits her frequently, and I suspect that either he has instructed her in lock picking or she conceals him in the house and he watches his opportunity to pick it himself unobserved.'

"It struck me that to discover the truth all she had to do was to watch and she would catch either Miss Ward or her brother stealing the jewels. But if she preferred to pay a detective for doing it I was quite willing. I was introduced into the house as a nephew of Mrs. Williams, from a distant land, and, of course, to Miss Ward.

"I found the governess a very attractive young lady. Had I not felt very sure she was an adventuress I should have fallen in love with her. Indeed, I'm not sure but— Don't like to hear it, eh, dear? That's quite natural. I'll switch off those that part of the story, though I'm sure you have no reason to be jealous. Well, I took up my residence for a few days or a few weeks, as the case might require, and was assigned a bedroom directly opposite the safe in which the jewels were kept.

"It didn't take me long to find out that Miss Ward was as smart as a steel trap, and I made up my mind that to catch her—or her brother, which was the same thing—I would have to be awake every night in the week. But she seemed worried. With the true detective instinct, I saw through that. I inferred that her brother was dominating her, compelling her to keep on with the thefts, while she feared this scheme would at last be detected and one or both would spend a term in the state prison. At any rate, she was worried.

"I remained awake all night for several nights in succession, and as I had no excuse to remain in bed all day I gave up the plan of catching the thief in the act and determined to try and worm myself into the confidence of Miss Ward and see if I couldn't get the secret from her. I found her quite willing to be courted, and"— "Hoosoo!" interposed Mrs. Jones.

"Pardon, my dear." Then to me: "My wife can't bear to hear me speak of my premarital affairs."

"Of course she can't," I chimed in with Mrs. Jones. "How would you like your wife to talk about her own premarital affairs?"

"Um! That's different. But to go on with my story. I didn't get much from the governess, and while I was making up to her Mrs. Williams reported that she had lost another jewel.

"Meeting Miss Ward after this theft, I found her in a very bad humor. Why I could not understand, for neither she nor any one else had been caught stealing. She astonished me by coming out bluntly:

"'Mr. Detective, if you wish to find out who is stealing the jewels change your room.'

"You could have knocked me down with a feather. I knew I had met my match and stammered: 'never a word.' I went to Mrs. Williams and told her I would take a room farther from the safe. She gave me one at the end of the hall where I could see without being seen, the light, which was kept burning low all night, being directly over the safe.

"Time passed, during which I was getting impatient at doing nothing, though I was not dissatisfied at being kept in the house with Miss Ward. One night I heard a light tap at my door. Putting on a dressing gown, I opened it. Miss Ward was standing in a dark corner and pointed toward the safe. There stood Mrs. Williams fumbling with the lock.

"'She's asleep,' whispered Miss Ward.

"Mrs. Williams opened the safe, took out something, closed the door and went away. The mystery was solved. As a sleepwalker she was transferring her jewels from the safe to a tin box in her bedroom closet."

"What became of Miss Ward?" I asked.

Jones looked at his wife, and both smiled.

Old friends and new friends unite in saying

Red Rose Tea "is good tea"

Hot Onions.

Eight persons out of every ten eat too much, and thereby die too early. Nine persons out of every ten eat too much meat, and thereby suffer in health and pocket.

And nowadays 10 persons out of every 10—for financial, if not for stomachic reasons—are searching for a substitute for meat. The substitute is—onions.

Regular onion eaters rarely, if ever, fall ill from infectious diseases, and they are singularly immune from practically all ailments.

Onions, too, are a grand specific for the complexion. They should be boiled whole in milk—drink the latter—or steamed, and eaten with bread and butter and cheese. Then they make a satisfying and nutritious meal, on which you can do brain work or manual labor. Try onions! The taste and aftersmell? A mouthful of hot coffee takes away both.

Ancient Crossbow in Trenches.

Trench warfare has brought into use many weapons which, while used hundreds of years ago "did" which naturally it was thought would never be used again. One of these weapons is the "Sauterelle," used by the French soldiers to hurl bombs into the opposing trenches.

This "sauterelle" is practically nothing more than the ancient crossbow. Instead of throwing arrows or stones, however, the modern crossbow throws grenades and bombs. Wire is used instead of cord, while the bow is made of steel in the sauterelle. So strong is this modern cross-bow that a small, powerful winding device is required to pull back the wire ready for "firing." When let go it easily throws a heavy grenade a distance of 90 yards.

Precautions Against Speculators.

An important order on village planning is being issued by the Government of Madras. It deals with the rudiments of the science as applied to areas which are likely in the next fifty years or so to develop into towns or be absorbed in existing towns. The Government recognizes that most of the difficulties now experienced by municipalities could have been avoided if in the past some thought had been given to the future and its probable requirements. They therefore lay down certain sound principles. The order deals with the choice of healthy sites, laying out of roads, and marking out and keeping available of routes along which the roads of the future will run. When a village or small town develop drainage and so forth and the local body concerned lacks means the Government are prepared to make loans. Precautions are suggested against exploitation by speculators in land.

Interrupted.

"Miss, you'll never again get me out at 4 o'clock to cut the grass."

"David, I wanted you to do it before it got hot."

"Well, Miss, it got hot in just three minutes. I hadn't cut five strokes before the people on both sides of us threw two birdcages and four alarm clocks at me."—Detroit Free Press.

HER LITTLE BOY HAD PNEUMONIA
NEARLY LOST HIM.
DR. MOORE'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP SAVED HIM.

The slight cold, the irritating cough, the tightness of the chest, if not attended to, will sooner or later develop into some serious lung or bronchial trouble, and our advice to you is that on the first inception of a cough or cold "Gear Rid on It."

Mrs. H. Washburn, Gaspereaux Station, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and tell you just how much I appreciate Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for I would not be without it in the house. Twice my little boy, now four years old, has had pneumonia, and nearly died, but since using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I have kept him clear of even a cough. I often say that if it had not been for "Dr. Wood's" I would have lost him."

"My little girl, ten months old, is subject to bronchitis, but when she seems to be stuffed up and has difficulty in breathing I give her a few drops of Norway Pine Syrup every two or three hours, and in a very little while she is all well, in fact, on the first signs of a cold or cough we all fly for 'Dr. Wood's'."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, as there are many imitations on the market.

The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.

AN AERIAL ENTHUSIAST

By LUCY K. WYNKOOP

Having been left a fortune very much larger than I had any use for—I was a young girl then, or I would have known that no fortune is quite large enough—I determined to endow some institution. A member of the board of directors of an insane asylum, a lady, persuaded me to give her pet project $100,000.

I drove one afternoon to the asylum with a check for the amount I was to give. The lady I have mentioned went with me, and had arranged for her attorney to [illegible] the necessary legal papers.

When we arrived we found a telegram from the attorney saying that he would be delayed. Learning that the patients were to have a dance the same evening, we decided to remain and have a look at the dancers. No patients were received in the institution except those who were considered homeless. Indeed, most of them were unbalanced on but one subject. We were given tea in the apartments of the medical director, and his wife made me at home till the ball opened, which was very early in the evening, for it must end at 10 o'clock.

I and my gift were known, and nothing would do but that I should take part in the festivities. I danced several times, when a young man of very prepossessing appearance came up to me and asked if I would be his partner. There are occasions when a girl will meet a man to whom she is especially drawn. I had not been in company with this young fellow long before I felt a pang that he should be insane. He charmed me at once.

Naturally I wished to discover his weak point. I tried him on several subjects, but saw nothing abnormal until I struck aviation. Then he began to talk wild. He said that he had some views about flying machines he hoped to work out which would bring aeroplanes nearer to the construction of birds. A bird's wings were not right. Why should those of an aeroplane be rigid? He had in mind a plan by which the wings of the machine should flap like those of the bird.

"True," he said, "birds often soar without using their pinions, but since they flap them at all it indicates that flapping is necessary."

"Why do you wish to go up in the air?" I asked. "I am quite content on the earth."

"I only know that I would love to sail up in the clouds, to pass over the tops of high mountains. I would love"—

I shut him off. I was quite satisfied with having discovered his weakness. I had no mind to get him to raving. I excused myself and joined some one else. But later, shortly before the close of the entertainment, he joined me again and asked for a last dance.

I declined. His personality had thrown a spell over me which I thought if yielded to would grow upon me. In other words, I felt that I had met my fate in one of unsound mind and it would be dangerous to my comfort to yield to what might soon become a serious infatuation. He gave me a half reproachful glance—a glance suggesting to me that he had been impressed by me as I had been impressed by him—and left me.

When the evening's amusement was ended my friend the directress told me that we would proceed to the superintendent's room, where the attorney was waiting for us to transact our business, and then go home. I went with her, and, on opening the door of the office, there, sitting at a table looking over some papers, was the young man who had gone daft on aviation. I stopped short, paralyzed, with astonishment. He arose and gave me one of those pleasant smiles that had helped to charm me.

"Why," I said, "I—I didn't expect to find you here."

It was his turn to look surprised. "I supposed you knew who I was" he said.

"I did not, I thought"— I stopped. He looked very much amused. "I see," he said. "You mistook me for one of the patients. I'm not sure but some of them might change places with me to my advantage." Then, turning to the work before him, he read me several legal documents, now and then stopping to explain something I knowing not half as much of what he was talking as when he was discoursing on aviation. When he had finished he gave me a lot of papers and took my check, which I had made payable to the trustees.

The lawyer or lunatic—I was so confused that I was not yet certain in my mind which he was—rode in the same carriage with us to a railroad station where we dropped him, he taking a passing train, while we drove on to my home.

I went to bed with my mind in a good deal of a whirl, but above it all was a feeling of thankfulness that the man I had met was not a lunatic, for it was possible his mental condition might make a great deal of difference to me.

It was not long before he expressed through my friend the directress a desire to continue our acquaintance, and I sent him an invitation to call on me. At his first visit I drew him on to aviation, and I learned that he made it his hobby, having an inventive taste, but had never been up in an aeroplane in his life.

I married the supposed lunatic, and, strange to say, though I can give him all the funds he needs to prosecute his aerial fusion, he prefers his uninteresting law cases.

The Royal Irish Constabulary.

Ireland's splendid police system, the Royal Irish Constabulary, numbering 11,000, does not use a single typewriting machine as far as is known. All communications from the constabulary offices throughout Ireland, whether addressed to other police officers or to outside correspondents, are written by hand. In other respects the organization is thoroughly modern and excellently equipped.

The Immovable Sun Dial.

No one will ever steal the sun dial that adorns the estate of an English farmer at Upton Northlands. It is carved out of a solid block of granite and the granite is part of a natural boulder, which cropped out of the ground. Nearly all the boulder is under ground and the portion protruding was chiseled away, so as to leave only the sun dial. The figures are chiseled from the solid block and cut with great accuracy.

How to Make the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. Two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50—a clear saving of nearly $2. Full directions with Pinex. It keeps perfectly and tastes good.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. Splendid for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes the inflamed membranes in the case of a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol, and has been used for generations to heal inflamed membranes of the throat and chest.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Suffering Nurses.

The Allies Have Had a Hard Time with the Home Front.

Lady Warwick has shown some courage by taking up her pen against the exploitation of army nurses by young women in search of a new fashionable amusement. Writing in The Daily Chronicle, she declares that "the plague of women" in South Africa was a mild affliction by comparison with that which haunts the hospitals behind the British line in France, which are overrun by empty-headed girls with sufficient means and indolence to pick up a smattering of nurses' knowledge in London hospitals, and get permission to "go to the front" on the strength of it. There is not much doubt about the truth of Lady Warwick's indictment. One has heard the same thing from soldiers, from visitors to France, and from nurses themselves, who are obstructed in their duties by the "butterfly sisterhood," and resent the obloquy which is thereby cast on their own profession. A lady who has seen something of the evil both on the spot and at home sends me the following communication in support of Lady Warwick's protest, says the editor of Truth, and I hope that the publication of it may help towards bringing these butterflies under control and terminating the scandal:

"During the South African War Sir Frederick Treves incurred a good deal of obloquy by his blunt references to the monstrous regiment of women who descended upon South Africa for social reasons. It can have been nothing to what is now taking place, for one reason, because not only is the amount of nursing to be done infinitely greater, but because to the English female locust are added her sisters of France, and still more conspicuously the United States. Let me give you a few examples of the kind of woman who is now bombarding with more than Zeppelin ferocity every avenue of possible advancement towards the safest positions behind the front.

"On account of the shortage of nurses in one hospital a woman offered to supply two fully trained nurses at her own expense. She was granted an interview by the amateur pharmister of the hospital. 'Oh, won't you come yourself? We don't really like trained nurses. It is so awkward, as we all have meals together.' Another well-known American woman, daughter of a minister, came over with the usual expression of willingness to do anything from peeling the potatoes to holding the man's hands. When she was put on to plain scrubbing she turned indignantly away, saying that she would willingly take charge of the hospital, but that that was not what she had come to do.

"Not the least of the evils caused by the society seeker of notoriety is that in an already difficult situation she causes more friction, envy, hatred, and malice than can possibly be conceived. Usually armed with letters from high places, she makes it extremely difficult either for French or English in France to refuse her, and if turned down by the one she uses her expulsion as a lever for working upon the other. As to her business-like capacity, it was suggested to one lady the other day that as she was taking public money for her work among the wounded, she should keep accounts. She sent back a casual tradesman's bill or two, remarking that she supposed that that was what was meant."

One evening, just as the little widow was about to leave the church, she was addressed by the deacon. "Good evening," he cordially remarked, with the usual handshake. "How did you like the sermon this evening?" "I think that it was just too perfectly lovely for anything," was the enthusiastic reply of the widow. "It was, indeed," heartily returned the deacon. "I only wish that large congregations would come to hear him." "So, do I," declared the pretty little widow. "The congregation was so small to-night that every time the parson said 'dearly beloved' I positively blushed."—H.B.C.

Poultry Notes

DO not spend too much money on fancy breeds. This is the month when "eggs is eggs," so do not let the laying hen out in the snow.

Keep the quarters dry and clean and feed well, and the eggs must come. The hens enjoy the milk now as well as any time.

Alfalfa is splendid for green feed. Keep the hens busy scratching. Leaves make a good litter.

The house will not seem so dark on gloomy days if it is white-washed.

It is good to keep an egg record and see what the flock is doing.

Chickens thrive when they are comfortable and happy. They do not need expensive buildings, nor do they need to be continuously waited on.

This is the month of highest prices for eggs and lowest prices for poultry.

The turkey tastes just as good for Christmas as at Thanksgiving and the prices are nearly as good. The lighter ones were kept over and with good care are ready now.

LANDING AT SEDDUL-BAHR OVER CAUSEWAY OF DEATH

"Our schoolbooks told us that the bloodiest battle in history was that between the Confederates and Federals at Sharpsburg during the American civil war, when one-third of all the men engaged were left on the field. But Sharpsburg was a joy-ride compared with Seddul-Bahr."

Thus begins an account of the Gallipoli venture by Lt.-Commander Josiah Wedgwood, the Liberal member of parliament, who has made the House of Commons ring with criticism of the Dardanelles campaign, since he returned with special mention for bravery and the coveted striped ribbon of the D. S. O. (Distinguished Service Order) on his breast.

He pays a splendid tribute to the Turk. "The Turk are the finest fighters in the world, save only the Canadians and Australians." And again: "The Turks could easily have killed all those who went to the wounded. They did not fire on them sometimes for ten minutes, and then a burst of fire would come. Then and afterward I found them extraordinarily merciful as compared with the enemy in Flanders."

Only once in his story does he mention battlefield atrocities, and then, he says the deeds were blamed, not on the Truks, but on two foreign officers who were with them.

Killed Two Fiends.

"The two officers" he remarks, "were captured and killed. These fiends, it appears, had instigated the things done to those dying Irishmen, and we never afterward found similar Turkish atrocities."

Lieut.-Com. Wedgwood's first view of fighting in the Dardanelles zone was at the so-called V beach, where the steamship River Clyde was run aground to furnish cover for the attempted landing."

"This old 'Wooden Horse of Troy,' narrates Mr. Wedgwood, "was run ashore on a flawless Sunday morning, 400 yards from the mediaeval castle of Seddul-Bahr. I never noticed the grounding, for the horrors in the water, on the beach. Five tows of five boats each, loaded with men, were going ashore alongside of us. One moment it had been early morning in a peaceful country, with thoughts or smells of cows and hay and milk; and the next, while the boats were just twenty yards from shore, the blue sea around each boat was turning red. Is there anything more horrid than to see men wading through water waist-high under a heavy fire? You see where each bullet hits the water, which, like a nightmare, holds back the man for the next shot, which will not miss. Of all those brave men, two-thirds died, and hardly a dozen reached unwounded the shelter of the five-foot sand dune.

Irish Lead the Charge.

About 9 o'clock a dash across the row of lighters from the Wooden Horse was led by Gen. Napier and his brigade major. Would they ever get to the end of the lighters and jump into the sheltering water? No. Side by side they sat down on the engine coaming. For one moment one thought they might be taking cover; then their legs slid out and they rolled over.

"It was the Munsters that charged first, with a sprig of shamrock in their caps; then the Dublins, the Worcesters, the Hampshires, Lying on the beach, on the rocks, on the lighters, they cried on the Mother of God. Ever when I looked ashore I saw five Munsters. They at some moment had got ashore; they had been told off to cut the wire entanglements; they had left the shelter of bank, charged fifteen yards to the wire and there they lay in a row at two yards interval. One could hardly believe them dead.

"All the time great shells kept hitting the shivering ship and doing slaughter in the packed holds. These shells were fired from Asia, but it was the maxims and pompoms in Seddul-Bahr and on the amphitheatre that kept our heads down below the bulwards and boiler plate. There, now was Midshipman Drury swimming to the lighter which had broken loose, with a line in his mouth and a wound in his head. If ever a boy deserves his V. C. that boy did. And there was the captain of the River Clyde now no longer a ship to be stuck to, but a part forever of Gallipoli, alone with a boat by the spit of rock, trying to lift in the wounded under fire.

Seemed Like Dream.

"All these things I saw like a dream as I moved from casemate to casemate, watching to see Turks, wearing an 'election smile,' and trying to pretend in an even voice to men who had never seen death that this was the best of all possible worlds. Columns of smoke rose from the castle and town of Seddul-Bahr as great shells from the fleet passed over our heads and burst, and in every lull we hear the wounded.

"I looked at the commander on the spit of rock trying to lift in the wounded, and every splash by his side meant a bullet. The colonel, the second in command, was shot through the head on the bridge. One of my men came to me. 'May I go over and help get in those wounded?' 'Why?' I said, and I remembered the story of Stephen Crane of the man who went across the shell-swept field to get a drink because he was 'dared to' by his companions. 'I can't stand hearing them crying.'

"At 12 I had given up all hope; one gun on the ridge and we should be smashed to pieces. At 1 o'clock I got 20,000 more rounds from the fleet, and the Lancashires were appearing over the ridge to the left from 'Lancashire Landing.' We saw fifteen men in a window in the castle on the right by the water. They signaled that they were all that remained of the Dublins, who had landed at the Camber at Seddul-Bahr.

Make Landing Over Dead Men.

"At 3 o'clock we got 180 men to shore alive, and great chunks were flying out of the old castle as the '18' shells from the Elizabeth plastered the ten-foot walls. We watched our men working to the right and up into the castle ruins—at each corner the officer crouching in front with revolver in rest. One watched them through the fire zone and held one's breath and pressed the button of the maxim.

"Then, night came, but a house in Seddul-Bahr was burning brightly and there was a full moon. We disembarked men at once. All around the wounded cried for help and shelter against the bullets, but there was no room on boats or gangway for anything but the men to come to shore. For three hours I stood at the end of the rocks, up to my waist in water, my legs jammed between dead men, and helped men who landed that night jumped on to the backs of dead men, to the most horrible accompaniment in the world. It was then that I first learned the shout of "Allah!" for the Turkes charged.

"All night long the battle raged. On shore everyone was firing at they knew not what. Our men went up the hill through the Turks, and the Turks came down through ours to the beach. Over and past each other they went, sometimes not seeing, sometimes glad to pass on in the darkness. One party of our men were found by daylight at the top of the gully, on the left, in touch with the Lancashires. It is not necessary to burn your boats to insure the courage of desperation; it is as good to have your ship firmly aground. The paladins of that night's fighting knew this and knew what was their position.

"You must remember that for two nights no one had slept, and then another day dawned. We were firmly ashore at Lancashire Landing and at Du Toit's battery to the northeast, and the Australians were dug in at Anzac. An end had to be made of V Beach. The whole fleet collected and all morning blew the ridge and castle and town to pieces. And all the time the wonderful infantry went forward up the hill and through the ruined town. The troops that went in that attack had already lost half their strength; the officers that led up those narrow streets, dodging first through gateways across the openings, and beckoning when safe for men to come on, were nearly all killed. Dead beat, at 1 o'clock before the final rush, they hesitated. Then our last colonel, a staff man, Col. Doughty Wylie, ran ashore with a can, ran right up the hill, ran through the last handful of men sheltering under the crest, took them with that rush into the trench, and fell with a bullet through his head. But the Turks ran, and the ridge was ours."

Operated by a gasoline motor, a machine has been invented to fill trenches in about one fourth the time it can be done by hand.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest and most certain indigestion remedy in the whole world, and besides it is harmless.

Millions of men and women now eat their favourite foods without fear—they know Pape's Diapepsin will save them from any stomach misery.

Please, for your sake, get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store and put your stomach right. Don't keep on being miserable—life is too short—you are not here long, so make your stay agreeable. Eat what you like and digest it; enjoy it, without dread of rebellion in the stomach.

Pape's Diapepsin belongs in your home anyway. Should one of the family eat something which don't agree with them, or in case of an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or stomach derangement at daytime or during the night, it is handy to give the quickest, surest relief known.

WOMAN SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Female Ills—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Belleville, N.S., Canada.—"I doctored for ten years for female troubles and did not get well. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I write now to tell you that I am cured. You can publish my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. SUVERNE BABINE, Belleville, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Another Woman Recovers.

Auburn, N. Y.—"I suffered from nervousness for ten years, and had such organic pains that sometimes I would lie in bed four days at a time, could not eat or sleep and did not want anyone to talk to me or bother me at all. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did the best they could for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and now I am in good health."—Mrs. WILLIAM H. GILL, No. 15 Pleasant Street, Auburn, New York.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

GRADED THE HASH.

High Cost of Living in the Early Days in California.

The high cost of living? Bless you, you don't know the first thing about high prices in these days. Compared with what Mark Twain, Horace Greeley and others used to pay for a square meal in California's early days, your eight course dinner at Astrobilt or Cherry's is really a cheap affair.

But all who frequented the famous old El Dorado hotel at Hangtown (now Placerville, Cal.) paid those prices, and gladly. Those were the palmy days of pioneer life, when the hash was graded in two classes—"low grade" and "18 carat." Here is the way the menu ran:

Soups.
Bean	$1.50
Oxtail (short)	1.50
Roast.
Beef, Mexican (prime cut)	1.25
Beef, Upshaw	1.50
Beef, with one fair sized potato	1.75
Beef, tame, from the station	1.50
Vegetables.
Baked beans, plain	.75
Baked beans, greased	1.00
Two potatoes, medium sized	.50
Two potatoes, peeled	.75
Entrees.
Sauerkraut	1.00
Bacon, fried	1.00
Bacon, stuffed	1.50
Hash, low grade	.75
Hash, 18 carat	1.00
Game.
Codfish balls, per pair	.75
Grizzly, roast	1.00
Grizzly, fried	.75
Jack rabbit, whole	1.00
Pastry.
Rice pudding, plain	.75
Rice pudding with molasses	1.00
Rice pudding with brandied peaches	1.00
Square meal with dessert	2.00

Midnight Conference.

Elsie's Mother (anxiously as Elsie comes upstairs at 12:10 a. m.)—Has Mr. Longmore said anything, Elsie?

Elsie—Not yet, mamma. Elsie's Mother (a little impatiently)—What can be the matter with the man? Do you think he is afraid to propose? Elsie—Oh, no, mamma; he isn't afraid, but our house is so small that I think he feels a little delicate about asking to come here to live.

Evidences of Wisdom.

"What do you see in that woman?" growled her husband. "Why must you tag after her all the time?"

"I think I might learn much from her," retorted his wife.

"And why?"

"Well, for instance, she says that she once flited you."

MAMMA! DON'T YOU SEE YOUR CHILD IS SICK, CONSTIPATED

Look at Tongue! Move Poisons From Liver and Bowels at Once

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Co."

The prosecuting witness in the damage suit against the city was giving in his testimony.

"Now, then, Mr. Bleeders.", said his lawyer, "you will please tell the jury where you were injured."

"On my knee, in my feelings and right in front of the city hall," rapidly answered the witness, fearing an objection on the part of the other attorney.—Case and Comment.

Something to Smile At.

"Try to smile," said the head of the department store. "Look at yonder clerk. He is always smiling."

"He finds it easy to smile. He sells face powder to pretty girls. I sell collar buttons to old grouches."

How You Can Have "Naturally Curly" Hair

If you will forswear the curling iron and follow the simple plan here suggested you will be surprised beyond words to see not only the beautiful curl, but the soft fluffiness and lively lustre your hair will acquire. The plan, merely to apply to the hair before retiring, a little pure oilmerine (in liquid form) using a clean tooth brush for the purpose. The most effective way is to divide the hair into strands, moistening each of them separately from root to tip.

The delightful wavy effect in evidence in the morning will suggest to any stranger that your hair is "naturally curly." The effect will last a considerable time and if you'll get a few ounces of liquid oilmerine from your druggist you will have a supply for months. This by the way will leave no sticky or greasy trace and cannot harm the hair or scalp in any way. The hair will be quite manageable at all times, no matter how you do it up.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISS' COAT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Separate coats have become established in feminine favor and this season they are more graceful than usual with their fitted upper portion and their flaring lower edge.

An excellent model is shown in the illustration. It is made in a single length from shoulder to hem, the body portion fitting neatly and closing in front close up to the neck. Here there is a wide turnover collar and an ornamental strap trimming. The lower part of the coat is held in by a belt at the waistline and flares nicely at the side seams. There are long pocket flaps at each side, with or without a real pocket.

The sleeves are wide and roomy without fulness at the shoulder. They are gathered at the back of the hand where the material forms a frill held in place by an ornament of braid or fur.

These coats are made of many new imported cloakings which are of loose weave but very warm, as they are pure wool. Checks, plaids and stripes are liked and there are many mixtures. Fur is used for the collar and for the cuff ornament and a great deal of braid is also employed.

The coat pattern, No. 7,423, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires 2½ yards of 50 inch material with ½ yard of 54 inch fur cloth to trim.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

PRESIDENT WILSON IN ANNUAL ADDRESS MAKES TWO IMPORTANT PRONOUNCEMENTS

Striking Denunciation of Hyphenated Americans and New Definition of the Monro Doctrine the Features of President's Message--States of the American Continent Destined to Have a New Significance as Factor in International Affairs and the Political History of the World

SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—In words that fairly snapped with their vigor and burned in their vitriolic strength, President Wilson hurled at Congress to-day a denunciation of hyphenated Americanism. It was the electric shock of his annual message to Congress, the bitter words with which he embellished his demand that Congress take cognizance of "corruptions of mind and heart" against those "who had poured the poison of disloyalty into the very arteries of our national life."

In a voice that rang out staccato-like in the vast hall of the House of Representatives, the President demanded that law-makers devise a means of reaching those "who have sought to bring the authority and good name of our Government into contempt, to destroy our industries wherever they thought it effective for their vindictive purposes to strike at them, and to debase our politics to the uses of foreign intrigue." He urged such measures, "to do nothing less than save the honour and self-respect of the nation." The very vigor of the phrases seemed intensified by the fact that the President himself spoke them.

The President said he need not suggest the terms with which Congress might take measure of preparedness against the situation he bared. "Such creatures of passion, disloyalty and anarchy must be crushed out," was his demand. "We should promptly make use of processes of law by which me may be urged of their corrupt distempers," he reiterated again. "The gravest threats against our national peace and safety have been uttered within our own borders," he stated.

President Wilson's speech dealt with two great subjects of particular interest at this time to Canadians.

Preparedness by the whole Western hemisphere, moral partnership of all American countries, a co-operation of their natural aims, national policies and national economics—this was the mammoth conception of the President's annual message to Congress.

It was primarily a preparedness message. He gave a new definition of the Monroe doctrine. It was: :The States of the American continent are not hostile rivals but co-operating friends, and their growing sense of community of interest, alike in matters political and in matters economic is likely to give them new significance as factors in international affairs and in the political history of the world.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The portion of the British press that commented to-day upon the peace plea of Pope Benedict at yesterday's consistory indulged in severe criticism of the Pontiff's remarks.

The London newspapers objected particularly to that portion of the Pope's allocution which placed the responsibility for "the continuation of this shedding of blood" upon the nations which will not enter readily into peace negotiations. "The Papacy is always liable to suspicion that it sides with the Central Powers since the greatest strength of Roman Catholicism is in Ausro-Hungary and Germany," said the Daily Chronicle. "That the Pope should have given voice to such expressions just at the time when the German Government is stage-managing a full dress peace movement from Berlin and the Reichstag performance next week can take full advantage of the Papal limelight, is to be profoundly regretted."

PARIS, Dec. 7.—A second conference of the Allies' War Council, with representatives from all the Entente nations present, was held at the War Office to-day.

ATHENS, Dec. 7.—Fighting in North-East Montenegro and a sudden assault by the Bulgarians against the right wing of the French army marked the renewal of important actions in the Balkans to-day. The city of Ipex, the largest in Eastern Montenegro, is about to fall to the Austrians, according to advices received here. It is believed that the Bulgarian onslaughts against the French mark the beginning of an effort to throw the Allies back to Salonika. Mackensen, it is believed, may be trying to hammer the expeditionary forces back across the Greek border in one mighty smash.

No official explanation was received here to-day of Roumania's reasons for commandeering foreign shipping.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—The transport Lapland which left a Canadian port on November 28 has arrived in England. On board were the 37th Toronto Battalion, No. 2 Seige Battery, drafts from field artillery and other reinforcements and drafts, totalling in all 2,500 officers and men.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—Beginning with the winter of 1916-17, the Marine Department proposes to have lighthouse keepers remain in the principal lighthouses on Lakes Superior and Huron throughout the winter.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—Lively cannonading in the Champagne throughout last night and a local battle around a French advance post south of St. Souplet, were reported in this afternoon's communique.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Secretary Lansing has replied to Germany that Capt. Boy-Ed and Von Papen are not desirable to the United States, because of their military and naval activities.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The French submarine Fersnel was sunk by an Austrian warship on Sunday, and the crew of two officers and twenty-six men made prisoners.

ABOARD THE PEACE SHIP, OSCAR II., Via Wireless, Dec. 7.—Skipper Henry Ford will hurl the first peace message from the Oscar II. wireless gun within a few hours. He has prepared a message addressed to Champ Clark to be read in Congress. It will be sent as soon as communication can be established, avoiding Canada.

It appears from the above wireless that Ford will send the message to Washington as soon as the Oscar II. is in a position where the Canadian wireless station at Cape Race cannot pick up her messages. Ford's reason for this is not clear.

CANADIAN GUNS WERE IN CORNER IN YPRES BATTLE

Sergt. Geo. W. Allen, Peterborough Artilleryman, Back From the Front This Morning, Tells a Thrilling Story of the Great Fight

INJURED BY SHELL

Sergeant Geo. W. Allen, of the 10th Battery, C.F.A., arrived in the city this morning, after being away on active service since the first month of the war between Great Britain and the Teutonic allies. Sergeant Allen was wounded during the second battle of Ypres. A shell burst in the gunpit in which Sergeant Allen was located, fatally wounding one man and injuring Sergeant Allen so badly in the back that for a time he was compelled to remain in the hospital at Boulogne, France, before being removed to England. He regards his escape as miraculous and is of the opinion that a sand bag saved him. As it was he was knocked unconscious and is still suffering from the effects of his injuries. His left shoulder is partially disabled. Sometimes when he is out walking the whole sidewalk appears to raise up in front of him, indicating the severe nature of the after effects. Sergt. Allen was not discharged, but given six months leave of absence, and registered as unfit for further military service. He will be allowed to spend two weeks at his home, 555 Chamberlain street, after which he will be required to return to the convalescent home in Kingston. This he objects to. He would rather remain in Peterborough with his wife and family, especially as he is not in need of treatment. The sojourn at the convalescent home is merely for the purpose of rest.

Promoted to Sergeant.

When Sergeant Allen left Peterborough in August, 1914, it was as a corporal in the 34th field battery detachment. First he was with the 9th Battery at Cobourg and upon arriving at Salisbury Plain became identified with the 10th Battery in the capacity of sergeant. On the twenty-second of April last Sergeant Allen and his battery was located at the extreme left of the lines behind the French troops. The men were startled by the hurried retirement of the Algerian troops, due to the gas which the Germans were using for the first time. This left the guns of the 10th battery exposed and without infantry protection. He was at a loss to explain the action of the Algerian troops, who threw their guns and equipment away so they could run faster. For the French troops, Sergt. Allen has nothing but unqualified praise. It wasn't long until the 10th Battery was practically surrounded and the word reached headquarters that they were annihilated. At one time the Germans were on three sides of them and were between the guns and the horses. The latter were located about three miles away and could not be brought up in time to remove the guns before the Germans were far to the rear. At one time the Battery reversed fire, which goes to show to what extent they were surrounded by the enemy. They receivel an order to retire, but were unable to do so.

Close Range.

Ammunition was supplied to the guns by a party of thirty infantrymen who were assigned to that particular duty. Each man carried four eighteen pound shells. The guns did terrible execution at a range of two hundred and fifty yards. Sergeant Allen said it was almost impossible for infantry to advance under the fire of eighteen pounders. The shells can be set to explode at the muzzle, and each shell contains about three hundred and sixty bullets. Cavalry might advance in the fact of such a fire, but not infantry. The guns can be fired as often as eighteen or twenty times a minute, while a regular fire is about ten shots per minute. "This form of fire is more deadly than machine gun fire," said Sergt. Allen.

Two Peterborough Soldiers Back From the Front

LT.-COL. JOS. MILLS, of the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., who returned this afternoon.

SERGT. GEO. W. ALLAN, of the 10th Battery, C.F.A., C.E.F., who got home this morning.

SEND-OFF TO THE BOYS OF THE BATTERY WHO LEAVE TO-NIGHT

93rd Battalion Also Welcomed Col. Mills This Afternoon and Will Assist in the Opening of the Patriotic Meeting in the Opera House as Well--Warm Welcome For Lt.-Col. Mills---To-day's Military News.

The Peterborough members of the draft from the 93rd Battery, who are home on their final leave from Kingston before leaving for the front, will be given a send-off by the 93rd Battalion to-night. The Battery men will fall in at the Armouries at 6:30 o'clock, and will be escorted to the G. T. R. train by the Band and men of the 93rd.

Lt.-Col. Mills arrived in Peterborough on the 5:58 train this afternoon and received an enthusiastic welcome from the civic and military authorities and the citizens generally. A triumphal procession to the Armouries being headed by the 93rd Band, with the Battalion acting as escort. A full account of the reception will be published in to-morrow's Examiner.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

The following Battalion orders by Lt.-Col. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., were read to-day:

Headquarters,
Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 7th, 1915.

1—Duties.

Orderly officer for to-day—Lieut. S. J. Raymond.

Orderly officer for to-morrow—Lieut. F. S. Dupuy.

Orderly officer for Thursday—Lieut. R. D. McDonald.

Until further orders Sergt. J. O'Brien will be employed in the Orderly Room.

2—Parades.

Wednesday—6.30 to 7.00, physical training; 8.30 to 10.00, squad drill, Sects. 36-46; 10.00 to 10.30, orderly room; 10.30 to 11.30, extended order drill; 11.30 to 12.00, lecture (marches); 2.00 to 4.30, route march.

3—

Officers in drilling their companies and platoons will not give instruction on the sights of the rifles. As there are 3 or more different sights, and as yet none has been adopted.

4—Room Orderlies.

The men detailed for room orderlies daily will be exempt from all drills and parades for each day. They will sweep out the Barracks rooms while the men are at physical drill.

As soon as the rooms are properly swept they will then parade to the kitchen and assist the cooks with the breakfast, preparing the tables for the men and waiting on their platoons at all meals. After each meal they will sweep out the dining rooms and wash the dishes, knives, forks and spoons.

No knife, fork or spoon will be retained by any man in future. They will be, as said before, washed by the room orderlies.

Any man found washing his eating utensils in the wash room will be severely punished.

Dishes will be kept in the kitchen and not in the Barracks rooms.

Complaint has been made regarding the folding of blankets. Blankets will be folded as outlined in Battalion Order No. 1, Sanitary Orders, Dec. 3rd, 1915, and any N.C.O. or man not folding his blankets as outlined in the above mentioned order will be punished. Platoon sergeants will be held strictly responsible that this order is carried out to the very letter.

Too many complaints are coming in by the orderly officers regarding this.

It is left to the honour of every man to obey orders, and as obedience is the first law of a soldier, it is hoped that there will be no further complaints of this nature and that every order is strictly obeyed.

5—Parades.

The Battalion will parade for the purpose of acting as an escort to Lt.-Col. J. Mills, who is returning from the front, at 3.15 p.m. to-day. They will march from the armouries to the C.P.R. station and return; they will then march to the residence of Mrs. Hall on Rubidge street, and thence to the armouries. They will then be dismissed until 7.45 p.m., when the Battalion will parade to the Grand Opera House for the purpose of opening the patriotic meeting to be held there.

They will then march back to the armouries to act as escort for the artillery men who are leaving to-night for the front at 9 o'clock.

6—Leave of Absence.

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to grant leave of absence to Lieut. R. D. McDonald from Friday, Dec. 10th midnight to Monday, Dec. 13th midnight:

T. J. Johnston, Lt.-Col.,
Officer Commanding 93rd O. S. Battalion, C.E.F.

The 93rd Battalion Band is gaining in numerical strength as well as in efficiency daily. The latest addition is Bandsman Harry Gilbert, the former trombone soloist of the 57th Regiment Band, who has secured his transfer from the 59th Overseas Band to the 93rd organization. Two other members of the 59th Band who have relatives in the Peterborough battalion, will also be transferred here, while Bandmaster Hughes has been so lucky as to find a piccolo player in the ranks of the 93rd. It is the aim to make the Peterborough band the finest in the Canadian expeditionary forces. The organization is nearly 40 strong and is improving every day. There is a treat in store for the people of Peterborough at the next concert in which the band appears.

Entertained at Y.M.C.A.

A most enjoyable event was held at the Y. M. C. A. last night when the Boys' Cabinet were the hosts at a delightful banquet in honour of some of the members of the boys' department who have recently enlisted in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. The guests of honour were Gunners W. Jones, Harold Elcombe, Victor Thorndyke, Bert Hamilton and Howard Copp of the 33rd Battery, C.F.A., and Ptes. Harold Mollon, Palmer Wiley,

THE ACCOUNTS ARE AUDITED

Adequate Audit Made of Patriotic Fund Accounts—All Moneys Properly Disbursed and Accounted For

375 Water Street,
Peterborough, 7th Dec., 1915.

To the Editor.

Sir,—In order to set at rest a doubt that appears to have arisen in some quarters, I wish to say that at the request of the Committee, I made an audit of the accounts of the Patriotic Fund up to 31st May last, and my certificate was at that time published in your paper.

All monies were properly accounted for and disbursed only on proper authorisation. I have just arranged with the Committee to continue the audit up to the close of the year.

Yours very truly,
W. R. Morris,
Chartered Accountant.

Council Gives $20,000 To Patriotic Fund

First Contribution in the Campaign This Night To-night by Big Meeting in the Opera House to Raise $50,000—Other Municipalities Even More Generous.

WAS NOT UNANIMOUS

By a vote of 7 to 3 the Council last night voted $20,000 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, thereby doubling the amount contributed a year ago.

On the ratepayer's tax bill this grant will be represented by .94 mills as it is the Council's intention to borrow the money by an issue of debentures and spread the payment over ten years, thus relieving the present taxpayer of some of the immediate burden of the war.

The following figures indicate the facts of the $20,000 grant:

$20,000 at 6 per cent.	$1,200
Sinking Fund, 10 years	1,666
Total	$2,866

which, it was stated, amounted approximately to 94-100ths of a mill.

It was a weighty deputation that visited the Council Chamber, and it was also opportunely increased by the solid citizens who are interested in the Agricultural Exhibition Grounds, and who were naturally assimilated by the Patriotic delegation, until the crowded seats contained one composite assembly.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer introduced the visitors, and wasted few words in preamble, merely stating that they had come to ask the Council for a patriotic grant of $20,000.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, chairman of the committee, reviewed the work of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and the swelling call made upon it by the enlistment of men who leave dependent families and mothers. Of last year's $20,000, one-quarter of it had been set aside for the relief of persons who were suffering directly or indirectly as the result of the war. So carefully had that $15,000 been handled that there remains a sufficient sum to provide for similar wants this year. Hence, there is no present call to replenish that particular charitable fund. But it was desired that the citizens through their Council should set the example of generous giving to the Patriotic Fund by the sum of $20,000, which would not only be a liberal public contribution and assure the success of the committee's campaign, but would also be an impetus to those who would give private contributions.

In endorsing Mr. O'Connell's presentation of the deputation's request, Mr. R. R. Hall said that there was only one course desired by Canadians that they should stand solidly by the British Empire in their determination that the Germans should be driven out of the countries they have no right to possess. I have yet to hear one hostile criticism of the members of the Council over their vote for last year's grant of $10,000.

Mr. F. D. Kerr and Adjt. McElhinney spoke of the manner in which the money is employed and of the number of women who are saving as much as possible for the probable day when it will be so necessary to them.

What Others Have Done.

Mr. W. C. Bean, of Ottawa, representative of the fund as organizer, said he was a little disappointed that Peterborough had aimed at only $50,000. St. Catharines, with a population of 18,000, had raised $140,000,

BE THERE EARLY

Just a suggestion. Get to the Opera House early to-night. The Patriotic Choir will sing, and the rendering of patriotic selections will be a feature of the half hour before the meeting opens. Come prepared to stay. What is an hour longer in such a cause. And if you stay you will be convinced, and if convinced, subscribe. That is the beginning and end of the meeting. It all moves in the direction of the $50,000.

CAMPAIGN CHATTER

The deputation to the Council last night was a thoroughly representative one. It filed into the Council Chamber and sat with impressive gravity until the proposed civic grant to the Patriotic Fund came before the Council. Then there as activity. It was practically the last meeting of the Council of 1915, and only the serious and emergent character of the civic legislation asked for justified the Council in taking up, considering and acting on the request of the deputation. For serious legislation, in the last hours of a Council is frowned on by the authorities. Else councils could give away the whole municipality and escape condemnation.

Frankly the deputation stated its views. The need was great. The gift of $10,000 made last year had been at a time when the work was just opening out. Now it is five times as responsible in number of families and amount needed. The reportorial columns of the paper will tell of the discussion.

Alderman Green was quite right when he suggested an action which he would earnestly support. That of a monthly grant of $1,000 for the year and a provision that if the needs of the Fund were greater than now by the first of April, and the rate of the year was to be struck, that some additional amount could and would, if he were returned to the Council, be supported. The proposition was fair, equitable and a credit to his good sense and judgment. In such matters Alderman Green is seldom wrong. Possibly never wrong, but reasonably cautious. Alderman Stratton, as Finance Minister, and the traditional watch dog of the treasury, sounded a note of caution. He could not do less. But, on consideration he accepted the situation and felt, that with the earnest wish of the deputation as stated that any reluctance he had might be set aside, especially if the payment of the money were spread over a number of years by debentures.

Alderman Duffus supported the proposition in an address that did his head and heart credit. It was appreciated. Other of the aldermen also spoke and approved. Any way the sum of $20,000 was granted and we all feel proud of the Council, the city and ourselves.

A gathering of the foremen of the General Electric Co. was held to confer with the team captains on the way to receive the subscriptions expected from the men in the factory. The rules of the management of the company and routine of work would not permit of canvassers going through the factory. The foremen arranged to present to the men in the departments the claims of the Fund. That will be a distinct and valuable help.

In discussing details with the foremen some claims were put forward that the expenditure made in the city for the distribution was excessive, that large salaries were being paid and that the Fund was being made a means of using the money that should be used to extend allowances in a wrong way. Such contentions are wholly erroneous. They only exist because information has not been asked for. The meetings, books, sheets, etc., are all open to the public, and everything is public. In order to place the matter out of question a statement will be printed in the local papers to-morrow detailing the expense for the distribution of the Fund. The figures will be put together and will, no doubt allay any impression. Look for these to-morrow. The newspapers insist that copy from the publicity end of

TUESDAY, DEC. 7, 1915

A NEW "STUNT."

It is stated in despatches that President Wilson of the United States is about to make some startlingly important declaration apropos of the Monroe Doctrine—extending it materially and in such a way as to "attract world-wide attention." The President, before he gets too busy with this matter, had better make some declaration of what he is going to do about the numerous "notes" of protest against German outrage upon the property and laws of United States citizens; "notes" that have in many cases been unanswered and ignored with insulting contempt. President Wilson may be a man of large capacity of action, but the personal demands of a matrimonial enterprise, and the demands of an international diplomatic embroglio seem to represent a sufficient number of irons in the fire, and contra-indicate enlargement of his presidential programme.

A CONTRAST.

The Germans did not like the Whitlock Brand of United States Consul, because he was a man and not a machine product of militarism. He offended German sensibilities by striving to save the life of Nurse Cavell, done to death unjustly. Her crime was that her hands were red with the blood of German soldiers. This was a true charge. But they were stains that were not stains; the blood was that of German soldiers, whose wounds Nurse Cavell, a British nurse, in the noble neutrality of a high humanity, had dressed as she dressed the wounds of British and Belgian soldiers. The United States did not, like German diplomatic representatives, like Boy-Ed and Von Papen, because, as they have been convicted of doing, they outraged United States neutrality, and hospitality, and conspired to wage war in a neutral country; to disturb the ordered course of government; to incite to strikes and deeds of violence against the dignity of the American people, and the property of the people. Here we have set against each other types of the ideals that possess the two nations. While the German spirit of destruction and cruelty and ruthlessness remains in effective existence, there can be no peace; and the sending out of a peace party can have no effect. It has no relation to honest United States sympathy with right, and will break, like a rain-drop against a rock, in the face of the allied determination to wage this war against the disturber of universal peace till his power is as completely broken as the peace he has disturbed.

NO PEACE POSSIBLE NOW.

The utter futility of all attempts to bring peace is quite consistent with the persistent and perfidious policy of Germany towards Belgium. In this connection Belgium represents the world, in that she is actually suffering from the application of the policy that was to be applied in spirit to the whole world—disregard of national rights and complete subjugation to German greed and "frightfulness." Belgium was invaded and her rights, and territory, and people, outraged; not because she gave cause of offence; but because she merely existed—stood in the way of world conquest; stood first in the pathway that German militarism had outlined as leading to world conquest. She has been bled white in every way; the veins of her people have been drained; they have been shot, imprisoned, and their property destroyed, their homes wiped out. They have been oppressed with cruel restraint of liberty, and have been plundered not only by sporadic spoliation, but by explicit decree. The work of plundering has gone on without interruption, and it still continues. The barbarous government of Germany is exacting a new money levy—in addition to previous ones. This time it is a levy of eight million dollars a month upon a country whose resources have been so completely destroyed, that millions are lacking bread, clothing and shelter, and all of her productive agencies destroyed or in the hands of the enemy. Eight million dollars a month is ¾ million dollars a year. The weight of this can be estimated by the fact that in times of peace and undisturbed operation of national agencies of all kinds, the total annual revenue of Belgium was 360 million dollars a year. In Canada we may fairly consider it a sacrifice to devote an almost inconsiderable fraction of our revenue to the purposes of the war. By a comparison like this we can estimate the back-breaking burden the Germans are again adding to what they have heretofore imposed—to the levies on separate citizens and towns.

With this iniquitous thing going on; with Germany yet in possession of Belgium; with her determination to continue fiendishly persistent; with her power for oppression and outrage, so far, unbroken, who outside a madhouse can for one moment think of peace; or think it possible for the Allies to lay down their arms. There can be no peace, there will be no peace, till the powers of evil are broken, and the power to oppress, and outrage, and wrong, is utterly and irremediably broken. Peace with safety, with assurance against other assaults, is the only peace we can entertain in thought. Till this is gained the war will go on. Its terrible responsibility was deliberately assumed in the interests of destroying war, and until this is assured, all the wastage and woe will have been useless, till the end is gained; with the end in sight the war must, and shall go on, till the end is reached.

ENVIOUS QUEBEC WOMAN.

Winnipeg has two women lawyers They have just passed an examination of the benchers and headed the list. In Manitoba there is no bar to the practice of the law by the women. How this must aggravate the women of Quebec, where an ancient act refuses them the privileges of the courts.—Kingston Whig.

THE STRANGLED CRY FROM THE SEA.

A cablegram from Athens on Saturday reported that a call for help had reached there by wireless that morning from an unnamed American ship the message stating "that she was being attacked by an Austrian or a German submarine south of the Island of Crete."

That message, with its tragedy and its significance, must have agitated millions of Americans yesterday.

Evidently the call for help was choked in the throat that made it. The attack was so sudden and so successful that the ship had not time to scream its name by wireless before the enemy torpedo administered the death blow. The American at the key board was unable to complete his message.

The tragedy of that unfinished call for help lays hold on the imagination as, perhaps, nothing else could. What happened? What ship was it?

And to whom did those on that ship call in that hour when attacked by those who have long been practising the most flagrant piracy on the high seas?

Was the call sent out in the desperate hope that it might be heard by British or French cruisers somewhere in those waters?

Or was it a call sent out to a hundred million Americans merely to let them know that there is need for Washington to add another to the series of unanswered letters sent to Berlin?—Toronto Star.

THE STAIN

It was a German gentleman
Took his post abroad to roam,
A genial German gentleman,
To guard the Fatherland.

Upon his armoured neck his wife
Lay clinging, fond and weak;
His children wept, and tears of grief
Salt furrowed every cheek,
But proudly he maintained his soul,
He was too moved to speak.

It was a gentle British nurse,
Whose mercy, like soft rain,
Descended over stricken men
To soothe their burning pain
And heal the angry wound, that they Might come to home again.

Nor creed nor nation stayed her hand,
Straight was her duty done,
When from the stabbed and reeking trench
And from the belching gun,
She held back the torn and bleeding ranks,
The Britain, Belgian, Hun.

A prisoner she. It does not seem
So grim, so sharp, a loss,
For she could hear far down the ward
The crazed wounded toss,
And on her gentle breast there shone
An honourable cross.

With covered eyes against a wall
Alone an angel stood,
And prisoned were the gentle hands,
From this with deiac quest
Now to be wiped that the red quenched
She must atone with blood.

Behold the German gentleman!
He hands these steady eyes,
He cann t brook the ultimate look,
The scorn that in them lies,
And to the whisper of her prayer
His pistol shot replies.

And he has done the speechless thing
All other breeds disown,
This genial German gentleman
Who standeth not alone,
But for these other gentlemen
Upon his scarlet throne.

So now while fire and frost shall burn,
While deathless rivers run,
While deathless rivers run,
While mothers' milk is sweet, while men
Rise up to greet the sun,
The crimson stain shall be the sign,
The birthright of the Hun.

With sword and trench, with shell and mine
Girt strong our legions are,
God grant some steady aiming eye
Shall some day see afar
That genial German gentleman
Who sallied forth to war.

—Alan Sullivan.

SUDDEN COLLAPSE OF WHEAT COMMANDEERING SENSATION

The idea of commandeering all the wheat of certain grades in eastern elevators has been whittled down. First the millers went to the Government and got the order modified so that they could obtain all the wheat they had ordered, and it is now said that the millers are in exactly the same position as they were before the order was made.

Next we hear that the wheat which Canadians have agreed to sell to American buyers will be released. A report from New York reads:

"Henry Stemper, of the Grain Growers' Export Co., said he believed about 5,000,000 bushels of grain would be released to Canadian contractors so that they could fulfill their American contracts, but that no grain would be released for any other neutral country.

"Holland, Greece, Spain, Sweden, and other neutral European countries will not be permitted to get any of the commandeered grain."

The amount held in eastern elevators was said to be from sixteen to twenty millions. Taking the larger figure and deducting from it the ten millions to be released to the millers and the five millions to be released to American buyers, the amount of wheat affected by the order is about five millions—it may be a little more. The New York despatch indicates that sales to Americans will not be disturbed, but that Holland, Greece, Spain, Sweden, and other neutral American countries will not be permitted to get any of the commandeered grain.

It looks now as if a great deal of fuss had been made over a very small matter, or else that the Government had acted hastily, "gone off at half-cock" as one business man said, and then repented. The net result seems to be that five million bushels of grain have been secured for Allies, instead of going to some small neutral countries in Europe. The Canadian crop of this year has been estimated at 38 millions, and some believe that it will come nearer to four hundred million bushels. The United Kingdom alone imports, even in normal years, more than two hundred million bushels. So that the action taken by the Government seems now to be of comparatively little importance, either as to helping the Western Canadian farmer or helping the Allies. It may be that more will be done. For the present we seem to be dealing with an exploded sensation. The action taken by the Government, as modified by the millers and the grain dealers, cannot be regarded as drastic or far-reaching.—Toronto Star.

WHEN THE BOOT IS ON THE OTHER FOOT

In the Atlantic Monthly—published in Boston—of February, 1862, appears a dialect poem which deals with the Mason and Slidell affair, which, occurring during the course of the Civil War, nearly brought Britain and the United States to blows. The poem is addressed by "Jonathan" (the United States) to "John" (Bull); much of it, mutatis mulandis, can be applied to the United States to-day—when the boot is on the other foot and Uncle Sam is protesting against interference with his trade—his "ten per cent." profit. Three of the verses read thus:

Why talk so dreffle big, John,
Of honour, when it meant
You didn't cave a fig, John,
But just for ten per cent.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess
He's like the rest," sez he;
"When all is done, it's number one
That's nearest to J. B.,
Ez wal ez you and me!"

We know we've got a cause, John,
That's honest, just an' true;
We thought 'twould win applause, John,
Ef nowheres else, from you.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess
His love of right," sez he,
"Hangs by a rotten fibre o' cotton;
There's mater' in J. B.
Ez wal ez you and me!"

God means to make this land, John,
Clear thru, from sea to sea,
Believe an' understand, John,
The wuth o' bein' free.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess
God's price is high," sez he;
"But nothin' else them wut He sells
Wears long, an' thet J. B.
May learn like you an' me!"

CASTLE FOLLY.

The Toronto News describes the new Government House as "snuggling on a broad ledge of hillside." That is the word, all right, "snuggling." We were just going to think of that word ourselves in a minute. At first when you happen on Government House coming from topside direction you get the impression that it is cowering, or burrowing, or something. It is as if it had been throwing up earthworks or digging itself in to escape attack. Or else you feel when you see it first, as if it must have slipped over the edge of the hill just before you get there, or that it had started in the valley and was even now straining to lift itself just a little more and gain a safe footing on the hill. That is the way one feels about it at first. But when you go back again and again and see the place from every side you see that the building is really snuggling on a slope of the hill.—Toronto Star.

BRITAIN HAS APPEALED TO THE EMPIRE!

WHAT SHALL THE ANSWER BE TO THAT CALL?

THE PATRIOTIC FUND APPEALS TO YOU!

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE says:—"Your job, your property, your home, yours and your family's liberty are in the balance. Does every man who can help, whether by fighting or by providing materials or otherwise making it possible for others to fight, realize that ruin awaits remission.

You are not fighting. Perhaps there are good reasons why. Others are willing to step into the breach and save the Empire, and save you and yours. Their families have the right to be protected while the bread-winners are doing your work.

Rice Lake Indian Killed In Belgium While Doing His Bit

Sergt. Samson Comego Was Member of Alderville Indians' Band and Had Shown Exceptional Sagacity Hunting Snipers.

The following letter is from Major Beattie of Cobourg, chaplain with the Canadian forces, announcing the death of Sergt. Samson Comego, one of the Indians of the Alderville Reserve, Rice Lake. His brother, Peter Comego, was wounded in the hip and taken to the hospital. Both these Indians were prominently connected with the Alderville Indians' Brass Band, which is widely known in this district.

The letter follows:

"Sergeant Sam Comego, well known in Cobourg as the Chief of the Rice Lake Indians, was killed in action in Belgium. He was one of the shrewdest and best-natured of men, and as a soldier had an excellent record. His Colonel, who told me about his death, spoke in the highest terms of his work. He was given the difficult task of searching for German snipers, and the Colonel assured me that Sam located a lot of them. When they were located in a place where he could not shoot them himself he would make a rough drawing of the place, and the artillery would do the rest. His commanding officer assured me that through the tenacity and sagacity of this Indian the enemy sniper's lot was made so unhappy that for days at a time our boys had peace from sniping. I always had a warm spot in my heart for the big-hearted fellow, and I am happy to think he had a liking for his chaplain of the old 40th. His last words to me when we left England were: 'Major, if we ever get back home, you must come and have a good shoot at Rice Lake. I'll take you where we can get the ducks.' I never saw him again, for he was not in my brigade. He has gone to his reward. He did his bit for the restoration of Belgium and died a soldier's death. He was hit with two pieces of shell, one in the leg and the other in the breast. I visited the battalion of which he was a member to-day. I distributed socks from Plainville ladies to the boys from around Cobourg. They were deeply appreciated. On my way there I sat in the saddle on the road just outside a little village and watched the Boches put fifteen shells into the place. It was the first time this village was shelled, and the flight of women and children was pathetic. Three men were killed while they slept. When the shelling ceased I passed through and saw the damage. Now that the trees are bare and observation easier, both sides seem to be more active, and shelling goes on more or less night and day.

"We are already thinking of Christmas and laying plans for celebrating that day with more than material things. No chaplain will leave his post here, though the leave begins for us on the 17th of December. To their credit, be it said, not one would go if he could till after the day is over.

"Our men are in fine spirits, excellently clothed and fed, and are standing the trying wet weather very well. When the history of this war is written, one of the brightest pages will be the record of how Britain fed and clothed her soldiers. About the only thing lacking is the silverware and linen, and we expect that—when we get to Berlin.

"I heard a good story the other day, and with this I will close: An officer saw a private popping his head above the parapet and taking a look across at the enemy. He asked him what he was doing and why he was not using his periscope. 'Well,' he said' 'sir, I was using it, and the blankety blank German nearly put a hole through it, so I took it down.

"Yours very sincerely,

"W. Beattie."

List of Accounts Council Passed

Included in Finance Committee's Report Last Night

The following report of the Finance Committee, presented by Ald. Stratton, was passed by the Council last night:

That the outstanding taxes on the 914 Collector's Roll be collected forthwith and the Roll returned.

That the City Treasurer ask for tenders for $50,000 of the waterworks debentures authorized to be issued, the tenders to be received up to 4 p.m. on 15th December, 1915.

That the City Treasurer write the Bank of Montreal and arrange for a credit of $40,000 for the balance of this year in addition to the loan for which arangements were made for local improvements until the debentures therefor were sold, provided the sewerage debentures authorized are sold before 1st December, and if they are not sold, for a further credit of $20,000 against these debentures, and also for a credit of $200,000 for 1916 against taxes and $50,000 for local improvements for next year.

That the Utilities Commission account for $141.90 in connection with the outfall sewer be paid and that the other accounts be returned and the Commission informed that the city is not liable for them or any part of them.

That the Selectors of Jurors be paid the usual fee of $45.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common, because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

WHY ENEMY CAN'T GET AT EGYPT

Undoubtedly the most important event in railroad construction in Turkey to date (says the U.S.A. Consul-General at Constantinople in a report to Washington) is the recent completion of the Baghtche Tunnel on the Bagdad Railroad, piercing the Amanus Mountains on the border between Asia Minor and Syria. The most serious difficulties connected with the construction of the Bagdad Railroad have now been overcome, and the line is certain to become an accomplished fat in the near future.

The total length of the tunnels it has been necessary to construct in crossing this chain of mountains is 28,208 feet, of which the great tunnel occupies 10,029, or over 3 miles. The technical difficulties which had to be overcome have been just as great as those encountered in the Alps. In fact, for several hundred yards the engineers encountered a rock of practically pure quartz, which was so hard that it was necessary to have recourse to boring machines of special construction.

Eldon Walton and Percy Ecobichon of the 93rd Battalion. A number of other members of the boys' department were unable to be present. Others who sat down to supper were members of the Boys' Cabinet, Mr. C. N. Meserve, Mr. G. L. Galley, Mr. H. B. Cowan and Mr. Will Richardson. Mr. McCarroll was a most efficient chairman.

A truly sumptuous repast was served after which the gathering spent a pleasant half hour in singing patriotic and popular songs. A number of short addresses, followed. Mr. Richardson, speaking on behalf of the Board of Directors, Mr. Meserve, the General Secretary, and Mr. Galley, the Boys' Secretary, expressed their regrets at losing such valued members and the pride the Association had in being represented by such gallant young men. Gunners Hamilton and Copp made suitable replies.

The occasion was a most enjoyable one, although tinged with the sad thoughts that some of the guests were home for the last time before leaving for overseas.

The progress that the 93rd Battalion is making is shown by the fact that No. 7 platoon is now being organized. Sergt. Wm. Theobald has been transfered from No. 2 platoon, A Company, to be platoon sergeant of the new platoon in B Company, while Sergt. Jack Playford, just back from the front, is transferred from No. 3 platoon as platoon sergeant of No. 2. The organization of No. 7 platoon has resulted in a number of promotions which were announced yesterday in orders as follows:

To be Sergeants—
Lance Sergt. Brown for No. 1 platoon.
Corp. J. O'Brien for No. 7 platoon.

To be Lance Sergeants—
Corp. A. Rutter for No. 1 platoon.
Corp. G. Coleman for No. 3 platoon.

To be Corporals—
Lance Corporal E. Laing for No. 2 platoon.
Lance Corporal Mantey for No. 3 platoon.
Lance Corporal Mahood for No. 3 platoon.
Lance Corporal G. Lockie for No. 7 platoon.
Lance Corporal R. White for No. 6 platoon.

To be Lance Corporals—
Pte. J. Jr. Moore for No. 1 platoon.
Pte. H. Norman for No. 2 platoon.
Pte. L. H. Elliott for No. 7 platoon.
Pte. W. Conners for No. 3 platoon.
Pte. Geo. Edwards for No. 3 platoon.
Pte. G. Davis for No. 7 platoon.
Pte. S. Montgomery for No. 2 platoon.

The following clipping from the Quebec Chronicle will be of interest to many Peterborough people, as there are a number of Peterborough boys with the 2nd Pioneer Battalion. Among them are the following:

Percy Grimes, Alex. Gillespie, Norman Irwin, John Kylie, Eddie Guerin, Walter Irwin, Preston Armstrong, Frank W. Nelson.

The regiment of Pioneers which is now stationed at Quebec for a short time is earning golden opinions from the general public. Not only are the men of splendid physique, but mentally and morally also they appear to be of a very high standard. Thousands of troops have passed through this city since the beginning of the war, and though there have been some fine regiments here, there were generally one or two black sheep in their ranks who got into trouble. The Pioneers seem to be a happy exception for they seem to have no black sheep at all, and, to the best of our knowledge, not a single serious complaint has yet been voiced against any of them. In fact, there seems to be nothing but praise for the manner in which they behave themselves. As to efficiency, also, officers, N.C.O.'s and men, all alike, seem to have little to fear, on that score, and the earnest manner in which they are preparing for service indicates that they fully realise the gravity of the work which lies before them, and are determined to "make good" when the hour comes.

The Pioneers have made a good reputation here, a reputation to live up to, and Colonel Davis may well be proud of his battalion. The citizens of the Ancient Capital will regret that its stay here must be so short and many of them would have liked to see it still quartered here for Christmas. Duty calls, however, and the Pioneers must obey. But their future progress will be followed with interest.

Major G. S. Cameron, A.M.C., lectured to the band and four members of each platoon of the 93rd Battalion this morning on first aid work.

Sergt. Jim Hawthorne and Gunner Jack Miller, Peterborough members of the 33rd Battery, have transferred from the battery to the 93rd Battalion and reported for duty this morning.

Uniforms are being issued to the new recruits of the 93rd Battalion to-day, a fresh supply of clothing having arrived in the quartermaster's stores.

Capt. Swaine, Musketry Instructor, and Musketry Instructor Goodhouse of the headquarters staff, are here to-day to arrange a course of musketry instruction for the 93rd Battalion. Lectures on musketry will be given to the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the battalion.

Bandsmen Payton, Walne, Badley and Brooks of the 93rd Band, who accompanied the Salvation Army Songsters to Lindsay and Fenelon Falls, returned at noon to-day.

The Examiner has received the following letter:

Dear Sir,—Would you mind putting this in your column about the soldiers that have joined the army. They were to get 1 dollar and 10 cents a day when they went into barracks. Why are they getting only 60 cents a day when they were sworn in at 1 dollar and 10 cents a day? I remain,

Your truly,
SOLDIER'S WIFE.

"Soldier's Wife" has evidently been misled by an extract in the 93rd orders yesterday in regard to subsistence pay. The pay of the private of the Canadian Expeditionary Force is now, as always, $1.10 per day. The order that deceived "Soldier's Wife" referred to the extra pay that is paid by the government to soldiers who are not in barracks, in lieu of board and lodging. In cases where soldiers are billeted out, single men are now paid 60c. a day and married men 85c. a day, in addition to their regular pay and field allowance of $1.10 per day. Peterborough's soldiers now in barracks, of course do not get this subsistence pay, but they do get the regular $1.10.—Editor.

To-day is a rather busy one for the 93rd Battalion, as three marchouts are scheduled. This afternoon the battalion acted as an escort to Lt.-Col. Mills on his arrival from the front. To-night at 7:45 the battalion and band will march to the Grand Opera House to open the patriotic meeting. They will then return to the Armouries and march down to the station with the battery draft from the 33rd Battery, which is leaving to-night on the 9 o'clock G.T.R. train.

Sergeant Cook Wride and Lance-Corp J. Bath, of the 93rd Battalion, left to-day for Kingston to take a course in the school of military cookery.

There was a typographical error in the letter from Drive Morris Montgomery which appeared in last evening's Examiner. Driver Montgomery's brother who enlisted in England, joined the Horse Guards and not the "Home" Guards.

Hatpins have been invented in England with flexible points that can be returned into a hat after passing through it.

TEN TO ONE IS ODDS AT LLOYD'S AGAINST WAR LASTING YEAR

Eight to One, is Odds Against Soldier's Death—Three to One Against Ferdinand

LONDON, Dec. 7. — Three to one against King Ferdinand being on the throne by June, 1916.

Eight to one against the British soldier being killed in battle.

Ten to one against the war lasting beyond December, 1916.

These are some of the most interesting of the war risks which Lloyd's are covering. The curious thing about the insurance being effected on the Bulgarian throne is that since Tuesday a week ago when the underwriters accepted the first policy, the market has steadily risen against the public. The rate started at £5 5s per cent., or 20 to 1, and to-day is 35 guineas, or seven times as great. In other words, a shade under 3 to 1.

It is necessary to explain, however, that the tremendous hardening of the rate does not indicate any change in the underwriters' opinion that the risk insured against is small, but rather the limit of the underwriters' circle prepared to take on such highly speculative business, coupled with the pressure of demands for policies. Up to date the underwriters stand to lose $10,000, which shows that they have ony accepted a few policies. To put the position in simple terms, on Tuesday a week ago by paying £5 5s you entitle yourself to receive $500 if King Ferdinand was still czar of Sofia to-day; to receive that same $500 you must pay 35 guineas.

An underwriter remarked that the rate opened so small simply to encourage business, and that as business came in it was bound to increase to give the underwriters a chance. The people who have taken out these policies on the Bulgarian throne are business men with interests in Bulgaria. If King Ferdinand remains czar they stand to lose very heavily, and this wagering on his continuance in power is one way of compensating themselves if the worst happens.

Underwriters Losing on End of War Bets.

The peace betting at Lloyd's was much more vigorous in the early summer than it is to-day, and the reason appears to be that people have been too much occupied with more substantial war risks, such as insuring against aircraft bombardment and losses at sea. The underwriters accepted most policies providing for a total loss claim should the war be still on by the end of the year, and they are not very sanguine about escaping paying out. The betting against the continuance of the war after this month has been but three to one, and policies involving payments of as much as $15,000 have been taken out.

To-day what peace insurance policies are being taken out have the long odds of ten to one. You pay $50, and if the war is still on by December, 1916, you receive $500. It seems a safe risk for the underwriters, but shrewd business men are prepared to take the risk at the odds.

The life insurance companies very generously agreed in the case of an insured person not to charge him any more for the risk of death on the field of battle in the event of his joining the army. Where new business was transacted however, they demanded an extra twelve guineas per cent. beyond the ordinary premium. They are, therefore, laying eight to one against the ordinary policyholder being killed in the war. The risk certainly favours the insurance companies, for of a thousand men who go to the war only ten per cent. are killed. Taking the British army in the field as 1 million the killed, who work out at a hundred thousand represent just one in ten.

Lattery insurance comapnies have not shown much disposition to accept new business involving this war risk. They are rather concerned about the possible introduction of conscription, which would involve hundreds of thousands more of their clients, and it is possible in that event they would approach the government with the idea of devising some co-operative system.

Canadian Guns Were in Corner

After being surrounded for some time the Battery was able to get hold of four horses and the guns were removed, one at a time. Previous attempts to remove the guns were unsuccessful as the horses were shot down faster than they could be brought up. Sergt. Allen thinks that the men who brought up the four horses mentioned were deserving of the Distinguished Conduct Medal. They accomplished their purpose under a very severe rifle fire.

Artillery Concentrated.

Eight days later, Sergt. Allen was wounded. At this time the entire Canadian Artillery Brigade, comprising about eight guns, was concentrated at a point near Ypres. Barricades were erected on all four sides to protect the men. Under ordinary conditions barricades would have been erected on three sides, leaving the rear open. On April 30th Sergeant Allen had almost concluded the task of caring for a wounded man when a high explosive shell burst overhead. Sergt. Allen was struck in the back, while his companion suffered a broken arm, leg, and other severe injuries. The latter died on the way to the hospital.

Gunner W. G. Graham is another Peterborough boy who is with the 10th Battery. The latter was well when Sergt. Allen last saw him.

Sergt. Allen, who was a member of the executive of the Choral Society, will be given a welcome home by the members of the Society to-night.

UNITED STATES NAVY LACKING TORPEDOES

Member of Naval Committee Somewhat Startles His Confreres by Statement.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—Lack of torpedoes presents as startling a weakness in the defence of the United States as the lack of ships. This statement was made by Fred A. Britten of Chicago, of the House Committee on Naval Affairs.

"It is imperative," he said, "that our supply of torpedoes be given immediate attention. Two years ago we had only 750 torpedoes. Now we have about 1,000, only two for each battleship tube.

"We are now testing a new torpedo," he added.

"On the nose is a cup-like depression which causes the shell to dive the minute it strikes the water. The contact lights a fuse which explodes the shell after it has travelled 100 yards. It will also explode if it strikes a ship.

"The purpose is to get at the ship under the water-line, its weakest parts. The tests have been very satisfactory."

BERNSTORFF NEXT TO BE THROWN OUT

London Papers Mildly Discuss Attaches' Dismissal.

LONDON, Dec. 7. — Gratification that "Germany's diplomacy has been officially condemned," as The Evening Standard puts it, is the keynote of the brief references in the London evening newspapers to the request of the Washington Government for the recall of Capt. Boy-Ed and Capt. Von Papen, the naval and military attaches respectively of the German Embassy in the United States.

The Evening Standard suggests that the next chapter may concern Ambassador Bernstorff himself. It hopes that meanwhile President Wilson will reflect upon the bearing of these incidents upon his correspondence with this country.

The Pall Mall Gazette thinks the recent trial in New York will open the eyes of the Americans to the real nature of the German campaign being carried on in their midst and to the fact of its being conducted with the active connivance of the German Government.

The Globe contends that the United States Government could not have done less than request the recall of the attaches if Washington was to maintain any shadow of the neutrality upon which President Wilson's administration prides itself. The Globe concludes that the evidence against Capt. Boy-Ed and Capt. Von Papen is so overwhelming that "Germany can do nothing but accept the snub with what grace she may."

WILSON AND BRIDE GET THOUSAND ACRES

Arkansans to Present an Ideal Hunting Preserve Through Senator Clarke.

EARLE, Ark., Dec. 7.—One thousand acres of land will be presented to President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt as a wedding gift by an organization of large land owners of this section. The donors met and unanimously voted to make the present and to have the land deeded to both the president and the future Mrs. Wilson.

The land faces the Mississippi River on one side and the St. Francis River on the other. It is well protected by a levee system. It is an ideal location for a hunting preserve.

United States Senator James J. Clarke has been chosen to carry the deed to Washington.

BIG FIRE AT ST. CATHARINES

Flour Mills of Maple Leaf Milling Company Destroyed

Examiner Special:

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Dec. 7. — One of the most disastrous fires in the history of St. Catharines occurred this morning, when the Maple Leaf Milling Company's extensive flour mills were totally destroyed at a loss of between three and four hundred thousand dollars. The fire started down in the sifting room and spread with alarming rapidity all through the mill. The cause of the fire is a mystery, but there are many suspicions in view of the fact that the company has been sending thousands of barrels of flour to the allies.

The loss is fully covered by insurance.

NOTES ON THE BIG PATRIOTIC FUND CAMPAIGN

the campaign shall be in early and not interfere too much with the day's getting out of the paper on time.

Team captains and team-mates will assemble at headquarters this evening at 8:30. Get supper. Do a couple of hours' work and then those who may be spared will attend the big meeting in the Opera House. Few can be spared, for there is much to do. And do it at the jump. If you are in the work come along. You are needed and welcome.

The fine civic grant has put heart in the committee. With $30,000 to build on the rest will come. Then Peterborough will have a red spot on the map as doing its fair share in the good work. After all look at it in a reasonable way. On an assessment of $1,500,00, which would cover that of many a workman's home, the total levy would only amount to $8.00. That sum for the defence of the Empire. But it is only fair to say that for the merchants on the street there is a feeling that with increasing taxes and municipal improvements the Patriotic Fund grant will bear with some seriousness. Still that is a part of the sacrifice. If all take up the burden of the war so well as the merchant, we will be out of the woods before the boys and girls in the kindergarten are ready to marry. That is some time yet.

"The White Feather"

At the Grand To-morrow

Seats for "The White Feather" engagement at the Grand Opera House to-morrow evening are meeting with an unusually heavy demand, and the chances are that there won't be a vacant seat when this sensational success comes to town. "The White Feather" is a play based on the present European war without any actual war in it, being the story of a man who stayed at home and gained the approbrium of his sweetheart and friends. But really he is a representative of the British War Office, instructed to uncover German secret service agents seeking the promotion of a submarine attack upon the English coast. In the end he wins back his lady love and gains the graceful regard of his King and country. A specially imported company of English players, picked from the leading theatres of London and Manchester, has been provided by William A. Brady, Ltd., for the Canadian tour. It includes Albert Brown, a very brilliant young actor, who will be seen in his inimitable creation of the role of Brent. This is not a moving picture.

Several types of electric automobile lamps have been invented that are furnished with current by individual dry batteries.

By-law to People For Purchase Of Exhibition Grounds By City

Ald. Green Satisfied With Use of Park For a Period of Years But Not Permanently—Favoured Purchase of Crawford's Grove Property—Other Opinions.

The Council last night decided to present to the electors on Jan. 3rd a by-law authorizing the issuing of debentures to the amount of $30,000, for the purchasing of the Exhibition grounds.

In presenting the preliminary by-law for its first reading, Ald. Green said he would oppose it in its second reading. He was presenting simply because it had been placed on his desk.

In the second reading he said he was a member of the committee which recently examined four different alternative properties. One of them was the Crawford's Grove land which he believed could be bought at far less than $18,000 and could be fenced and put into shape for $18,000. It was the first time he had seen them and he had been greatly impressed by their possibilities as a public park. Ald. Green moved that the by-law be worded not to designate any particular grounds, but merely mention that the $30,000 be expended on grounds for exhibition purposes.

City Solicitor Gordon gave it as his advice that a by-law could not be presented without clearly defining the property to be purchased.

Ald. Duffus supported the purchase of the present Exhibition grounds, saying it was a duty to submit the by-law and enable, thereby, the people to say whether they want to buy these grounds or not. If it is turned down there will still be 18 months to consider other properties and submit another by-law to the people.

Ald. Edgar said he was in favour of the Exhibition grounds, but he could not support the purchase of the present grounds.

Ald. Langford agreed with Ald. Duffus.

Mayor Buller pointed out that the Exhibition directors could not expect to go to Crawford's Grove and attract crowds there for a number of years at least. Neither could the Street Railway provide transportation for a few days' fair.

Ald. Green further added that he wished to do nothing that would injure the Peterborough Exhibition. There were restrictions to the purchase of the present grounds; they had to be used only for Exhibition purposes. This might be a satisfactory condition for the next ten years, but after that the existence of the park would be a detriment to the district surrounding it.

The Crawford's Grove property, on the other hand, would make not only an ideal Fair grounds, but a splendid river park.

By a vote of eight to two the Council's by-law carried in its second reading, those opposing it being Aldermen Green and Edgar.

Ald. Green made it clear that his opposition was directed not to the Exhibition itself, but to the retention of the present ground as a permanent Exhibition park.

"The Story of The Telegraph"

Subject of Interesting Illustrated Lecture at the T. A. S. Rooms Last Evening

Mr. W. G. Barber, District Superintendent of the G.N.W. Telegraph Co., of Canada, Toronto, assisted by Mr. O. C. Chalk, entertained the members of the T.A.S. last evening in the T.A.S. rooms with the illustrated lecture, "The Story of the Telegraph." An audience of about five hundred were present. Enthusiasm ran high, and the lecture and slides were greatly enjoyed by all.

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

Dark Parts of Grain Keep Blood Non-Acid.

The dark parts of the grains contain valuable saline matters which every human system requires to keep the blood non-acid. Highly refined cereals do not contain these dark parts of the grains, but a whole grain food such as Roman Meal does.

Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is a dark-coloured cereal because the dark parts of the grains are not removed. It is rich in saline matters, highly nutritious, and a perfect health food. It prevents indigestion, and relieves constipation or your money back.

Follow directions on package closely, and Do NOT stir while cooking porridge or you spoil it.

Sold by grocers at 10c. and 25c.

MINOR ITEMS FROM COUNCIL

Wants Four Months' Leave.

J. C. Matcheet, teamster under the Board of Works, asked for four months leave of absence, from Dec. 1st to March 31st, both days included.—Referred to Board of Works.

Ald Weir complained that the East City water trough has not yet been put into condition. Mayor Buller said the Engineer would look after it.

Accepted Reduced Bond.

Ald. Green reported that the Standard Paving Co. had forwarded their bond for $8,000 to cover the contract of $42,000. The rate was 20 p.c., which would require the bond to be $8,400. The Council decided to accept the former amount since it so nearly approached the actual sum required.

Sewers Approved.

Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Provincial Officer of Health, forwarded a certificate of approval of sewers on the following streets:

Robinson street—Rogers to G.T.R.
Victoria street—Reid to Downie.
Aylmer street—Lake to Westcott.

THE SANITARY INSPECTOR'S PROBLEM IN ECONOMICS

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, Sanitary Inspector, wrote that in deference to Council's resolution requiring him to become a ratepayer he had done so. The step had cost him a loss of $500, and his annual expenditure will be increased by about the same amount. "I respectfully ask you, gentlemen, to find a solution to the following mathematical problem, which I cannot solve: 'If a man saves nothing out of a salary of $700 per annum, how much will he save out of the same salary when his expenses are increased $500?'"

$5,037.21 IS CITY'S ANNUAL BILL FROM THE COUNTY

The city's share toward the cost of administration of justice in the county, upkeep of the jail, etc., for 1915, was fixed by arbitration at $5,037.21 to be paid Dec. 31st, 1915 and for each of the years 1916-17-18-19, the same amount is to be paid quarterly.

In the arbitration proceedings, Mr. W. H. Moore represented the city and Mr. W. H. Casement of Lakefield, the county. They also decided that the expenses of the arbitration should be equally apportioned between the city and the county as follows:

Fees of two arbiters.....	$300
E. M. Elliott's remuneration.....	50
Total	$350

If the county pays the whole of these expenses the city is required to pay one-half thereof to the county on demand.

Pay the Bond Holders.

Under date of November 20, City Solicitor Gordon wrote that he had been served with a notice of motion for the payment of $100,000 to the bond holders of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. He had found no encumbrances since the expropriation. He suggested that the money be paid out of court by an order, thereby saving considerable interest rate which the city is paying on debentures and also on the award. He believed it the best course to allow the money to be paid out to both the trustees of the debenture holders and the Power Co. He would incorporate in the order if possible a provision that if there is a deduction of the amount of the award, there should be paid to the city the amount of such deductions.

Mr. Gordon wrote on November 25 that a motion brought in Toronto by the Company and the Bond Holders solicitors was adojurned until the appeal comes up in the Court of Appeal.

The arrangement is, however, that the moneys are to be paid out of Court to the Company, on the undertaking of the trustees and the Company that if the award is reduced such amounts are to be forthwith paid to the city with accrued interest. Mr. Gordon said he was anxious that this money be paid out without further delay, as the city now has possession of the plant and it has not been encumbered.

The Council endorsed the Solicitor's suggestion.

$75 to the Poultry Men.

Jas. T. C. Lang, secretary of the Peterborough Poultry Association, wrote, asking the Council to make the usual grant. At the annaul poultry show the entries have increased from 650 to 1,650. On motion of Ald. Green, seconded by Ald. Duffus, the usual grant of $75 was given.

Notes From R. Mitchell.

R. Mitchell, writing on behalf of the Trades and Labour Council, urged that the hour for municipal nominations be changed from noon until 7 p.m. for "the convenience of the great majority of citizens," and that it be followed by a public meeting.

"The Trades and Labour Council believe that there are many men unemployed at present who could efficiently fill the positions of returning officers and poll clerks, and urges upon the City Council to as far as possible give the preference to unemployed men in the forthcoming elections.

Ald. McIntyre moved, seconded by Ald. Langford, that the aldermanic nominations be held at 7.30 p.m.

Ald. Saunders moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Edgar, that the nomination hour remain the same. The motion was lost.

City Solicitor Gordon explained that the nominations for Mayor required to be held at noon, and the Council felt that the aldermanic nomination hour need not be changed as there was nothing to prevent the citizens from holding a public meeting in the evening.

Question of Trees.

On motion of Ald Green, permission was given to remove a tree from in front of 384 Dublin street.

Ald. Green reported that on Parnell street Mr. D. Henry's three trees which he did not wish removed, were on the north side of the street, near the corner of Park street. Ald. Duffus said they would not shut out the light from the arc lamp at the south corner, but Ald. Edgar observed that Ald. Duffus had not seen them in full foliage.

Ald. Saunders moved, seconded by Ald. Stratton, that the trees be left as they are.—Carried.

Council Demands That Garbage Collector Reside Within City

Ald. McIntyre Considers Consistency a Costly Commodity and Believes Citizens Would Endorse the Committee's Report.

The garbage collecting contract for 1916 is still in the air. E. K. Graham of North Monaghan, the present contractor, was recommended by the Property Committee, his price being $6,250, but some of the aldermen last night frowned upon the fact of his suburban residence.

Ald. Stratton reminded the Council of its former decision that civic employees should be city taxpayers, and to be consistent, since Mr. Spence was forced to move into the city, the garbage collector should be treated in the same manner.

Ald. Edgar pointed out that North Monaghan recently announced that no city teams need apply for township work.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Edgar, that the Property Committee's report be referred back in order that a city resident could be engaged as contractor.

Ald. McIntyre had a come-back. The tenders had been received, and J. Blodgett, a city man, was awarded the contract at $5,998, but later reneged. E. K. Graham's price was $6,250, and A. B. Downer's was $8,980. Both these men lived outside the city. The next figure was $11,208. Ald. McIntyre claimed that the labour men of the city would not wish to pay a double price for the collection of garbage merely because the contractor was a non-resident.

Mayor Butler added that Mr. Graham had resided in the city, but moved outside at the request of ratepayers who did not want the garbage wagons too near. His Worship advised that Mr. Graham get a moving van for a residence, thereby permitting him to conveniently move in and out of the city with the changing wishes of ratepayers.

Ald. Duffus moved, seconded by Ald. Evans, that the question be referred to the committee, who would meet Mr. Graham before taking other action.

A tie vote followed, which Mayor Butler broke by supporting the latter amendment.

SHORT EVERY-DAY PRAYER SERVICES

The explosion of the boiler of the heating plant of W. J. Greey Manufacturing Works, Toronto, yesterday morning, drew attention to a remarkable fact in industrial life. That is this: For the past two years the employees of the factory have met for prayer during the first quarter of an hour of the day's work, and they were thus employed when the accident happened. This meeting together has not been compulsory, but it is recognised by the firm—the men's time is paid for by the owners of the factory; and the great majority of the operatives attend regularly. Short addresses are made by well-known clergymen, but the chief part of the service is prayer and intercession.

It may not be known, or if it is known, forgotten, that in Peterborough a similar short service has been conducted every work-day afternoon in connection with the different needs of the war for the past three months. Several laymen of the Church make themselves responsible for the services, which are quite informal and distinct from the ordinary Church of England service, and can be readily joined by any church man or woman.

During the cold weather the service is held in the upper vestry, fitted up as a chapel. The service, held at 5.15 p.m., is a quietly devotional one, and those who have been attending have been deeply interested. Others who learn of it may be glad to do their part towards a real empire undertaking which may have untold value.

SERBIAN WOMEN FIGHT FOR DEFENCE OF HOME

Aged Men and Children Turn On Bulgarians with Bombs

BUDAPEST.—The president of the Bulgarian Sobranje, Dr. Momchiloff, who spent several days with the Bulgarian forces at the front, gives an account of his experiences in Serbia to M. Adorjan, a Hungarian journalist in Sofia.

"In the Serbian trenches," says Dr. Momchiloff, "our soldiers found a great many women, children, and aged men, who are being used as bomb-throwers, and are quite experienced in hand grenade work. The Serbian civilian population are taking a share in the struggle in an even more desperate manner than the active soldiers. There was not one Serbian village where Bulgarian soldiers entered—outside Macedonia—where the civilians, women and children alike, did not receive them with bombs and hand grenades, of which great numbers have been found in almost every Serbian house.

"In many cases the Bulgarian soldiers were obliged to annihilate whole villages, together with their civil population, for, after having surrounded them and seemingly brought them to surrender, bombs and grenades were hurled at the invading forces. How desperate the Serbian officers are and how every one of them is prepared to die is proved by the fact that not infrequently Serbian officers, having been taken prisoners, suddenly produced bombs and threw them at their captors.

"This kind of fighting is even more desperate than were the wars of olden times on the Balkans. In Macedonia the opposition is not so desperate, and the civil population does not take part in the fighting."

BERLIN, Via Wireless, Dec. 7.—The position of the British at the Dardanelles grows more perilous every day, Constantinople reports said to-day. Owing to the stormy weather winter provisions cannot be landed and the troops are suffering from lack of water.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—A Bulgarian infantry regiment mutineed when ordered to the Gallipoli Peninsula, according to an unconfirmed report telegraphed here by the Amsterdam correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph. Three hundred of the Bulgarians were reported shot.

Bad Fire On George Street

At two twenty-six o'clock this morning, fire was discovered in the basement of Reid's store, 393 George street. An alarm was turned in from the corner of George and Simcoe streets by one of the night policemen. When the firemen arrived, the fire had gained considerable headway and was eating its way up the stairway at the rear of the store. A line of hose was laid at the rear and front of the building. At the end of an hour the fire was under control. Fire Chief Howard estimates the damage to the building at about five hundred dollars. The damage to the stock, which consists of ladies' ready-to-wear goods, will amount to several thousand dollars.

The fire is thought to have originated from the furnace in the basement.

Is Going to Toronto

ST. THOMAS, Dec. 6. — R. J. Colville, General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, St. Thomas, has resigned to become office secretary and cashier of the Central Y.M.C.A., Toronto.

Mr. Colville was for eight or ten years General Secretary of the West End Y. M. C. A., Toronto, but left some sixteen years ago to take a position in the United States. For the past six years he has been at St. Thomas.

At one time Mr. Colville was prominently connected with the Y. M. C. A. here.

DIED.

SANDERSON—Tuesday, December 7th, 1915, Hazel, eldest daughter of Mrs. W. A. Sanderson.

Funeral will be private and will be held from the family residence, 220 Brock street, on Wednesday, December 8th at two-thirty o'clock to Little Lake cemetery.

Christmas Greeting From the Citizens to Peterboro' Lads in Camp

A specially designed Christmas card and message to all the Peterborough boys at the front and in military camps outside Peterborough, will be sent immediately by the Council as a greeting from the citizens. One hundred dollars from the Legal Committee's appropriation was set aside last night for this purpose.

The sympathy of the Council was extended by Alderman Stratton and Mayor Butler to Alderman Weir last night in the recent death of Mrs. Weir.

Alderman McIntyre stated that he thought it time some increase was made in Sanitary Inspector Spence's salary. The least this official was worth to the city was $1,600.

Aldermen Duffus and Green moved that steps be taken to send Mrs. Beavis to her son in London, and Alderman Edgar added that a letter be forwarded to Private Beavis from the citizens.

The Christmas market will be held on Friday, December 24th. The Market Clerk requests both farmers and citizens to remember this.

The Council granted $30 a month from December 1st until May 1st to Adjt. McElhiney for the maintenance of the Refuge Home at the corner of Simcoe and Aylmer streets. He gave an account of the work it has been doing, a work of which the average citizen hears little about.

The Council's note to the Legislature recommending an increase poll tax to $3 was acknowledged by the Premier, and will receive consideration.

City Engineer Parsons told the Council that he has received very few applications for work, and besides there was no civic work doing just now.

MANY SIGNS OF A BIG BATTLE

That is Expected on the Western Front—Troops and Guns Have Been Pouring into France and Belgium

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The Daily Mail's Rotterdam correspondent telegraphs:

"There are numerous signs and rumours of a big battle shortly expected on the western front. Whether Germany will take the initiative or whether her general staff is taking precautions against an allied offensive is difficult to say.

"Troops and guns have been pouring into France and Belgium for more than a week. All messages from the frontier agree on the main fact that large reinforcements have reached the German western army, while reports of heavy artillery actions and great aeroplane activity are coming in.

"Long lines of troops continue to arrive at Ghent. Newspapers from the south and west of Germany arrived here to-day, nearly a fortnight late. This may mean the concentration of troops is finished. Among leading Germans in Holland there is a feeling of keen expectation combined with an air of mystery. The Dutch Admiralty has forbidden lights in houses on the coast overlooking the Scheldt and the North Sea."

ENGLISH WORDS ARE BANNED IN GERMANY

French and American Terms Also Being Eliminated From Language by Experts.

In order to eliminate all foreign words from the German language a special committee, under Dr. Lehmann, is holding daily sessions in Berlin. This committee is considering carefully every American, English and French word that has become affiliated with the German, and in its place is giving the German term, which is hereafter to be used. At a recent session there was considerable discussion over the word "monogram," and it was finally determined to let it stand.

The word "automobile" is banned, and in its stead "kraftwagen" is to be used. "Garage" is replaced by "kraftwagenhalle" or "kraftwagenstand."

"Eau de Cologne" is to be "Koninisches Wasser." It is no longer permitted to say "American bar," but "Amerikanische schaukstube," and "American drinks" will be "Amerikanische getrake." The French word "billiard" is changed to "billjard". The word "etablissement" so universally used in the shops of Berlin, has been stricken from the vocabulary, and Germans in future will say "wirtschaftsunternehmen."

When it came to the word "hotel" the committee was not entirely in accord regarding its elimination. It was resolved, however, to suggest to hotel proprietors that the German words "haus" or "hof" would be more desirable.

Appeal Dismissed With Costs

Boukydis vs. Pappas—D. O'Connell (Peterborough) for defendant. G. H. Shaver for plaintiff. Appeal by defendant from judgment of County Court of York of November 8, 1915. Action to recover $451.30, amount of cheque alleged to have been given to plaintiff by defendant. At a trial a judgment was given plaintiff for amount sued on with costs. Appeal dismissed with costs.

COME AND HEAR THE GREAT STORY OF HOW TO HELP

THE WORLD OF SPORT

PRESIDENT OF O.H.A. IS WITH 146th REGIMENT

KINGSTON, Dec. 7. — James T. Sutherland, President-elect of the O. H. A. will very shortly appear in khaki for overseas service. He will be Quartermaster of the 146th Battalion, being recruited in Kingston and Frontenac county, by Lieut.-Col. Chas. A. Low.

Mr. Sutherland qaulified at the provisional school of infantry at Barriefield camp and will have the rank of Captain.

TWO BELLEVILLE TEAMS FOR O.H.A.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 7.—Junior and intermediate teams from this city will be entered in the O.H.A. this season. Some excellent players stationed here with the 80th Battalion will play with the teams.

Officers have been elected as follows: Hon. President, Senator H. Corby; Patrons, E. Gus Porter, K.C., M.P., J. W. Johnston, M.P.P., W. B. Deacon, Mayor W. H. Panter, S. E. Carman and Dr. H. A. Yeomans; President, D. A. Cameron, Vice-Presi-McFee; Manager of Juniors, W. D. M. Shorey; Manager of Intermediates, B. Shorey.

BUSINESS AS USUAL FOR CANUCK LEAGUE

TORONTO, Dec. 4.— There was no inclination on the part of the Canadian League club owners at the annual meeting at the Bay Tree Hotel yesterday to throw up their hands and suspend operations in 1916. Far from that, the owners, while admitting losses last season, stated their preparedness to go ahead again next season and accept another financial loss if necessary in the interests of the circuit.

President James P. Fitzgerald was re-elected and will be the chief Executive of the league for the fourth consecutive year.

The league finances are in splendid shape, with every dollar of indebtedness paid off.

Peterborough and Toronto were granted the same privileges of suspending their franchises for another year as they had this year.

HOCKEY

Toronto Mail and Empire: The 40th battery which is stationed here, promises to cut a big swath in senior hockey this season. They had out Conny Smythe of last year's Varsity juniors; "Mawk" McKenzie the former T.R., and A. A. forward; Lovering, Jupp and Ken McNab of Orillia; Butterfield, Corbould, Harvey and McDonald of Orillia are also available, but were unable to attend last night. In addition they had out Lavigne of Midland, Plant, Cook and Wilkinson of Brantford; Connors, of Hamilton Rowing Club. Jack Gooch, who captained the Victorias last year in the senior O.H.A. is at Kingston taking a course but is expected here shortly along with Harvey and Corbould. For goal they have Laughlin, who played for St. Paul's, and James of Peterboro. Pothlak of Peterboro is also available as the new rule that the O.H.A. passed reinstating suspended players certainly worked good for the 40th battery, as it lets them have Jack Gooch of the Victorias, James and Pothlak of Peterboro.

The Overseas Hockey Club of London, is the name under which the team composed of the players from the 70th Batt., 33rd (Middlesex), and the 142nd (London) Battalions, will play this winter in the O. H. A. One well known O.H.A. player that will be with the Overseas Club is Lieut. "Dickey" Lemour of the 70th Battalion, formerly of Sarnia.

Fred Kelly, the speedy left wing of the Peterboro team for several years, is now living in London and may play there this season. Another how comes to London is Nash of Winnipeg.—Toronto Star.

Sarnia will be represented in the junior series of the O.H.A. this winter by two teams, of the St. George's and the Sarnia juniors.

Corporal Fred B. Denison, of Peterboro, formerly of Toronto Riversides, says the Toronto Star in writing to a member of the Riversides from Bramshott Camp, in England, says: "This is a far better game than hockey. Good luck to all the boys." Denny made a host of friends while in Toronto, and they all wish him a safe return.

Captain Wilbert Beatty, the fast right wing of the Midland team for several years, was in the city on Saturday. Capt. Beatty has been sailing one of the Canada Line steamers out of Toronto the past summer, and after he lays up his boat here he will again attend the Nautical School this winter. Incidentally Beatty may play with one of the local senior teams, but with which one he has not decided.

The Sarnia Intermediates should have a strong team this season. They have Joe Dwyer, the former Peterboro boy, in goal, Greenaway and McCort for the defence: Hillman, an Ottawa Valley League star; Pinch, a Bunso boy; Cowan, Dodd, McLellan, and several others from which to select their forward line.

The veteran "Dinner" Smith will manage the Whitby Intermediates this season. Artie Blanchard will be an absentee from the old guard this season, Smith and Brown enlisted, are quartered at Kingston. Among the new players will be Little, formerly of Guelph; Beaton, of Markham; and Clarence Rice, last year with Trinity College School. Frank Rice, the crack centre player, will also turn out again this season.—Toronto Star.

SHOOTING AT ALLIES' PARLOURS

C. Wood and E. Symes were the prize winners at the shooting competitions held in the Allies Shooting Parlours, Saturday night, the former taking the turkey in the scoring at the paper target, while Symes won the box of 50 Irving cigars and a pipe for his work at the Kaiser and the rabbits.

As is indicated by the scores, there was all kinds of excitement, and a big crowd watched the competitions.

At the paper target—C. Wood, 75; E. Symes, 73.

Shoot-off—C. Wood, 71; E. Symes, 69.

Prizes for Soldiers.

Mr. Yeates will give three prizes, for the soldiers only, for competition among the different platoons. Three other prizes will be given for civilian competitors.

Council Gives $20,000, etc.

over $70,000 of which was cash. Hamilton was asked to give $400,000, and over half a million dollars was turned in; Chatham gave $78,000, of which $30,000 was from the Council; Galt gave $60,000; Wentworth County Council raised its grant of $2,000 a month to $4,000; Huron County is giving $6,000 a month; and the town of Goderich in that county has given $15,000; Lambton County Council decided to give $5,000 a month for the next year; Stratford gave $50,000.

All these are recent contributions to what might be called the replenishing of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and illustrate the generosity which has been manifested throughout the western peninsula of the province. But Mr. Rean said that this same spirit must be shown in every hamlet, town, and city in the country if the Fund is to be successfully maintained. Fifty thousand dollars from Peterborough will not take care of more than the city's own soldiers.

Ald. Stratton, Ald. Green, and Ald. Langford voted against the motion moved by Ald. Dobbin and seconded by Ald. Evans that the city's contribution be $20,000.

Ald. Langford proposed a contribution of $11,000 equal to one mill on the dollar; Ald. Green favoured $1,000 a month, supplemented by the Council next year if the general contribution did not realize a satisfactory amount.

Ald. Stratton, as Finance Minister, thought $20,000 was a little too large a sum. He advocated a mill or one and one-half mills, which could be be increased if the committee did not meet with a hearty response.

An Inspiring Letter.

Before the vote was taken, Ald. Duffus read the following letter:

London, England.

Mr. Geo. Beavis,

Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Beavis,

Allow me to congratulate you on having such a brave and honourable son. He is a noble young fellow; I knew him in Western Canada, and little I thought I should ever be in a position that I am in now. Your son and I quarrelled in Canada, but where he showed the man was when I lay on the field with both legs off and he lying beside me on a good stretcher, and mine was no good, and when he was going to be taken out then I was to be left to be taken prisoner by the Germans. He said he should not go; he got off his stretcher and gave it to me saying: "You are a married man with a family and I am not; so you must be taken out."

Sir, the Germans were advancing on us and I was to be taken out and your dear son was left to die or be taken prisoner. Oh, if I was only half the man he was! I believe the poor, dear fellow has been rather badly treated by the Germans while a prisoner; but I knew he was a brave boy, and he certainly was, for he escaped, and brought nine others with him. I thought it my duty, as I owe my life to him, to write you and thank you, although I have not seen him yet, because I am in hospital myself.

Hoping you will have him home soon,—I remain,

Yours respectfully,

G. C. Warner, Captain.

P.S.—Sir, you are his father. Well your son taught me what it was to be a man and to be brave and I know he will be brave right to the end; and to be it, will be the death of a gallant gentleman whose only motive was that he loved his fellow-man and King and Country more than himself. Oh, sir, it makes me cry when I think of it. I should like some of the people of Canada to know what a man means.

G. C. Warner, Captain.

Adjt. McElhinney applied the torch to the patriotic enthusiasm of the gathering by calling for three cheers and a tiger for Beavis; and they were real lusty cheers.

When the Council gave a majority in favour of the $20,000 contribution th deputation and Council rose and sang "God Save the King."

BULK OF SERBIAN ARMY IS INTACT

PARIS, Dec. 5.— The Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following:

"It is reported from Florina (Greece) that the Serbians have sent a number of battalions to occupy the village of Ljuk, two hours from the Grecian frontier, in order to thwart the Bulgarian manoeuvre having for its purpose the occupation of the railroad station at Kanali and the cutting of the Serbian retreat toward the Greek frontier.

"According to news from Serbian sources, the total number of Serbians made prisoners by the Bulgarians does not exceed 13,000. The bulk of the Serbian army thus remains intact."

JIMMY BRITT IS ON FIGHTING LINE

Ex-Lightweight Champ on His Way to Gallipoli to Cut Up Turks.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Jimmy Britt, one time daddy of the prize ring and lightweight champion of America, is on a British troopship somewhere on the Indian Ocean, a private in Great Britain's colonial army, bound for the trenches of Gallipoli. Within a week or two he will probably be on the fighting line battling for the allies on the same field where A. F. Wilding gave his life some months ago.

Britt was last seen in New York late last spring when he appeared at Hammerstein's as a monologist on the same bill with Jess Willard, then newly crowned heavyweight champion of America.

Britt leaped to sudden fame ten or twelve years ago by wresting the lightweight championship from Young Corbett in a twenty-two round fight at San Francisco. Both men were on their feet at the end of the battle and the spectators, almost to a man, believed Young Corbett had successfully defended his title.

The referee ruled otherwise, however, precipitating one of the most bitter controversies in the history of the ring. Later, however, Britt made good his claim to the championship by again defeating Young Corbett, and held to it until beaten by Battling Nelson.

Even after his championship had been taken from him Britt was prominent in the ring for a couple of years, eventually drifting into vaudeville, where he showed a talent rare among followers of the pugilistic game.

Even after the public had forgotten the wonderful boxing skill that enabled Britt to defeat the hardest sluggers of his time, Jimmy was a success on the stage.

Britt went to New Zealand and Australia with a vaudeville show and it was while there that he became imbued with the war fever and joined the army.

Russians Fight Best in Winter, But German Valor "Freezes" Up

LONDON, Dec. .—Describing what winter on the eastern front means to both Russia and Germany, Mr. Waclaw Czerniewski says in an article in the Daily Graphic that the Russian winter is the Russian army's best friend and the enemy's worst foe.

"If we look back over the sixteen months of the great war, we see, just as in the Napoleonic invasion, that Russia is most successful during winter," he wrote. "The reason is obvious. Her enemies come from the west, from much warmer countries. Her own armies come from the east, where in some parts the climate is the most severe of the inhabited earth. It is wonderful how the Russian peasantry is accustomed to hard frost.

"I remember the time in my childhood when I used to play with Russian peasant children in the snow, and almost all my friends were barefooted in spite of the frost and ice. I tried to do likewise, but it almost cost me my life. One of our servants could not sleep in the house because it was too warm; clad in furs, she slept outside in the frost. Ah! you don't know what a Russian frost is like! There are days when the mercury in the theremometer is frozen, and people do not know how many degrees of sold have occurred unless some one has a spirit theremometer.

"The Russian army in peace time is spread all over the great area of Eastern Europe and Siberia; consequently it is always well prepared for hard frosts. One could see everywhere in Russian towns during the winter sentries clad in heavy furs and provided with special boots made of felting and called 'pimy'. Marching armies are clad in lighter weight furs or knitted woollen underwear, 'fufaiki.' Soldiers thus provided go from Siberia and European Russian to Lithuania and Poland as if to a warm country!

"The Germans and Austrians are in a very different plight; they come from the west and south, where from their childhood they are accustomed to a mild climate. The Lithuanian winter fills them with dread. They are clad in thin coats insufficient to warm their bodies unaccustomed to black frosts. I remember how last winter hundreds of frost bitten Austrian soldiers were brought in by the Russians. Their legs had to be amputated and they were giving up their trenches almost without resistance.

"The Germans commanders make every endeavor to raise the spirits of their soldiers, trembling with cold. They give them plenty of alcohol, and I found in the possession of German prisoners peculiar tabloids. I was informed by them that they are ordered to swallow this medicine before each attack, and thus artificially raise their pluck. The spirit of the German army in winter is so 'frozen' that last winter German soldiers for the purpose of defence from the terrible Russian bayonet attacks were provided with bottles of vitriol to throw into the eyes of their enemy. It was a pitiful picture to see afterward rows of blinded Russian soldiers marching along and grasping a long guiding rope in their hands.

"With approaching winter Russia begins her offensive."

Anarchists Threatened to Blow Up French Palace of Justice.

PONTOISE, France, Dec. 7.—A well-dressed man gave a letter to the doorkeeper at the Palace of Justice here yesterday. The letter was addressed to the government prosecuting attorney and said that unless a group of anarchists, whose trial began Saturday were not released by 1 o'clock to-day the place would be blown up.

In consequence of this menace numerous gendarmes in plain clothes and police agents guarded the palace through the night and to-day they examined the papers of every person approaching the court, including those admitted.

The anarchists, who are Russians, were arrested before the war on a charge of conspiracy. The men were brought into court securely chained. Kirilcheck, one of the prisoners, attempted to hang himself in a cell last night.

The judges, court officials and police watched the clock until it struck one, without anything happening, and the trial then went on.

To prevent hens setting a New York man has invented hollow nest eggs through which cold water can be circulated.

OBITUARY

HAZEL SANDERSON.

The death occurred this morning of Hazel, eldest daughter of Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, at the family residence, 369 Brock street. Deceased had been in failing health for some years, but was wonderfully cheerful. She was a girl of marked ability and was a graduate of Queen's University.

The late Hazel Sanderson is survived by a mother and three sisters, namely, Miss Lenore, teacher in the Collingwood Collegiate Institute; Miss Genevieve, graduate in nursing of the John Hopkins Hospital, and Miss Marguerite, at home.

The funeral which will be private will be held on Wednesday at two-thirty o'clock to Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. R. W. McFADDEN.

Mr. T. M. McFadden received a telegram from his brother, Mr. R. W. McFadden, in Saskatchewan, this morning, announcing the death of his wife, which took place on Thursday, December 2nd.

Mr. and Mrs. McFadden resided in Peterborough until three years ago when they removed to the West. The late Mrs. McFadden was formerly Miss Annie Armstrong, daughter of the late T. H. Armstrong, of Ashburnham.

The remains will be brought to Peterborough for burial.

THE LATE GEORGE DOUGLAS.

Manilla, December 7.—George Douglas, postmaster, Justice of the Peace, merchant, whose death occurred at his home in Manilla on Monday, November 29, 1915, was one of the oldest residents of the district. He was born at Peterborough in 1830 and when 5 years of age his parents moved to Manilla, then known as Hans's Corners, and he resided upon the same property ever since.

Few men have been so long connected with the post office as the late Mr. Douglas. When he was but 11 years of age his father, who was postmaster, died, and his mother was appointed postmistress, and a special permit was granted by the Post Office Inspector at Kingston for the boy to act as assistant. At that time Manilla was the distributing office for a large district, mails being carried on horseback from Peterborough, Bensalem Falls, Smithboro and Beaverton. In 1869 he was appointed postmaster and had the reputation with the department of having one of the best conducted offices in the country. Just a few months ago when the regular inspection took place the inspector remarked to him: "You are as near 100 per cent. as possible."

Mr. Douglas was a justice of the peace for a great many years having been appointed by the Mackenzie MacDonald Government. For nearly 60 years he successfully conducted a general store in Manilla and was highly respected for his business ability, his honesty and his integrity. He was an ardent supporter of the Liberal party.

Besides his widow one son and two sisters survive him.

The funeral, which took place on Wednesday, Nov. 24, was largely attended. The remains were laid to rest in the Manilla cemetery, service being conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. E. Cann, Knox Church, Cannington, Rev. H. J. Lattimer, Manilla, assisting.

WEDDING BELLS

CARTER—McCRACKEN.

The wedding took place at the Charlotte street Methodist church parsonage last evening of Edythea McCracken, daughter of Mr. Francis McCracken, to Mr. Francis J. Carter, all of Peterborough. They were attended by Miss Grace Carter and Mr. Percy McCracken.

The Bible class to which the bride belonged, headed by their teacher, Mrs. P. O. Wright, attended also, and presented the bride with a choice bouquet of roses. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A.

SMITH—DUNLOP.

The marriage was solemnized at the Charlotte street parsonage last evening, by the Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., of Pte. Stanley Smith of the 33rd Battery, C.E.F., to Miss Pearl Dunlop, daughter of Mr. D'Arcy Dunlop, of Peterborough.

NAME OF MR. HAROLD LEE WAS OMITTED

The name of Mr. Harold Lee was inadvertently omitted from the programme in the report of a concert in North Monaghan on Friday night last. Mr. Lee contributed a vocal solo that was much enjoyed. The ladies also desire to thank the Reeve and all the artistes who helped to make the concert a success.

HINDENBURGANY OR GERMANY?

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—Future travelers to this country will wonder whether they are in Germany or Hindenburgany. The process of revising the nomenclature of the empire in his honor has already resulted in the following objects being named after him:

Entire provinces, towns, streets, the newest dreadnought, A N. G. Lloyd liner, public squares, restaurants, marches, songs, innumerable babies, museums, a regiment, a herring, a cigar, orphan asylums, public houses, schools, countless commodities.

His titular honors include a field-marshalship, a knighthood of the Black Eagle, honorary doctor degrees from universities and colleges, and the freedom of a dozen cities. Following the Prussian precedent, nothing short of a dukedom probably awaits him when his labors in the field are over. His latest Hindenburg aphorism in circulation in Germany is: "We be beaten? Impossible—absolutely impossible!"

AUSTRIAN GIRLS LOVE RUSSIAN PRISONERS

Newspapers Are Aroused by Affection Lavished on Captured Soldiers in Camp.

Disgust and indignation are expressed by Austrian newspapers because of revelations made in connection with conditions at Imst and Sautens, where large numbers of Russian prisoners are held. Young girls and women, they assert, have fallen in love with Russians, big handsome fellows, and are corresponding with them and meeting them clandestinely. Every trick and ingenuity of feminity is restored to in to smuggle dainties to the Russians, so much so that the government has taken the matter in hand and will in future keep the prisoners under such a strong guard that no women will be permitted to have access to the barracks. It is asserted the Russian prisoners are a menace to the morals of the community.

On the other hand, the chaplain of the camp in Weens, in a sermon in his church, frankly declared that his observations have demonstrated that the Russian prisoners have in no wise encouraged the attentions of the young women, but that he must acknowledge with regret and disgust that young girls in his own school in the town were guilty of offences against modesty and decorum in openly flaunting their affection for the Russian soldiers. Physicians in the barracks also voice their indignation in the newspapers. As a result no women can now approach the camps and any correspondence or dainties sent to the Russians will be confiscated.

A SERIOUS QUESTION FACING WAR NATIONS

Shall Women be Patriotic So Far as to Marry Disabled Soldiers?

English women are being asked to marry the invalid soldiers, broken in health and shattered in limb, who are returning from the continental battlefields There are already thousands of these broken men, made useless for active commercial pursuit by blindness, deafness or loss of limbs. All the struggling nations will be hard put to it in caring for them. It seems to be the women's job. Those who are encouraging them thus to mate themselves with mutilated men realize what a sacrifice it will be, and are basing their appeal on patriotism. The hazards of matrimony under the best conditions are by no means few To support an invalid husband it a task to stagger the most courageous woman. But women have always shown themselves peculiarly adapted to sacrifice, and in this case it is not a sacrifice merely to make comfortable the broken heroes. It is a sacrifice to the race. There has been much talk about the deterioration of nations after exhaustive wars. The best men are killed, and the shirkers and defectives remain at home to breed. It was this theory which evoked the cry of breed before you die when the English soldiers first shipped for France. Now they are coming back. However, helpless they are to earn a livelihood, these men may yet be an asset to the nation—if the women will have it so. Their fractures and their blind eyes are not transmissible. They are still, from the standpoint of the next generation, the best men in England.

The advertiser who is deceived as to newspaper circulation is not entitled to much sympathy."

BRITAIN'S LARDER IS ALWAYS FILLED

The broad plans for imperial offence and defence have never been so well understood or so clearly demonstrated as since the outbreak of the present conflict in Europe. Of paramount importance the navy has always been but closely allied with that is the stern necessity of guarding against any possible shortage of food. Neither a Briton nor anyone else can work or fight on an empty stomach.

Realizing the vital importance of food supply, while Great Britain has been building up her enormous navy. British capital has been flowing out to all parts of the empire, building railways and thus developing huge tracts of fertile lands, making them available for use in providing for the needs of the people of Britain.

Canada's most important contribution to the cause of empire is in wheat and flour and bread. Already a goodly portion has been sent to England to avert any chance of a crisis, while the Belgian martyrs have received a certain amount of relief from the same source.

The great bulk of the supplies of Canadian wheat for export are drawn from the prairie provinces. The total supply may be computed by a study of the carryings of the railways. One can hardly grasp the immense help that Canada can give, working her wheat fields and railways, and a concrete example will perhaps best illustrate the matter. Working on a 25 per cent. increase over the crop of 1913-14, the Canadian Northern Railway, one of the newest systems, expects to haul out approximately 56,750,000 bushels of wheat from the provinces lying between the Great Lakes and the Rocky Mountains.

According to the millers, a barrel of flour, 196 pounds, is made from 4 1-2 bushels of wheat, and, according to the bakers, 187 standard loaves of 24 ounces each, are made from one barrel of flour. The anticipated carryings on the Canadian Northern this season, then, represent 72,611,111 barrels and 2,258,277,757 loaves of bread. If this were divided in London, each individual in the imperial city would receive 335 loaves. If you divide the population of the capital into families of three, each family would be provided with 975 loaves. Allowing a liberal supply of four loaves a week to each family would extend the foodstuffs over 244 weeks, or more than four and a half years.

So long, then, as Britain controls the highways of commerce, Canada can supply much of wheat is needed in the shape of grain, flour and feed. Great Britain produces but a quarter of the wheat she annually consumes, but she has made wise provision by financing the opening of the far-off wheat-lands, to which access is given by the great railways of the Dominion.

Cow Prevents Driver Falling From Bridge

HOLDS BUGGY BACK WHEN HORSE PLUNGES INTO WATER.

Sacramento, Cal., December 7.—Seated in his buggy perilously near the edge of a bridge, the horse hanging below the edge of a bridge over which it had fallen, a stubborn cow with legs firmly anchored holding the buggy from going over was the situation in which Henry Schaub suddenly found himself when crossing the Sweeney creek.

Schaub was on his way to the ranch of a neighbor, running a mile the animal being tied to the back of the buggy. As he neared the centre of the bridge the cow kicked up a commotion and frightened the horse, which in its plunges suddenly fell over the side of the bridge and in spite of the horrified cow escaped that it had to be killed.

The cow suddenly halted, and by standing still drew the driver, buggy and cow from going over also.

Young Turks Responsible For Massacre

ROME, Dec. 8.—When the Young Turks overthrew Sultan Abdul Hamid, and, under the leadership of Enver Pasha established a new government the step was hailed throughout the civilized world as a great advance for the Ottoman Empire. It is the Young Turks and Enver Pasha, however, that are held responsible for the massacres that have practically destroyed the Armenian race.

In the despatch sent by the International News Service correspondent yesterday the conditions prevailing in Armenia were described as fully as they could be from official reports received at the Armenian College in Rome. Today's story deals with the motives and men behind the massacres. It comes from the Armenian [illegible] quoted in yesterday's dispatch as stating that 800,000 Armenians have disappeared since the massacres began. Here it is in his own words:

"The motives of the present massacre? Enver Pasha, the man behind the throne, if not the throne itself, said in an interview that the internment of the Armenian population was a precautionary measure. What he meant is not clear to you but is clear to us. He has endeavered to brand us as traitors.

COUPLE TARGETS OF POISON PENS

HAPPINESS OF YOUNG PEOPLE TAINTED BY UNKNOWN WRITER.

New York, December 7.—Men who have recently been the target of poison pen letters sent to their fiancees or brides of a few weeks, kept the telephone wires busy to the office of William J. Kinsley, handwriting expert, Sunday. At the end of the day the names of four more men who had been the object of base insinuations had been added to the roll in the hands of the postal authorities, making a total of 23 young couples whose happiness had been tainted by the unknown writer.

Although neither the post office inspectors nor Mr. Kinsley would divulge the name of a single one of those who have suffered from the anonymous pen, Assistant United States Attorney Claud A. Thompson, one of the federal trust busters, admitted that his bride of a few weeks had received one of the letters. Mr. Thompson was married to Miss Nellie C. Hoffman, of Towanda, Pa., a few months ago, and a week after the wedding news of which was published, Mrs. Thompson received one of the letters.

It was turned over to Mr. Kinsley and is identified with the others in his hands, and in the hands of Post Office Inspector Fitch.

Another Submarine Controversy Faces the United States To-day

The Sinking in the Mediterranean of the American Steamer "Communipaw" With a Possible Loss of American Lives, Threatens New international Complications.

WASHINGTON, Dec 8.—Another serious submarine controversy today appeared to face the United States. The sinking in the Mediterranean of the American steamer Communipaw, Standard Oil ship, with a possible loss of American lives, threatened new international complications. The State Department to-day bent its efforts to fix the submarine's nationality while officials believed it to be an Austrian boat. Doubt on the point delayed a decision on the course of action. That the American nationality of the Communipaw was not known to the attacking submarine was declared inconceivable, if like other Standard Oil steamers she carried the American flag painted on both sides of her hull. Operations by Austrian submarines in the vicinity of the Communipaw's attack caused a conviction that first, representations will be made to Austria.

ALL MEMBERS OF CREW LOST.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—A Rome despatch received here to-day said that all members of the crew of the American steamer Communipaw, reported torpedoed by an Austrian submarine were lost, including five American officers. The Standard Oil steamers Communipaw and Petrolite were both changed from German to American registry after the outbreak of the war. They were flying the American flag when attacked.

FAVOURS WITHDRAWAL OF FORCES.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—That Britain against the wishes of her Allies, favours the withdrawal of the expeditionary forces from the Balkans, was strongly hinted, following to-day's session of the Allies' War Council.

GERMANY YIELDING.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Germany is yielding. This was the belief of officials to-day causing marked relaxation of tension over German-American relations. Unofficial information reaching the State Department led the Administration to believe Germany shortly will agree to the request for the recall of Captains Boy-Ed and Von Papen, Embassy attaches.

GERMAN AEROPLANES COLLIDED.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 8.—Two German aeroplanes, manoeuvring over Ellerbruck Monday night, collided at a height of several hundred feet and dropped to earth. Their four occupants were killed. The gasoline tanks exploded, playing streams of flame over the falling aircraft. The bodies of four men were burned beyond recognition.

FRANCE WILL FIGHT TILL DEATH KNELL OF MILITARISM HAS BEEN SOUNDED

Nation Will Not Discuss Peace Until Alsace and Lorraine Are Won, Belgium and Serbia Restored, and German Imperialism Put Beyond Possibility of Resurrection.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—France will not make peace until Alsace and Lorraine are won, Belgium and Serbia restored and "German imperialism and Prussian militarism are put beyond the possibility of resurrection," Mr. Albert Thomas, Under Secretary of War, said Sunday. The declaration of Mr. Thomas is attracting widespread attention, as it is one of the first statements from a responsible Cabinet official concerning the attitude of the government in regard to peace.

The statements of Mr. Thomas were made in an address to a large crowd Sunday evening in memory of the dead of the war of 1870. Mr. Thomas said:

"There will be no peace until our Alsace and Lorraine are definitely re-established as part of the French unity.

"There will be no peace until our unfortunate brothers of Belgium and Serbia are assured of recovering their homes in complete security and independence.

"There will be no peace until German imperialism and Prussian militarism are put beyond the possibility of resurrection.

There will be no peace until a system of right, founded upon the victorious union of the Allies and supported by the free adherence of neutrals, has abolished the violence of war.

"Whatever may be the sacrifices France, united, will go steadily forward to accomplish this end. To-day, before the terrible obstacle which confronts them, justice and liberty have only one road—that which our nation in arms opens to them with the machine gun and cannon."

The declaration of Mr. Thomas derives added significance from the fact that, in addition to his connection with the Cabinet, he is one of the leaders of the socialist party.

Mr. Maurice Barres, president of the League of Patriots, also addressed the memorial meeting.

"What is the meaning of the determination of France to carry on the war to the end?" he asked. "It means re-establishment of the European equilibrium, and that no peace will be made until Alsace and Lorraine are returned and we are guaranteed of security from the Germans."

AT FIRST WAR COUNCIL.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—The first meeting of the General War Council was held Monday in Paris. The Council is designed to carry forward the work begun recently by Great Britain, France and Russia for the purpose of bringing about closer co-operation among the Entente Powers in military operations.

The Council meeting was attended by representatives of France, Great Britain, Russia, Italy, Belgium and Serbia. The French commander in chief, General Joffre, presided. Russia was represented by General Gilinsky, aide de camp to Emperor Nicholas; Italy by General Porro, second in command of the Italian army, and Serbia by Colonel Stefanovitch.

MAN AND HIS LAUGH.

Self Restraint and Its Effects Upon Human Emotions.

Laughter is a sign of high development. The nearer one is to the animal the less one laughs. The more highly developed we become the more do we perceive humor. For laughter, it must be remembered, is a sign that an emotion has suddenly been set free. It is like a touch on the trigger of a gun, the gun being self restraint.

No one ever tells an animal (in the wild state) that there are certain things that he must not do. There is no direct prevention of an act that the animal wants to perform. Consequently the animal has no self restraint.

Man, on the other hand, is surrounded by commandments from babyhood onward. He is always being told by some one, first by his parents, then by the laws of society, that there are things that he must not do. The desire to do these things, coupled to the knowledge that he dare not do them, causes a tense emotion. The animal lives as the occasion rises. Man is keyed up by the continuous conflict of occasions.

It is the relief from this keying up that gives rise to laughter. The greater the tension caused by the delay between impulse and act the funnier does the thing seem which releases it. Something which would seem only moderately funny if it happened in the street becomes screamingly ludicrous in church because of the tension of feeling that one must be solemn. When a snowball hits a silk hat the sight makes one laugh because of the feeling that whatever else a silk hat might be intended for, it was not as a target for snowballs. Exaggerations are often funny, because they twist our emotion from a usual to an unexpected channel.

A story teller who laughs at his own jokes always spoils his stories. It is the man with the mournful face whose quips seem the merriest. It is an old saying that one must "laugh and grow fat," but modern science has learned that we must "laugh and grow wise."

His Choice.

"Whisky, my friend, has killed more men than bullets."

"That may be, sir; but, be jabers, I'd rather be full of whisky than bullets."

KIT-CAT PORTRAITS.

Origin of the Term Which Has Attained World Notoriety.

Several years ago an eastern art critic waxed sarcastic concerning a collection of pictures on view at one of the leading New York clubs. In the course of a vitriolic tirade he relieved himself of the opinion that the exhibition consisted chiefly of kit-cat portraits. Those who went to the clubrooms expecting to see canvases adorned with feline compositions were condemned to disappointment. There was not a cat picture in the whole show.

"What is a kit-cat portrait?" was the burning question of the hour. Why, a stupid portrait, a commonplace effort of painting that reveals no glimmer of genius. At this stage of the explanation the inevitable interruption—"But why do you call it a kit-cat picture? And not the critic out of a hundred had the remotest idea.

The term for stupid mediocrity had its origin in a collection of forty-two portraits of prominent men painted between 1703 and 1720 by Sir Godfrey Kneller, one of the best known English portrait painters. They were exactly the same size and were framed alike; hence the idea of monotony which led to the idea of mediocrity. The subjects of these portraits were members of a club that met in the tavern of a celebrated pastry cook, Christopher Cat—called Kit for short—and among them were such men as Addison, Steele, Walpole and Marlborough. It was the influence of this club that placed George I. on the throne of England.—Exchange.

Fish Eating Ponies.

"The Shetland ponies, as most of the cold comes on, turn their ponies out to shift for themselves," said a horse dealer. "On those high, rocky, barren islands, amid the powerful and cold winds of winter, the ponies live on heather and seaweed, and it is undubitable that in their hunger they even scour the wild coast for dead fish. It is this life of exposure that gives the Shetland pony his shaggy coat. What gives him his kind and gentle disposition is the fact that he is brought up with the dogs and children.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

It Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeths Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, it prevents dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair.

OLD MAN HARE.

The Actor's Meeting With Gladstone Outside the Theater.

John Hare, the eminent English actor-manager, said that the most delightful compliment he ever received was from Mr. Gladstone. It was a double edged compliment. Whichever way you took it it was satisfactory.

Mr. Hare earned fame playing old men's parts, his character as Mr. Goldby in "A Pair of Spectacles" being a good example. Added to this was a horror of having his picture taken.

Mr. Gladstone had never seen a picture of the actor, but he knew him well behind the scenes as well as before the footlights. The premier's favorite play was "A Pair of Spectacles," and he always went behind the scenes to chat awhile with the actor. The really old man and the spade up old man would sit there and talk in the most delightful way for an hour after the show.

One day the Earl of Rosebery had Mr. Gladstone to dinner, and he also invited his friend John Hare. The actor came in smooth shaved, looking about thirty-five. He was presented to Mr. Gladstone, and the prime minister shook his hand most cordially and said:

"My dear sir, I am very, very glad to meet you. I knew your father very, very well. Splendid actor! What old man!"

It took the whole evening for the earl and Mr. Hare to convince him that this one was really the father.—London Tatler.

Our Eyes and Reflected Light.

The human eye has passed through thousands of years of evolution until it has become best adapted to sunlight or skylight coming obliquely from above and reveals strong illumination from any other direction. It is apparent that snow blindness, distress from white sand or water is not caused by the intensity of the light so much as by the fact that it is reflected up instead of down and is not stopped by the sunken translucent lower eyelid. If the lower part of the eye is guarded with goggles no difficulty is found.

How To Save Your Eyes

Try This Free Prescription

Do your eyes ever trouble? Do you already wear eyeglasses or spectacles? Thousands of people wear them who never who might easily dispense with them. You may be one of them, and it is your duty to save your eyes before it is too late. The eyes are supplied by the blood, and when your eyes pain you tell them and rest your muscles, but you should your eyes, do you rest them? You know you do not. You read or do something else that tires your eyes; you work your eyes until you go to bed. Then in the morning many have strained eyes and nearly every eye trouble that threatens blindness, or total blindness. Eyestrain (generally speaking) they never cure. Well, this prescription, which has helped thousands, may very well relieve you. Use it a short time. Would you like your eyes troubles to disappear as if by magic? Try this prescription. Go to the nearest druggist and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one tablet and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up, and how soon the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it; it is absolutely harmless. Many who are now blind might have saved their eyes had they started to care for them in time. This is a simple treatment, but marvellously effective in multitudes of cases. If you think your eyes have been warned don't delay a day, but do what you can to save your eyes and you are likely to save your eyes and you live for publishing this prescription. The Veltman Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

TESTING CORN.

Experiments in Best Variety for Use in Ontario.

In the endeavor to find the varieties of corn best suited to Ontario a series of tests are being concluded by the district representatives over the province. Seven varieties selected by the corn growers' association were distributed last year and planted on acre plots by local farmers. Four dent varieties, Wisconsin No. 7, Golden Glow, Whitecap Yellow Dent, and Bailey, also three flint varieties, Longfellow, Compton's Early, and Salzer's, North Dakota are included in the list. The plots in Eastern Ontario were inspected this year by Mr. W. T. Gaynor, of the Dominion Seed Branch. He also visited plots at Morrisburg which had been planted under Mr. Newman's direction. Mr. Rayner's report is as follows:

Careful Cultivation.

Most of the plots visited were good, some were excellent, a few were poor. Mr. Main's work in Frontenac is to be highly commended. He and his assistant planted all the corn themselves. They watched the cultivation and where it was not right they showed the operators how. Mr. Main posted labels along the corn plots. Four district representatives have time for such detail work, but it pays in Frontenac. Mr. Main could get 100 or more farmers to take up the work while some of the representatives were unable to place all the lots they had.

One of G. H. Carran's men in Lennox and Addington had the best plots for educational purposes I visited. They were along a leading road and planted in blocks with a blank row between each variety. Mr. Carran was going to have labels put up opposite each variety. W. H. Smith, Athens, Leeds Co., was the only other case where the work was labelled when along the roadside. Most of the plots run in two or three rows for each variety across the field, and beside other corn, which of course served for comparison, but made it harder to size up.

In Hastings County each operator got only one kind of corn for his acre. This, of course, will serve as an experiment but will not be useful in comparing varieties on the same farm.

Nearly all the plots were planted in hills from three to four feet apart each way. I have come to the conclusion that the proper distance, either for ear or silage, is 3 ft. 6 in. each way. A number of operators did this.

My conclusion as to varieties for silage is that nearly all should grow Dent and Flint, in the proportion of two to one, either Wisconsin No. 7, Golden Glow or Salzer (as Early Leaming, which of course was not included in this list.) I found almost invariably that Wisconsin No. 7 had the most stem and leaf with as much ear, but rarely matured as well as Golden Glow, Bailey, or Whitecap. Whitecap was the poorest Dent variety in growth and suffered from storms more than the others, showing that it lacks brace roots. In most places it was blighted in ear development, but in most fields it was behind. Golden Glow and Bailey were usually the best of the Dents for ear maturity with Golden Glow slightly leading. They ran about alike for fodder development with quality in favor of Golden Glow.

Between Two Fires.

Sid was desperately gone on them both, and she couldn't think which one to choose. It was rather perplexing, no doubt, for one who was bound to refuse.

Effie gazed at them both in despair, quite puzzled to know what to do. As soon as she thought about one she cared for the other one too.

They still remained under her gaze, little reeking the trouble they brought. It really was hard to decide. They were both so delightful, she thought.

She couldn't say which one she'd have; her efforts fell hopelessly flat.

Her Conscience.

In spite of scoldings, Helen persisted in running away from home. One day, after a longer absence than usual, her mother asked:

"Helen, dear, does not your conscience trouble you when you are running away from mother?" explaining that her conscience was a little voice speaking within. Helen answered:

"Oh, yes, mamma; that little voice is always saying, 'Run faster, faster, Helen; your mother is after you!'"

Feline Amenities.

They were discussing the newest engagement. The fair dancer had previously made three similar announcements, but not one had resulted in a wedding.

"Do you think she will really marry him?" asked her dearest friend.

"I can't say, my dear," retorted the next dearest. "It is possible, but not customary."

Was Troubled With BOILS
ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him: "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. E. Cockerill, Golden, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils, and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A WISE DEDUCTION.

By F. A. MITCHEL

There lived in Asia Minor a man named Kalaidjion, a great philosopher, who spent years in hunting for the source of evil. At last he settled down to the conclusion that all the trouble in the world came from woman's vanity. Kalaidjion about the time he made this discovery was presented by his wife with a daughter. He gave orders that the child should be brought up with a limited number of companions and attendants, none of whom should ever refer to her personal appearance and on no account should she ever be allowed to look upon her face in a mirror.

Moira—that was the child's name—grew up to be a very beautiful woman. By and by a young man came courting her, or rather asked for her from her father. To the request the latter replied:

"Years of study, Tatios"—that was the suitor's name—"have convinced me that the source of evil is in woman's vanity. For that reason I have guarded my daughter that this fiendish spirit should not be permitted to enter into her. No one has ever told her that she is beautiful, nor has she ever seen her face reflected. She shall be your wife on your promise to carry out this policy which I have begun."

The lover consented, and the couple were married. The bride's mother at the time of the wedding secretly presented her daughter with a mirror; but, hoping to avert the consequences against which Kalaidjion had so long guarded, she told Moira that whenever she looked into it she would see her mother's face as it would appear in heaven. Shortly after the wedding the mother died, and the daughter found the mirror an inestimable treasure. The mother, in order to insure the secret of its possession being kept, had told her that if she revealed it she (the mother) would grow old and ugly in heaven and be cast out into hell. Moira, greatly dreading such a consequence, carefully hid the mirror in a secret drawer in her cabinet, only opened by a key which she kept on her person. Once a month her husband was obliged to go to a distant city on business, and then Moira would take out her mirror and reverently feast her eyes upon her mother in paradise.

Meanwhile Tatios kept up the surveillance over his wife that her father had instituted. In western countries this would have been impossible, but not so in the east, where every man is master of his own household. Under the influence of a beautiful face which looked out at her from the mirror affectionately Moira every year grew spiritually more and more beautiful, though physically she passed her prime. Like other women, and her physical beauty began to wane. But she saw only in her reflected face the spiritual and did not recognize the decay of the physical.

When Tatios was about to go on one of his journeys he decided to take his wife with him. Moira, fearing for the safety of her treasure, locked it in a box and, taking it to a temple, gave it in charge of a priest to keep till her return. It happened that Tatios saw her go out and, being suspicious, followed her and watched her carry the box into the temple. He said nothing at the time, but brooded over the secret which his wife had apart from him and on her return to his home went to the temple and demanded the box. The priest would give it to no one but her who had left it, so Tatios demanded that she go to the temple and open the box before him.

Moira was in agony that her mother could look at her no longer and, becoming ugly, would be cast out of heaven. She told her husband her secret and, as he was unmovable, went with him to the temple and gave him the box with the key, and, opening it, he took out the mirror. Knowing that all the care he had for many years exercised had been aborted, he was in great anger.

"Woman," he said, "you have been looking at your own face. When you first saw it it was young and beautiful. Now it is old and faded. Look, undeceived by your fancy, and see that what I tell you is true!"

Moira, convinced that she was looking at her own reflection, ceased to see in it a spiritual beauty, viewing only the image of an old woman. Angered with her husband that he should have upbraided the charm she cursed him.

At this point the priest said to the husband:

"Oh, Tatios, you have been acting on the assumption that evil has its source in the vanity of woman. Look rather within thyself. Believing that her good mother looked down upon her from heaven, your wife has been kept pure in the contemplation of her own image. It is the use made of beauty, not beauty itself, that brings good or evil and man's mastery of it, for man's selfish desires must always bring evil. You have destroyed a source of good within your wife, and she has cursed you."

The husband, seeing what he had done, bowed his head and begged forgiveness of his wife. She forgave him through the influence of her past contemplation of the good as seen through the beautiful. But the spell had been broken. The wife, no longer sustained by the mother who had so long looked at her from heaven, at times gave way to the peevishness of age, and her husband saw that the inestimable treasure he had thrown away was not to be recovered. Yet from that time under the influence of a new philosophy he was a better man.

But it was he who bore the burden of being amiable instead of his wife.

WELL-KNOWN ONTARIO WOMAN SPEAKS.

Welland, Ont.—"I am most pleased to say that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved itself a first-class remedy. I was run-down, weak and played out, and needed a woman's tonic. I have just finished using one bottle. I feel much stronger and better. Can eat better and am less nervous. You may say that 'Favorite Prescription' is just the medicine for tired-out, worn-out women. It does wonders for them."—Mrs. Geo. Flanigan, E. Main and State Sts., Welland, Ont.

THIS PRESCRIPTION IS FOR YOU.

If you suffer from hot flashes or dizziness, fainting spells, hysteria, headache, or nervousness you are not beyond relief.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is directed to the real cause and promptly removes the disease, and thereby brings comfort in the place of prolonged misery.

It has been sold by druggists for nearly 50 years, in liquid form, at $1.00 per bottle, giving general satisfaction. It can now be had in sugar-coated tablet form. Sold by all medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps.

Every sick woman may consult us by letter, absolutely without charge.

Write without fear and without fee, to Faculty of the Invalids' Hotel, Dr. V. M. Pierce, President, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are unequalled as a Liver Pill. Smallest, easiest to take. One tiny Sugar-coated Pellet a Dose. Cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangement of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.

IRRITABILITY A WARNING.

One of Nature's Danger Signals That Should Be Heeded.

Are you unduly quick tempered? Do you find yourself, on slight provocation, giving vent to petty outbursts of anger? Are you constantly nagging, fault finding and complaining?

If chronic irritability is one of your characteristics it is important for you to recognize that fact. For irritability is always a danger signal. It points to the presence of conditions which may be disastrous to you unless remedied.

In particular, irritability means that your nervous system is out of gear. This may be the result of either physical or mental causes, or a combination of both. Usually both physical and mental causes enter in to intensify one another's harmful effects.

Thus the component of all causes of nervous disturbance is worry. Worry, as is known, interferes with all the bodily functions. It is especially damaging in its influence on the digestion.

When the food is not properly digested the nervous system is poorly nourished and severely strained. It is also in some degree poisoned by the circulation in the blood of substances which would otherwise have been removed by the eliminative organs.

All this causes a nervous condition that may express itself in chronic "grouchiness" or in frequent attacks of bad temper. These attacks in their turn cause increased weakening of the digestive powers.

What is needed to cure both the indigestion and the irritability is the cultivation of an optimistic attitude. The tendency to worry, look on the dark side of things, must be overcome.

Russia's New Port.

An important railroad is being built northward from Petrograd to a point on the Arctic ocean near the Norwegian frontier, about 500 miles south of Archangel, on a portion of the arctic coast line reached by the end of the gulf stream, which makes the climate at that point much milder than at Archangel. A port will be created there that should never become icebound, as Archangel is in winter.

He Wasn't Missing.

One of the ushers approached a man who appeared to be sweeping there about him.

"Don't you like the show?"

"Yes, indeed!"

"Then why did you persist in missing the performance?"

"Why, m-m-man alive, I w-was-n't h-hissing. I w-was so-simply s-so-sying to S-s-s-sammuid that the s-s-singing is s-s-s-superb."

Easily Arranged.

A man took the following telegram to a telegraph office: "Mrs. Brown, Center Street: I announce with grief the death of Uncle James. Come quickly to read the will. I believe we are his heirs. John Black."

The telegraph clerk, having counted the words, said, "There are two words too many, sir."

"Cry out 'with grief,'" was the reply.

In These Martial Days.

"You must not be so quarrelsome, Willie," said William's father impressively. "Remember that 'the meek shall inherit the earth.'"

"Maybe they will hereafter," responded the young militant, "but around in my school they are most to keep up the earth."—Chicago Herald.

OPERATIONS for APPENDICITIS And How They Can be Avoided

Operation Ordered

For Appendicitis—Used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Was Completely Cured.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor, as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure. Dr. Chase's Medicines have proven of wonderful benefit in our home, as the Ointment cured my little girl of a severe burn, when nothing else would bring relief."

Dr. David H. Reeder writes as follows of appendicitis:—"In considering the treatment of any condition of sickness it has always been my rule to first find the cause. To my mind, it's the only logical way. Many people seem to think that if they have had an operation for appendicitis they are forever immune, and need have no further fear along that line, but I say emphatically, and I think you will agree I am right, that after an attack of appendicitis, even though you have been successfully operated upon and the appendix removed, your troubles have only just begun unless you remove the cause. What was the cause of the appendicitis?

"The thoughtless will say inflammation in the appendix. No, inflammation in the appendix is appendicitis, but what caused the inflammation? Constipation, yes, that is the prime cause. If you were never constipated you would forever be safe. Appendicitis is only one of the results of the retention of fecal matter in the colon for too long a period."

There is no longer any question that the real cause of appendicitis is constipation. By keeping the bowels regular you not only prevent appendicitis, but also a host of other ills, some of which are even more dangerous than appendicitis. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are recommended to you in this connection, not as a mere relief by effecting the movement of the bowels, but rather as a positive cure for constipation. As is well known, the bile secreted by the healthful action of the liver is Nature's cathartic. So long as the bile flows freely into the intestines there is no constipation of the bowels and no clogging of the excretory organs. Hence the wisdom of using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to ensure regular working of the liver, kidneys and bowels. You thereby save yourself much inconvenience from the minor ills of life, and ensure against such fatal diseases as appendicitis and peritonitis.

SIGNALS FROM AIR CRAFT.

Soot Clouds, Mirror Flashes and Torch Bombs Are Used.

To an army commander the value of a military aeroplane is its power to locate hostile artillery and direct gunfire rather than its bomb dropping possibilities. Thus it is very necessary that a pilot several thousand feet in the air should be able to communicate with the headquarters staff on earth so that he may convey the necessary information for the guidance of gunners hurling shells at targets miles ahead which they cannot see.

A very ingenious method of signaling from an aeroplane is by means of soot clouds. An apparatus filled with lampblack rests near the hand of the aviator, and when he presses a lever some of this soot passes down a pipe and is discharged in a black cloud. The pipe is so delicately arranged that the clouds may be small or large. The operator can spell out the Morse telegraphic code in little clouds, and they can be read from the earth when the aviator is 4,000 feet high.

Another clever means of signaling from air craft is that carried out by means of lamps and mirrors. A lamp which has a flash of 10,000 candle power sends piercing rays of light through a tube fitted with powerful magnifying glasses. When a message is sent the operator directs his flasher in the required direction, presses a button, and a brilliant light flashes out, long or short, according to the pressure. The officers on earth receive the message and may send a reply in the same way, being provided with similar mirrors and lamps. The rays of light sent out are almost as bright as sunlight, so that they can be seen with the naked eye for a distance of four miles in the daytime and at night for a distance of eight miles.

When military aviators wish to drop a written communication to the earth without descending they utilize a message bomb. This contains a time movement, and the projectile is weighted so that it falls sharp-head first. As the end strikes the ground a trigger is released, which sets fire to a torch on top, and thus the location of the bomb is indicated day or night.

Languages.

The principal languages of the world are listed in order as follows: English, spoken by more than 150,000,000 people; German, more than 120,000,000; Russian, more than 90,000,000; French, more than 60,000,000; Spanish, more than 55,000,000; Italian, more than 30,000,000, and Portuguese, more than 30,000,000. These seven are the principal languages of Europe and America. There are said to be 3,424 spoken languages or dialects in the world—1,424 in America, 937 in Asia, 587 in Europe and 276 in Africa. Among other important languages are the Chinese, Japanese, Scandinavian branches, Slavonic speeches and dialects and the various languages of India, Persia, Arabia and modern Greece.

BALLROOM PATHOS.

Tragedy of the Yearning Heart That Was Left to Itself.

The fourth dance was nearly over, and she was still sitting by the wall, her hands clasped in her lap and her blank program dangling at her side. The expression of pleasure which had been spontaneous at the beginning of the evening had become fixed and strained through the long period of waiting. At last the music ceased, and the dancers, flushed and laughing, scattered about the hall.

The girl rose stiffly and tried to mingle with the crowd. A few acquaintances nodded absently, then moved away. Bold in her distress, she elbowed her way into a noisy group and laid her hand timidly upon the arm of one of the girls.

"That's a pretty dress, Marie," she said, trying to smile. "Thank you. Are you having a good time?" "Lovely," she answered, with a brave attempt to smile. Her friend hesitated, then turned deliberately to her own coterie.

The wall flower stood awkwardly outside the closed circle, then pushed toward another group. The music started up; there was mad confusion, and the girl was caught in a scurry of young men finding their partners. Left alone in the middle of the floor and buffeted by the dancers, there was nothing for her to do but seek the wall again.

Her cheeks burned in confusion as she found herself again surrounded by vacant chairs. She moved to the side of two girls sitting farther down the hall. For a moment she felt less conspicuous. But both girls were claimed by their partners, and she was left alone against the wall. Pretty girls glanced at her with genuine pity; girls of uncertain popularity eyed her scornfully as they passed.

At last, blinded by a rush of hot tears, she arose and went from the music and merriment into the silence of the deserted dressing room.

TONNAGE OF A VESSEL.

Just What It Is and the Methods by Which It Is Measured.

To find the tonnage or displacement of a ship is rather puzzling. The tonnage of a ship is the measure of its cubical or carrying capacity expressed in tons. At the present time there are four methods in use of expressing the tonnage of a ship, known respectively as the gross tonnage, the net register tonnage, the deadweight tonnage and the displacement tonnage.

In calculating the gross tonnage the whole interior capacity of the ship below the tonnage deck is found, including that of all covered in spaces on deck used for stowage, and the result in cubic feet is divided by 100.

The net register tonnage is the gross tonnage minus all the spaces used for the accommodation of the crew and instruments and the working parts of the ship. It is on the net register tonnage that almost invariably dues are paid.

The deadweight tonnage is the measure of the exact amount of cargo that a ship can carry without sinking too deep in the water.

The displacement tonnage is the space occupied by the ship in the water. The amount of water displaced by a ship is, of course, equal in weight to the ship and all it contains. As one ton is equal to thirty-five cubic feet of water, the displacement tonnage is found by dividing the number of cubic feet of water displaced by thirty-five when the ship is immersed up to its draft or load line.—London Standard.

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every emaciated thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of putting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect has been in many cases reported remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 to Sargol Co., 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days treatment will be sent you postpaid. days treatment will be sent you postpaid.

PARIS TO BE WARM.

Plenty of Coal Available But the Price Will be High.

Paris is in no danger of shivering this winter though it will have to pay rather dearly for its warmth. Monsieur Marcel Sembat, minister of public works assures the public that there will be plenty of coal available and supports his views with a few conclusive statistics.

France consumed 60 million tons of coal a year before the war; 10 million tons of it came from Great Britain and 10 million from Belgium and Germany. The latter markets are closed to her now but her consumption has decreased from 60 million to 40 million tons by reason of the German occupation of the industrial regions of the north and east. Her coal production has diminished in the same ratio being 20 million tons as against 40 million tons, so she has to depend on Great Britain and the United States for the 20 million tons that she lacks. The receipts at French ports, which were less than a million tons a month a year ago, rose to 1,800,000 tons in August. Statistics of subsequent receipts are incomplete but it is thought that they exceed two million tons per month, sufficient to meet current needs and accumulate a small surplus.

Coal prices have shown no response to the increased receipts. The best qualities are firm at twenty dollars a ton delivered at domicile while inferior grades and industrial coal bring fifteen dollars a ton. The city gas company profiting from these prices has supplanted coal with gas in a great many families furnishing the heaters free of rentals.

FACTS FOR HEALTH SEEKERS TO PONDER OVER

NEW STEEL HELMETS GREAT PREVENTIVE

Have Medieval Touch and Soldiers Look Like Old-Time Pikemen.

A medieval touch is given to modern war by the new steel helmet worn by the French British and Canadian troops as a protection from shrapnel, which was found to inflict so many preventible wounds. It gives the troops somewhat the appearance of the pikemen of bygone days.

"Why not, indeed put the modern fighting men in complete armor?" asks a French writer. "If it is provided to save his precious head, why not extend the precaution to his entire body? Modern science might produce a metal or combination of metal with other material which would afford comparative lightness and a maximum of resistence. This is the age of armor—armored ships on the water and in the air; armored railway trains and motor cars—why not the man?

"The only instance on record of armor being used in the wars of the nineteenth century," says Charles Ffulkes, F. S. A., in a recent talk on armor and firearms, "are the steel-lined vests worn by confederate troops in the American civil war of 1861-5, in the Pitt River Museum, Oxford, the highest shields used by the United States infantry, in the Cuban war; and the boiler-plate armor of Ned Kelly, the bushranger. The Liverpool police have adopted a small shield base on the model of Henry VIII's pistol shield.

This high English authority has set himself to watching carefully the experiments on the fighting front for the next few months, "in which we may possibly seethe cap-a-pie suit of late come into its own again, and the forest of pikes, glaives, morning stars and Lochaber axes bristling on the trenches ready for the word to advance.

To Ward Off Winter Complexion Ills

To keep the face smooth, white and beautiful all winter there's nothing quite so good as ordinary mercolized wax. Rough, chapped or discolored skin, inevitable in this weather is gently absorbed by the wax and replaced by the newer, fresher skin beneath. The face exhibits no trace of the wax, the latter being applied at bedtime and washed off mornings. Creams, powders and rouges, on the other hand, are apt to appear conspicuous at this season because of alternating expansion and contraction of the skin, due to changing temperatures. I advise you to try this simple treatment. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggists and use like cold cream. This will help the skin at once and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably youthful and healthy.

Winds and flying dust often cause squinting and other contortions which make wrinkles. You can quickly get rid of every wrinkle, however produced, by using a harmless face bath made by dissolving one oz. of powdered saxolite in 1-2 pint witch hazel.

An a Dream.

There is an amusing example of oriental subtlety in an anecdote that Mr. Sidney Whitman tells in "Turkish Memories." The story is of a young diplomat who was sent to Constantinople to be trained for his profession.

One day the diplomat met a carriage guarded by a eunuch that contained some ladies of the sultan's harem. The young man endeavored to peep in at the window and got a blow across the face from the vigilant eunuch. He made a great uproar and lodged a complaint with the sultan himself. He was received in private audience, and Abdul Hamid listened patiently to his story of the outrage.

On its conclusion the sultan replied; "My dear sir, I have gone carefully into the case and see exactly how it stands. You are a gentleman; therefore you could never have committed such a breach of good manners as is alleged to have taken place, and consequently no eunuch could possibly have presumed to strike you. The whole affair must be the product of your fancy; pray let us dismiss it."

THOUSANDS OF BABIES DIE BEFORE ONE YEAR

It is estimated that thousands of babies die in this country before the age of one year, and it is stated that one-half of these deaths are needless if all mothers were strong and infants were breast-fed.

Expectant mothers should thoughtfully strive to increase their strength with the strength-building fats in Scott's Emulsion which improves the blood, suppresses nervousness, aids the quality of milk, and feeds the very life cells.

Physicians prescribe Scott's Emulsion; it is doubly important during nursing. No drugs. Every druggist has it. Always insist on Scott's—the white food-medicine. No advanced prices.

SURGEONS STUDY NERVE WOUNDS

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The quick adaptation of medical research to the needs of the war is shown in the first annual report of the Medical Research Committee. When the National Health Insurance Medical Research Committee—which has some £55,000 ($275,000) to spend—realized that war was inevitable it placed the whole of its resources at the disposal of the Army Medical Department.

Most of the researches have borne good fruit, as the present health of British armies witnessed abundantly. Most persons have heard of the various kinds of injuries, both physical and mental, from which soldiers have suffered. The nerve wound, if they can be so called, have never been fully studied before, because there have never been such nerve shattering conditions in any other war. Now, however, a careful study of the phychological troubles of the soldiers is being made and tabulated. The report says that this will lead to results of great scientific value.

Slowly accumulated scientific facts have a habit of becoming hidden away from immediate medical practice, but in the case of this special work of the research committee nothing of the kind is likely to happen. Indeed, the report states definitely that the new method of collection of these scientific facts "has allowed the rapid supply of information to medical officers with regard to the after-history of cases of whose treatment they are responsible in the initial stages."

It is perhaps too early to expect full reports of the mental injuries, but certain bodily ones have already been dealt with in this manner, notably gunshot wounds of the chest arterial injuries, fractures of the femur, fractured joints and epidemic dropsy. Thus each army surgeon can find out just what has happened to any patient he has sent home to England, and can vary his treatment, if necessary, in any future case of the same kind. At the conclusion of the report Lord Moulton, chairman of the Medical Research Committee, says that "the existence of a National Medical Research Fund, established by historical accident so shortly before the war, and without any foreknowledge of it, has made it possible to bring auxiliary agencies rapidly to the service of government departments, and especially to that of the Army Medical Department in its varied and vitally important activities."

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

The Same Old Signs.

"I see the depot signs are more hopeful," observed Mr. Citiman.

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not help the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

ONTARIO'S MINERALS.

Output Last Year Reached a Total of Over Forty-six Millions.

So many Governmental publications are regarded in the public mind as dry and uninteresting, even to those who have a technical knowledge of the subjects treated, that when a volume is produced containing live news, it does not receive the measure of praise to which it is entitled. The new report of the Bureau of Mines for last year's operations is now ready for distribution. The statistical data relating to the mineral output last year was given some time ago, but the completed volume as it now appears is to say the least an illuminating text book on the mineral resources of the Province.

While the compiling of the report is more or less of a departmental matter, and the information is gathered from a score of sources, this year the Minister himself, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, has exercised personal supervision in its preparation. Few people realise that the total mineral production for last year reached the splendid total of $46,295,959, of which $33,345,291 was metallic and $12,950,668 was non-metallic. High-water mark was reached in 1913 when the total product was valued at $53,328,211. It is noted that the decrease is greater in non-metallic production, but there is also some diminution in the value of the product from the metallic mines. The war was responsible to some extent for this, while on the other hand certain mines have been "worked out," and are no longer profitable to operate, but this will be compensated as new fields are developed. Take gold, for instance. In 1910 the value of the gold mined in Ontario was only $68,498. In 1914 with the operations in the Porcupine gold area it reached $5,529,767; silver was $12,705,214; copper, $2,081,332, and nickel, $5,136,804.

It is not only in giving a statistical review that the report is valuable. The commercial possibilities of the various mineral deposits are fully discussed, while the reports of surveys and investigations of new fields are given in detail.

The working of the mining laws with criticisms from miners are referred to in some detail. The effect of the eight-hour day for underground miners and certain amendments to the Mining Act to further safeguard the lives of miners are discussed. A table of all mining accidents shows that the protection required by the law is steadily lowering the number of casualties, while the benefits of the new Workmen's Compensation Act make possible some interesting and enlightening comparisons.

The further development of the industry is receiving much attention from the Minister and his Deputy, Mr. T. W. Gibson. The new discoveries of gold in Munro Township and near Kowcash on the National Transcontinental Railway have produced exhaustive reports, while the Commission inquiring into the nickel industry is making substantial progress.

Tongue Caught Ermine.

"This stole is of tongue caught ermine, hence its high price," the salesman said.

"Tongue caught ermine, eh?"

"Yes, madam. You see, the ermine's coat is extremely delicate. A trap tears it horribly. So the trapper catches it by the tongue.

"The ermine is fond of ice. The trapper smears heavy knives with grease and lays them here and there on the snow. The snow white ermine, lithe and quick, rushes up in the zero weather, licks what he takes for a sliver of ice, and, lo, is doomed, for the steel of the heavy knife has frozen fast to his tongue."—Exchange.

2,000 FROM 'WEST POINT OF FRANCE' SLAIN

Officers Sing as They Lead Daring Attacks—Many Win Cross of the Legion of Honor.

SAINT CYR, France Dec. 6.—Saint Cyr, the West Point of France, made heavy sacrifices to the country in the first year of the war. Nearly 2,000 of its graduates were killed, including 287 of the 2,000 cadets of the classes of 1914 and 1915.

Thirty-one of these young officers were decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, nearly 700 of them were cited in orders of the day and more than 500 were wounded. Altogether, more Saint Cyr men perished on the battlefields of Morharge, Charleroi, the Marne, the Aisne and in the Vosges than were killed in the battles of Austerlitz, Eylau, Jean, Wagram, Moskva, Montmirail and Waterloo

Nearly as many died on the field of honor from August 1, 1914, to August 1,1915, as had previously fallen from the date of the birth of the academy in 1802.

On July 20, 1914, the class of 1915 was drawn up in the spacious court of Louis XV, and with impressive ceremonies entered upon its military career under the name of Croix du Drapeau (Cross of the Flag), each class at Saint Cyr always receiving at the time of its promotion a distinctive name.

Jean Allard Meeus, the poet of the class, recited a patriotic poem, his only contribution to literature, but one that will make his name enduring. When he had finished reading his inspiring lines a voice cried out from among the exalted thousand young patriots.

"Swear, all of us, that when we go into action it will be in full uniform, with white gloves and plume flying in our shakos."

A thousand voices blended in one reply:

"We swear it."

Gallant Spirit Lives.

Some war correspondents have thought to have discovered some d'Artagnan's among the French soldiers at the front. With the cadets of Saint Cyr, the spirit of Cyrano de Bergerac and the cadets of Cascogne may surely be said to live again.

The soldier poet, Jean Allard Meeus, kept the oath that he had taken. He went into action in full uniform, the most conspicuous target of all, leading his section to the assault and was one of the first to fall.

On August 22, at Charleroi, Second Lieutenant de Fayolle, of the class of the "Croix du Drapeau," received his baptism of fire. Under a furious shelling by the German artillery his men hesitated. Lieutenant de Fayolle turned to encourage them, but perceived that, though he had kept his vow to go into the fight with his white gloves, he had forgotten his red and white plume.

Immediately drawing it out of his knapsack, he stuck it into his shako and the section, electrified by his example, rushed forward.

"You are going to get yourself killed, Lieutenant, cried a corporal.

"Forward! Forward!" was the young soldier's reply as he bounded forward at the head of his men. A few minutes later he lay inanimate on the Charleroi battlefield with a bullet-hole in his forehead directly underneath the red and white plume.

Lieutenant de Castelnau was a member of the "Montmirail" class. He, with his section, held the enemy in check half a day, and at the very moment when he had succeeded in throwing them back received his death wound.

French Joyously Brave.

"He had a noble end," was the comment made by his father, General Curieres de Castelnau, on being informed of his death.

The story is told of a second lieutenant of the class of 1914 who was leading his section on the line of the Yser in junction with the Belgian troops, without apparent consciousness of a great danger he was running into.

"Where are you going like that, lieutenant?" asked an officer of King Albert's staff.

"As far as the Vistula, commandant: the Russians are calling for us," was the reply.

"Now I wished the world could have heard his men laugh behind him as they were dealt to the screeching of bullets all around," said the Belgian officer. "And how

I would love to command French troops," he added.

"Why?" some one asked, "Are they braver than others?"

"No, it is not that; the others are quite as brave, only the French soldiers are joyously brave."

The 275 young men accepted at Saint Cyr, but who were still in their year's service with the regiment before entering, were also promoted second lieutenants, and ninety-one of them have been killed, while the proportion of wounded and honors is about the same as in the other classes.

Saint Cyr altogether has furnished the French army 1,600 generals, 31,-000 officers, the first of whom to die for his country at the battle of Wagram. Four Saint Cyrians became Marshals of France: Pelissier, Canrobert, McMahon and Forez, while it has the honor of having graduated one king—Peter of Serbia.

USE "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS WHEN CONSTIPATED

When Bilious, Headachy, Sick, Foul, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Bad Colds

Get a 10-cent box.

Take a Cascaret to-night to cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, a bad cold, are bilious, nervous, upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out. Are you keeping you bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts cathartic pills or castor oils?

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action; a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

Wood and Water.

All wood contains more or less water. Even the driest wood known contains two or three pounds of water to every hundred pounds of weight. Absolutely dry wood is unknown, for the heat needed to obtain it would dissolve the wood and convert it into gas and charcoal. An eminent Swiss authority on the characteristics of wood believes that a sufficiently powerful and perfect microscope, could it be made, would show that the ultimate wood cell is composed of crystals like grains of sugar or salt and that thin films of water hold the crystals apart, yet bind them into a mass. A good microscope shows the wood cell and reveals its spiral bandages and its openings and cavities, but no instrument yet made reveals the ultimate crystals that, as many believe, do exist, and that would explain why water cannot be expelled from wood without destroying the wood itself.

The Limit.

"I shall never speak to her again as long as I live."

"But you've said that often before."

YOU CAN'T FIND ANY DANDRUFF, AND HAIR STOPS COMING OUT

Save Your Hair! Make It Thick, Wavy Glossy and Beautiful at once

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment. A 25 cent bottle will double the beauty of your hair.

A Poor Present.

"You see, old Smith was next me in the trenches. Now, the bullet that took me in the shoulder and laid me out went 'im and made a bit of a flesh wound in his arm. Of course I'm glad he wasn't 'urt bad. But he's stuck to my bullet and given it his name. Now, I don't think that's fair. I've a right to it. EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

The princess cut has found its way even into the utility garments such as aprons. The model herewith shown has a plain panel in front, somewhat fitted in at the waist line. There is a side front gore which is joined to the front panel by a seam which extends to the shoulder. The back is in two parts, the closing dividing it in the middle. The apron is made high in the neck and it is provided with plain sleeves, loose below the elbow and finished with a band cuff at the wrist. There are substantial pockets at each side.

With this apron there is a cap which has a separate rever around the face, but this may be omitted and the front section used plain.

No material has yet displaced gingham for a useful apron, but there are numbers of women who wish something a little ornamental and for these we would suggest the crinkled crêpes which come in stripes and other figures, and also plain colors in chambray. The tiny flowerets of cambric on a white ground are always fresh in appearance and the addition of bands or bright color at neck and wrists will make a very fresh and pretty garment.

The apron pattern, No. 7,895, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires for apron and cap, 5 yards of 36 inch material and ¾ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods.

This pattern can be obtained by sending [illegible] to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

The Allies' Artillery Inflicting Severe Losses on the Bulgars

Battle Has Been Raging For 48 Hours in the Neighbourhood of Strumnitza--Important Announcement in Regard to Peace Proposals is Expected in the Reichstag To-morrow---Conference Between Grecian Officer and Allies' Representative.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

ATHENS, Dec. 8.—The Anglo-French heavy artillery has been inflicting heavy losses on the Bulgarians in the Strumnitza section in two days of heavy fighting. Despatches received here to-day said there had been no cessation in the battle for forty-eight hours.

ABOARD THE PEACE SHIP OSCAR II., Via Wireless to Cape Race, Newfoundland, Dec. 8.—The Ford peace voyagers will wireless President Wilson their opinion of the message he read to Congress yesterday, as soon as they can reach an agreement. Radical peace advocates are urging that the party denounce the President's preparedness programme and assail him as a reactionary. The Conservatives are opposed to criticizing the President. There are symptoms that Ford is converting some of the skeptics on board to his peace programme.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 8.—Count Schulenberg indicated to the citizens of Liege that Germany has no intention of relinquishing Belgium at a public gathering recently. According to advices received here to-day, he drove the first nail into the wooden statue of Gen. Von Emmich, the conqueror of Belgium, which was erected in the Court of Honour of the Palace of Justice. "What Von Emmich has conquered, we will hold," Count Schulenberg was quoted as saying.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 8.—Chancellor Von Bethmann Holeweg, whose address in the Reichstag to-morrow is expected to touch peace discussions and Germany's intentions in the Balkans, conferred with the Kaiser to-day. It is generally believed that the Chancellor's speech will be one of the most important made in the Reichstag since Germany entered the war. Von Bethmann Holeweg took to the Kaiser's headquarters a draft of remarks for approval.

ATHENS, Dec. 8.—Two Greek officers are in conference with the Anglo-French official at Salonika to-day. Salonika despatches said that there is every reason to believe that a satisfactory agreement will be reached.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—A Reuter's despatch from Salonika says: "The Bulgarians on Monday bombarded the entire British line at Strumnitza for the whole day, and then they launched an infantry attack, which was repulsed. Although fighting on this front still continues, the British casualties thus far are reported as slight. At Krivolak there was an unimportant local engagement between the French and Bulgarian artillery on Monday. It is reported here that complications are threatened between Bulgaria and Turkey, and that distrust is increasing on both sides."

LONDON, Dec. 8.—To prevent possible misunderstandings between Bulgarian and Greek troops along the Serbo-Greek frontier, German troops are replacing Bulgarians near Monastir, according to Athens despatches to-day.

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—At a meeting of the Cabinet Council to be held to-day, it is expected that the date of Parliament will be fixed. Unless the Ministers change their minds, the choice will fall on Wednesday, Jan. 12th, when the Commons will meet to elect a Speaker. On the following day the formal opening will take place, when the speech from the Throne will be read.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The newspaper Echo de Belge, published in Holland since the German occupation of Belgium, reported to-day that an explosion wrecked the Cognel's fort at Namur, killing eighty German soldiers.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The Times regards President Wilson's message as "By force of events a war message from beginning to end," and says: "The President has striven and is still striving hard with the full approbation of the masses of the people to cling fast to the notion that the United States can continue to live its own life, uphold exacted ideals throughout the new world, and promote their realization in the old world without abandoning the splendid isolation she has so long enjoyed. Even more striking than the President's denunciation of the German campaign is the new attitude he assumes on the subject of national defence. It is a sudden break with the past of his own party, and the fact that the President cannot expect his proposals to be carried without hard fighting makes them still more a sign of the times." The Times believes that although the Germans have so often and so grossly misunderstood the American attitude, "they will appreciate the significance of the President's message and with however bad grace draw back while there is still time."

FINE SEND OFF GIVEN TO BOYS OF BATTERY DRAFT

Citizens Turned Out in Numbers to say Good bye to the Artillerymen Leaving for the Front—Excitement at the Station

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The twenty-five Peterborough members of 33rd Battery draft who were home on leave from Kingston, were given a royal send-off last night on their departure to rejoin their unit after their final visit to Peterborough before going overseas. The artillerymen fell in at the Armouries at 8.30 o'clock, and were escorted to the G.T.R. Station by the 93rd Battalion. In spite of the snowstorm, a huge crowd gathered to say good-bye to the departing soldiers, and there was great excitement at the station. The 93rd Band led in the singing of "Keep the home fires burning," "My Little Girl," "Farewell, Isabelle," "We'll never let the old flag fall," and other favourite airs. The 33rd boys boarded the train amid deafening cheers from the big crowd.

$65.50 a Month is Cost of Distributing the Patriotic Fund

This Sum Covers Postage, Printing and All Other Expenses --A Statement That Shows How Economically the Fund is Being Administered in Peterborough---Notes of the Big Campaign Which Started This Morning.

At the gathering of men at headquarters on Monday night some things were said in reference to the Patriotic Fund and as to the local distribution. Impressions were given, largely the result of ignorance of the facts. The trouble is that these things repeated tend to give a black eye to the Fund and discourage contributions. We are all prone, most of us, to easily credit a statement that seems to make to pull down another fellow. Human nature. Quite natural, too. So easy to repeat a remark which passed on attains an almost credible insistence that sticks.

One of these statements was as to the cost of distribution. Some one was making a good thing of it. The committee was asleep to let such things go on. The money was not given for any such purpose. There were enough city officials. Why could they not double up and handle it among themselves. And so on.

First let it be said that a committee of nine have charge of the details. These men do not actually disburse, but meet once each week, consider, apportion and determine all matters. There is no one man power in the system. All share and are quite willing to take responsibility. All families are not treated alike. All circumstances are not the same. So allowances are graded. The committee considers first the income or earnings that went into the family before the head of the house enlisted. Then the income going into the house now. And from the Patriotic Fund make an allowance to bring the income up to and in nearly all cases above what it was when the head of the house was at home. Assuming that he had work and worked every working day the result is, that except in a few cases where the man was earning a wage or salary above the ordinary or average wage paid, every family is as well and better off than when the husband was at home. Why not. Isn't he abroad in the trenches. Fighting for the men at home who are serenely going on with work.

As to cost of distribution. There are no big salaries, as suggested. The committee gits on the lid. The total cost of administration and investigation is only an average of $65.50 per month. The head office, at Ottawa, issues an estimate or schedule of allowances proper for costs of distribution. For a branch of from 100 to 250 families it allows from $80.00 to $150.00 per month. On the Peterborough Branch over 315 families are cared for at less than one-half of the maximum allowance for such service. That should be a sufficient answer to any story of extravagance. The books and vouchers are there, gentlemen. Call and inspect. These records tell the story. So please let us have no more of such nonsense.

Where has the money gone? Where is the Fund raised in 1914? The following statement is made by the trustees of the Fund, the local trustees. It is concise, accurate and convincing. Cut it out and slam the first one that talks of mismanagement.

STATEMENT OF PETERBOROUGH PATRIOTIC FUND.

RECEIPTS.

Total amount subscribed in 1914	$59,419.00
Amount of subs not collected, including $2,500 of City Council grant of last year	5,000.000
Total amount of cash received as result of subs. given in fall of 1914	$54,419.00

EXPENDITURE.

Proportion paid to Local Relief Fund	$13,865.00
Campaign expense of 1914, printing, postage, etc	883.00
Remitted to Canadian Patriotic Fund, Ottawa	32,348.00
Cash in bank at Peterborough, to be remitted to Ottawa	7,403.00
	$54,419.00

Received from Canadian Patriotic Fund, Ottawa, and distributed to soldiers' families in city and district	$35,687.00
Amount of overdraft at Ottawa	3,339.00
	$32,348.00

Amount of local relief distributed, (in round figures)	$ 6,500.00
Balance of relief fund in bank	7,365.00
	$13,865.00

Average monthly expense for local administration of the Fund, local relief and 5 months unemployment bureau, including costs of investigations of circumstances of soldiers' families, printing, postage and war stamps on cheques, from September, 1914, to December 31, 1915—per month $65.00

Don't fall into the error that anyone is sleeping on the job. The work of the local office has included distribution of the local relief fund, for six months, a most onerous and vexatious work. Full of investigations and enquiries. Else how could the committee determine where to afford relief. Plenty of people, almost professional mendicants had to be literally fought off. Money was there, they would say. Come on in and get a share. The vigilance of the committee stood as a bar to giving where not rightly needed. Else the fund would have been frittered away. It relieved a large amount of distress no doubt. Who was relieved. Come and see. Books and cards are open for your inspection. The committee do not print names and amounts, but everything can be seen. No one has any right to condemn the administration unless first examining the records. And if this is done there is nothing to condemn.

Here is the committee administering the Funds: H. Rush R. Harstone, G. A. Gillespie, M.P.; W. Stocker, Adjt. McElhenny, Dr. Eastwood, Rev. Jas. Rollins, Jas. Lynch, H. Stabler, Mayor Buller. Why not concede that these men have a fair sense of public duty. And if they have the fund will never be looted or mismanaged.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Talk about a campaign of education. Surely after a year's work of the Patriotic Fund in the city it is not necessary to have to confute ideas that are absurd. But here is a sample.

A well-known insurance man tells that he had had the idea and that a fellow insurance worker with him held to the same belief that all the wives of officers out on service from Peterborough were on the local Patriotic lists. Think of that. Insurance men too. Presumably intelligent. It beats the Dutch. If men who should be leaders think or understand that way, what of the rank and file?

Let it be said, and told, and hammered in if necessary, that no wife of any officer, or of any soldiers above the rank of sergeant, is on the lists. Never was. Never will be unless instructions from the parent fund are changed, which they are not likely to be. The Fund is for the men in the ranks, not for the officer. No officer in or from Peterborough but what is in receipt of an income from the service allowances compatible with the rank he holds and the service he is rendering. But the Fund is a matter altogether outside of military rules and administered accordingly.

A RECEPTION TO LT. COL. MILLS AND SERGT. G. W. ALLEN

Returned Soldiers Escorted to the Armouries and Presented with Addresses of Welcome from Representative Citizens

TRIBUTES ARE PAID

Peterborough welcomed home two of her gallant soldiers from the European firing line yesterday in the persons of Lt.-Col. Jos. Mills of the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., and Sergt. Geo. W. Allen of the 10th Battery, C.F.A. C.E.F.

Lt.-Col. Mills arrived on the 3.45 C.P.R. train from the east, while Sergt. Allen came home on the morning G.T.R. train. The latter was taken to the station in a motor car in the afternoon and shared in the reception tendered to Lt.-Col. Mills.

In spite of the unfavourable weather, a big crowd had gathered at the station by the time the C.P.R. express arrived, while along George Street were hundreds of people anxious to do honour to their citizens who were back from the Front. The 93rd Battalion was drawn up in line on the station square, and as the train drew in to the platform, the 93rd Band swung into the strains "O Canada." Among those present to greet Col. Mills were Lt.-Col. Walker, Major Eastwood, Major Hounsell, and other officers of the 57th Regiment the officers of the 93rd Battalion, Mayor Buller, and the City Council, members of the Patriotic League, and other well-known citizens. Mrs. Mills and other relatives had gone down to Havelock to meet the returning officer, who was greeted with cheers as he walked down the platform.

With Mrs. Mills he was escorted to a gaily decorated automobile, in which were His Worship Mayor Buller and Lt.-Col. Walker. Sergt. Allen and his wife, accompanied by several of the aldermen, were in the next car. The procession to the Armouries was headed by the brass and bugle bands of the 93rd Battalion, while the battalion acted as escort. As the parade came up George Street, the returned

KITCHENER LEAGUE'S THANKS TO COLLEGIATE STUDENTS

The Canadian Kitchener League wishes, through the columns of this paper, to extend its hearty thanks to the Girls' and Boys' Athletic Associations of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, for their very handsome gift of 20.00, towards the patriotic work of the League.

Sir Herbert Ames, Hon. T. W. McGarry and Local Speakers Arouse Enthusiasm as They Deal With Need of Supporting Patriotic Fund.

CONVINCING SPEECHES

If any inspiration was needed for the start of the Patriotic Fund Campaign to-day, it must have been supplied by last night's splendid meeting in the Grand Opera House. A logical, clean-cut exposition of the work of the Canadian Patriotic Fund by Sir Herbert Ames, the general secretary, a stirring patriotic appeal by Hon. T. W. McGarry, the Provincial Treasurer, a message from Lt.-Col. Mills just back from the Front, a rousing address by Mr. Dan. O'Connell on local conditions in regard to the fund, a hearty endorsation of the plan by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, and a musical programme patriotically appealing, combined to make the meeting a memorable one, an occasion that filled the audience with a deeper sense of their responsibilities as Canadian citizens, and as citizens of the British Empire.

His Worship Mayor Buller presided, and many prominent citizens were on the platform. Before the addresses commenced, the Patriotic Chorus, under the direction of Mr. J. H. Hemwick, led in the singing of a number of patriotic airs. The audience were invited to take part in the singing, and did so heartily. The Patriotic Campaign song to the tune of the 93rd's marching song, "We'll never let the old flag fall," made a hit. The words of the chorus are as follows:

"We'll never let the loved ones call
For the comforts we owe them all;
We've come here to-night
To show our might,
We'll Pay, Pay, Pay,
Or Fight, Fight, Fight.
The Fifty Thousand Dollar plan
Makes the appeal to every man;
Till peace shall come
Give a small sum—
A little bit each week. That's all!"

Sir Herbert Ames.

Sir Herbert Ames, general secretary of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, was the first speaker introduced by His Lordship Mayor Buller. He said he was glad to have the opportunity of addressing the citizens of Peterborough on such an important subject. The one outstanding event of the present age was the world war. It was difficult to realize the importance of this period. One hundred years from now Canadians would look back upon the period as Americans looked back upon the Civil War. Accepted theories of a year or two ago were being turned upside down. Nations that were formerly regarded as civilized were now looked upon as barbarians. Germany believed that the British Empire was a nation of shopkeepers, and that the Empire was torn with dissension. She made the mistake that will ultimately bring about her destruction. Germany did not reckon upon the strength of the dominions overseas. Canadians themselves did not imagine that within a year and a half they could organize a fighting force of over one hundred thousand men, with another hundred thousand in prospect.

The Initial Movement.

At the outbreak of the war, thousands of men in all parts of Canada took the first train or boat in order to get to the Front as quick as possible. There sprang up in each mun-

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 8, 1915

THE CITY'S $20,000.

The City Council in voting a contribution of $20,000 to the Patriotic Fund, set a good example, and its action is easily defensible. The merits of the Patriotic Fund may not be generally understood, nor the demands upon it recognized as fully by the mass as by the few. We have submitted to direct taxation of a mill on the dollar for provincial purposes of financing its share in the war. We are paying increased taxation to help meet the larger financial responsibility of the Dominion, and should not find fault with contribution to the financial obligations to care of the results of the war.

By putting $20,000 upon the tax collector's roll everybody is constrained to contribute according to his or her means or possessions; even those who by reason of more fortunate circumstances are called upon and will, no doubt, make important contribution, in addition to their share of the $20,000 voted by the City Council. This does not by any means represent what the citizens of Peterborough can and should do to measure up, not only to what other places are doing, but to measure up to their responsibility in respect of caring for the families of our fellow-citizens, who have gone to the fighting line, and of others in other parts of the Dominion.

The soldiers that go from Canada to the front are fighting as much for us who stay at home as if the battle lines paralleled our borders. They are fighting for the integrity of our homes, the retention of our civil, and even personal liberties.

Canada, and we in Peterborough, as a part of Canada—is called upon to make all sorts and conditions of sacrifice; but we have our compensations. We are materially untouched by the war that is devastating other nations, and besides we are actually gaining advantage and profit. Our industries are humming with the work of filling war orders, employment is plentiful, crops are prodigally abundant, we are financially strong, and in every way in a good position to meet the responsibilities of the situation. We are gallantly meeting the call for men; shall we not as strongly meet the call for money—both important agencies of waging war? We who can't help fighting, must consider ourselves bound to help financing.

SOMETHING DUE TO PUBLIC DECENCY.

The Toronto News is frankly a party, if not partizan, journal, and cannot be expected to do other than defend partizan interests. When in its loyalty to these interests it sometimes defends the indefensible, it must be a pretty "bad break" that evokes a condemnation, that involves a member of its party. Therefore the following from the News, under the heading "Unfit for Any Public Position," has a big meaning:

For trickery in horse trading there has always been an easy toleration. For generations horse-dealing has seduced saints and sages from the narrow path. It has been the pastime of deacons and class leaders. But horse trading in time of war, which robs the country, is an offence which even with all the traditions in its favour cannot be overlooked. Moreover, when a representative of the people fills his pockets by dishonest methods he proves himself unworthy of public confidence and unfit for public position.

Though no names are mentioned this refers, no doubt, to Mr. James Robertson Fallis, M.P.P., who technically—for he was thus elected—represents the riding of Peel in the Ontario Legislature. Mr. Fallis was very much mixed up in the matter of the purchase of horses for the government. He had the effrontery to justify his action of using the machinery of government, for the purchase of horses for his own personal profit. After horses had been passed by the government inspector, Mr. Fallis bought them at a price, and at once sold them to the government at a greatly advanced price, thus pocketing much profit at the expense of the government, at the expense of the people, at the expense of the interests of the war we are waging.

For this Sir Charles Davidson scathingly reprimanded him as he could not help doing. It showed a sad lack of recognition of representative responsibility, or of even elementary ethics, when Mr. Fallis justified his action as legitimate "business." It is no surprise that the News declares that he is "unfit for any public position."

If this is the opinion of the candid party friend who naturally would take the most lenient view of the matter, what is the member's attitude in the premises? What do his constituents think of being represented by a member "unfit for any public position?" He was elected in June, 1914, by the big majority of 600. Will his constituents have the moral courage of perhaps the most intense party journal in the Dominion, consider him "unfit for any public position," and demand his resignation? Will his party leader, the Premier of the Province, be willing to accept the support of a man whom its journalistic supporter and defender-in-chief, declares is "unfit to hold any public position?" The "member" for Peel has the option presented of gracefully resigning, or disgracefully holding, his position. If he is guided by precedent in this regard, as he was guided by precedent in the matter of making undue and shameful profit at the expense of the country, he has far more precedent than redounds to the credit of the national good name for honesty in our public men, not to speak of patriotism.

Mr. DeWitt Foster, M.P., "representative" of Kings in the Dominion Parliament, on account of similar malodorous horse deals in which he was very much mixed up, was compelled to resign, probably upon invitation of his leader, Sir Robert Borden, who could not afford the luxury of such a supporter. The same influence was probably behind the enforced resignation of Mr. W. A. Garland, M.P., Carleton, who was convicted of making undue profits out of his position, in the matter of furnishing hospital dressings, etc.

The resignations of besmirched Dominion members of Parliament were due to the rehabilitation of the good name of Canada, to the good name of our public life, and to the good name of the party to which they belonged, and the good name and responsibility of the leader of the party. The same considerations apply to a besmirched provincial member whose resignation is ripely due—to his leader who is wearing the shoes of a leader—with little risk of incurring corns in the process—who lived up to his motto — "bold enough to be honest; and honest enough to be bold." Will Hon. Mr. Hearst measure up to the spirit and motto of his late leader?

CLEAR LAKE NOW FROZEN OVER

Small Launch Made Trip to Stoney Lake on Friday Last

YOUNG'S POINT, Dec. 6.—Navigation closed here on Friday, 3rd inst, Clear Lake having frozen over on Friday night. There was a small launch made a trip from Lakefield to Stoney Lake and return on Friday, and that will be the last boat this season.

The roads are in good condition now for a few more inches of snow to make sleighing.

Mr. Austin Walsh has purchased a fine gasoline launch, called the Widgeon, from Mr. John Blewitt of Lakefield. This nice, trim little craft has an engine of 10½ horse-power, is large enough to carry 12 or 15 passengers, and can make about 13 miles an hour.

Mr. Elmer Johnston, who enlisted a week ago in the 83rd Battalion, Peterborough, paid a visit to his relatives here on Sunday.

The ladies of the Red Cross Society meet here once a week, on Wednesday afternoon. A large number were present last Wednesday. These ladies are doing good work, and we expect they will get the co-operation of the people.

A number of our men are employed at Burleigh Falls by the Government, building a slide below the bridge. Mr. McGregor is the foreman.

STORY OF A CANADIAN HESPERIAN SURVIVOR

Sydney Hicks, of the 10th Canadian Battalion, has returned to Regina. He was in charge of Private Chambers, of Truro, N.S., blinded, who miraculously recovered his sight. Hicks, with several other wounded, was sent to England, and for some months was in Wandsworth Hospital, later going to Cookham, where he spent the four weeks prior to his furlough pending discharge. He embarked on the Hesperian on the night of September 3, and at 8 o'clock on the night of September 4, after he had put Private Chambers to bed, went up on deck, just [illegible] time to feel the shock of the [illegible] which hit the Hesperian in the fore part of the ship. He had just told Chambers how to find his way to the deck, having taken this precaution in case anything might happen. In the commotion which followed the explosion of the torpedo, Hicks lost his charge and was lowered from the ship on the opposite side to which Chambers was let down.

He, however, saw Chambers being placed in the boat; saw also Jack Blackwood, of Blackwood, Sask., placing the life-belts around the three sisters, one of which is now at the Sacred Heart Academy in the city. The boat in which Chambers was placed, in being lowered with uneven keel, tilted and threw twenty of the convalescent soldiers into the water, Chambers being the first to hit the sea with about fifteen on top of him. He sank for a few seconds, then came up shouting, "My God, I can see."

Hicks was one of the last to leave the ship, having seen seven stewards safely stowed away in one of the lifeboats before he took his turn. Asked if he felt any fright at the wild panic going on about him, he answered a plain "No," adding that he just hoped everything would turn out all right and it did. He was on the ocean in inky darkness for several hours, and with his good right arm pulled a young girl out of the water clad only in her night attire. This young lady, affianced to a British officer, was on her way to Montreal, and lost all her baggage. Hicks furnished her the necessary money to buy herself some clothes when she landed at Queenstown from the Alsatian. He has since received two letters, one from the young lady and the other from her fiancee, thanking him for his heroic action. After landing at Queenstown he was taken to England and sailed on the Corsican on September 15, and there met his charge, Private Chambers, who was now able to take care of himself. It was a great reunion of the two soldier pals, and many of the passengers of the Corsican, who had been on the Hesperian, drawn closely to the pair, through admiration for the friendship which existed between the two, helped to make the journey on the Corsican the happiest in the memory of both Hicks and Chambers.

STIRRING ADDRESSES

icipality groups of citizens who banded themselves together and said, "What are we going to do for the wives and dependents of those who are at the Front" Out of this movement has developed what is now known as the Canadian Patriotic Fund. It often happens that the community sending the most men contribute a smaller amount in proportion to the fund than the community that sends the least number of men. Alberta has sent one man for every twenty-five of the total population. This means that the Province of Alberta will draw a larger amount from the Patriotic Fund. It is possible, said Mr. Ames, that at least one million dollars will have to be distributed in parts of Canada where the number of men enlisted is out of proportion to the amount of money subscribed for patriotic purposes. That is the reason why communities like Peterborough should subscribe more.

Canadian Democracy.

The fund was disbursed in an economical and honourable manner Some people, said the speaker, have asked why the Government do not provide such a fund or pay the soldiers enough to eliminate the necessity for such a fund. That seems reasonable enough, said Mr. Ames, who proceeded to illustrate his argument in the following manner. Mr. Millionaire and Mr. Coachman enlist as privates. The wives of both these men receive the same separation allowance, namely, twenty dollars a month. Mrs. Coachman has a number of children and finds it difficult to get along, whereas twenty dollars a month is a mere bagatelle to Mrs. Millionaire. The Government cannot discriminate in either case. That is the democracy of Canada. Out of fifty thousand separation allowances, only thirty thousand receive money from the Patriotic Fund, so that twenty thousand dependents get all they want from the Government. In the case of Mrs. Coachman, the Patriotic Fund Committee comes along and provides what she requires to live decently and comfortably. Go into any municipality and you will find citizens giving the best of their time and means towards helping the Fund They are doing their best to help the men on the firing line.

The Case of Bill Smith.

The speaker illustrated the case of Bill Smith who to-day is standing between the German army and British liberty. Before the war broke out Bill and Mrs. Smith were having somewhat of a struggle to keep the home together. Bill had grown indifferent, and was inclined to let things run. During her husband's absence, Mrs. Smith managed to enjoy a season of prosperity that she had not experienced in years. Money was coming in regularly, and when Bill returned after an absence of fifteen months, she looked ten years younger than when he went away. She says to Bill, "This is the way I have lived for the past fifteen months, and I would like to continue that way." Bill says, "I will see that you do live that way." Now, said Mr. Ames, you have done that much to build up a home that was run down. You have got cases like Mrs. Smith's right here in Peterborough. That is one of the good works being accomplished by this fund.

Cost of Administration.

Six million dollars have been paid into the fund and four and a half millions disbursed. That leaves a balance of one and a half millions. If peace were to be declared next January, it would take the balance, if not more, to keep the dependents of soldiers going until the last of the Canadian troops had returned to Canada. The National Fund is administered at an approximate cost of two and two-thirds per cent. Besides this, the fund receives bank interest, so that ninety-nine dollars and thirty-five cents out of every hundred dollars goes to the soldiers' wives and dependents.

We have entered into the second year of the war, said Mr. Ames. Rumours of peace are in circulation, but there can be no peace until certain things are accomplished. First, Belgium must be restored, also Serbia. A boundary must be established between France and Germany that will enable France to live in peace The nations of the world must be taught that the plighted word must be kept and the Prussian military spirit must be crushed. This is a great testing time for all nations. After it is all over men will look back and wonder if they did all they could. If they did not ring true there will be days of sadness for them. Canada will cherish the man who returns, and we in Canada will feel we cannot do enough for him.

In conclusion, the speaker favourably commented upon the substantial grants that had been made to the fund by both the County and City Councils.

Miss Dorothy Allan gave a most spirited rendition of "La Marseillaise," her effort arousing so much enthusiasm that she had to repeat one of the verses.

Mr. Dan O'Connell.

Mr. Dan O'Connell in a rousing address, took up the local conditions of the Patroitic Fund. He referred to last year's campaign in which $50,000 had been aimed at and $60,000 had been secured. It had been decided at that time that 25 per cent. of the amount secured would be devoted to a relief fund for the assistance of any person in need as a result of the war. So carefully had the relief fund been administered that Mr. O'Connell was able to report that there was still between 6,000 and $7,000 left in the treasury for the coming year. It was not therefore necessary to worry about a relief fund at this time in view of the improvements in conditions generally over last year. Not a man, woman or child had been allowed to remain in need, and yet there was an ample relief fund left for the next twelve months. As regards the Patriotic Fund, Mr. O'Connell pointed out that whereas they had started with 80 on their lists, they now had to look after between 300 and 320 families and the number was increasing continuously. By the end of December it was figured that every dollar contributed by the Peterborough branch to the head office of the National Patriotic Fund would be returned to Peterborough for distribution among the soldiers' families of Peterborough city and county. Peterborough citizens had contributed generously to every call that had been made upon them, and he and the committee had every confidence that they would respond to the present appeal in the same way. Mr. O'Connell aroused much enthusiasm when he showed that the cost of looking and distributing the patriotic fund in Peterborough was only $65 per month. Mr. O'Connell concluded by reading the letter in regard to Sergt. Reuben Beavis, which aroused great enthusiasm.

The presentation of $5 to Miss Mary Harstone as the prize winner in the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E. competition for the best essay on "Why Canada is at War," was the next item on the programme. The presentation was made by Sir Herbert Ames.

Hon. T. W. McGarry.

Hon. T. W. McGarry, the provincial treasurer, aroused the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm in an spirited address. In beginning he re-referred to the steady growth in Canada of a feeling of patriotism and the desire to give. He illustrated this point by a reference to the recent British Red Cross Society campaign in Ontario. When the call had come from the Motherland, the committee had decided to ask Ontario for $500,000. What had been the result? "We have already sent $1,000,000 to England and we have over $400,000 more to send," announced the Provincial Treasurer amid great applause. "This was an indication of the generosity of the people. Generosity is perhaps not the word, however," said Mr. McGarry. "It is rather a duty, a pleasant duty."

The speaker pointed out that with the increased demand for men for the front the demands on the patriotic fund were increasing day by day. The chief criticism that was made in regard to the fund was, he said, generally made by the man who wouldn't contribute a red cent to that fund or anything else.

The "Bill Smith" that Sir Herbert Ames referred to, said Mr. McGarry was becoming famous throughout Canada. Bill may not have been all that he should have been, but the moment that he enlisted and offered himself as a soldier of his King, he became a hero and his wife and family were entitled to the best their fellow citizens could give them.

"Have we ever thought how much we owe to the Empire?" asked Mr. McGarry, who proceeded to effectively develop that point. He showed how the great national growth of Canada had been largely due to the help of Great Britain. He pointed out how the protection of the British fleet had enabled Canada's commerce to go on uninterrupted. To that navy Canada had contributed nothing, but Great Britain had been an indulgent creditor. Surely she need of giving willingly and whole-heartedly must strike home when one considers that indebtedness to the Empire.

"I am often asked," said Mr. McGarry, "if Canada has not done something to pay back that debt. Canada is doing something, she did something at Langemarck that helped to settle some of her indebtedness. (Cheers.)

The provincial treasurer gave a rapid sketch of Germany's aspirations in the war and of what she had expected. Civil war in Ireland, sedition in India, disaffection in South Africa, indifference in Canada and other overseas dominions. He aroused great enthusiasm as he showed how badly the Kaiser had been deceived on all these calculations.

In conclusion Mr. McGarry said that the men who refused to give to such a Fund would carry the fact stamped on his forehead in letters of brass.

Mr. Douglas Carlisle sang "Scots Wha Hae" in good voice and with an effective cornet embellishment by Bandmaster Hughes of the 83rd Battalion Band.

This number was followed by the singing of "The Minstrel Boy" in fine style by the patriotic choir.

Lt.-Col. Mills.

There was an outburst of cheering as Lt.-Col. Mills of the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., was introduced. In a most interesting address Col. Mills sketched the principal events in the history of the Canadian division from its mobilization at Valcartier. Of the battle of Langemarck he said the subject was too painful to speak on, and he asked his audience's permission not to go into details. As for the soldiers at the front, Lt.-Col. Mills said that let the men on the firing line know that their families were being looked after and there would be no worry among the soldiers. They had followed last year's campaign with interest and had shown with pride the men of other battalions what the people of Peterborough were doing for them.

Col. Mills said that the German gas had no terrors for the British soldiers now, and he illustrated the point by displaying one of the new gas helmets that British science had devised. The helmet was placed over the head of Mayor Buller amidst much laughter.

The returned officer repeated his cheerful declaration of the afternoon that all was well on the western front and that the war would be over this time next year.

Bishop O'Brien.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, was the last speaker. He most heartily endorsed the Patriotic Fund. He repeated what he had told his people that even in giving their last cent they could not do as much as the man who offered his life. His Lordship concluded amid loud cheers by declaring that he would do his "bit."

The singing of the campaign song, the Women's National Anthem, by the ladies in the choir and in the audience, and "God Save the King" brought a most successful meeting to a close.

BY-LAWS

SYNOPSIS OF PROPOSED BY-LAW ENTITLED "A BY-LAW TO AUTHORIZE THE BORROWING OF $30,000.00 BY THE ISSUE OF DEBENTURES THEREFOR, TO MEET THE COST OF ACQUIRING LAND FOR EXHIBITION GROUNDS."

THE purpose of the proposed By-Law is to provide for the acquiring of land for exhibition grounds, and to purchase a site therefore, the same being lots Eighteen, Nineteen and Twenty, in Township Lot Fourteen, in the Eleventh Concession of the Township of North Monaghan. The amounts required and authorized to be raised by the said By-Law is the sum of $30,000.00. The Debentures to be issued to raise this sum are to be payable within twenty years from the date of the issue of the same, and to bear interest in the meantime at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable half yearly on the thirtieth day of June, and the thirty-first day of December, in each year, and to have coupons attached thereto for the payment of said interest.

THE amount to be raised annually for the payment of the debt is the sum of $2307.45, of which $1,800.00 is for interest and $1,507.45 is to form a sinking fund for the payment of the Debentures at their maturity.

TAKE NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the foregoing is a true synopsis of the proposed by-law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, to be submitted to the vote of the electors and that the said vote will be taken on the Third day of January, 1916, between the hours of nine o'clock in the morning and five o'clock in the afternoon at the same places a poll shall be held for the annual municipal elections.

The 31st day of December, 1915, at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the City Clerk, in the said Municipality, has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk, and the 4th day of January, 1916, at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon at the office of the City Clerk in the said city, the Clerk of the said Municipality will attend and sum up the votes given for and against the said proposed By-Law, and if the assent of the electors is obtained to said proposed By-Law, it will be be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said corporation at a meeting to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice and that such publication was made on the 8th day of December, 1915.

TAKE NOTICE FURTHER that a tenant who desires to vote upon said proposed By-Law must deliver to the Clerk not later than the 28th day before the day appointed for taking the vote a declaration under the Canada Evidence Act, that he is a tenant whose lease extends for the time which the debt or liability is to be created, or in which the money is to be raised by the proposed by-law is payable, or for at least twenty-one years, and that he has by the lease covenanted to pay all municipal taxes in respect of the property of which he is tenant other than local improvements rates.

COW'S "MOO" CAUSE OF CHILD'S DEATH

ANIMAL POKES ITS HEAD IN AT WINDOW, INFANT GOES INTO CONVULSIONS.

Greensburg, Pa., December 7.—Investigation by Dr. H. Albert McMurray, coroner of Westmoreland county, into the death of James Henry Pershing, the three year old son of Lawrence Pershing of Grapeville, has revealed that the child was literally frightened to death.

Several days ago the boy was playing when a cow at pasture in a lot adjoining the house looked in at an open window of the room where the child was. As the little one glanced towards the window the cow mooed loudly.

With a scream the child collapsed and went into convulsions. A physician was unable to give the boy any relief and his death ensued 12 hours later.

Voice of The People

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 8, 1915.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The liberal grant of $20,000 passed by the City Council for patriotic purposes is certainly very commendable and I am sure receives the approbation of every ratepayer, and as there are a number of wealthy corporations or manufacturing concerns that are exempt or partially exempt, from taxation, does it not seem unfair to those people that they should be debarred from contributing to so worthy an object, why not insert one half mill or one mill in their schedule, so as not to exclude those citizens from participating in such a worthy cause. Another item worthy of attention is the by-law to be submitted for the consideration of the ratepayers at the coming municipal elections for the purpose of raising $30,000 to purchase the present agricultural grounds and race track. While everybody may admit that those grounds are a decided bargain at the price, are not the ratepayers entitled to a little more light on the subject so as to vote intelligently. Therefore I respectfully submit the following queries: What are the grounds to be used for, if for present purposes? What revenue is the city to derive from the outlay, the interest on $30,000 at 5 p.c. per annum would be $1,500. Is there any guarantee that this revenue is forthcoming, or are those grounds to be purchased and paid for by our city taxpayers and handed over to a corporation composed of the wealthier class for the purpose of exhibiting and advertising their wares, and for the exciting sport of a race track? Or is it the intention to open up this thirty acre farm and extend our city streets through it and place those lots on the market at, say $200 per lot, no man to get more than one lot, so as to exclude speculators and give the less wealthy class and the labouring man an opportunity to own a home by selling to him on the installment plan? If the latter is the intention, then the object is a most commendable one, and afford our city aldermen a splendid opportunity to show the interest they take in this class of citizens. By all means, let us have more light on this subject.

Thanking your in advance, Mr. Editor, I am,

Yours very respectfully,
M. H. Quinlan, City.

Says Mr. Gordon Has Failed To Substantiate Charges In Pre-Election Letters Last Year

Mr. W. H. Hill Told Board of Education He Had Repeatedly Urged An Investigation But His Solicitor Had Been Unable to Effect It.

"A COWARD AND SHYSTER"

The absence of Mr. G. N. Gordon at last night's meeting of the Board of Education was made conspicuous in the light of Mr. W. H. Hill's statement concerning the charges published by Mr. Gordon on the eve of the municipal elections a year ago. Mr. Hill recalled the charges and the fact that he had been particularly referred to by Mr. Gordon.

"I am in no way afraid of those charges," said Mr. Hill, "and I defy Mr. Gordon or any other man to make any charges reflecting against me."

Mr. Hill regretted that in spite of every effort on his part to have Mr. Gordon's charges investigated he had been unable to do so. He had spoken of his solicitor, Mr. P. R. Hall, about twenty times and had written him on two or three occasions demanding that some action be taken.

"I am sorry my friend is not here to-night, but I am not going to say anything behind his back. He refused to bring this matter to an issue and apparently was waiting until the end of the year. There may be a meeting next Saturday and the chances are there will be no investigation this year. I have no fear of Mr. Gordon, I never feared a coward at any rate and I look upon Mr. Gordon as a coward and a shyster. He made gross charges against me which he has not attempted to prove, and he knows that he is not entitled to sit here in any case. No member of the council is allowed to sit here. Of a man of that stamp it is a question whether he shall be permitted to act as City Solicitor."

Mr. R. R. Hall's Report

Mr. Hill then presented the following letter from his solicitor:—W. H. Hill, Esq.,

Peterborough, Dec. 7th, 1915.

Dear Sir,—In answer to your request I beg to advise you that although I have repeatedly and urgently requested Mr. G N. Gordon during this last year to proceed with his charges against you, he has failed to do so and has from time to time made excuses for not doing so. He has had ample time to make good his charges and the only natural inference that can be drawn, is that he recognizes that the charges he made against you are wholly groundless and that he had no real reason to make them. Even the charges that Mr. Gordon did make against you on the 14th of January, 1915 are wholly groundless and there is no real merits in them. His charges when they are stripped of all legal frills and ornaments, simply amount to this, that a large insurance corporation would not be entitled to insure the property of our City Schools, if an agent of the company happened to be a member of the Board of Education and had a territorial agreement with the company to pay commissions on all insurance affected in his territory. As a matter of law an agent of an insurance company is not disqualified from being a member of the Board of Education even though the insurance company he represents carries a fire policy upon school property and the agent is remunerated by the insurance company. Moreover under the Insurance Act the agent of an insurance company would be guilty of a criminal act were he to rebate any part of his remuneration. Such being the case you can readily understand why Mr. Gordon has not been prepared to make good his groundless charge against you.

It will be remembered that at the meeting of the Board of Education held on January 14th last Mr. Gordon declined to formulate any charges whatever against the members of the Board of Education in respect to the general charges contained in his address to the Electors on December 31st, 1914 wherein he says,—

"If I am elected I will see that no private gain goes into the pockets of the members of the Board and that no member of the Board deal with the Board of Education in a business way.

"A certain ring has existed for years which it has been almost impossible to break up and I am out to smash this ring if I can—If I am elected I will see that no straw men are put up to sell supplies to the City without tender when the profit goes to the principal. I will also see that expensive deputations do not go out of town on the peoples' money with the suggested object of improving the knowledge of the deputation in Educational matters when the benefit to these members is nill. My platform is for strict economy, purchases by tender, no profits on contracts or business transactions to go to any member of the Board which has the right to make contracts."

The insinuations contained in the address imply that the members of the Board of Education had been guilty of malfeasance in office. Mr. Gordon was challenged to formulate his charges but did not do so, and the only natural inference to be drawn from it is that he had no charges to make against the members of the Board of Education, and that he had no real grounds whatever for addressing the Electors as he did, and that his insinuations against the honor and good name and high character of the members of the Board were uncalled for, unjustifiable from every point of view, and without a partical of evidence to support them.

I might say that last week I notified Mr Gordon that the last meeting of the Board, as I understood it, would be held on Tuesday the 7th inst. He has notified me that a meeting will take place before the Judge on the 11th inst. As to what he now proposes to do at this late date I am wholly uninformed.

Yours faithfully,
R. R. HALL.

Said Board Included.

On motion of Mr. Hill, seconded by Mr. Eastwood the letter was received.

Referring to Mr. Hall's letter, Mr. Hill remarked that during the year Mr. Gordon had never mentioned the "ring" he alleged existed. The published statement that he (Mr. Gordon) would see that "no straw men are put up to sell supplies to the City without tender when the profit goes to the principal" was a direct charge against and an insult to every member of the Board, Mr. Hill said. He further stated that a large order had been purchased without tender about two months ago by the committee of which Mr. Gordon was a member; but he said nothing about it, thereby showing his inconsistency.

From Mr. Gordon's letters to the press, Mr. Hill continued, the average citizen would regard the members of the Board as a lot of crooks. Mr. Gordon had sat all year and said nothing.

Should Clear the Board.

A number of members were sitting at the Board for the last meeting, Mr. Crane observed, and they should not go down under that shadow. The members should make a stand for a clearance before the end of the year.

Mr. Ackerman—This should have been investigated at the first meeting of the year.

Mr. Hill replied that every possible step had been taken to secure an investigation. It had been taken up by the City Council and referred to the Judge and Mr. Gordon was urged by Mr. Hall to substantiate his charges.

"I can't take the judge by the throat and force him to hold an investigation," Mr. Hill remarked.

In conclusion it was moved by Dr. Burnham and seconded by Mr. Denne that a special meeting be called by the chairman if necessary following next Saturday's hearing.

One Man, One Job Is Labour Council's Idea

A letter from Mr. William Stevens, secretary of the Trades and Labour Council, was read at the meeting of the Board of Education last night. It conveyed the opinion of the Labour Council that the position of secretary of the School Board should be given to some unemployed man.

"We think it is only fair," Mr. Stevens wrote, "that one man should have one job, and as the present secretary-treasurer has a good salary, the Board should employ some one that would only be too glad of such a position."

MERCHANTS ARE WARNED OF FIRE

Fire Chief Howard Receives Customary Notice Regarding Fire Hazard at This Season of Year

The following is addressed to Fire Chief Howard:

Following our usual custom at this season of the year I beg to call your attention to the dangers to life and property from Christmas decorations, displays, etc., which are frequently made at this time of the year. The use of Christmas greens, harvest specimens and other inflammable materials such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, and the like, (especially in connection with electric and other lighting systems), is decidedly an increase of hazard, it being impossible to make displays of that nature perfectly safe.

The Statutory Conditions of your Insurance Policy read in part as follows:—

"Any change material to the risk, but within the control or knowledge of the assured shall avoid the policy, as to the part affected thereby, unless the change is promptly notified in writing to the Company or its local agent."

In addition to the danger to property from the displays referred to, the danger to life in crowded stores or places of meeting, by reason of a panic occasioned by fire, even though it be small and easily controlled, is so great that the Underwriters, who have made a study of such hazards, would fail in their duty should they not give this warning

By order,
JOHN A. ROBERTSON
Secretary.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hugham Johnstone, painter and decorator, 610 College Street, will be answered on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course

San Toy, Peterborough:—Last week I wrote to you regarding glazing what I meant was, glazing over a surface such as a dull red, or as painters say a flat red. I was advised to glaze it over and by so doing it would be richer in color, and have a shine to it.

Ans:—First see that the surface (whatever it is) is perfectly smooth. Then as your ground is a dull red I would suggest carmine as a glaze. Thoroughly mix a little carmine (the depth of tone will decide the amount) with some good rubbing varnish, and add a small quantity of raw linseed oil to retard the drying. Brush it on very carefully, finishing as you go, do not attempt to go over any part the second time as it will show streaky. This will be "shiny" and of a rich lake tone.

Rough Usage, City:—I have some antique mahogany chairs which got badly scratched in moving, would you kindly tell me through your "Arts and Craft" column how I can repair same or would it be advisable for me to put them into experienced hands.

Ans:—It is always advisable to entrust anything worth while to experienced hands if one is anxious to have a thing done properly. However you may be satisfied to tackle the job yourself if the scratches are not too deep. Try rubbing them with a little sweet or olive oil, if your chairs are not imitation that will likely answer. If not then use the red oil mentioned some time ago in this column.

Inquisitive, Smith Tp:—At an auction sale I bought a large oak rocking chair, which somebody had given a coat of blue paint. Would you be so kind as to tell me through your valuable space how I can bring it back to its natural color?

Ans:—It is simply a matter of removing the paint and polish. I would suggest the use of some paint and varnish remover which may be purchased at any hardware store. After cleaning your rocker thoroughly of all paint and polish, it will be as near its natural oak color as will be necessary for all practical purposes. Then you can stain, shellac or varnish to suit yourself.

Mrs. Blank, Peterborough, Ont:—I will feel obliged to you if you will give me a little advice through your very helpful "Arts and Craft" columns as to the proper method of staining wicker work.

Ans:—Wicker work is easily stained by simply using some stain suitable to your environments, taste or desirability, stain of almost any color can be purchased, or I will be glad to give you a formula If you give me particulars as to the method. It is mainly to brush on the stain evenly and thinly, and follow it up with a coat of varnish.

Mrs. W. P. Ennismore Ont:—I made a short solution of lye to clean a black ebony curtain pole with, and it seems to be very sticky. Will it be all right to paint it like it is, or how will I overcome it?

Ans:—If you are in possession of a real "black ebony" curtain pole you have indeed a novelty, something to be proud of. By no means paint it, especially in its present sticky state I am afraid however that you have been somewhat deceived, for I am inclined to think that your "black ebony" is perhaps after all only very ordinary pine, painted black. Better make another strong solution of lye and get all the black ebony washed off, then rinse very thoroughly in clean water before repainting.

THE HISTORY OF SAN TOY

The Chinese musical play, shortly to be presented by the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society, entitled "San Toy," is one of the group of comedies produced by George Edwards of Daly Theatre, London, written by Harry Greenbank, Adrian Ross, Edward Morton, the music composed by Sydney Jones. The "Geisha" and the "Greek Slave" belong to the same group of plays. It was presented for the first time at the outbreak of the South African war in 1899 and the stirring military scene in Act 2, portraying the participation of the overseas troops in the fight, made the play exceedingly popular. The story of the British Consul, Sir Bingo Preston in his dealing with the sly and wily Chinese in obtaining concessions, the amusing ruse of the Mandarin, Yen How, of disguising his daughter as a boy, Captain Bobby's courtship of "San Toy" in spite of her disguise, and the stirring patriotic numbers, 'Motherland,' with numbers of dainty musical tit-bits, go to make up this most pleasing work. For amateurs, "San Toy" presents considerable scope, and is anything but easy to present. There are no less than fourteen singing parts for principles, and twenty-one speaking parts. The memorizing of both words and music are not the least difficult part of such an ambitious production, indeed plays of this calibre are seldom attempted by other than professional companies. It is a fine company that will make its bow to Peterborough shortly, and no pains have been spared by all concerned to make it as striking a success as was its sister play, the "Geisha," some years ago, although there will not be on the occasion a trip to Toronto, to star at the Royal Alexandra in the "Earl Grey" competition. A series of six performances of "San Toy" by amateurs was run years ago under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, in England, similar to that of the "Mikado," now having a week's run in Toronto, but the show is a great one for performers who have to be at business during the daytime as well. Quite a number of new stars will scintillate in this par- new stars will scintillate in this presentation.

Junior Branch I.O.D.E. Propose Reading Room in South Ward School

The following letter received the consideration of the Board of Education last night:

"The Junior Branch of the I.O.D.E. are contemplating opening a reading room for children in the south end of the city. In opening a reading room of this description we do not propose that it should replace the public library, but rather that the children should find there encouragement and guidance in their reading, and be read to when desired.

If we decide to undertake this work would it be possible for us to have a room in the South Central school with lighting and heating, from 3.30 until 6 o'clock.

Yours sincerely,
Jean E. Harstone.

Mr. Hill moved, seconded by Dr. Burnham, that this communication be referred to Mr. Crane and Inspector Mowat, who are to report back regarding the feasibility of the proposed reading course.

Mr. Eastwood raised the point that there were already too many fads, and this plan might conflict with the present work.

EMPLOYEE WAS CONVICTED OF THEFT

Employer Decides to Take the Delinquent Back in His Employ

In police court this morning, an employee of a local industry was convicted of theft from the firm employing him. The evidence showed that the operations of the accused extended over a period of several weeks. With characteristic, not to say unusual generosity, the proprietor of the concern agreed to take the offender back in his employ. This appealed to Magistrate Dumble, who commended the proprietor in question for the stand he had taken. Accused, who was represented in court by Mr. G. N. Gordon, has a wife and two young children. He was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

A STATEMENT FROM MR. GORDON

When Mr. Gordon was interviewed to-day he said he was in Toronto yesterday on two very important matters, and he was unable to leave in time to catch his train to return to the city to discuss the matter which came up before the Board of Education last night. He also said that as the matter was pending before the Judge at the present time, it would be contempt of court to go into the merits of the case and discuss it when it was pending before His Honour Judge Huycke. He further said that he intended to draw to the attention of Judge Huycke, all this correspondence which had taken place. Mr. Gordon further said that he intended to bring an action against Mr. Hill for two expressions he used reflecting upon him professionally, but beyond that he would not discuss the merits of the case while it was pending before the Judge.

Mr. Gordon further added that if Mr. Hill wanted to take an appointment out before the Judge he could have done so at any time, and in fact an appointment has been taken out for the hearing of the investigation on Saturday next, and Mr. Gordon interviewed Judge Huycke and obtained that appointment.

HAD ORDERED GARBAGE WAGGONS ON STRENGTH OF COMMITTEE'S ACT

When the Property Committee decided to recommend the tender of E. K. Graham to the Council for the position of contractor of the garbage collecting system, the committee was so unanimously in favour of this proposal that Mr. Graham went away with the feeling that there only remained the sanction of the Council, and that occasioned no doubt. But the Council shot away on the track that Ald. Stratton struck out for on the principle of consistency and the committee's recommendation was sent back. It is now learned that Mr. Graham had given an order for extra waggons and horses in order to be ready for the work at the first of the year, and had done so for the reason that he had received all but the signed contract.

SYMPATHY ASKED FOR SOLO PIANIST

A picture of Him Plodding all Over the City Searching For Good Instrument

There must be an impression that the life of a solo pianist is singularly toilsome. We read from time to time that M. Ivanoffsky has selected a certain piano as the one best suited for the display of his incomparable art. One begins to picture the laborious efforts of this temperamental visitor, calling at wareroom after wareroom, testing evenness of tone, responsiveness of action, pedal mechanism, banging on the bass with a succession of mighty chords, twiddling with rampant velocity in the upper treble. One almost hears him say to the manager: "No, this will not suit. I regret it, but there is a bow-legged piano up the street with a bigger chest measurement and more sonority.'" One imagines such a performance going on in every city, and sees reason in the critics statement that pianists are a sad and melancholy crew. The thoughtful and discerning folk do not take much stock in these stories of selection. They know well enough that the public announcement by some artist of the amazing excellence of some piano has been bought—a matter of bargain—like beef, or woollen underwear, or any other article of merchandise. Did you ever see an advertised endorsement by any distinguished musical visitor of the Gourlay Piano? No, and you never will. Gourlays have neither inclination nor need to seek that sort of publicity. They do not send out a piano without payment, either for a visiting musician or for a Toronto studio. They make an instrument so honest and so supremely good from pedal to top that they can depend upon merit alone. Merit has sold the Gourlay for twelve years. Merit has brought connoisseurs to the office of J. O. Fife, 341½ Water street. Merit has brought a success that was not appreciably halted even by the war.

6—Command—

Sergt. Wride, Lce.-Corp. Bath.

W. G. Bailey, for Lt.-Col.,
Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Notices—

The following undermentioned mail is being held at the Battalion Orderly Room: Mr. Faithful, Pte. John Lauley, Mr. W. A. Jones, Mr. A. Hardman, Walter D. Jones.

A LETTER FROM THE FRONT.

Mrs. Adam Davidson, 169 Charlotte Street, has received the appended letter from her son, Driver A. Davidson, who is with the Ammunition Column of the 2nd Canadian Contingent now in France. The letter was written on 10th November, from "Somewhere in France."

"Dear Mother,—I received your ever welcome letter, and was more than glad to hear from you. I am well, and hope when this reaches you it will find you in the best of health. I suppose it is getting a little cold over home, but you should see the weather over here in France. It is something dreadful. You wouldn't believe that it has rained for nearly three weeks and the mud is something awful. It is about twenty-four inches deep, and when you get one foot down you don't know when you are going to get the other one out.

"Well, mother, I suppose you wish the war was over, but you don't wish it any more than I do. I wish it was over to-morrow so that I could get back to God's country. At that, we are not as bad as the poor fellows in the trenches. You should see them after they have been in for a week. They are in a dreadful state due to the mud. So we can hardly kick about the mud we are in. We have the best place to sleep of any of the soldiers around. We are billeted in barns, and they are not any too warm. We shiver with the cold all night.

"We have been very lucky since we came over here, and have not lost a single man, and believe me we don't want to, as men are very scarce. We are up to the trenches every other night with ammunition for the soldiers in the trenches. The other night we went out with a load of bombs, and say, I never experienced such a night in all my life. It was so dark that you couldn't see your horses. We had to take the stuff about 10 miles from where we are, and that is a long draw with eighty boxes of those things for the Germans. Believe me, you have got to go very slow or else you go to heaven very quick. On one occasion I was within two hundred yards of the first line of trenches, when a big 12-inch gun went off right over our heads. It was one of our own guns. It gave me an awful scare.

"If you can send me any socks, I could use them to good advantage. They are very scarce around here. They charge you five francs a pair. This is about one dollar in Canadian money. We get fifteen francs every two weeks, which works out at the rate of thirty francs a month, or six six dollars. I am fatter than when I went away. In fact, I am bigger than I ever was, and weigh 145 pounds.

"Best regards to all."

Miss E. Throop, 104 Lock street, has received the following interesting letter from her brother, Private Wilfrid Throop of the 21st Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force. Private Throop was wounded on October 7th. The letter follows:

"Received your welcome letter yesterday. It was sent to the trenches and subsequently returned to London. I am sending you a few post cards of London, which will give you some idea of what it is like. I was wounded on October 7th and am in bed yet, but hope to be up in a few days. My wounds are nearly all healed. I hope to be able to return to the trenches and get another chance at the Germans. During the fourteen days I was in there I fired over one thousand rounds of ammunition."

My address is: Pte. Wilfrid Throop, Alexander ward, east Edmonton military hospital, London, England.

At the regular rehearsal of the Peterborough Choral Society held last night, things took a somewhat unusual turn. About 8.30 p.m., when a former member, "who has been to the front and done and his duty," walked in a little earlier than was expected, the members rose en masse and sang "Auld Lang Syne" and "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." In the course of a few remarks by Sergt. Allen, he told the members that he often used to think of the Choral Society while at the front and in the hospital, and often wondered whether he would be spared to come back, and was indeed thankful to be back in time for the "Messiah." Mr. John Allen on behalf of the Society, extended a cordial invitation to take his usual place in the chorus for the Messiah if he felt well enough. The rehearsal then proceeded, and concluded about 10 o'clock p.m.

The youngest son of Rev. S. Carr, Anglican minister at Apsley, has enlisted with the 93rd Regiment.

Soldiers and their friends, and who isn't a friend of a soldier, just now will find the Christmas number of the Examiner, which will be issued on Saturday, a most attractive souvenir of Peterborough's share in the world war. A special section of eight pages, showing the photographs of 200 soldiers, will be supplemented by group pictures of the officers and men of the 93rd Battalion. These group pictures from photographs taken especially for the Examiner by the Roy studio, will be printed on good paper and will be in demand to send to friends and relatives. In addition to an unusually fine collection of Christmas pictures and stories, there will be other special features that will make the Christmas number the best yet published by this paper.

An interesting event took place in the dormitory of No. 2 platoon of the 93rd Battalion at noon to-day when Pte. Tom Davis was presented with a handsome clock by the members of the platoon. Pte. Davis is entering into the ranks of the benedicts to-night, and his comrades took advantage of the opportunity to show their esteem for him. Sergt. Jack Playford made the presentation on behalf of the men of the platoon, wishing Pte. Davis every success. The recipient made a suitable reply in response to the gift after which No. 2 platoon gave three hearty cheers for their comrade.

The officers of the 93rd Battalion attended a lecture on musketry by Capt. Swaine and Sergt. Instructor Goodhouse this morning.

Capt. V. W. Lancaster of Peterborough, left yesterday for Lindsay to report for duty as an officer of the 109th Victoria and Haliburton Battalion.

Among the recruits who have passed the medical examination for the 93rd Battalion in the past couple of days were the following:

Warren W. Windover, Hall's Bridge.
John A. Parkins, 40 Lafayette Ave.
Wm. Carl, Lasswade.
Levi McNaughton, Young's Point.
Ernest Camm, Hastings.
Roy Gadoua, Clarady P.O.
Jas. A. Ball, Lakefield.

An order has been issued by Col. Dawson, officer commanding the 59th Battalion, forbidding the sale of liquor to soldiers other than ale, porter and lager.

The Kingston Standard says: Professor Milner, the well known local pianist, who was for some time a resident of Peterborough and organist of the George street Methodist church, has given three sons to the colours. Charles, Henry and Albert, the only three boys in the family, are enlisted and will go to the front. At the beginning of the war, Albert enlisted and went as far as Valcartier, but as he was only seventeen years of age he was discharged and came home. He is now eighteen and willing to do his bit, so he will accompany the 146th battalion overseas.

His other two brothers also belong to the 146th. Charlie was a stenographer at Robertson's Ltd. before enlisting. Harry was a taxi-driver, and Albert worked in the Shipyard. The three are sturdy, well built chaps and will be a decided acquisition to the battalion.

A Welcome at Quebec.

From Mr. W. G. Common, now of Quebec, and formerly of Peterborough, the Examiner has received the following interesting letter:

68 St. Nazaire Street,
Quebec, P.Q.,

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—On Saturday morning last I met my friend, Bobt. Dickson. He greeted me with "Hello, there! What do you think?"

"Well, what is it, another Zepp raid?"

"No.' This with a knowing smile which meant he had something up his sleeve,

"I just got Wednesday's Examiner and I learn that we have some wounded soldiers here in Quebec, and George Allen is amongst them.

Whew! by St. George and St. Andrew (Bob is a Scot,) Then we must dig him up, and we at once made arrangements to get in touch with him. It was not so easy. It was not until late on Saturday night that Bob found him on the street. He at once let me know of his find and right glad were we to give him a welcome back to Canada, more especially because we are interested in the old town, and the boys who have so nobly fought against our common enemy, for the rights of small nations and the cause of civilization.

How glad we were to feel once more the grip of his hand. But we could not help thinking of those that cannot return. It was in the "wee sma' hours" on Sunday that we wished him good morning. We were pleased to notice he was looking fine. His shoulder is still painful and he is carrying a small piece of shell in one ear. There is one regret and that is we did not find him sooner. He was in the city four days before we found him. From his conversation we are satisfied that our boys have made a name that will forever renown to the honour and glory of the Dominion.

We called again after breakfast, but Mrs. Dickson having put him up over night. We visited the quarters at the emigration buildings. They were most comfortable. Got introduced to a number of other wounded heroes, all in the best of spirits and most anxious to get to their homes, all having pleasant memories spent at the front. Pleasant memories, it seems so strange, yet we were assured that it was true.

The stories of kindness and self sacrifice of the men, one to the other, brought out the best that was in them. One fellow said that the experience made them better men. Their lot was easy compared with the sacrifice of mothers and wives had and were making. One hears on every side, I wonder how they are getting on at home, etc.

Sergt. Allen left here at two o'clock p.m. for Toronto and soon you will see him in the flesh. We were glad we saw him, and on a small scale gave him a Peterborough welcome. Should there be any more of our boys from the old town staying over in old Quebec, we would be so glad to know and give them the glad hand, and so do our little bit.

Yours truly,
W. G. Common.

SAVAGE WOMEN HEALTHY

The savage lives in the open, eats simple foods, knows nothing of household drudgery or social life, gets plenty of sleep and exercise and is perfectly healthy and strong, but the civilized woman is a slave to home duties and society, often becomes run-down, nervous and physically unfit to be a companion or wife. Our local druggists, McDermid & Jury, and E. L. Payne, have a reliable, non-secret remedy that is a boon to such women, its component parts being peptonate of iron for the blood, the nourishing properties of beef peptone and the medicinal extractives of fresh, healthy cods' livers, all dissolved in a delicious native wine. It is really wonderful how rapidly weak, run-down women are built up by its use.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—No safe conduct for Capt. Boy-ed has been requested by the American Government, Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons this afternoon. Grey's statement was in response to a question from a member. He said that only four safe conducts for Austro-Germans have been granted by the Foreign Office at the request of the United States since the beginning of the war.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Henry Ford fired another "peace shot" from the wireless battery of the peace ship Oscar II. to-day. He sent to the United Press and other news associations, via the Cape Race wireless station, an 800-ford article, describing a meeting aboard the ship last night, in which Ellis Jones attacked President Wilson's preparedness message to Congress. "This is a reactionary message," said Jones. "It comes to us at a time when we must speak out. We are going now to stop this terrible war among nations, everyone of which was prepared in a military way for the war. This is no time to disturb American traditions and prepare the United States for war." Jones called attention to the absence of forts on the American-Canadian frontier and on the Norway-Sweedish boundary as an indication that absence of war-like preparations had a result in peaceful relations. He challenged the President to state what enemy the United States need fear.

ABOARD THE PEACE SHIP OSCAR II., Via Wirless, Dec. 8.—All is not peaceful aboard Henry Ford's ship of peace to-day. Rev. Chas. F. Akid, of San Francisco, and several others, who entertain some doubts as to the success of the peace plan, have asked to be "shown." They insist on being allowed to examine documents Mme. Rosika Schwimmer asserted she had in her possession, providing that certain belligerents on both sides are not opposed to peace negotiations. They also insist that Mme. Schwimmer offer proof of her statement that unofficial representatives of belligerents will attend the Ford Peace Conference. Mme. Schwimmer thus far has refused to produce documents on the ground that they are confidential.

BOMB EXPLODED.

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—During night manoeuvres of the 83rd Battalion last night, a small bomb exploded in the hand of Bomber George Giles, shattering his hand so badly that it had to be amputated at the wrist in the camp military hospital. His face was badly lacerated and burnt from the tin and powder. The fumes also affected his eyes. Giles came from Guelph and enlisted with the 83rd. His sister lives in Ridgeworth, Shropshire, England.

REINFORCEMENTS ARRIVE

LONDON, Dec. 8.—It was announced in the Commons this afternoon that reinforcements are already in Mesopatamia for the British expedition, which was compelled to retire after getting within sight of Bagdad. The British casualties at the battle of Csestiphon included more than 600 killed and 3,000 wounded, but the Government was assured that success would shortly crown their efforts in that territory.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Answering a question of Philip Snowden, M.P., in the Commons to-day, Premier Asquith said that if propositions of a general peace were seriously put forward by any of the enemy Governments, they would first be considered by the Allied powers. Further than that, he would make no statement at present.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—A News Agency despatch this afternoon reported that the American steamer Communipaw, though torpedoed, arrived safely at Alexandria on Monday. Nothing definite is known.

ADMINISTERED RITE OF CONFIRMATION

Rt. Rev. W. D. Reeve, D.D., Assistant Bishop of Toronto, in Lakefield Last Sunday

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 8.—Reeve Fitzgerald was in Peterborough last week attending the meeting of the County Council.

Mrs. T. E. Webster and Miss Marguerite Webster, who have been spending the summer in Smith, returned on Wednesday last to spend the winter at their home in the village.

Mrs. Bates of Washington, D.C., is in the village, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. Sutton on Regent street.

DEATH OF HASTINGS LADY IN THE WEST

Was on a Visit to Her Sister at Kerrobert When She Was Taken Ill—News of Hastings

HASTINGS, Dec. 7.— The remains of Mrs. Cecil Ruff (nee Dora Howson), arrived via C.P.R. on Sunday night at Norwood, and were conveyed to the residence of her parents, Norwood road, from whence the funeral was held on Monday afternoon to Norwood cemetery for interment. Deceased had been visiting her sister, Mrs. Gordon Breckenridge, in Kerrobert, Sask., where she was taken ill, and in spite of all that medical skill and loving care could do, she passed away after an illness of but a few short hours. She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, her mother and one sister, also a little child of tender age, who have the deepest sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sad bereavement.

Mr. Gildera, a member of the C. O. C. Co., spent a short holiday here last week.

Dr. Huycke and family have arrived, and have taken up residence in the home recently vacated by Dr. Edmison and family.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Willis Faux is daily improving.

The patrons of Ormonde cheese factory held their annual meeting on Saturday last, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Pres. and salesman, John Coughlan; secretary, Wm. Pickens; treasurer, James McCarthy; auditor, Bobt. Collins. The operations of the season left the directors in good standing, and with a considerable sum to their credit.

Private George Buchanan of Trent Bridge, who recently returned, honourably discharged from active service, gave us a call on Saturday.

Mrs. Thos. O'Neil has returned from a pleasant visit with friends in Keene.

Dr. T. B. Edmison was in town on Friday and left for a holiday in Toronto.

A number of our people drove over to Norwood on Wednesday last to attend the church dinner in the Presbyterian church there, and report a successful undertaking.

Mr. Julian Carter of Havelock, gave us a call on Saturday.

Hit With Piece of Shell and Was Instantly Killed

Brother of Mr. Frank Wainwright, This City, Meets Death at the Front—Was With King's Royal Rifles

WAS 27 YEARS OF AGE

Mr. Frank Wainwright, corner Mark and Sophia streets, received a letter from his sister, and also a paper from his home town, Tamworth, in the Midlands, England, announcing the death in action of his youngest brother, Rifleman Harold James Wainwright, 8th King's Royal Rifles.

Referring to the sad event the Tamworth Herald of November 20th says:

"News was received on Tuesday that 11600, Rifleman Harold James Wainwright, 8th King's Royal Rifles, was killed in action on November 9. The sad tidings was conveyed in a letter to the late soldier's wife by Major Seymour, who wrote on Nov. 10 as follows:

"It is with the deepest regret that I have to inform you that your husband, Rifleman Wainwright, was killed by a piece of shell yesterday. He was hit in the head and death was instantaneous; he could have felt nothing. He died for his country, doing his duty cheerfully and well. Please accept my deepest sympathy with you in your great loss. We buried him last night in the little cemetery behind the line, and a cross will be put over the grave.

Rifleman Wainwright was 27 years of age, being the youngest son of the late Mr. Joseph Charles Wainwright, verger at Tamworth church. He enlisted in April of this year and had been in France just over three months. Prior to enlistment he was employed as branch manager at Mr. John Thornburn's boot shop at Warwick. He leaves a widow and one child. The former was Miss M. Cross, of the Wood Lodge, Bonehill."

Mr. Wainwright's many friends in Peterborough will sympathise with him in his bereavement. Mrs. Wainwright's brother, Pte. Eric Bartle, has been missing since the battle of St. Julien.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

MANY NEW TEAMS IN O. H. A. THIS SEASON

TORONTO, Dec. 7.—Two more O.H.A. clubs have signified their intention of playing this coming season in the O.H.A. senior series, viz., Seaforth and Mitchell. Seaforth made a splendid showing in the intermediate series last year, winning their group championship and reaching the semi-finals.

Wiarton the runners-up to Orillia for the intermediate championship, will again be represented in that series. A. Ashley is the secretary of this year's club. Picton, group champions in No. 1 district, intermediate series, have also entered a team. Port Hope and Toronto Simcoes and Gravenhurst will have teams in the junior series.

The following teams have been entered in the various series:—

Senior—Brockville, Berlin, Cornwall, Hamilton Rowing Club, Kingston Frontenacs, Kingston Queen's University, London Overseas Battalion, Mitchell, Ottawa, Connaught H.C., Preston, Seaforth, Sarnia, Stratford, St. Mary's, Toronto 40th Battery, Toronto Riversides, Toronto Argonauts, Toronto R. and A.A., Toronto St. Michael's.

Elmira, Waterloo and perhaps another team in Ottawa are expected to send in their entries in the senior series before the closing of same, which will be on Thursday of this week.

Intermediate—Barrie, 76th battalion; Belleville, Brampton, Bowmanville, Campbellford, Cobourg, St. Michael's, Dunnville, Hamilton R.C., Lindsay, Hamilton Depot Regiment, Markham, Niagara Falls H.C., Owen Sound 147th battalion, Paris, Peterboro Electric H.C., Peterboro 93rd battalion, Picton, Port Colborne, Toronto St. Paul's, Whitby, Woodstock Wiarton.

The following clubs have been asked to state their intentions before Thursday (the closing date for entries): Ayr, Alvinston, Bolton, Brantford, Bracebridge, Bradford, Burlington, Collingwood, Coldwater, Drumbo, Goderich, Ingersoll, Western University (London), Markdale, Midland, New Hamburg, Orillia, Oshawa, Parry Sound, Penetang, Simcoe, Victoria Harbor, Welford, Waubaushene and Weston

Junior—Belleville, Berlin, Union Jacks, Bowmanville, Gravenhurst, Hamilton R. C., Kingston Frontenacs, Kingston, C.I., London Ontarios, Markham, Milton, Newmarket, Peterboro Jr. H.C., Port Hope, Port Colborne, Sarnia, St. Georges, Stratford, Toronto Simcoes, Toronto Aura Lee, Toronto St. Michael's College, Toronto St. Andrew's College, Toronto De la Salle, Woodstock.

$65.50 A MONTH IS COST OF DISTRIBUTING PATRIOTIC FUND

Another wrong impression. Plenty of people make excuses for not contributing to the Fund. Reasons the workers for the Fund will always consider and willingly accept. Excuses are not current. One man decanted on the injustice of giving from the Fund a larger allowance to the wife and family of a sergeant than to those of a private. No difference is made on account of rank. Only if the family circumstances be different. Many families of privates receive more than the amount allotted to those of non-commissioned officers. Again, as in the paragraph preceding, military precedence and regulation do not count. Only the needs of the family, as represented in a decent state of living for the family, which deserves it because the head is in the field fighting for us all.

Another thing, as these seem to cropping up in the canvas. The allowances are graded from $5.00 per month to $20.00. All depends on the number in family, and something as to circumstances. Age of children is considered, of course, so far as practicable. No general rule could be followed as to an absolutely uniform schedule. But within the revenue of the local fund as represented by its collections and deposits at Ottawa amounts are dispensed. Of course every one does not get a satisfactory amount. Possibly the only way to ensure satisfaction would be to allot as that was asked for. That can never be done. So while some are disappointed the majority resognize the difficulties, and in a fine way cordially fall into line and hope for the best.

The morning canvas started off well. The teams are out on the routes. Word is coming in of substantially larger givings than were made last year. The Fire Hall men of the brigade went in for a raise. They contributed $35.00 last year. This year $125.00. If the advance keeps up we are all right.

Remember this subscription is solely for the Patriotic Fund. For the families of soldiers. Not as a charity, but as a gift, from the people to the soldiers' family. Should he not be married, or not leaving a mather or other dependent relative, he does not participate. Last year's subscription included a part for the Local Relief Fund. That is now not needed. These things are mentioned to stand off excuses for not subscribing.

Last night's meeting put heart into the teams. They caught a fine enthusiasm form the able speeches and came away determined to go out and pile up a success. All were wonderfully interested in Sir Herbert Ames' logical and clear exposition of the Fund. Hon. Mr. McGarry was in fine fettle and spoke well. The Patriotic Choir was a feature that added largely to the success. The presence of Lieut.-Col. Mills was an interesting and fitting addition to the programme, and all were glad to welcome him back from the front. The song of Miss Allen and Mr. Carlisle added a touch of interest, and brightened up the programme, while the presentation to Miss Harstone was exactly in line with the sentiment of the evening. Taken in all the meeting was a success. And so say we all, every one.

A Reception To Lt.-Col. Mills, etc.

heroes were cheered at many points on the route, while waving handkerchiefs and hats indicated the pleasure of the citizens at seeing once more two of their number who had been fighting the Empire's battles at the Front.

At the Armouries.

At the Armouries addresses of welcome were presented to Lt.-Col. Mills and Sergt Allen. Mayor Buller presided and heartily welcomed the two on behalf of the city.

Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, then offered a prayer of thanksgiving for the return of the two heroes of the hour, after which the gathering sang "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Lt.-Col. Walker, in welcoming Lt.-Col. Mills and Sergt. Allen on behalf of the 57th Regiment, said that the two had done their duty faithfully to the Empire and that their fellow-citizens honoured them for what they had done. It was especially a pleasure to welcome one who, like Col. Mills, was returning for further duty at the Front. Col. Mills would, he was sure, be glad to know that most of the men of the 57th Regiment were now on active service.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., said that every citizen of Peterborough was proud of the work the two soldiers they were welcoming had done at the Front. He congratulated Mrs. Mills and Mrs. Allen upon having their husbands restored to them, and referred to the sacrifices they had made in giving up their husbands to the cause of Empire. He reminded the gathering that while men suffered at the Front, brave women suffered at home.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., in extending a welcome from the county of Peterborough, said that Col. Mills and Sergt. Allen had done valiant service for Canada and the Empire, and their fellow-citizens envied them the distinction with which they returned. Capt. Burnham, in referring to the great conflict, said that if he knew his fellow-countrymen, they were prepared to be firm and enduring to the end.

Major Davidson said he had not expected to have an opportunity to add his voice to the voice of others as well as his heart to the heart of others in welcoming the two gallant soldiers. They had come back as living messages from the noble men who had gone to the Front; and others were going to try to emulate them.

Lt.-Col. Mills .

Lt.-Col. Mills was greeted with a round of cheers as he arose to speak. "It is sweet to get home," he remarked in acknowledging the reception, "even if one knows he is going back again."

The people of Peterborough, he thought, had hardly realised a year ago last August when they watched the 57th Regiment men march away on that bright summer morning, the extent of the war or realised that those men were going to make history for Canada and the Empire. "As long as history is read," said Col. Mills, "the fame of the fighting 1st Canadian Division will be known." British generals had said that they were equal to the best British regiments, equal to the Guards regiments, and therefore equal to the finest soldiers in the world. At a later meeting Col. Mills hoped, he said, to be able to give a full account of the doings of the Peterborough Contingent. It is a recruiting meeting probably, for it was his intention to do his best to stimulate recruiting and bring the young men to a realization of their duty. "As for as the 57th boys who are left at the Front,' remarked the speaker, "I may say there is no note of discouragement amongst them. There is no discouragement anywhere on the British Front." (Cheers.)

Conditions Are Different.

The conditions are vastly different now to when the first contingent went to France. Then heavy guns were lacking; there was little ammunition, and when the guns fired two or three rounds they were through for the day. Now there were many guns of heavy calibre on the British Front, and even along the Belgian lines, while the French had an abundance of their famous 75's, the finest guns in the world. Ammunition was piling up, and the Allies had a preponderance in artillery. The enemy got no rest—the Allies were continually wearing him down. "On our side," said the speaker, "everything is cheerful. Although the weather had been as bad as bad could be, Tommy is contented. Feed him, give him his smoke, his letters from home, and his chocolates, and he will face anything." (Cheers.)

Thanked the Citizens.

Col. Mills remarked that he wanted to thank the citizens of Peterborough for the kindness they had shown to the boys at the Front. They had received many gifts from the Daughters of the Empire, the Kitchener League, and other organizations and individuals. He thanked the school children for their gifts of chocolate and candy, and the young ladies of the Collegiate Institute for their thoughtfulness and labour in preparing the scrap-books "News from Home." "Doubtless," said the speaker, "they have been kept busy in writing letters in answer to the thanks they received."

As for the needs of the men at the Front, Col. Mills said the British soldiers were the best fed and the best clothed in the world. It took a well-conditioned man to wear the full equipment that was supplied. When they were in the trenches now, they were equipped with long rubber boots which kept their feet dry, but two or three pairs of socks were needed to keep the feet warm. As for the gas methods of the Germans, the speaker said that there need be no worry on that account. The British authorities had devised a helmet that effectually stopped the harmful effects.

The Need of Men.

Lt.-Col. Mills reiterated his determination to do his utmost to secure recruits. "The sooner we fill up the ranks, the sooner the war will be over. "There need be no fear of another winter in the trenches after this year. There will be no war next winter," he remarked emphatically, "but the more we get in the field now the quicker will come the end of the conflict." Had there been 300,000 British troops, with a sufficient number of heavy guns, in the first British expeditionary force, there would not be a German in Belgium to-day. In this connection Col Mills paid a glowing tribute to the wonderful fighting of that first little British army. As for the Navy, he remarked that we should be proud to belong to an Empire that had such an organization. He told how the wonderful armada which carried the first Canadian contingent, the largest that ever sailed the seas, and probably the largest that ever will have been brought across the Atlantic safely, and how soldiers had been transported from England to France without the loss of a man. The enemy craft, with the exception of a few submarines, had been driven from the seas.

To the men of the 93rd Battalion, Lt.-Col. Mills said in conclusion that they remember the fact that they had a historical number, corresponding to that of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. If they lived up to the traditions of that regiment, they would be a unit to be proud of. He hoped they would never have to go through all the hardships that the Argyll and Sutherlands had encountered.

Sergt. Allen.

Three hearty cheers and a tiger were given for Sergt. Allen when he was asked to address the gathering. The gallant artilleryman expressed his thanks to the citizens for their welcome and his pleasure at being home with his wife and family in Peterborough. "I am not satisfied yet," remarked Sergt. Allen. "I want to go back to the Front. The speaker remarked that some good boys had been left behind, but many would come home to their fellow-citizens.

The reception was then brought to a close with cheers for Col. Mills and Sergt. Allen, and the singing of the National Anthem.

MONTHLY MEETING OF THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY

The above meeting was held in the Teacher's room at the Public Library on Monday. There was a large attendance and the executive appreciate highly the increased interest that is being shown by the citizens in this great and very necessary work The members were greatly pleased at their President Mrs. I. C. Davidson being presented with a life membership by her husband Rev. Canon Davidson, Chaplain of the 93rd Battalion.

The following monthly estimate recommended by the executive was submitted and approved of:

Bandages	40.00
For General Supplies for Cost of material to be used for surgical supplies in the workroom	$ 450.00

	$1,050.00

The Treasurer's statement was presented by Miss. Morrow and unanimously adopted.

Miss Rush presented the report for the workroom which is now open on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, also on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

The latest addition to those working there is the Teachers Guide, who are warmly welcomed, any other workers or societies who would like to come and help will be gladly received.

There has been a marked increase in the output of work during November, no less than 80 bales having been shipped.

Surgical supplies sent include the following:—

2,115 Large Pads, 2,615 Medium Pads, 4,979 Small Pads, 7,960 Compresses, 22,000 Sponges.

Miss Flora Davidson reported the sending during November of 252 pairs of Socks, 40 sets of Pyjamas, 101 Hospital Night Shirts, 48 Bed-Jackets, 207 Towels, 44 Nightshirts, 120 Ring Pillows, 12 Feather Pillows

2 consignments from Lakehurst Breau Bible Class, South End Auxiliary, St. Paul's Auxiliary.

The quality and workmanship of the supplies sent in have been excellent and the executive returns warm thanks to the workers for same. The socks were amongst the best ever received.

The Executive desire to acknowledge with sincere thanks the following gifts:—

Two pay cheques from Captain Burnam, M.P., paymaster of the 93rd battalion, to whom the society presented a life membership; Mr. Clysdale a box of tobacco; Mr. Sam Ray a box of tobacco; The "Examiner" for cutting 100 lbs. of cotton; J. J. Turner and Son for cutting 200 lbs. of cotton; Mr. Gemmel for cutting 5000 yards of Gauze; Miss Dobie for wooden compress forms; Miss Dean for wooden pads; Mr. Ward for full set of wooden forms for compress and pads; Mr. De La Fosse for having books placed in the hall.

It was decided to close the workroom on Monday 20th Dec., and to open again on Monday 3rd January. The auxiliaries were asked by the executive to assist them in the making of dressing gowns, none of which have as yet gone from Peterboro.

The Executive has bought a supply of the standard material for these and other gormenta.

The Society intends having an exhibition of completed garments and supplies in the near future, and it is hoped the public will attend in large numbers.

Through the interest evinced by the Advisory Board and the generousity of all those who have subscribed, it is now possible to widen the scope of the society and greatly increase its usefulness and service.

APPLES ARE CHEAP IN WEST VIRGINIA

LARGE CROPS AND SMALL PRICES ARE REPORTED.

New Cumberland, W. Va., December 7.—Large crops and small prices seem to be a feature in the apple situation this season. The average price is reported as about $1.75 a barrel, although in some markets trouble is experienced in getting this figure.

Reports from the eastern panhandle of this state, one of the leading apple belts, are to the effect that over 600 carloads of apples have been marketed and that there are many more to be shipped. Owing to the low price and the dullness of the market it is reported that several hundred carloads will be placed in cold storage. Much cider is being made by the farmers this year.

HEAVY RECRUITING NOW WILL HASTEN THE END OF THE WAR

Col. Mills Says German Supplies of Men and Materials Rapidly Depreciating While Allies' Strength is Growing Steadily

An informal reception to Colonel Mills was held last night at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. B. D. Hall, when he met a large number of his old friends, both ladies and gentlemen, and also relatives of members of the First Contingent. The visitors were received until late in the evening when Col. Mills retired to the Opera House where he made a short address at the Patriotic Meeting.

To The Examiner this morning he stated that the early and successful termination of the war depends upon the present briskness of recruiting. The dominating conditions are first the tremendous wastage in the German army and the limitation of their reserves. On the other hand the Allies have no more than touched the fringe of their fighting men, but it was necessary that the Allies' domination be represented in men under arms. Hence, the greater the enlistment now, the more quickly will the war be terminated.

Secondly, the enemy's supplies are being rapidly exhausted -and they cannot be replaced whereas the Allies' supplies are daily growing in volume and only now is the immense organization of Britain beginning to be felt, especially in the production of munitions. Many are of the opinion that the Germans will become so weakened on the western front that together with the Allies' growing strength the enemy will be forced to retire.

Supplies Ably Handled.

An encouraging feature of life at the front is the regularity of the supplies reaching the men in the trenches. This is the result of the excellent work of the Army Service Corps. The supplies are transported to a port in France, and from there are carried by rail to what is called a rail head, which is the nearest point the railway approaches the front in the direction of the army to be served. From the rail head the supplies are taken by each division in motor lorries to the refilling positions of the differen brigades. From these points there is the second line transport, horse and waggon, to the various battalions, batteries and other units. Then the supplies are handed over to the quartermasters who have them distributed to the company quartermaster-sergeants, who in turn have them subdivided into platoon portions. The supply allotments are then carried to the first line trenches, billets, or to wherever the companies may be. There the platoon sergeant divides the articles among the men, and the last detail of the vast transport system has been effected.

Better Quality of Tobacco Needed.

The regular supplies are augmented once a week by tobacco, cigarettes and matches, and in the middle of each week the tobacco sent by the Canadian War Association is handed out. A great deal of this is not of a quality appreciated by the men, and Col. Mills stated that they would prefer less quantity and better quality. Whether this tobacco is supplied by the various funds he was unable to ascertain. One of the best lots of cigarettes received by the Peterborough boys was purchased by a contribution received from Dr. F. L. Robertson and the 57th Battalion. Col. Mills had been advised of the gift by Major V. Eastwood, and he immediately wrote to a London firm stating that it was not quantity the men wanted in the expending of this sum, but quality. The result was the most satisfying tobacca the men had received.

Supplies of Uniforms.

Col. Mills stated that the supplies of uniforms and similar necessary equipment are just as ample as the foodstuffs. In fact everything is done to provide for the comfort of the men.

After the battle of Langemarck the remnants of the Peterborough men crawled back under the cover of darkness on the night of April 23rd, and joined the rest of their battalion or the Highlanders, and held this position until they received an order to retire because of the danger of being outflanked. The order had to be repeated before the men obeyed.

Col. Mills stated that it was not known where Major Bennett's and the bodies of other Peterborough men lay, but only where they had fallen. Col. Mills' son, Bruce, has been back at the front since July, and is engaged in ordinance work. His escape at Langemarck was almost miraculous. He lay all day in a shallow hollow about sixty yards from the enemy's trench, unable to move in order not to draw the German fire. The strain of this position was a most severe one and invalided him for several months. On the field close to him were the bodies of Taylor, Boswell and other Peterborough men. Imagination utterly fails to call up the conditions of that day, April 23rd.

Col. Mills is just recovering from an attack of ptomaine poisoning which affected the military doctor and others in the ship party.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The Property Committee of the City Council will meet this evening to consider the question of disposing of the 1916 garbage collecting contract.

A CONUNDRUM.

The Property Committee to-night will also consider the mathematical conundrum that was proposed by the Sanitary Inspector, Mr. Spence, and which involves an increase in salary.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

Alderman S. W. Sewell of Windsor, is at the head of a movement to expropriate the gas plant. Accordidg to the alderman a 20 cent rate could be put in force and the city would derive a satisfactory revenue, sufficient at least to pay the interest on the debentures. A bylaw will be submitted to the voters in January.

SIMCOE COMMISSION

The town council of Simcoe will submit a bylaw for the establishment of a Utilities Commission to take over the water works, sewage disposal plant and the hydro system.

Peterborough Man Shares in Estate

The will of Mrs. Jane Gibbard, who died in Toronto Sept. 30th last, has been filed for probate by the executors George E. Gibbard, husband of the deceased, and David E. Yarnold of Peterborough, her son. The estate, inventoried at $12,988, is made up of personal property valued at $300; household goods, $150; life insurance, 1,500; cash, $1,038; an equity of $4,000 in 1071 King west; land in Whitby Township, $3,000, and an equity of $3,100 in 18 Starr avenue.

By her will, made the day before hre death, the deceased gave permission to her husband, George E. Gibbard, druggist, to occupy the house on King street for five years at an annual rental of $80, with the option of purchasing the property for $1,800, the amount of the second mortgage. The husband also is left the household goods and the remainder of the selling price of the house on Starr avenue after the first mortgage on the King street house, the two mortgages on the Starr avenue house are paid, and $3,800 paid into the estate. The residue is to be equally divided between the children of the testatrix, Robert, David and Benjamin Yarnold, and Mrs. Laura Prout, and her granddaughter, Leonore Yarnold.

First Anniversary of East City Parish

The congregation of the Church of the Immaculate Conception celebrates to-day its first anniversary and on that particular feast day. There were three masses this morning, the last a Pontifical High mass, sung by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. Rev. Dean McColl was assistant priest, Rev. J. J. O'Brien deacon of the mass, Rev. Father McCarthy sub-deacon and Fred Malane, master of ceremonies.

At the conclusion, Bishop O'Brien addressed the congregation, referring to the work of the past year. Pontifical Vespers will be sung to-night at 7.30 o'clock, and Monsignor Casey of Lindsay will preach.

Supplies Go To the Trenches

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—In answer to the letter appearing in your paper of December 6th signed by Misses A. F. Allen, Laura David son and A. K. Peacock, I wish, as President of the Canadian Kitchener League to explain that I have never at any time since our re-organization one year ago last October—affiliated myself with the RED CROSS Society.

The Kitchener League has no illfeelings towards the Red Cross Society. They are doing a noble work but there are workers who wish to send their work to the hospitals while others prefer to send their's direct to the trenches, as indicated by a letter which appeared in a local paper of a recent date.

All the Kitchener League had in mind when they invited all interested in working for the boys in the trenches to obtain yarn through their league, was to help supply the very great demand, that ever letter they are receiving calls for—MORE SOCKS—and MORE SOCKS.

The boys go away often with a very food supply but how long will this supply last when you think of them standing for days in mud and water over their boot tops!

Every Society in Peterborough we feel is doing its very best to help make our boys comfortable both in the hospitals and the trenches, but we also feel that we should organize, into one harmonious body working towards that one great end.

(Signed) MRS. JOS. ERROL.

GUNNER McBRIDE WRITES FROM THE TRENCHES

Mrs. McBride has received the following letter from her husband, Gunner Archie McBride, of the 4th Battery:

Belgium, Nov. 21, 1915.

Dear Wife,—As I haven't received any letter from you to-day, I have time to write you a few words. I am sitting on my bunk in my dug-out. I have a nice little place. There is just two of us, a fellow by the name of Montgomery being with me. The roof of our dug-out is covered with iron so that pieces of the German shells can't come through. The sides are two rows of sandbags. We have a brick stove in it and our gun is alongside of us. Things are quiet today. It is Sunday and it makes me lonesome, thinking of you all at home. I wish the war was over. I have not been on pass yet. I don't know whether I will get away before Christmas or not. I think I will have a quiet Christmas, but still I don't care as long as you and the children have a good time. I hope you are all well and will have a good Christmas. Bruce Sloan is here. He is fine. Earl Downey has been sick for a few days, but he is all right now. He is at the waggon line. I saw Joe Reynolds and he is fine and well. I might say, we could stand some "comforts" out here just now. Some cigarettes and such like would be appreciated.

Remember me to all I know, and I wish you all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

Archie.

WEDDING BELLS

SARGENT—WOODS.

The marriage of Mrs. Edith L. Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Kent, 67 Lansdowne St., and Mr. William D. Sargent of this city, took place at St. James parsonage yesterday afternoon, Rev. B. Greatrix officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Sargent left on the 5.30 G.T.R. train for Toronto and Hamilton, and on their return they will reside on Alberta St.

JEWISON—NURSE.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nurse, of South Monaghan, on Wednesday, Dec. 1st, 1915, when their youngest daughter, Clara Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. Fred Jewison, of Ballieboro. Rev. W. T. Wickett, of Fraserville, performed the marriage ceremony in the presence of a few of the most immediate relatives and friends.

The presents were numerous and costly, and very useful, attesting to the popularity of the bride.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jewison wish them long life and every prosperity.

HERLIHY—GOOSELAW.

The marriage was solemnized on Tuesday, Nov. 23rd, at St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, of Miss Katharyn Herlihy (Katie), only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Herlihy, to Mr. Joseph Gooselaw. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Father Maguire.

The bride wore her travelling suit of taupe velvet, with hat to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Mary Harrington, wore a plum coloured velvet suit. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Alphonse Gooselaw. The bride's cousin, Miss Olive Herlihy, played Listz's transcription of the Bridal Chorus, from Lohengrin, and during the nuptual mass solos were sung by Misses Ethel Harrington and Olive Herlihy and Mr. Wm. Herlihy.

After the ceremony the happy young couple returned to the home of the bride's parents, where a very sumptuous dinner was partaken of by about fifty relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Gooselaw left on the evening train for Rochester and other points, and on their return will reside at Downeyville.

OBITUARY

JAMES ERNEST HOPKINS.

James Ernest Hopkins, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hopkins, North Monaghan, passed away yesterday at the age of nine months. The funeral will be held to-morrow.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Older Than Methuselah.

There lives a pauper woman in the parish of Edinkillie, who is so old that she herself cannot tell her age, and there is no other one who can do so. Last week, a gentleman called on her, and, among other questions, inquired her age. She replied, "Indeed, sir, I dinna ken, but I'm sure am a thousand at any rate." She is still able to move about, and bids fair to add yet another year or two to the number.

Battle Charge Seemed Like Part in A Play to London Theatre Boy

"Although I knew the part I was to play, a British soldier tells in London Times how his chum's death roused him to action and sent him rushing into the charge which resulted in his being wounded. The soldier before enlistment was a call boy in a London theatre.

"It was all right once the curtain was up," says the soldier. "It was the first night's wait for the advance which I found most trying, with the incessant thunder of the guns and the shrieking of the shells over our heads. It was a most impressive overture to the great drama to come. This was my first appearance in a big battle.

"Although I knew the part I was to play well enough after the many months of rehearsals in England, I must own that I was shaky, like an actor on the first night I suppose. Looking back now, it seems strange how quickly the feeling passed away.

"My chum and I had agreed that we would stick together as long as we could, but our plans were soon upset. No sooner had we clambered out of our trench than he went down. This seemed to rouse me. I seemed to go mad with rage and hardly knew what I did. The most extraordinary thing was that I seemed then to have no fear of the hail of bullets which rained down upon us. They all seemed part of the play.

"I was carried along by an overwhelming impulse to get at the enemy and avenge my chum. I, like the rest of us, scampered as fast as my legs would carry me, slipping and sliding in the mud, until at length I went sprawling in the slush which had been churned up by the rain and shells. I had just scrambled to my feet again when I heard the order to renew the charge.

"Levelling my bayonet, I rushed headlong forward, jumping over bodies and barbed wire as though I was electrified. My first experience at battle was short and sweet, for I was bowled over at the first trench. I remember plunging my bayonet into a huge German who confronted me with a levelled rifle. Then I was hit on the head by something or other which made me see more fire than I had seen during the whole time I had been out there. I hope to get a return engagement, and be in the last act of all, but I have at least avenged my chum."

Dan Whetung Led Way Across Chemong Lake

Mr. Dan. Whetung, of the Indian Reserve, Chemong, crossed Chemong Lake yesterday, Tuesday, Dec. 7th, and a year ago Dan. Whetung, Jr., lead the way across with a horse on November 23rd. In short, the ice is two weeks later this year. Yesterday, the Bridgenorth flotilla of ice boats were flitting over Chemong Lake, enjoying a rare sport that Peterborough people seldom have an opportunity to take up. Many skaters have been out for several days, but Peterborough young people have been on the canal since Saturday last.

BOYD'S BUFFALO HERD STAMPEDED

Exciting Times at Bobcaygeon—Consignment Purchased by the Government

BOBCAYGEON, Dec. 9.—They say there's many a slip between the cup and the lip. It applies to many things, but in this instance it applies to buffaloes. The shipment which Mossom Boyd Co. are selling to the Saskatchewan Government was being delivered to the train here one at a time, drawn in a crated cart by a tandem team, one in the shafts and one ahead. As this method was somewhat slow and labourious, Mr. Cross, Farm Superintendent, thought he would drive the remaining ten or twelve head down and load on the C.P.R. the same as ordinary farm stock, and that's where the fun commenced. Everything went along fine till the buffalo were at the stock yards, but the gate was not opened, and while being opened the animals became frightened and bolted. They took up the track towards the head of the Island, then back, crossing the old cemetery at Wilson Dunn's, and down by the Agricultural Society grounds to the river. They were brought out from there but immediately scattered through the woods, some going down by the powerhouse and all returning to the farm during the day. The old sure way was resorted to again, and although only one at a time, they were all safely landed in due course and are now on their way to the land of their forefathers on the plains of Saskatchewan. Good-bye buffalo; you're good sports; a fitting climax to your sojourn here.

Greece Firm For Neutrality Will Assist Allied Military Campaign, Says Premier

"Disposed to Give Material Expression to Feeling That Every Greek Has Toward France, Great Britain and Russia, Dating From Navarino" Says Mr. Skouloudis

ATHENS, via Paris, Dec. 9.—An agreement for a conference of Greek military authorities and military representatives of the Entente Powers to examine into and report upon the necessities of the situation respecting the allied demands upon Greece has been reached, and the preliminary steps towards holding the conference have been taken, the Premier Skouloudis, announced

"Tell the American people that the government of Greece has only two aims—to safeguard the sovereignty of Greece and not to abandon neutrality, no matter for what reason she may be urged to do so; no matter what inducements or pressure are brought to bear," Mr. Skouloudis said in an interview.

"I think I may say," continued the Premier, "that the air, surcharged for months with misunderstandings, is at last clearing; that the Entente Powers are beginning to understand that while we are immovable on the two heads just stated we are disposed in every other respect to give material expression to the feeling every Greek has toward France, Great Britain and Russia, dating from Navarino.

Two points which caused the recent friction are now in the way of amicable settlement. As far back as November 10 I suggested the inappropriateness of non-military diplomatists seeking to arrange the details of a situation essentially military and of which they understand little. Therefore I proposed a conference between the military authorities on either side authorized to study the necessities of the situation and report on them, giving the Greek government and the Entente diplomatists the benefit of their conclusions, from which a settlement then could be reached.

"This was finally accepted, and Colonel Fallis, of the General Staff, is leaving for Salonika to consult General Sarrail, the French commander to this end.

"Respecting the railroads, the Greek government never has been unaware that the personnel was inadequate for the handling of the immense increase in traffic due to the military uses to which the railways now are put, but Mr. Bouralli was unwilling to surrender control of his own property. As General Carrail offers to assist in the operation of the railways, leaving Greek control unquestioned, the government is only too glad to accept."

"What about hunting down Austro-German submarines in Greek territorial waters?" asked the interviewer.

"That touches our sovereignty," replied the Premier.

"We protest to the world, especially to America, also a neutral, that we cannot sanction violations of our territory. But what can we do? We have only a small navy and a vast coast line. We can only protest.

"What we want to avoid—what we shall avoid—is associating Greece with the uncertain outcome of the war. Had we joined the Allies last spring, when we were urged to do so, to-day we would have to bear the bulk of the cost of the failure of the Gallipoli venture. Had we joined at the inception of the recent Austro-German-Bulgarian attack on Serbia we now would be bearing a large part of the price in blood and devastation, following the crushing of the Serbs.

"By following the two principles we stand by as governing Greece's foreign policy we have been saved these two disasters We should continue to follow them, for in them is our only salvation."

To-day is "Peace Day" In The German Reichstag Crowds Fill the Building

BERLIN, via Wireless Dec. 9.—To-day is "peace day" in the German Reichstag. In anticipation of an important statement regarding the possible ending of the war by the Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg, crowds flocked early to the Reichstag building. In official circles it was hinted that those who expected a sensational declaration from the Chancellor at this time were bound to be disappointed. If Von Bethmann Hollweg intends to announce to the world Germany's terms of peace, he has kept that fact secret. The general opinion was that the Chancellor would repeat his earlier statements that Germany is fighting to safeguard her future and secure the freedom of the seas. It was believed he would express Germany's willingness to enter peace negotiations whenever those points were conceded by Germany's enemies.

The radical socialists were expected to press the Chancellor for a more specific statement, but it was believed he would reply that a more detailed statement would not at this time best serve the interests of the Empire.

GERMANY'S POSITION AS TO PEACE

"If our Enemy's Peace Proposals Compatible With Germany's Dignity and Safety, We Shall Always Be Ready to Discuss Them" Says the Chancellor

BERLIN, via wireless, Dec. 9.—Speaking before crowded galleries in the Reichstag to-day, Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg made known Germany's position regarding peace.

"As long as in the countries of our enemies the guilt and ignorance of statesmen are enveloped with the confusion of public opinion it would be folly for Germany to make proposals which would not shorten but lengthen the duration of the war," said the Chancellor. "If our enemies make peace proposals compatible with Germany's dignity and safety, then we shall always be ready to discuss them. Fully conscious of our unbroken military successes, we decline the responsibility for the continuation of the misery which now grips Europe and the whole world. Everybody can say that we are continuing the war because we want to conquer this or that country as a pledge."

To Back Up The President's Announcement

Vigorous Campaign to Stamp Out the Criminal Conspiracies—A Chain of Indictments

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—A programme of action to back up the President's announced intention to "crush with the hand of public vengeance of passion, disloyalty and anarchy," was mapped out by the Administration to-day. Following the Cabinet conference late yesterday discussing co-operation in a vigorous campaign to stamp out the criminal conspiracies, District Attorney Marshall of New York conferred here to-day with Attorney-General Gregory. A chain of indictments was expected to follow the return of the New York District Attorney. Agencies of half a dozen Federal Departments were to-day in motion against hyphenated conspirators. On every hand there was evidence of determination to prove the warning of the President was not a play on words.

The aid of Congress will soon be invoked. Attorney-General Gregory is having bills drafted to reach crimes and offenses not covered by present statutes. These will be submitted soon to the Senate and the House judiciary committees.

SILENCE ON GERMAN FRIGHTFULNESS IS REGRETTED

President Wilson in His Address Ignored What is Common Knowledge

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The Globe alone of all London newspapers yesterday professed to see possible danger for other world powers in President Wilson's demand on Congress yesterday for increases in the American army and navy.

"It will strike everyone," said the Globe, "as significant, even ominous, that the message was so insistent upon the necessity of adequate provision for national defence."

The afternoon papers voiced editorial approval of President Wilson's attack on "hyphenates," but certain newspapers took the President to task for remaining silent regarding Germany's alleged policy of frightfulness.

""President Wilson has high and honourable reasons for trying to keep the western world railed off from the European chaos," said the Westminster Gazette, referring to the attack on "hyphenates," "but we are afraid he will find his denunciations fall on deaf ears. It may be that they will even be regarded as compliments by those to whom they are addressed for they have done at considerable risk what the Fatherland regards as an honourable and distinguished service."

"The President continues to walk delicately in his treatment of frightfulness," said the Pall Mall Gazette. "He persists in ignoring what is common knowledge and applying a very general denunciation, suggesting that the acts of an assassin and dynamiter are chiefly heinous only as exhibitions of an unneutral attitude, and that equal censure must fall on every American who fails to keep the even scales of judgment. We cant say that this theory of morals will increase respect for the President in the outside world. A literal reading of his message almost suggests that he regards Roosevelt's denunciation of the execution of Miss Cavell as equally heinous with the blowing up of twenty American ammunition makers."

PASSAIC, N.J. GIVES $37,000 TO GERMAN FUND

PASSAIC, N.J., Dec. 6.—The German-Austro-Hungarian War Relief Committee, made up largely of members of the German-American Central Verein of this city, announced to-day that its war relief fund had reached a total of $37,000. This is the largest amount of money collected for Germany in any American city the size of Passaic. At a bazaar held in Turn Halle, Hope Avenue, last week the committee realized $6,000. Every article sold at the fair was donated. The hall and orchestra were also free.

The New Home Treatment For Ugly, Hairy Growths

(Boudoir Secrets.)

Here is a simple, yet very effective method for removing hair and fuzz from the face, neck and arms: Cover the objectionable hairs with a paste made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. Leave this on for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have vanished. No pain or inconvenience attends this treatment, but results will be certain if you are sure to get real delatone.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FROM RUDOLF ST. CLAIR TO JOSHUA MUDGE

I had recently been graduated at a college of physicians. During the last year of my studies the lady with whom I boarded, a Mrs. Stanford, told me one day that she was very much troubled about her daughter, Effie.

Effie was of a very romantic temperament. She said nothing about what was occupying her mind to the mother, who gained all her information from the girl's friends. Certain acquaintances of Effie's told Mrs. Stanford that Effie was talking about a lover. He was tall and slender, with fine, large brown eyes and black, curly hair. His age was about nineteen. His name was Rudolf St. Clair. The informant did not believe that Effie had any such lover, but that he was a creature of her imagination.

Effie said that she was used to meeting this lover after school of an afternoon in a certain open square used for a public park. Of late the girl had become very moody, giving indications of having some trouble on her mind. She gave hints to her most intimate friend, a girl of her own age, that she feared Rudolf had become acquainted with another girl who was leading him away from her.

I suggested to Mrs. Stanford that she have Effie watched after school afternoons, with a view to discovering if she had any lover. This was done, and

Your taste for good tea will prove to you
Red Rose Tea "is good tea"

as Effie was followed, it did not take long to question. Walking to a certain seat she sat down, and presently her lips were seen to move as though talking to some one, though not a person was near her.

When this fact was reported to me I made up my mind that Effie's brain was unbalanced. She had doubtless seen a moving picture play which she was enacting in imagination. Being just about to graduate, I was well up in the latest scientific discoveries and theories and had paid much attention to autosuggestion or that something which impels persons to certain diseases or impressions that have no real existence. Naturally I became much interested in the case. I met one of Effie's schoolmates and asked her what play her friend had most seen and talked about. I was told that it was one in which a young girl had met a young man, with the result of a love affair. The young man jilted the girl, and she committed

I feared that Effie, following this play, would shoot some man, believing that he was her recreant lover. I advised her mother to keep Effie's room well inspected for something she should not possess. This was done and a little pistol was found under a loose board in the closet, with a dozen cartridges. Mrs. Stanford gave the cartridges to me, and after replacing the powder with charcoal I told the lady to put both pistol and cartridges back in their hiding-place.

It was not long after this that one evening on the street Effie stepped up to a young man and, saying in imperious command, "I will not give you up to another," pointed a pistol at him and he man pulled the trigger. The young man seized her hand and took the pistol away from her, then turned her over to a policeman.

Effie was taken to a station, where, when she gave her name and address, her mother was telephoned for. A great deal of difficulty was encountered in explaining the matter, but since the young man the intended to shoot would not prosecute the case Effie was returned to her mother's care.

Mrs. Stanford was at a loss what to do with the girl. She proposed to send her to a retreat where she would be kept from doing any harm and would receive medical attention. But I suggested an application of the theory "Like cures like"—in other words, that Effie be given a real love affair for the purpose of eradicating an imaginary one. But this, for the want of a lover, was easier suggested than carried out. While we were deliberating Mrs. Stanford said:

"If you will make love to Effie I will release you of all responsibility for what may follow. If you can restore her mental balance you may separate yourself from her, and she will gradually get over it."

"But, my dear Mrs. Stanford," I said, "Effie may not fancy me, and if she should and I jilted her she might shoot me."

"No girl of Effie's age can resist the attentions of a young man of your

AND as for yourself, you, I hope, will by that time have recovered her equilibrium, and you will be in no danger."

Curious to note the effect of the treatment, I began at once to show Effie such attentions. I bought her candy and took her to country places of amusement. Gradually I began to allow my position glances and an occasional pressure of the hand. This treatment extended over a period of a year, when I went to another city to begin the practice of my profession.

I think that by this time Effie had recovered physically, which also means mentally, and she parted with me as any girl of her age might be expected to part with a young man she likes. Indeed, I was slightly disappointed that she did not show more feeling. I think that my attentions served to bridge over a period between childish bodily fascination and sound womanhood. I never saw her again, and a few years later heard that she had married an ordinary man whose mind was not as high sounding as that of her imaginary lover, that it was Joshua Mudge.

She Coughed Day and Night.

Mrs. Fred. Feairs, Cedarfield, Ont., writes: "I am sending you this letter telling what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Ten years ago I had a terrible cold. For days I could not speak above a whisper. I coughed day and night. One evening I was so bad I went down to our storekeeper, and when I went in he said, 'You better get something done for that cold of yours.' I told him, as well as I could, that I had just come to get a bottle of the best cough medicine he had. He told me Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was the best he had, and said for me to take a dose of it before I left the store. I took some, and in fifteen minutes I could speak as well as ever. I think 'Dr. Wood's' is the very best on the market."

That persistent cough must be gotten rid of immediately, for if it hangs on to you it may develop into some serious lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and perhaps consumption.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for twenty-five years. A remedy that cures when all others fail.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get what you ask for as there are many imitations on the market.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 19 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 19 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SIR JAMES WATSON'S OPINION CONSIDERED MOST VALUABLE

You catch a little cold to-day, and by to-morrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected and you wish you had used "Catarrhozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion,—then it eats out the poison and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung-food, and vitality. In any cough, bronchitis or Catarrh, it's guaranteed to positively cure. Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names for genuine Catarrhozone which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months' treatment costs $1.00, small size 50c; trial size 25c.

A NEW JUDGE.

Mr. Gustave Lemothe Was Counsel for Religious Orders in Quebec.

Coincident with the appointment of the eminent French-Canadian King's counsel, Gustave Lemothe, to the bench of the Superior Court in Montreal, comes the statement of Chief Justice Archibald that more judges are necessary if the congestion of business is to be relieved, his Lordship pointing out that 55 judges in Quebec are doing the work in the civil courts, which 27 judges are doing in Ontario. The present appointment does not augment the force of the Superior Court in point of numbers, for Mr. Justice Lamothe takes the place of the late Mr. Justice Beandry, while the recent appointment of Mr. Justice Mauchal is to replace Mr. Justice Pelletier (former Postmaster-General), who has been appointed from the Superior Court to the Court of King's Bench, replacing the late Mr. Justice Gervais.

For over a quarter of a century Mr. Gustave Lamothe has occupied an enviable position at the bar. Throughout his career he has embodied in his relations with both colleagues and clients the highest ideals of the legal profession. Admitted to the bar 35 years ago, he built up an extensive practice in Montreal, especially amongst the numerous religious orders and communities of the city and district. For many years he was counsel to the Sisters of Providence, the Jesuits, the Sisters of Jesus and Mary, and well-nigh countless parish priests, fabriques, and teaching communities of men and women. He is recognized as a great authority on canon law in its relation to the civil law, and in this connection he has figured in numerous causes celebres. He was counsel for the plaintiff in the Delpit vs. Cote marriage annulment case, and he acted for the Jesuit Order in the famous "Jesuits' Estates" case, settled by the late Hon. A REMARKABLE DIARY

PETER SHUPE OF BERLIN KEEPS ALIVE A FORGOTTEN ART.

Records Which Go Back for Many Years Contain a Vast Number of Facts of Interest to the Writer and to People of the Surrounding Community—Mr. Shupe's Memorandum of the "Dark Day" of 75 Years Ago.

THE fine old habit of keeping a diary, not merely of one's private affairs but of the events of the countryside and of the great world is one which has fallen sadly into disuse in this twentieth century. The files of the newspapers are made to do the work which on former times was performed so delightfully by men like John Evelyn and Samuel Pepys; and the paper, while perhaps wider in its scope, lacks the personal quality of the individual diarist.

There is, however, in Canada one man who has possessed the fascinating old custom and makes it his hobby. He is Peter Shupe of Berlin, Ont., and now after many years of work his hobby is growing not only a matter of interest, but of real value.

Only a short time ago a big Canadian firm found it necessary to get a short concise weather record covering a long period. The obvious place to go was to the weather bureau. A member of the firm, however, knew of Mr. Shupe's diary and decided that it could be used with far less difficulty than the meteorological reports. Accordingly the precious record was borrowed and the information secured with a minimum of difficulty.

Mr. Shupe's diary has proven a gold mine for the local veterans. Any dispute or disagreement over the date of an outstanding event is referred to him for settlement, and it is rarely that the diary fails.

The reason, too, profit by the record. Not long ago The Berlin News Record published extracts from the diary regarding the famous "dark day" of 1881, an event which still lingers in the minds of older folk. Mr. Shupe contributed the following information culled from many sources:

"Thursday, September 8, 1881, is a day that will go down into history and be known as the Dark Day. This is a day that cannot be effaced from the memories of such people who were old enough to remember it. And in fact many who were not old enough will remember it by hearing their parents or others speak about it.

"The following is what a few of my friends who lived at different places have told me about it.

"Mr. F. B., who is a printer, says he lived in Cincinnati at the time. The day was rather a gloomy, cloudy day, but in the afternoon it got so dark that we could not see to set type without a light.

"Mr. T. F. says he was a small boy at the time, going to school near Goderich, and it got so dark that the children could not read nor see what their teacher was doing at the blackboard, and the school was therefore dismissed.

"Mr. K., of Wilmot, living in the village of ——— says he was about 12 years old but he remembers that the people of the village gathered at his father's house and had a prayer meeting, and says he heard some people pray that afternoon that he had never heard pray before, and they were good earnest prayers, too.

"Mr. J. R. Strickland, who at present is G.T.R. Station Agent at Waterloo, says he was agent at Meaford at the time and it got so dark that the train men could not see the semaphore nor switch lights, and the train despatcher at Stratford cancelled all the trains on his division for the time being.

"The Toronto papers of the next day told us how the darkness struck the people of Toronto with awe, and also that the horses in the delivery wagons, etc., seemed to tread lightly on the pavement.

"Rev. Peter Cober, who lived near Ubley, Mich., at the time, says a strong wind came up and fanned the fires that were out into an immense flame, burning almost everything that would burn. Horses, cattle, sheep, and pigs were burnt, and, and to say, many human lives also. Six were burnt within a short radius from us. It swept over our farm, burning our fences, stable, hay and wheat that we had just threshed, and other things; our house was not burnt, which was a great surprise. The whole village of Ubley was destroyed. Badaxe also suffered considerably. The fire covered a large area, the most damage being in Huron, Sanilac, and Tuscola Counties. Many people lost their houses, barns, etc., and were almost completely fire swept.

"In Berlin I remember it got so dark about 3.30 that lights were lit in the business places and in many houses of the town. I also remember, and many others noticed the same, that at sunset it was all right again. This gave rise to the thought that there was an eclipse on the sun. However, a letter from the geological office of Toronto, dated Feb. 20, 1915, says there was no eclipse and the darkness was likely caused by the smoke of forest fires in Michigan. That letter also says it was the warmest September they had, any record of either before or since.

KELLER WOULD END THE WAR BY REIGN OF TERROR

Teuton Editor Proposes That Rigorous Cruelties Be Exercised Against Civilians.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]

LONDON, December 4.

General Bernhardi is eclipsed by Herr Rudolph Keller, editor of the Prager Tageblatt, who has written a pamphlet entitled "War Against Civilians," in which he proposes to bring the most drastic measures against the inhabitants of those parts of France, Belgium, Russia and Serbia now occupied by German and Austrian troops and end the war by a reign of terror. He says:—

"There are a thousand reasons why the present position of things in the different areas of war should be exploited to bring about a speedy peace. It would now be possible to adopt against our enemies repressive measures by means of which they could be forced to stop the war. Germany and Austria are in possession of such an enormous stretch of territory belonging to France and Russia and Belgium, to which the greater part of Serbia is now being rapidly added, that we are in a position to practise the most rigorous cruelties on our enemies on all sides. It is urgently necessary to deprive the occupied parts of France and those regions of Belgium not [illegible] hands of the Germans of all food supplies and to prevent any other supplies from reaching their inhabitants.

"Of course there would be a tremendous outcry in the English and French and Russian press against German barbarity, but what of that? Our German skins are sufficiently thick to bear the abuse of our enemies. After a time England and France would feel that they could not expose several millions of Belgians and French to death by starvation, and then they would reluctantly consent to enter into negotiations, in which our command over the fate of so many French and Belgian civilians would give us unquestionably the upper hand. Let us adopt this energetic policy without wasting more time in waging war."

THOUGHTS OF DANGER VANISH IN THE CHARGE

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]

LONDON, December 4.

How the mad intoxication of the charge makes one forgetful of danger is told by a British soldier in explaining how he was wounded.

"I was about ten yards from the enemy's trench when the butt of my rifle was blown clean away, leaving the barrel and bayonet still in my hands. How I escaped I do not know, but I did not stop to think of that then. There was nothing for it but to rush on with the rest. On reaching the trench I was about to make a grab at a German rifle which lay beside a huddled figure when I saw a Prussian officer near by pointing a revolver at me.

"I bent down and at the same time made a thrust at him with my broken weapon. The bayonet caught him under the jaw and he toppled over among his men in the trench. I left the weapon with him as a keepsake, for one of our men had fallen and I seized his rifle instead. I was not spared to use it long, though it proved useful, for I got in the way of a bullet which laid me out."

Says Zeppelin Was Destroyed Off Dover by Bombardment on Land and Sea

Mr. H. P. Holt, of Brooklyn, Describes Dramatic Appearance of German Air Destroyer Over Port and Tells How Anti-Aircraft Shells and Guns from Naval Vessels Finally Caused It to Fall Into the Sea.

The following has been written for this newspaper by Mr. H. P. Holt, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who vouches for its accuracy:—

"Holt, halt, halt, ho-o-lt!"

The signal of death and destruction had come at last to Dover—three short, shrill blasts on the harbor siren and then a long, wailing one.

"To your cellars," it meant, when translated. Not a soul in the great English seaport who did not know the grim significance of it, for notices in bold type warning the populace what to do when the psychological moment arrived had been stuck on the walls everywhere. "Holt, holt, holt, ho-o-olt!" had long been a message discussed by parents in subdued tones so that the children should not understand. War is not a game for children. But the siren had been silent for many months, and "holt" had become a joke.

On a still day the incessant roar of giant guns pounding the Belgian coast two score miles away or more could sometimes be heard for hours at a time, and men would put their heads on one side, listening with tense expression, for that was the real thing. Human bodies were being torn there into shapeless, living fragments of quivering flesh and blood—fragments like those which were landed by the hundred at Dover every day in the stately white hospital ships. But that was all taking place miles away, in another country. No bombardment could ever pulverize humanity in Dover.

"Holt, holt, holt, ho-o-olt."

The incredible had been achieved. A super-Zeppelin was at our gates, if indeed not actually within them, and the hour was twenty minutes past midnight. "To your cellars," was the authorized programme, but the official programme went away that night, and the inhabitants of Dover were to see the sight of their lives—the destruction by anti-aircraft guns of the only Zeppelin that has come to grief so far in England. It was by the merest chance that I happened to be at that corner of the country, during a flying trip from the blood soaked fields of Flanders. War pursues one everywhere in Europe. After one day in America one begins to feel the delightful sensation of breathing without its choking influence. But that midnight shriek brought in its train to Dover all the hideous memories of the previous months.

If any one scuttled, rabbit fashion, to a cellar, no mention has been made of the fact. In eight seconds all the bedroom windows for miles around were flung wide open.

"It's a Zep! It's a Zep!" one heard on every hand. The curtain was being rung up on the long expected pantomime at last. Nobody even remembered there were any cellars. There was an ear-splitting "boom" that threatened to smash every pain of glass, and a brilliant whip of silver cracked across the darkened sky—the first of the wonderful searchlights that had been turned for a twelve-month in readiness for this red letter day. Two other silver streaks, and then two more flashed out, stealing like gargantuan luminous flagpoles over the black space above. Somewhere up there lurked that relentless enemy one had read of.

The devilish work had started. A full minute had passed since the song of the siren, and now the cobbled streets resounded with clattering footsteps. Cellars were for unhappy mortals like lazzards in Ypres. This was the night of nights. Almost as soon as the first of the Zeppelin, picking it out from darkness, a thousand good citizens were scurrying down to the seafront to see this mysterious thing that had come to destroy them. And they were only the advance guard. In four minutes a quarter of the population had joined in the mad scramble to the beach, and most of them were women.

Far, far up, two miles over their heads, was poised the very last word in death dealing contrivances, more brilliantly illuminated than ever with stage drenched in limelight. All six searchlights had got it, in a phantasmagorical grip from which there was no escape.

There was an eerie silence over the vast crowd. The quick intake of a woman's breath, a stifled moan from some one whose emotions struggled for expression, the pop pop of anti-aircraft weapons and the swish on the beach of waves that go on forever, however nations may differ; these were the only sounds now that England and Germany had got their fingers around one another's throats.

The guns were missing their mark, and the Zeppelin remained as stationary as though held by some invisible anchor.

"Danged impidence, eh?" muttered a burley fisherman at my shoulder.

Impudence to send to England a Zeppelin whose commander hung in midair like a hawk when he was being fired on!

More guns had got to work. Lead, steel and fire seemed to be belching forth from forts all along the cliff, and still the commander of the air ship kept his craft motionless while he peered down, blinded by the flood of light, to see where he could do most damage.

Suddenly a new phase opened in the grisly game. Hitherto the crack of big calibre guns and the pop pop of lesser fry had been awe inspiring but mystifying, for there was darkness everywhere save in those narrow lanes of light that converged on the aerial monster. Gunners could not see where their shells were going. The great audience on the beach was not getting its money's worth. Every one of these projectiles had to come down again, shattered by explosion to a thousand pieces, and people who forget they had collars somewhere forget also what effect ten pounds of steel after dropping a couple of miles have on an unprotected pate.

But it was not the dropping fragments they were concerned with. It was the upward flight of the missiles upon which everything depended. And just when they were growing impatient the air was filled with trailer lights—surely the prettiest device in all the machinery of man killing. No mad-brained designer of an epoch marking fireworks display ever conceived such an effect in his wildest moments.

A trailer consists of a cunningly contrived light fixed to the base of a shell, so that gunnery officers may judge at night how faulty their aim may be, and as though the war stage manager had resolved upon a stupendous surprise to make the audience thrill, a shell of these did all of the things most heavenward simultaneously. It was bewildering; it was beautiful; but it was not like war. It suggested a pyrotechnical spectacle grossly exaggerated. Only the boo-oom of the metal throated guns and the nerve shattering sound of bombs, dropped with mechanical regularity from the War Lord's sky chariot, carried conviction. It is the unseen thing in war that terrifies. A woman or two fainted, a man shook his fist at cloudland in futile indignation. Sometimes a spectator closed his eyes from the gaudy scene overhead and looked out across the dark water for a sign of those sinister gray hulls that carry Britain's fighters afloat, but none was visible. Most of the war ships had slipped their cable hurriedly and were now lying a little way off land. There was work ahead for them when the fireworks had stopped.

For twenty-five minutes, counted on ten hundred watches, the Zeppelin hung as steady as a star, and even those whom it had come to murder began to wonder what manner of men formed a Zeppelin crew, for the guns were getting the range and flashes of red flame where shell bursts were visible told how thirty or forty souls in midair were on the brink of a cataclysm.

A new form of thunder drowned all the rest. It was the voice of some mighty gun perched in a cliff cranny away on the left, and a trailer light described a half circle across the theatre. The missile was four miles, or perhaps five, from the target, and the first shot told the officer in charge that he was likely to win his laurels that night. An infinitesimal elevation of the weapon and the next shell, perfectly timed, burst under the stern of the Zeppelin, which tilted downward ominously at the nose.

"Why don't the aeroplanes butt in?" queried the fisherman. "I thought we'd have a score of 'em up by now."

Not a dozen yards from him aero lieutenants were being held back, almost by brute force, from certain destruction in the welter of flying metal until the command "Cease fire" was signalled.

A second shot got home, this time from one of the little anti-aircraft guns. It seemed to bite into the vitals of the Zeppelin, which careened over perilously, and a dull roar of appropation went up from the audience. Before those on board could have recovered sufficiently to realize what damage had been done the mammoth gun on the hill spoke again. Four or five long seconds the crowd saw the shell's trailer rushing like some satanic bird across the darkened dome.

A hit, a palpable hit. The Zeppelin lurched frantically. Hearts almost stood still while their owners waited for the Huns to come crashing headlong down through their spars. And while they waited, holding their breath, the Zeppelin faded away into a smoky cloud of its own making.

It was a ludicrous anti-climax. The fingers of light searched and clawed at the baffling cloud, and for a time there was an agony of uncertainty, a frenzied moment in which it was feared that the crippled creature might flutter away. The guns were silent. Instead one heard the sharp, fierce note of aeroplane propellers cutting the air. A swarm of these hornets had been unleashed to roar battlewards in pitch darkness excepting when they shot swiftly across the beams of searchlights.

Slowly the Zeppelin drew drifted toward the sea, pursued every inch by the remorseless fingers of light, until one end of the fugitive peeped out. Then an aerial hell broke loose. The naval gunners, who had waited with itching fingers for their chance to hurl massive shells in the air without wrecking Dover at the same time, poured projectiles of every description up at the wounded prey, and a fresh flock of aeroplanes, summoned out of the unknown by wireless messages, swooped down on it with a hail of hand bombs.

Almost beyond control, with her gear mangled, the Zeppelin struggled further from the gaping crowd on the beach, but, without those swirling, graceful movements of lightning rapidity which form its chief protection it was doomed. Savagely it was attacked in turn by air craft and sea craft driving slowly to the east the while, toward the distant shore which it had left for the last time. No quarter was given, perhaps none was expected.

Men who stay dropping death engines over a town for nearly half an hour while a tornado of bursting shells in raging round them do not hope for pity if the game goes against them. When at last their stricken machine fell into the water the darting aeroplanes kept up their grim work until the Zeppelin lay on the sea a mangled wreck.

The crowd on the beach waited until it was definitely ascertained that Germany had one Zeppelin the less, and then it went home, yawning but satisfied. Only a few heads had been cracked by falling splinters of shell. It had been a great show.

BATTLE CHARGE SEEMED LIKE PART IN PLAY TO LONDON THEATRE BOY

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]

LONDON, December 4.

Although admittedly scared in the first charge, a British soldier tells in the London Times how his chum's death roused him to action and sent him rushing into the charge which resulted in his being wounded. The soldier before enlistment was a call boy in a London theatre.

"It was all right once the curtain was up," says the soldier. "It was the first night's wait for the advance which I found most trying, with the incessant thunder of the guns and the shrieking of the shells over our heads. It was a most impressive overture to the great drama to come. This was my first appearance in a big battle.

"Although I knew the part I was to play well enough, after the many months of rehearsals in England, I must own that I was shaky, like an actor on the first night I suppose.

"My chum and I had agreed that we would stick together as long as we could, but our plans were soon upset. No sooner had we clambered out of our trench than he went down. This seemed to rouse me. I seemed to go mad with rage and hardly knew what I did. The most extraordinary thing was that I seemed then to have no fear of the hail of bullets which rained down upon us. They all seemed part of the play.

"I was carried along by an overwhelming impulse to get at the enemy and avenge my chum. I, like the rest of us, scampered as fast as my legs would carry me, slipping and sliding in the mud, until at length I went sprawling in the slush which had been churned up by the rain and shells. I had just scrambled to my feet again when I heard the order to renew the charge.

"My first experience at battle was short and sweet, for I was bowled over at the first trench. I remember plunging my bayonet into a huge Germash who confronted me with a levelled rifle. Then it was hit on the head by something or other which made me see more fire than I had seen during the whole time I had been out there. I hope to get a 'return engagement' and be in the last act of all, but I have at least avenged my chum."

War Prisoners Remove a Hill

British and Scotch in Camp Near Berlin Engaged in Unusual Task.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]

BERLIN, December 4.

A few miles east of Berlin are the Mullberg hills, near the village of Spreenhagen, where British and Scotch prisoners are engaged in a gigantic task. Up to twenty years ago this hill was built up from the waste material of Berlin, and its soil now is so rich that the German government recently decided to remove the entire hill and distribute its rich fertilizing soil over a large area of sterile land in its vicinity. The British and Scotch prisoners have been put at this task, and the Berlin Tageblatt reports that they are doing it with a will and enthusiasm that is highly gratifying.

A correspondent of the newspaper who recently made a trip to the Mullberg gives his observations. From six in the morning until five o'clock in the evening, he says, the prisoners are engaged with pick and shovel in dismantling the immense mound of rich soil. Other prisoners load the soil on wagons and cart it to a stretch of meadows near by, where it is evenly distributed preliminary to making this sterile region fruitful.

"The prisoners," says the correspondent, "are doing great work here. They are a fine looking lot of men—tall, athletic and with pleasing faces. They laugh and joke with one another while working and respond quickly to orders. They are well taken care of. At noon they are served with a thick, nourishing soup, followed by meat and potatoes prepared in real Scotch style. Any one who still is hungry after this meal may go to the good natured cook and receive another portion. The prisoners receive many dainties from home—their favorite puddings, for instance, and tobacco, which they smoke in their short pipes.

"I noticed one prisoner—a giant in stature—who was a policeman in London, helping the cook. He washed and dried the dishes and made himself useful in every way; another was peeling potatoes.

"On Sundays the prisoners are relieved from all work. They play football, cards and enjoy themselves generally. They are all in excellent health and are well treated. It is to be hoped that the German prisoners in England are receiving the same good treatment that the English and Scotch prisoners receive in Germany."

TEUTONIC TALES ABOUT THE HERO OF THE EAST

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]

BERLIN, December 4.

Herr Gens Herczeg writes to the Pester Lloyd that Field Marshal von Hindenburg is almost as popular with the Russians as with the Germans. This may seem strange, he admits, but says that the Russians are frank and open in their admiration for an enemy who is a clever and fair fighter.

The Russian newspapers print pictures of the general, and some even have spoken of him as a military genius like Napoleon. General Mackensen also receives considerable space in the Russian press, but there is no great admiration expressed for him. Of the Austrian generals the only one that receives any notice at all is Boroevics. The writer finally declares he heard a Russian say that if the Russians had such a leader as Marshal von Hindenburg they could conquer the world.

BERLIN-BAGDAD LINE TO PROVIDE 'A PLACE IN SUN'

Berliner Tageblatt Sees Great Significance in Opening of Orient Railway.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]

BERLIN, December 4.

In an article that has all the earmarks of being inspired the Berliner Tageblatt hints at what Germany has in mind in developing the resources of Turkey, Anatolia, Mesopotamia and the countries of the Near East. According to this article, which is prominently displayed under the head "Berlin-Bagdad," Germany will build extensive railroad systems to extend her trade and commerce to the very doors of India.

"The union of the German and Austro-Hungarian troops with the army of King Ferdinand in Berbia," says the Tageblatt, "establishes a military connection of great importance between the Central Powers and Turkey. It is possible now, without danger of any interference from our enemies, to send troops and ammunition direct from Berlin to Constantinople. The political significance of this will soon become apparent to Great Britain. But, aside from its military and political importance, it is one of the greatest things commercially for Germany. As Leopold von Ranke said many years ago:—

"The future of the German Empire lies in a strong commercial union with Constantinople.

"With the opening of the railway direct to Turkey it means also that Germany can tap Anatolia and Mesopotamia for food and supplies of all kinds. The dream of German statesmen of running a railroad from Berlin to Bagdad is soon to be realized. But the scheme now is to go even further than Bagdad; in fact, to extend the railway to the Persian Gulf and to the very borders of India. And in this great work it is Germany's intention to revive the glories of Nineveh and Babylon and with German brains and energy make these old cities foremost again in culture and civilization in that part of Asia. Furthermore, the soil of these Near East countries, which has lain dormant for several centuries, again is to be tilled and cultivated and the rich earth made to bear food for the nations. All this has been the dream of Georg von Siemens, who as long as twenty-five years ago saw the importance of a commercial, if not political, union with Islam.

"The route of the railroad extending beyond Constantinople would be from the Marmora Sea through Anatolia to Konieh and to the Mediterranean by way of Alexandrette; then to the Tigris by way of Mosul and from there to Bagdad. This completed, an extension to Nineveh and Babylon via Nedjet to the Persian Gulf has been mentioned. This railroad, which is to have a double track and bring the products of the Near East to Central Europe, also will run to Damascus and connect with the present Hedjia Railway, which carries the devout Mohammedans to Mecca and which has an important strategic position in this war.

"For some years Germany has been building the Bagdad railway, and it is regarded as one of the greatest pieces of work that Germany is doing on foreign soil. Even during the storm and stress of the present war and the bombardment of the Dardanelles the work on this railway has continued uninterruptedly. Hand in hand with the construction of the road East are being slowly but surely carried the plans for the amelioration of the Near east.

"Following the completion of this road the construction of gigantic waterworks and reservoirs in Mesopotamia are contemplated. These water works will be used to irrigate the soil and insure regularity in crops in the region between the Euphrates and the Tigris. German capital and industry will carry out this great work.

"As to the advantages to be gained by the direct railway connection between Berlin and Bagdad, it must be remembered that Turkey primarily will benefit greatly, said a well educated man the other day when he was asked this question:—"Why, when you have a cold, a cough or bronchitis (troubles, you will note, of throat and chest), do you persist in pouring cough syrups, lung tonics and the like into your stomach, which is perfectly sound?"

BY JOVE!

Ever think of it? The stomach and the lungs are not connected, otherwise food swallowed would choke you. Lung and throat troubles were never yet cured by doing the stomach. To cure coughs, colds and bronchitis, you must breathe the cure. Peps provide the rational treatment for these ailments. Peps are tablets made up of pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a 50c. box of Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. All druggists, or Peps Co., Toronto, will supply.

EAT WITHOUT FEAR OF INDIGESTION OR SOUR, ACID STOMACH

Instant Relief! "Pape's Diapepsin" Ends Your Stomach Trouble Forever

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food, breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favourite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

REMARKABLE CASE of Mrs. HAM

Declares Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her Life and Sanity.

Shamrock, Mo.—"I feel it my duty to tell the public the condition of my health before using your medicine. I had falling, inflammation and congestion, female weakness, pains in both sides, backaches and bearing down pains, was short of memory, nervous, impatient, passed sleepless nights, and had neither strength nor energy. There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body. I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again. I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if your medicines had not saved me. But now I can work all day, sleep well at night, eat anything I want, have no hot flashes or weak, nervous spells. All pains, aches, fears and dreads are gone, my house, children and husband are no longer neglected, as I am almost entirely free of the bad symptoms I had before taking your remedies, and all is pleasure and happiness in my home."—Mrs. JOHN HAM, R. F. D. 1, Box 22, Shamrock, Missouri.

Didn't Raise Them.

A young housewife who lives in a suburban town went to the village store to make some purchases.

"These chickens look very nice," remarked the customer. "How much are they?"

"One dollar apiece, madam," was the prompt response of the obliging proprietor. "You can't find better poultry for the money in the whole country."

"One dollar," thoughtfully mused the customer, and then added: "Did you raise them?"

"Oh, no, madam!" was the hasty assurance of the misunderstanding storekeeper. "That is the same price I offered to sell them for yesterday."—

A Graceful Compliment.

Some famous compliments have been paid to members of the sterner sex, and one of the most gracefully turned was that uttered by Boileau, who, when the virtuous De Meaux, president of the parliament of Paris, was elected an academician, congratulated him in these terms: "I have come to you, sir, in order that you may congratulate me on having you one of my fellow academicians."

Moslem Wives.

Under the Moslem laws the provision for securing to the wife the free and uncontrolled possession of her property is minutely stipulated in the marriage contract. A suitable sum is also arranged for her maintenance in accordance with her husband's rank.

The Jail.

"I am going to visit the jail. There is a man I want to see there."

"Is one all? I know about forty whom I should like to see there."

Not Present.

"He—Do you remember Horatius at the bridge? She—I don't think I ever met him. You know we invite so few men."

Let him who has enough ask for nothing more.—Horace.

LOOK AT A CHILD'S TONGUE WHEN CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Take No Chance! Move Poisons From Liver and Bowels at Once

Mothers can rest easily after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you can have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Dry Products Advance--Sugar, Potatoes and Cheese on the Up-grade---Cost of Living Continues to Soar--Comparison in Prices.

Butter—Up 1 cent.

Fowl—Buyers' prices advance.

Sugar—Advanced 25 cents a hundred on outside market.

Potatoes—May still go higher.

Hogs—Decline on local market, but are firm on the outside.

Cheese—Up 2 cents a pound.

Flour—Up 10 cents a hundred.

Lard—Advances on outside market.

Dairy and Poultry.

Butter, dairy, lb.	30c. to 31c.
Butter, creamery	35c
Eggs, doz.	38c. to 40c.
Cheese, lb.	22c.
Cream, qt.	35c
Turkeys	18c.
Geese	10c. to 11c.
Ducks	12c.
Chickens	10c. to 14c.

The situation in the egg market is very interesting. Few new-laids are coming into the market, hence the prices are going up. Storage eggs, however, are coming out of their hiding, but the unprecedented demand for export keep the price up. For example, within the last few days in the whole of America, including Canada, contracts have been placed for over 2,000,000 eggs to be shipped before Jan. 1st to Europe. This is the first time for many years that Canada has done much export trade in eggs. New York eggs are 63c. a doz.

So long as the "powers that be" put cheese on the rations of the armies it is likely that the strength will remain in the cheese market. One man prophesies an advance of a fraction every week until 20c. a pound is reached. The English trade is said to be almost stealing the cheese ok the boats as they arrive.

Grains, Hay.

Wheat, bush.	$1.00
Oats	37c
Barley	60c.
Peas	$2.00
Buckwheat	60c.
Rye	75c.
Shorts, ton	$24.00
Bran, ton	$22.00
Flour, cwt.	$3.35
Baled hay, ton	$20 to $22
Loose hay	$19.00 to $20.00

Fruits and Vegetables.

Apples, per bag	$1.00 up
Potatoes, bag	$1.50 to $1.60
Onions, bag	$1.00 to $1.25
Onions, white pickling, qt.	15c
White beans, lb.	15c
Carrots, peck	15c
Turnips	15c
Parsnips	15c
Beets	15c
Celery, head	10c.
Cabbage	5c.
Cauliflower	5c.
Turnips, bag	30c
Cabbage, doz.	40c

Apple quotations last Saturday were as follows: Wolf Rivers, $1.50 a bag; Snows, $.50 a bag, $3.00 a barrel; Wealthies, $1.25 a bag; Russets, $4.00 a barrel; Greenings $4.00 a barrel; Canada Reds, $3.00 a barrel; Northern Spies, $4.50 to $.00 a barrel, according to quality; Kings, $3.50 a barrel; Pewaukee, $1.25 a bag, $3.00 a barrel; Bellflowers, $1.50 a bag, $4.00 a barrel; Talman Sweets, $3.00 a barrel; Baldwins, $3.75 a barrel; Wagners, $3.00 a barrel; Wallbridges, $3.00 a barrel.

It was expected that the influx of British Columbia and Alberta potatoes into Eastern markets would ease off the strength of the potato market, but both Delaware and Ontarios are again higher this week. Sufficient quantities have not yet arrived to make any marked difference. It looks as if we are to see higher prices still.

Meats and Hogs.

Bacon, per lb.	28c. to 30c.
Ham	30c.
Cooked hams	35c.
Pork	14c to 16c
Spare ribs	10c.
Tenderloin	28c
Lamb	15c to 17c
Veal	13c. to 20c
Rib roast	18c
Sirloin steak	23c.
Round roast	20c
Mutton	13c
Small pigs, cwt.	$9.00
Live hogs, cwt.	$9.00

All hog products this week are high. Bacon, backs and lard have gone up at least a cent on the outside market.

Wools and Hides.

Wool (no market).

Sheep skins, each	$1.2 to $1.50
Calf skins, lb.	14c. to 15c.
Beef skins	14c. to 16c
Tallow, rough	2c
Tallow, refined	5c. to 6c.

Reports of the outside wool markets indicate that the stocks in the country are practically cleaned up. Quotations are: Washed fleece wool, 40c. to 44c. per lb. Washed rejections (burry, cotted, chaffy, etc.) 33 to 35c. Unwashed wool 30 to 34c.

Tanners are buying hides in a hand-to-mouth fashion looking for a drop.

Calf skins, country cured at 18 to 19c. per lb. are supposed to have reached a top notch price.

The prospects of the fur market are on the ascendancy. The public are purchasing manufactured furs more freely because of the bargain prices now obtaining which will not be duplicated next season. Besides the demand for fur trimming on all kinds of ladies' suits has absorbed thousands of skins. This means a good business for all in the raw fur industry.

Seed Grain.

Red clover, cwt.	$27.00
Alsike, cwt.	$25.00
Alfalfa, cwt.	$27.00
Timothy, cwt.	$12.00

Canadian seed men predict that alfalfa will be very scarce this year.

General.

No. 1 granulated sugar, cwt.	$7.25
Honey, lb.	15c
Shelled walnuts	60c
Currants	13c
Raisins	18c
Dripping	10c
Head cheese	8c.

This last week has seen the incoming of a number of Christmas fruits. California figs are now in, dates have arrived and are fairly plentiful. Currants and raisins are somewhat scarce and the prices may still go higher. Both seeded and seedless raisins from California are none too heavy, and prices may remain strong.

Sugar has advanced 25c a hundred on the outside market.

Comparison in Prices

With this time the last two years:

	1913.	1914.	1915
Wheat	.99	1.18	1.00
Oats	.40	.55	.43
Butter, dairy	.28	.29	.30
Butter, creamery	.29	.28	.35
Eggs, new laid	.50	.45	.40
Cattle	8.75	8.25	8.40
Hogs	8.50	7.50	9.00

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S NIGHT GOWN.

By Anabel Worthington.

The plain yoke night gown is one which never loses its position as a favorite. It is well suited to all manner of materials and may be developed in the daintiest of wash silk or crepe de Chine, in the warm challie or albatross or outing flannel and also in simple muslin or cambric. All these materials can be trimmed with lace and embroidery or used alone.

The yoke in the model shown in our illustration is a square one and extends across the shoulders in both front and back. Below it the gown is gathered, with an opening extending half way down the front with high neck, finished with a small turnover collar. The sleeves are of the present day bishop style, plain at the shoulders, but loose below the elbow and gathered at the wrist where they are trimmed with a band cuff. The lower edge of the gown is finished with a simple hem.

To cut this night gown out of wide material the 45 inch width will cause great waste, but if it be cut from either 36 or 27 inch goods it will be necessary to place the front breadth at the side seam. This makes a little gore which scarcely shows and then there is no waste.

The night gown pattern, No. 7,394, is cut in sizes 36 to 46 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4½ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 15 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE FATAL HUM OF A SUBMARINE

A Remarkable Microphone Submarine Detector.

In the December Popular Science Monthly and World Advance, William Dubilier, the American electrical engineer who was called to Europe by one of the allied governments to devise a system of harbor defense against hostile submarines, describes the experiments which led to the adoption of a remarkable microphone submarine detector.

Although it is impossible to see a deeply-submerged submarine, Mr. Dubilier believed that there was a method of detecting its exact location in the water. In describing his experiments he says:

"Suppose that a submarine gave forth a sound of some kind, would it not be possible to devise some form of apparatus by which it could be heard? That was the starting idea of the experiments that I conducted for the allied government.

"At once the beating of the propellors of a submarine suggests itself. It is not characteristic enough. Motor boats, steamships, and other power driver vessels have propellors and although their period of vibration is different from that of any other sound must be sought—something as distinctive as the call of a robin or the neighing of a horse, something that by no possible chance can be mistaken for another sound.

"I found what I sought in the weird, shrill hum of a submarine. Others had heard that hum long before I began my experiments. It was taken for engine vibration. But it is much too high in pitch for that, as I found by actual tests.

"I soon convinced myself that the other engine-driven craft, some other shrill, almost singing note that can be heard when the Diesel engines are cut off and the submarine is travelling under power derived from her electric motors. The sound is unmistakable. Step into any central station where electric power is generated to light a city and you will hear the hum of a submarine. There is no difference to the ear. To devise a means of detecting this sound at great distances was the object of my experimenting.

"The microphone at once suggested itself as a suitable instrument, and with its use, a submarine could be heard at a distance of 20 miles."

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyses the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you, suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headaches, dizziness, your stomach sours, or is bad you have rheumatic twinges, or is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

ANGLO-FRENCH FORCES RETREATING TOWARDS THE GRECIAN FRONTIER

Bulgarian Statement Says the Bulgars Are Attacking Along the Entire Allied Front and That the French Have Evacuated Demirkapu Pass---Heavy Attacks of the Germans in the West Broke Up By French Artillery.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Confirmation of the Athens reports that the Anglo-French forces continue their retreat toward the Greek frontier was received in the Bulgarian official statement transmitted through Amsterdam to-day.

The French have evacuated Demirkapu, on the Salonika railway, and only twenty miles from the Greek frontier, the Bulgarian War Office announced. Less than twenty-four hours ago came the word from Paris that the French troops had retired from Krivolsk to Demirkapu. It is evident that the French forces either were hard pressed by the Bulgarians and attempted no stand at Demirkapu, or that a general retreat has been ordered by General Sarrail, as was suggested in despatches from Athens.

"South of Strumnitza we are attacking on the entire Allied front," said the Bulgarian War Office.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Greece is taking active steps to resist if the Allies attempt to compel compliance with their demands by force, the Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail cabled to-day. The Greeks, with the aid of Teutonic agents, are also preparing to fight a commercial blockade, the correspondent reported.

The Germans, the despatch said, have assured the Greek Government that their submarines will make ineffective any commercial blockade by the Anglo-French fleet. "In the meantime," it was added, "every possible annoyance is being placed in the way of the Allies at Salonika. Promised transport lines are withheld and lines of communication blocked by Greek transports."

PARIS, Dec. 9.—The French artillery broke up repeated heavy attacks of the Germans east of Souain during last night, the War Office reported this afternoon. The whole eastern Champagne region is being rocked by heavy artillery fire.

South of St. Souplet, French shells exploded a German munitions depot. It is admitted the Teutons established themselves in part of a trench east of Souain, but elsewhere their attacks were repulsed, it was officially stated. The French troops in the Argonne successfully exploded two mines in the region of Chevauche.

ABOARD THE PEACE SHIP OSCAR II., Via Wireless to Cape Race, Newfoundland, Dec. 9.—Premier Asquith's declaration in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that the Allies will consider any serious peace proposals was received with great rejoicing by the voyagers aboard the Ford peace ship to-day.

"I'll bet this ship against one cent that we'll have the men out of the trenches by Christmas," said Ford after hearing the message read.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 9.—The Berlin Tageblatt, admitting to-day that the German-Americans who violate United States laws should be punished, nevertheless took the view to-day that President Wilson and his administrations are partly responsible for any alleged Teutonic activities.

In discussing the President's message, referring to hyphenates, the Tageblatt declared that German-Americans were driven to take a strong stand for Germany because the United States, under Wilson's guidance, has not preserved "honest neutrality."

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—The German Chancellor, in the Reichstag to-day, mentioned the great stores of copper which, he said, were sufficient for years and years. "We do not fight to subjugate other nations," declared the Chancellor in conclusion. "We fight for the protection of our life and liberty. This war has always remained what it was at the beginning—a war of defence for the German nation and for her future." Dr. Philip Schiedmann, Socialist leader, whose interpolation resulted in to-day's peace discussion, followed the Chancellor. Dr. Schiedmann reminded the Reichstag that at the beginning of the war the Socialists approved the attitude of the German Government. "Germany can now speak for peace," said Schiedmann, "without risking being considered weak-hearted or dispirited."

The Socialist leader, in pushing his demand for a statement of peace terms, asserted that, notwithstanding her great victories, Germany had also made heavy sacrifices. The question of peace is now uppermost in all countries at war, he said. Only the statesmen don't know how to begin negotiations, because they consider such a step would be a confession of weakness. He mentioned the peace address of Lord Courtney in the British Parliament and the agitation of Italian Socialists. "France was longing for peace," he said. "My plea for the statement of peace terms like that of Lord Courtney need by no means be construed as a sign of lack of strength," said the Socialist leader. "The present war is bringing all Europe to the verge of ruin."

"If the war continues," shouted Dr. Schiedmann, "the United States will be the only victor. Europe will commit suicide."

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—Following the Chancellor's speech, all political parties in the Reichstag united in a joint declaration approving his stand, and declaring in any peace terms, guarantees of Germany's safety are necessary even if they include the annexation of territory.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—The importance of to-day's War Council was emphasized by the official statement that both Lord Kitchener and Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, were present, as was also the British Ambassador to France. At previous sessions this week Sir John French represented Great Britain.

LANCE-CORP. FRED LONG, A PRISONER IS EXCHANGED

Is Now in England—Was Wounded and Taken Prisoner at the Battle of Ypres—Was at Sennelager

WALKS WITH CRUTCHES

LONDON, Dec. 9.— Echoes of the great struggle around Ypres in April were heard to-day in the stories of six Canadian wounded just arrived from Germany as the result of an exchange of incapacitated prisoners of war. All six, who are now in Millbank Hospital, had fallen out of the Canadian ranks in the April fighting.

Alexander Bullock, of Toronto, 3rd battalion, looked very emaciated, and declared that but for the parcels of food received some of the prisoners could not have survived. In fact, all the men expressed their gratitude to the Canadian Red Cross and private beneficence in this respect. Private Bullock was at Limburg camp, as was Private L. D. Cardy, of the Winnipeg Rifles, his home address being Port Arthur.

Private G. W. Hincks, of the 13th battalion, Montreal Highlanders, after lying for two days on the field of battle with bullet and bayonet wounds in the leg, was carried off to Siegsburg, a considerable journey, without surgical treatment. "As soon as they heard that we were Canadians," he said, "they intimated how much they loved us and welcomed us." Hincks was taken to a prisoners' hospital at Cologne, where the food was such as even a healthy soldier could not eat unless ravenous with hunger. Among his mates of the same regiment left behind are Jack Harrison, Douglas Wells and Corporal Glithere, while Private Herber, Corporal "Bob" Watt and Private Grimwood are at Stendhal. A brother, Robert Hincks, is still in Boulogne hospital, suffering from the effects of gas.

All Well and Happy.

Lance-Corporal Fred Long, of Peterborough, who joined the 16th Vancouver battalion and was wounded at Ypres, is walking on crutches. He came from Sennelager, and had no complaints to make about his treatment. He was due to come over with a previous batch of exchanges about the middle of October, but was sick at that time. Among the 13th Montreal Highlanders left behind Long mentioned Privates Schlessor, "Bob" Irving and J. Anderson. He said that the men at his camp were all well and as happy as possible under the circumstances.

In the same party were Privates Robertson, of the 7th battalion, British Columbia, and Weir, of the 8th battalion, Winnipeg. Private A. Jones, of the 14th Royal Montreals, who came back with a previous group of exchangees, is still in Wandsworth Hospital.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Miss Dorothy Allan and Mr. Geo. Chandler, who take the soprano and tenor parts are both well known to us all in Peterborough, and as we know, compare very favourably with any outside talent that might have been secured.

$8,581 Collected on the First Day of the Patriotic Fund Canvass

Teams Reported Last Evening---Mr. E. A. Peck's Team Made the Best Showing on the First Day---Bigger Results Are Expected To-day---Factories Are Being Visited ---Notes of the Big Campaign.

Yes sir. Pleased, do you ask. Quite so. Exceedingly good results for a first day's fishing. Takes a preliminary canter to get up speed to reach the winning post. The day's takings reached well up to $9,000. This is about as good as last year and, mind you, at a time before the city had been dredged for Red Cross, mess funds, field kitchens, etc. Peterborough city has given in the last twelve months much more money than any one would have believed possible a couple of years ago.

The teams met for supper. Cleared the tables and called for returns. As each captain was called on he stood up and took his medicine, the portion being cheers and applause.

No. 1	J. J. Turner, Jr., Capt.	$1,227.00
No. 2	W. J. Oke Capt.	376.00
No. 4	H. G. Walker Capt.	860.00

No. 9	Adjt. McElhenny, Capt.	1,273.00
No. 10	G. A. Gillespie, Capt.	647.00
		$8,581.00

Of the above amount about $1,700.00 was taken in cash, showing that there is still money in the country when the proper inducements are offered.

That posterity may know of the men who worked for the Fund the names of teams and captains are given below A sort of Honour Roll. But one on which a man's work proves his worth.

As a matter of fact many men on whom the canvassers called were out of town. Of those who are good friends of the Fund so many as will subscribe would do well to send or hand subscriptions to Mr. J. A. Aylmer, one of the trustees of the Fund. Proper credit will be ensured by so doing.

Quite a competition among the teams to secure the use of cars. Many cars laid up at this season placed the use of the vehicle at a premium. So any one who has a car that can be spared would do the committee a real good service by advising headquarters of the fact. The use of the car facilitates getting about.

Cheering news all afternoon of yesterday. Reports coming in that there was a general building up from amounts of last year. Several cases of subscriptions made in the morning cancelled in the afternoon and an amount substituted to four or five times the sum. This is as it should be. Second thoughts are often the best.

HOLIDAY LEAVE FOR THE MEN OF 93rd BATTALION

Fifty Per Cent. of Overseas Units to Get Four Days Leave at Christmas and the Other Fifty Per Cent. for the New Year Holiday---Battalion Congratulated by County Council

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

There was a welcome announcement in to-day's orders of the 93rd Battalion in regard to leave of absence for the Christmas and New Year's holidays. It was announced that all the officers, non-commissioned officers and men are to get four days' leave, fifty per cent. of the men being off for Christmas and the other half for New Year's.

Hon. Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, was the host of a luncheon in the Empress Hotel grill room to-day in honour of Lt.-Col. Mills. The guests included the staff and officers of the 93rd Battalion, the officers of the 57th Regiment, Mayor Buller and others, and the affair, which was informal in nature, was very enjoyable. The tables were appropriately decorated with flowers and flags. Two toats were honoured, one to His Majesty the King and the other to the guest of honour, who replied suitably.

The cold breeze that blew across Central Park to-day made great coats feel none too warm.

Will any reader who knows the address of Pte. Arthur Searle of Peterborough, who left with the 21st Battalion, but who transferred to another corps in England, notify the Examiner.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

The following Battalion Orders by Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., were read to-day:

COUNTY COURT OPENS NEXT WEEK

Only One Civil Case Entered—List of Criminal Cases

The December sittings of the County Court will commence on Tuesday next. His Honour Judge Huycke will preside. The civil list is represented by one case in which the Township of Harvey is cited as plaintiffs in an action instituted against Garrett P. Galvin. This action involves a claim for damages for trespass alleged to have been committed by defendant in fencing in a portion of the public travelled highway crossing lot one on the sixteenth concession. The plaintiffs are asking for an injunction restraining plaintiffs from the use of the said highway.

Criminal Cases.

Several criminal cases are on the docket, Jos. Gould of Asphodel, faces a charge of assault on a little Hastings girl. He was committed a short time ago by Magistrate Langley.

Lily Maude Hanlan and Phoebe Jane Tyler are appealing against Magistrate Dumble's conviction and sentence to one year each in the Reformatory on a charge of vagrancy, along other paths than that of rectitude. This case will be heard by Judge Huycke without a jury.

LOCAL COMPANY HAS SECURED A LARGE CONTRACT

The Peterborough Metal Products Company, which is located in the building formerly occupied by the Canadian Cordage Company, on Aylmer Street, is actively engaged in the work of installing machinery. The company has secured a large contract and expect to be under way by the first of the New Year, with a staff of at least ninety men.

The company has leased the building from the Bank of Ottawa for a period of three years, with an option to purchase at the end of that time.

Mr. E. G. Sutton is general manager of the company, and is here supervising the installation of the machinery.

CORRECT SERVICE

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, DEC. 9, 1915

PETTY CRITICISM.

Max Harden, editor of a German newspaper, condemns the attacks made by Germans and German newspapers upon America and the Americans. At a meeting of a great business corporation he says a director referred to the United States people, with the evident approval of his hearers, as "that pack of scoundrels in America." Max Harden says such language disgraces Germans before the world and makes it "little wonder that Germans are hated." We can take the spirit of this to ourselves. We have some journals in Canada, and the truth is they are Conservatives, that keep up an unceasing tirade of attack upon Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia. Now Sir Sam, like other men, has his faults; but he has a big load to carry, and in this crisis his faults of vanity, etc., should not be insisted upon He should be helped rather than heckled. It is neither good policy nor patriotism to "slangwhang' the skipper while the ship needs careful steering among the breakers.

WHY GERMANY WANTS PEACE.

The upward path, whether in the moral, the material, or the military sphere of action, is difficult. We sometimes in moments of depression feel inclined to discouragement over the slow progress of the work of the Allies in this war. It is slow in action as far as onward movement is concerned, and terribly awful in its conditions. But there is evidence that the back-bone of the German ambition is broken; the cock-sure spirit of the German Emperor and the junker class is wonderfully toned down. Germany for a generation has been nursing the ambition of world domination. It has been behind the wonderful military preparedness that gave initial success to the German military machine. It has corrupted the minds, coloured the opinions, and inspired the hopes of the people of Germany.

In 1900 a prominent German journal said at the beginning of the year and century, in reviewing and forecasting the past and the coming century—"The old century saw a German Europe; the new century shall see a German world." That was the meat, "world domination," upon which the people had been fed. With that ambition Germany invaded Belgium, but her force was soon spent, and to-day, instead of being victoriously aggressive is on the defensive. A few weeks ago the German Emperor in a message to his troops in the West, referred to the "marvellous courage and tenacity with which they had defended for a year what they had won in the first month of the war." There is confessed the failure of the ideal of world domination—a few feverish weeks, under overwhelming conditions favourable to conquest of advance and spoliation over phenomenal unpreparedness, is followed by many months of desperate battling to keep the little foot hold won. This is not the language of a triumphant victor, who went forth conquering and to conquer. It is a virtual admission of grave dangers, a virtual confession that the "game is up."

There is evidence, daily accumulating, that Germany is tired of the war, that she is in conformity with her normal mode of procedure, sneakingly, trying to bring about proposals of peace, without taking the humiliating action of suing for peace. It may be done through crooked underground means, but it has its significance Even the peace propaganda originated in the United States, may easily be another of Germany's underhand ways of gaining her ends. If it is not a means of securing peace directly, it is hoped to be used to show that gentle Germany is willing to make peace, but that the wicked and blood-thirsty Allies are opposed to it, and are responsible for the continuance of war. This, it may be reasoned, will help Germany regain some of the ground she has lost in the world's estimation. She has lost the friendship of the whole world, and there is not a neutral nation that can speak a good word for her. With weakening strength; with a bankrupt ambition; with the moral enmity of the world against her, and girt with warring foes, strong and determined, and growing stronger and more determined, as the end comes in view, Germany feels her case desperate. In view of this, the Allied powers are fired with new courage, and fired by greater determination than ever to keep the war going strong till they can dictate the terms of peace that will be a real peace, and permanent pledge of the peace that is the death warrant of militarism and means, a world of free peoples—free to make their way upward with no shadow of militarism, to cloud their sky.

IN THE HOUSE OF HIS FRIENDS.

Sound public opinion cannot avoid the conclusion that conduct like that of Mr. J. R. Fallis, M.P., who prostituted his political influence to securing personal profit from the purchase of horses for the government, should be punished. Failing the application of any other form of punishment the resignation of his position as member for Peel is demanded. This may seem to some inadequate punishment; but to an honourable man, such a condemnation would be a punishment of almost insupportable weight. With Canada's high-pressure party politics, it must be a pretty grave offence by a party man that incurs the condemnation of his party friends. And condemnation is not lacking from this source. Among the numerous general condemnations of Mr. Fallis is the following specific one from the Toronto Telegram, a Conservative journal:

"Mr. Fallis can still do right to the extent of forwarding his resignation as M.P.P. for Peel to the Speaker of the Ontario Legislature without further loss of time."

To not omit credit where credit is due, the following from the Toronto News is reprinted:

"Horse trading in time of war, which robs the country, is an offence which even with all the traditions in its favour cannot be overlooked. Moreover, when a representative of the people fills his pockets by dishonest methods he proves himself unworthy of public confidence and unfit for public position."

We are fighting this war to maintain the dominance of honest methods in national life, and in international intercourse. Can a man who pursues dishonest methods by virtue of the influence of his representative capacity, be regarded as representing the people who are heart and soul in sympathy with the cause for which all of us are fighting?

JAMES ERNEST HOPKINS.

James Ernest Hopkins, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hopkins, North Monaghan, passed away yesterday at the age of nine months.

The funeral will be held to-morrow (Friday) from the family residence, Orpington Road, to the Little Lake cemetery.

A STRIKING CONTRAST.

A staff correspondent of The Daily News who visited the German prisoners interned at Halifax describes how the officers of the German navy hold themselves aloof from the officers of the German merchant marine. There are 16 officers from one of the Kaiser's warships and they pursue a policy of non-intercourse with their fellow Germans. Even in defeat and adversity they keep to their own quarters and to themselves. Caste and social distinction reign supreme as they do in Germany itself where an officer is at liberty to slap a soldier's face or otherwise chastise a mere private.

In the British House of Commons the other day Col. Page Croft M.P. for Christchurch, said: "For over a year I have been with that wonderful democracy, the British army, where we have no politics, and where we have no class, that wonderful brotherhood which has grown up in the trenches." Speaking of what would happen after the war, he said: "You will find that there will run through this country a purifying stream of manhood that will come back here and revolutionize the whole thought of this country. I believe you will find you will have a greater movement toward religion. I believe you will find a greater comradeship, a greater striving for social equality than we have ever known before." He added that during half an hour of actual war he had seen more Christianity, more elevation, and more nobility than he had observed in all the rest of his life.—Toronto News.

COMPULSORY MILITARY SERVICE AUTHORIZED BY THE STATUTES OF CANADA

That compulsory military service is on the statute books of Canada and requires only action by the Dominion Cabinet to put it into effect is pointed out in an article on the "Legal Aspect of Military Service in Canada" in the Canada Law Journal.

The liability of the militia of Canada for service is defined in Section 69 of the revised statutes of Canada (1906) as follows:

"The Governor-in-Council may place the militia, or any part thereof, on active service anywhere in Canada and also beyond Canada for the defence thereof, at any time when it appears advisable so to as by reason of emergency."

The Law Journal argues that there is clearly an emergency now, so that the power of the Government to demand the Canadian militia to serve beyond the boundaries of Canada is unquestionable.

Who Must Serve First.

The Canadian Law Journal continues: "As to the individual liability of our male population for military service under Section 15 of the present Act their liability to serve shall be divided into four classes: 'Class 1 shall comprise those of 18 and upward, but under 30, unmarried or widowers without children. Class 2, all those of the age 30 and upwards, but under 45, unmarried or widowers without children. Class 3, all those of the age of 18 and upward, but under 45, married or widowers with children. Class 4, all those of 45 and upward, but under 60. The said several classes shall be called upon to serve in the order in which they are referred to in this section.

"This is a prudent and sensible classification, but by reason of the volunteer system has up to the present not been acted upon. There may be good reasons for a departure from it, owing to special circumstances, but the directions contained in the Act are directory and not permissive.

"Sections 25 of the Act enacts that the Governor-in-Council shall from time to time make all regulations necessary for the enrolment of persons liable to military service and cadets, and for all procedure in connection therewith, and for determining, subject to the provisions of this Act, the order in which the persons in the classes fixed by this Act shall serve.'

Must Be Called Class By Class.

"The words 'the classes fixed by this Act' show clearly that class 1 shall be exhausted before class 2 is taken, and so on in order of the act. During this war very many married men have gone to the front, leaving their families to be maintained by the public, while too many of the unmarried men have not enlisted and have remained at home.

"As to the power to enroll men, Section 23 of the Dominion Act reads as follows: "When men are required to organize or complete a corps at any time, either for training or for an emergency, and enough men do not volunteer to complete the quota required, the men liable to serve shall be drafted by ballot. If there are inscribed on the militia roll more than one son belonging to the same family residing in the same house, only one of such sons shall be drawn, unless the number of names inscribed is insufficient to complete the required proportion of serving men. This section has not been put into force and the country has depended upon voluntary enlistment. The result has been that very often all the sons of one family feel it their duty to enlist, whilst all the sons of another family stay at home. Surely it is simple justice that the burden of defending their common country should be divided.

Only One Year Compulsory Service.

"The period of service is defined by Section 73 of the Dominion Act as follows:

"'73.—In time of war no man shall be required to serve in the field continuously for a longer period than one year; provided that:

"'(a) Any man who volunteers to serve for the war or for a longer period than one year shall be compelled to fulfill his engagement; and

"'(b) The Governor-in-Council may in cases of unavoidable necessity, of which the Governor-in-Council shall be the sole judge, call upon any militaryman to continue to serve beyond his year's service in the field for any period not exceeding six months.

"'2—This section shall not apply to the permanent force.'

"The Government has, up to the present time (as to whether this has been wise or not is not for us to discuss), continued the voluntary system and paid no attention to the Militia Act. Of course, it is true that the quickest way to get trained men (or at least partially trained men) to the front was at once to take advantage of the voluntary service as it was; and the work of the militia department was done promptly and efficiently; so that in that regard, in our unprepared condition we owe much to the volunteers.

Unmarried Men Held Back.

"The men of class 1 have not responded to the call as they should. Many stand by and look on and shout, but stay at home and see men with wives and children going to the front, and feel no shame. The application of the Act would put the burden where it belongs. We want a survival of the fittest, and the fittest are those who are willing to leave wife and children, and, if necessary, to go to their death for the sake of their country. These feel compelled to to, because somebody must go, and those who ought to go first too often will not. If the young men of class 1, who so far lag behind, were compelled to go, the married men and others in classes 2, 3 and 4 would not be required, though they will still be ready when their turn comes. Recruiting speeches appeal to the patriotic conscience, but they find no response from the slackers and shirkers; whilst the call is an impelling force to a lover of his country, even though he may have a wife and child.

"The Empire is and has been at war since August 4, 1914, and all the British Dominions and dependencies, including Canada, have been and are, de jure and de facto, at war also. If ever the Militia Act, as part of the law of the land, is to come into force, it should be now, and there are very man ywho think the time has come."

CHRISTMAS SHQPPING.

Have you heard any complaints about the volume of trading this Christmastide? We have not. The reports of the leading retailers are to the effect that business this year looks like breaking the record. It is useless to go about talking hard times Prosperity is actually being thrust upon us. We are beginning to feel the benefit in every line of business of the wonderful era of production on which Canada has entered. Another noticeable feature about the Christmas trade is that there seems to be more life and interest in early holiday shopping this year. People are showing evidence of thinking about the hard-driven clerks to whom the habit of waiting till the last moment made Christmas something to be dreaded. Then there's the children. People are beginning to realize that the fun of Christmas can be greatly added to for the children by early shopping and mysterious packages that are put away not to be opened till Christmas. Let us all help along the early shopping movement. If you haven't begun your Christmas buying yet, begin to-morrow morning. If you have begun, keep on doing it early. It is kinder, and gives more joy to childhood.—Montreal Herald.

ALDERMEN AND SALARIES

Edmonton's plan of city government was built up on the idea that the detail and routine work should all be handled by the salaried commissioners, and that the aldermen would have no occasion to meet more than a couple of times per month to supervise, give general direction, and pass necessary by-laws.

If the scheme has not been worked out it is the fault of the aldermen, not the charter, the commissioners or the public.

If aldermen prefer to waste their days and nights doing what the commissioners are supposed to do and paid to do—for the sake of the political prestige they can get out of it—on the patronage they can work into it—thatis their own funeral and the taxpayers are not called upon to pay them for it. It would be more sensible to pay them to stop it.

Maybe if we knew that we had to pay them a thousand dollars cold cash as salary we would be more careful as to the kind of aldermen we elected. But it isn't likely, because we have had aldermen whose services cost us a good deal more than that and we re-elected them, and elected more of the same kind.

The proposal to pay salaries to the aldermen does not promise any large and wholesome reflex influence in the way of increasing caution on the part of the elector. If having to pay for our mistakes and indifferences on poling day could teach us prudence we have surely enough of it to do already.—Edmonton Bulletin.

Canal May Be Tied Up Partly For Several Years

That uninterrupted service through the Panama Canal must not be expected for several years was the summary of a statement issued last night by Professor Benjamin Le Roy Miller, Ph.D., who occupies the chair of geology in Lehigh University. Professor Miller returned last Wednesday from a tour of several months in South and Central America, where he investigated mining conditions. On his return trip he made a lengthy examination of the slides at Gaillard and Culebra cuts.

In his room in the Hotel Breslin last night he said:—

"When the Panama Canal was opened to traffic some months ago the public generally and also steamship companies that had been waiting for a long time for the event seemed to feel that the canal was completed and if ever closed on account of slides the closing would be of very short duration

"When the slides started a few weeks ago optimistic views were expressed and more than one person predicted that the closing of the canal to navigation would only be a matter of a few weeks at most. One authoritative report originating in the canal zone, stated that the canal would be clear in two weeks. Instead of that, however, the slides became much worse and on the date set persons were walking dry shod across the canal from one side to the other.

Had to Move Scores of Houses

"One who has not been in the region can scarcely appreciate the extent to which the slides extend. In the Culebra cut cracks have formed more than thirteen hundred feet back from the canal and all the ground intervening is gradually moving toward the cut. Macadamized roads, constructed where the earth was supposed to be stable, have been destroyed by the movement, and scores of houses have had to be moved to save them.

"The ground has cracked under the old Administration Building, and as it is in line with a great cliff formed by an enormous block of earth breaking off, there is no doubt but that this building must be removed before very long in order to save it.

"When one speaks of slides they are likely to consider them as due to the steep slopes of the Canal banks and conclude that they can be checked by decreasing the slopes. However, the earth from the higher points does not go into the Canal directly. Instead, when the loose material is filled with water, as it is during the rainy season, great blocks from the higher lying regions adjacent to the Canal settle downward almost vertically and force the underlying material into the cut by a lateral pressure.

"The amount of material that lies now broken loose and is moving toward the cut is immense, and there is no doubt but that much rock, now apparently stable, will also move as its support is withdrawn by the removal of the loose earth and rock. Before the Canal can be said to be completed and permanently opened to traffic, the amount of material that must be taken out does not fall far short of the amount already taken from the Culebra cut.

Rainy Season Will Close in.

"Transportation companies intending to use the canal should realize that they must not expect uninterrupted service for several years. During the dry season the canal may be open, but it is certain to be closed during the rainy season when the earth is soaked with water and its movement toward the canal facilitated.

"When the canal was opened, the steam shovels were disposed of to various companies and many can now be found in mining camps in several parts of South America. Dredges operating in the canal were substituted for the shovels and these are now at work on both sides of the six slides. Some days they can keep pace with the incoming material but on other days the lose.

In view of the extent of the material that has now started toward the cut it seems as though steam shovels should again be employed, in order to remove more quickly the earth that in time will enter the cut. Practically all, if not all, of Gold Hill and much of Zion Hill, must be removed and to wait until the earth breaks loose and enters the cut where the dredges can attack it, seems to be unwise and unquestionably longer delays the completion of the project.

"If dredges alone are employed, as at present, the canal may be kept clear during the months when rainfall is lightened, but for many years to come the rainy season is almost certain to cause such slides as to close the canal for weeks or even months."

Professor Miller was accompanied on his trip by Dr. Joseph T. Singewald, of Johns Hopkins University.

Professor Miller has written several reports on geological survey results in this country, published by the United States Geological Survey. He was special assistant in the Iowa geological survey in the summer of 1899 and was an assistant geologist in the United States geological survey between 1907 and 1913 as well as geologist of the Pennsylvania geological survey. He is a fellow of the A.A.A.S. Iowa Academy of Sciences, Geological Society of America, member of the National Geological Society and of the American Institute of Mining Engineers. He has been professor of geology at Lehigh University since 1907.

MAN WITH ACID INDIGESTION LEARNS WHAT TO EAT

PATIENT: "But, doctor, I've tried moderate, plain meals and they cause distress, belching, sour stomach, bloating and headaches."

PHYSICIAN: "You have nothing but hyper-acidity—excess acid secretion in the stomach—and the plain bisurated magnesia will neutralize the excess acid and stop all trouble."

PATIENT: "Is bisurated magnesia harmless?"

PHYSICIAN: "Absolutely."

NOTE—The bisurated magnesia is a palatable, inexpensive, antacid which can be purchased at any drugstore. It gives immediate relief in all cases of sour stomach, acid indigestion, and other troubles due to hyperacidity. And most ordinary stomach disorders are due to excess acid. Nearly everybody is subject to attacks of acid indigestion because nearly everybody eats fancy foods, eats too hastily, and has an occupation which prevents living the active, natural, outdoor life that Nature intended. So bisurated magnesia is needed to help nature restore normal digestion. A teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water should be taken after each meal. As there are several forms of magnesia be sure to call for bisurated magnesia.

CHARGED WITH THEFT OF ROBES

LINDSAY, Dec. 9.—At yesterday's session of the Police Court, a citizen faced the magistrate on the charge of stealing four buffalo robes from conveyances in the Grand Union Hotel yards last night. The accused was remanded until Friday morning

The theft was committed between six and seven o'clock, the robes being the property of Messrs. Robt. Begg, Cameron; T. Grandy, Fleetwood; J. McConnell, Lindsay; and F. Every, Oakwood.

When the robes were missed, Mr. Joseph Jocque lost no time in notifying the police. He suspected that a man who had been seen around the yards knew something of the theft, and acquainted Constable Woods of his suspicions. The officer visited the suspect's home in the south-western part of the town, and found the robes in his possession. The accused was placed in custody and came up for hearing this morning. He claimed that he was drinking and knew nothing of the theft of the robes or how he got home.

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Easily and Cheaply Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex and make it into 16 ounces of cough syrup, and watch that cough vanish.

Pour the 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effective remedy, at a saving of $2. A day's use will usually overcome a severe cough. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste. Children like it.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT

ABOARD A "ZEPP."

A Trying Experience Is That of Wilhelm's Chief Murderers

Some interesting particulars recently appeared in one of the German papers of the men who man the Zeppelins which come over to bombard London and other English towns. All the men are specially chosen, not only for their physical qualities but also for their intelligence.

The strain of the journey from Germany to England and back again is so great, indeed, that the men have to be given a complete rest of some days on their return. A journey across here means at least fourteen hours travelling at a high altitude and at a terrific speed. Even on a comparatively warm night the height at which a Zeppelin is forced to travel makes the journey an icy cold one.

Every man of the crew is a teetotaller, and no one is allowed to smoke while on board. Each man knows, too, that any journey might be his last, for the unwieldly aircraft might be brought down by an aeroplane or gunfire, and, as so many have, by sheer accident. This knowledge is such a strain on a man's thoughts that he can only come through it successfully if he is above the average.

Cameras on Aeroplanes

Special cameras are now being used by many of the French pilots in order to take photographs of the German positions over which they are flying. The camera is fixed below the body of the aeroplane in such a way that its lens is always pointing to the ground. Attached to the camera is a small propeller which spins round as the aeroplane drives through the air. This small propeller automatically works the shutter of the camera and also unwinds the roll of the film in the camera at a rate proportionate to the speed of the aeroplane. Each time the shutter of the camera is opened and a photograph is taken the direction of the aeroplane's flight and the height of the machine in the air are automatically recorded on the edge of the film.

Rifle Testing

Occasionally one reads that every rifle used by Tommies is tested before being passed as perfect, but few people know how thorough these tests are. Every rifle is tested for "rusting" in the following way: All grease or oil is removed with soda, and the barrel is then filled with a strong solution of sal ammoniac and allowed to stand in a wet atmosphere for fifty hours. At the end of that time if the amount of rust that has accumulated in the rifle in any way affects its working it is promptly rejected. The dust test is even more severe. The rifle is put in a powerful blast of fine sand for two minutes. After that the bolt and other mechanism must work properly or the weapon is rejected. This test has to be passed with the magazine full and empty.

For Frying-For Shortening For Cake Making

There is a way to make the products of your kitchen more appetizing—

There is a way to make them more digestible and therefore more healthful—

There is a way to be relieved of the annoyance of smoke whenever you do any frying—

It is to use Crisco.

Crisco can be used in place of lard without giving a "greasy" taste to the food.

Crisco can be used for deep frying without giving off the least odor or smoke.

Crisco costs but half of what butter does, and less than real lard.

FRENCH CARS IDLE; FOOD PRICES SOAR

PARIS, Dec 7. — Parisians have hitherto regarded prices such as sugar at 26 cents per pound and coal at $30 a ton as one of the minor inconveniences of the war. Apart from some grumbling about speculators and middlemen, no one supposed that the increased cost of living was anything but natural.

Recent revelations in Le Journal concerning the huge number of idle railway trucks put a different complexion on affairs and indicate mismanagement and carelessness on the part of the railway administration. Ten days ago Le Journal stated that forty trucks had been idle since the beginning of the war at the Cognac railway station, being partly filled with artillery materials and partly used as habitations by engineers. Today the same writer in a two-column article headed, "By Photograph, Seven Hundred Empty Trucks Idle Since August, 1914, at Blancmesnil, on the outskirts of Paris," states that he has received thousands of letters from all parts of the country giving instances of unused trucks which, he declares, amount to many thousands. It is known that a vast number of waggons were used to convey the Serbian expedition to Marseilles, a majority of which are still idle in that neighbourhood.

Meanwhile prices rise daily in Paris, and the western ports, from Bordeaux to Boulogne, are choked with mountains of goods. Le Journal states that 10,000 tons of sugar have been disembarked since August at Havre by one house alone, and remain there spoiling, owing to the absence of railway facilities, the delay causing higher prices to the consumer, with profit to no one.

The American agent of one of the largest British coal importers—owing to the German occupation of the mining districts, France uses British coal almost entirely — informs me that his house has fully 50,000 tons idle at western ports, where the total amount waiting is probably over 1,000,000 tons. At Rouen, where he has 10,000 tons, he has obtained just eighteen trucks, with a capacity of ten tons apiece, in the last three weeks."

Hitherto the railway administration has received only compliments for efficient handling of the mobilization problem and the subsequent troop movements but now that the press is devoting attention to commercial mismanagement, it is likely that public indignation will force an investigation, which long-standing complaints by business men have been unable to obtain.

In time of war the French railways are entirely State managed, under the Department of Public Works, of which the Socialist Minister Sembat is in charge. The present state of affairs seems to some persons a convincing argument against the Socialist plank of State-managed railroads particularly as, before the war, one of the State lines, the Orleans Etat, was notoriously the worst managed in France.

BELGIAN BANKS ARE MENACED

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 9.—When the year covered by the original war levy on Belgium expired last month it was reported here that the German administration would continue to collect at the rate of 40,000,000 francs monthly without stating the total sum desired or the period of its collection.

Later, according to prominent Belgians who recently left their country the German authorities announced that they would require the sum of 480,000,000 francs ($120,000,000) collectible as previously in monthly sums of 40,000,000 francs each, but that security for the sum total was to be provided immediately. Unless such securities were voluntarily produced the Belgian travellers reported, private banking and safe deposit accounts were to be seized by the German administrators as collateral for the levy.

Could Not Stand The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down.

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to cope with her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the original remedy for all heart and nerve troubles. Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

LARGE NUMBER OF SPLENDID PRIZES FOR POULTRY SHOW

Mr. Geo. Paxman Will Again Be Superintendent of the Show —Meeting Held Last Evening

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association was held in the Labour Hall last night. Considerable business was transacted such as appointing the superintendent for the show. Mr. Paxman will again take the reins of office as superintendent. This year the officers and judges will have badges of office. Ribbons will again be given for prizes, as well as the cash prizes. The prize list is again filled with its usual large number of cups and cash specials.

The secretary reported an unusually large number of inquiries for prize lists from all parts of Ontario and some from Quebec.

Mr. Isaac Parks exhibited two pullets and one cockerel Black Minorcas. The cockerel took the sweepstake ribbon. They were fine specimens of their variety.

The society decided to hold a special meeting in the Labour Hall on Wednesday, 29th December, and all local exhibitors are requested to hand in their entries that night in order to make the work easier for the secretary. The directors will meet at Brault's store on Monday evening, 13th December. Business of importance.

FIRST OF NEW CHAPLIN PICTURES

The Royal Theatre to-day presents America's greatest comedian, Charlie Chaplin in his very latest play, entitled "Shanghaied," which is conceded to be his funniest play yet produced. Chaplin only produces one play a month now, in two reels. The Royal has secured exclusive rights for first presentation of this new series in Peterborough. Chaplin is paid $2,000 a week for this new series of films; hence, to first present them involves a very heavy expenditure. However, no advance is made in prices at the Royal.

Secure One of the Canadian-Famous "New Scale Williams" Pianos With Unusual Economies, Privileges and Advantages

LIMITED TO 50. RAPIDLY FILLING. WILL CLOSE SOON

Readers of the Peterborough Examiner should certainly join the big Christmas Club being conducted in co-operation with the old-established firm of J. M. Greene Music Co., to enable the public to secure pianos and player-pianos for Christmas on very easy terms and with unusual club privileges and advantages.

The club is based on the power of co-operative buying. Its success is due to the fact that when a large number of people buy the same thing at the same time they can secure privileges and economies that an individual purchaser could not. Thus it is that through this club you get many exclusive advantages not offered at any other time outside of this club.

For instance, club members secure the lowest cash price for any instrument they may purchase, but with time payment privileges.

They have the option of selecting from a large stock of pianos and player-pianos in Greene's showrooms. They merely pay $1 to join the club.

Club members only have to make half payments while sick or unemployed; they get three months' exchange privilege as well as other club privilege.

This is the greatest offer ever made to the music-loving public, and is possible through the co-operation of the big J. M. Greene Music Co.

All it costs is one dollar to join and this dollar is refunded if you do not buy, and is credited to your account if you do. After selecting your instrument you commence your special club payments and the instrument is delivered within a few days before Christmas.

Just think of securing all of these privileges and advantages on all of the famous "New Scale Williams". Such quality was never offered outside of this club on such terms, which proves the power of co-operative action. The J. M. Greene Co. on Charlotte St., will be glad to send full particulars and membership blank to all readers of the Examiner.

Statement Showing Comparative Assessments Per Capita and Taxes of Canadian Municipalities---Figures For Peterborough Are Based on a Population of 20,653

Figures prepared from a statement received from the Government, show that Peterborough has a most favourable position in the province in regard to per capita debt, tax, debenture debt and sinking fund.

The assessment per capita in Peterborough is $551, and the municipal tax figures out at $9. Among the cities of Ontario only Kingston has a lower per capita assessment and municipal tax, that of Kingston being $549 and 10.

The figures for the cities and towns of Ontario are:

GIRLS OF BONNER WORTH CO. DOING THEIR PART

As an instance of the way the working people of this city are helping the Red Cross Society, it is interesting to note the following:

The girls of the Bonner-Worth Co. who work until 8 o'clock three nights in the week and to 6 o'clock on the other evenings at the factory, have, in their spare time, knitted 59 pairs of socks and one scarf. They have also sent quite a lot of small gifts with the socks; so they have utilized their spare time very well. The employees also forward a monthly contribution to the Overseas Tobacco Fund and fortnightly contributions to the Patriotic Fund. They are doing their part to forward the cause of the Allies.

A New Kind of Pancakes.

You enjoy pancakes, but perhaps find them indigestible. If you'll make them with one-third flour and two-thirds Roman Meal, you will enjoy the most delicious pancakes and not be troubled afterwards. You may feed them to a babe.

Use any household recipe and bake bread, gems, muffins, steam puddings, etc., with Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal. It prevents indigestion and relieves constipation or "money back."

Especially delicious for porridge if not stirred while cooking. If you have stirred it try again in justice to yourself and follow directions.

Try the new ready-cooked Roman Meal Nuggets. Serve with hot milk or soften with boiling water; drain, and add milk and sugar.

THE FROCK COAT AND ITS GREATNESS

The Palladium of Politics and How it is of Public Importance

The frock coat has an esoteric symbolic existence. It is the Palladium of politics. However unfashionable it may be nowadays in the salon, it is always correct on the political platform. There are politicians who depend on the frock coat as some preachers depend on a manuscript. It is their stay. When they want a place to put the right hand, there is "buzzim" of the frock coat. When they would produce their hearts for public inspection, there it is again. When they would smile at the puerile inventions of the Honourable Gentlemen opposite, the waist-line of the coat is the correct place to rest the hands. When tears are demanded, do not handkerchiefs nestle quietly in the tail pockets? There have been instances where a grey frock coat—with spats — has swung a constituency.

Inasmuch, therefore, as the politician's success depends so largely upon the frock coat, why do not the tailors pay our public men for testimonials? Those who read some piano advertisements will understand how reasonable such a letter as this would be from the Honourable Peter Perigord, M. P.: "Gentlemen,—I am pleased to say that the frock coat carefully selected by me in your warerooms gave perfect satisfaction during my address, and had a great part in making my remarks impressive and appealing. I must congratulate you on the admirable way in which you have sewn on the back buttons."

Twelve years ago the Gourlay, Winter and Leeming Company saw the absurdities of piano testimonials acquired as a quid pro quo. They resolved to make the Gourlay Piano so good an instrument that any devious method of advertising would be unnecessary. Visiting artistes get no opportunity to "endorse" the Gourlay—at the manufacturers' expense. But owners of the instrument sing its praises daily. See a Gourlay Piano at the office of J. O. Fife, 341½ Water Street.

SUFFERING OF REFUGEES.

Tramp Through the Snow on Way to Belgrade.

SEMENDRIA, Dec. 1 (by courier to Berlin, Dec. 3, via London Dec. 4).—Refugees daily are streaming back from towns south of here, whither they fled before the advance of the troops of the Central Powers. Nearly 200 people boarded a steamer here this morning, bound for Belgrade. Fugitives told the correspondent that great numbers were on their way north, many of them suffering from hunger and cold and tramping through the snow with broken shoes.

The only railroad available comes up the Moravia Valley to Semendria, and the fugitives are transported gratis so far as military exigencies permit. They may, however, often have a long way to go on foot before reaching the railroad. The Danube boats transport them free to Belgrade.

Intense cold is reported from the interior of Serbia. Even here the temperature was 13 degrees below below zero, centigrade, last night. Floating ice is beginning to appear in the Danube, and a few more days of temperature like this would make the task of keeping the river navigable difficult.

Although the river has been open for transportation for about five weeks, traffic is not heavy. The correspondent saw four convoys going carried military goods, so far as could be ascertained.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use feed the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

AN UNUSUAL UNDERTAKING

The Christmas Music Club Has Novel Features That Are Valuable

Never in the history of Peterborough has any music dealer undertaken anything quite so sweeping and extensive in the way of a special offer as the J. M. Greene Music Company have with the Christmas Piano Club. While the club membership has been limited to fifty, the selection of a piano has been unlimited, as any piano in the store has been reduced to club price and terms, together with the special club privileges never before available in this district. These special privileges are so unusual, and the prices and buying terms so easy to club members, that anyone interested, who has not done so, should investigate without delay, as the club membership is limited to fifty.

Garbage Contract For Next Year

Property Committee Gave the Problem Another Battle Last Evening

The Property Committee of the City Council met last evening to consider the question of awarding the 1915 contract for the collebtion of garbage. The contract was originally awadred to Mr. E. K. Graham, but was referred back to the committee by the Council upon the grounds that Mr. Graham is not a resident of the city.

Mr. Graham, who was present, informed the committee that he had moved out of the city at the request of the committee. At that time he had a contract with the city, and used his farm as a dumping ground. Since he was advised by the committee that he would receive the 1916 contract, he had purchased a number of horses and vehicles.

After some further discussion, it was decided to award the contract to Mr. Graham, providing he furnishes approved securities. A meeting of the City Council will be held this evening to ratify the above.

A Marked Cheque.

The committee also decided to recommend to the Council that in future all tenders be awarded to residents of the city whenever possible, and a marked cheque be obtained with each tender.

Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the committee, favoured this more when the question of calling for tenders was first discussed.

The committee will ask for tenders for the purchase of ashes from the incinerator for the year 1916. Sanitary Inspector Spence was instructed to see what arrangement could be made respecting the removal of night soil.

Sanitary Inspector Spence was recommended for an increase in salary of at least $300 per year. At present he is receiving the meagre stipend of $700. The proposed increase will bring this amount up to $1,000 per year.

The Christmas Victrola Club Join At Once

A Few Memberships Left
Closing Date Sat., Dec. 11

THE advantages of the Christmas Victrola Club are many; for instance, members secure their victrola at the cash price, but with time payment privileges.

THE payments are arranged from $1.00 to $3.00 weekly, and the amount members pay weekly depends upon the Victrola they select.

IF a club member is taken sick or is temporarily unemployed, the privilege of half payment is granted for as many months as he has previously paid in full.

EVERY instrument is guaranteed, and if at any time within ten days a member becomes dissatisfied with his machine he can return it and receive back every cent he has paid, less cartage and necessary repairs.

RECORDS are usually sold for cash, but club members receive six, for which they pay in the regular club payments.

CALL at the Victrola Parlor, Third Floor, let us explain in full the advantages of this unique club plan. At the same time we will demonstrate these wonderful machines to you.

"His Master's Voice" TRADE MARK

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

$8,581 Collected on the First Day of the Patriotic Fund Canvass

In spite of the cold the big thermometer will begin to register Thursday morning. As you walk up street glance at the mercury. See it climb. If earnest endeavour hearty work and cheerful confidence can fill the tube it will be done.

The headquarters is a cheerful place. Teams' members get off in a corner for a conference and are presently ousted by some other conclave that wants the room. Assignments are transferred from one team to another. Which may handle the prospect gets the job. All men are widely different in their susceptibility to approach. This applies in politics, fishing, and other activities. Same as to the Patriotic Fund. Get on the right side of the man and he will listen, be convinced and subscribe.

No appeal was made this year to residents of Peterborough, that is men from Peterborough living in the States. It was assumed that nearly all would have been in the way of subscribing to Red Cross and other funds. But if several, hearing of the campaign, as they will if they still take a Peterborough paper, may do as they did last year, send something across the line for the benefit of the Fund. It will be welcomed.

A man met the Adjutant, (there is only one Adjutant that really counts for the Patriotic Fund, all others being on the lines), and said, "taking up a collection, same as last year." Was told of the fact. "Here's a dollar. I'm out of work. Best I can do. If I get a job I will do better." Right spirit. Surely the person getting that dollar will put it to a good use.

Several of the major subscriptions may be noted, just to encourage others to go and do likewise. W. B. Reid, $100; Mr. Logie, $100; Peterborough Cereal Co., $500; Messrs. Neill, Crane and Campbell (P.), $100 each. Toronto Savings and Loan Co., $1,000; W. G. Morrow, $500; J. A. Aylmer, $500; Captain Burnham, $120; Bishop O'Brien, $100; W. Madill, $100; Alex. Grant, $100; Matthews-Blackwell Co., $500; the employees of the Bonner-Worth Co., $335. It may be said, and well said too, that no factory employees has been so continuous in its contribution to good objects since the war began as those of the Bonner-Worth factory. A continuous stream of money has poured out all through the long summer, and boxes of socks and garments, stuffed with chewing gum, tobacco, etc. So much so that on one box was placed a warning to the soldier to investigate the socks before he shoved his feet into them. Much honour is due the girls of this factory for their good efforts.

The De Laval factory employees lined up nicely in the front with $250, the manager, Mr. Breyfogle, made the amount symetrical by adding another $50. Great thing symmetry. Mr. Kenner gave a lift with $100, and Messrs. Ruddy, Merrill & Meredith, Travers, Morris, Rev. Phelan, and many others whose name for the moment we are not taken as read out gave $50. Taken altogether it was fine.

....In this connection, and as a matter of public interest, it was decided, so far as the meeting would determine to print the entire subscription list as soon as possible after the canvas closes. It will require some time to get things posted up and subscriptions entered but it will be done.

This morning the factory and shop and store end of the canvas will be prosecuted. As a trial heat, yesterday, Fire Chief Howard and Adjutant McElhenney visited two factories, those of Ackerman Co. and Turners, and it worked out fine. The employers were so good as to shut down the works for ten minutes and leave the field to the canvassers. The employees, our own men and citizens, heard a brief appeal and then subscribed, moderate amounts but continuous. Some misconceptions were cleared up. Thirty cents a week will amount to $16.00 per year. Surely any man in constant work can afford to give $16.00 to the benefit of the wives and children of the men who are in the field fighting that can may stay at home. So we expect good things from our workmen.

Word comes in that the girls are the best givers. Sure thing. Women give more liberally than men, as a sex. If they didn't where would the poor man be. Woman's place is to be beneficient. So in the stores and shops the girls are lining up to a man with a record of all they can do. Just mention this in your canvas and ask the men to do their best.

Volunteers wanted. The canvassing teams need the use of a number of cars. Can they have them? A car and some one to run it. Of the greatest possible help. Who will let us have the assistance. Don't fear that the radiator will be frozen. Car has to hustle too fast for that. Committee will acknowledge with grateful thanks.

FIRST MOGUL ENGINE ARRIVES IN LINDSAY

LINDSAY, December 9.—The first of the big mogul engines to run on the grain line between Lindsay and Midland arrived in town yesterday. She was under the competent hand of engineer Harry Wilson. She was brought down here from Orillia by him. Her number is 1249. There will be ten of these big compounds working on this line during the winter bringing grain trains to Lindsay, where two of the ordinary engines will take hold to take the trains the rest of the trip. The tracks in the Lindsay yards have been strengthened in order to stand up under the monsters. The bridges along the route have also been strengthened and it was found necessary to make the entrances higher into the round house here in order to admit this "twelve hundred class." No. 1249 was brought down light but will be pressed into service at once.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought that I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework, and have a family of ten."

PREACHED SERMON AT CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Monsignor Casey of Lindsay Spoke on the Words "I Am the Way, the Truth and the Life"

Monsignor Casey of Lindsay, preached the anniversary sermon during Pontifical vespers at the church of the Immaculate Conception last night from the text: "I am the way, the truth and the life," St. John, 14:6. He congratulated the congregation, Rev. Dean McColl and Rev. Father McCarthy and His Lordship Bishop O'Brien upon the accomplishment of the first year's successful work which he trusted was but a prestige of what was to follow. Mons. Casey expressed the hope that God would bless every member of the congregation to whom the church would become dearer as the years pass, and would be but the beginning of a holier life.

In his sermon Monsignor Casey dwelt upon the Divine purpose in the creation of man, his endowment with a free will, the first sin and the promise of the Redeemer. Jesus came to call sinners to repentance, and he purchased for all men the salvation of their souls. But only through Him could they be saved. He showed them how they should live, and bade them to follow in His way. But He is also the truth, and came on earth to teach truth. He preached His gospel among the people and men said He spoke not as one of the scribes, but as one having authority. Monsignor Casey also illustrated the meaning of Jesus when He said He was the life, and concluded an inspiring sermon by reminding the people to bring themselves closer to God they must regularly approach the sacraments, and be attentive to their duties.

Bishop O'Brien was assisted by Rev. Dean McColl and Rev. Father Phelan. The singing of the choir indicated that the church is well supplied in this respect.

$4,000,000 For British Red Cross

Lord Lansdowne's Reference to Wilson's Message Conveys a Mild Criticism

LONDON, December 9.—It was announced at a meeting of the British Red Cross in London yesterday afternoon that a recent one day collection taken throughout the Empire in behalf of the Red Cross had resulted in the fine total of $4,000,000.

Lord Lansdowne, Minister without portfolio in the British Cabinet, in thanking the British Overseas Dominions for their share of the contribution, referred to President Wilson's message to Congress. "The President," he said, "had stigmatized in burning words the conspiracy of intrigue and corruption which has been taking place not only in America, but elsewhere, in order to pour the poison of disloyalty into the very arteries of the national life." Was it not something to know that in a great part of the world the "virus had been innocuous"? he asked, and said that he felt proud of the fact "that the campaign of conspiracy and intrigue had stood no chance of success in Great Britain's Dominions."

Lord Lansdowne said that it was not only in financial assistance or in the numbers of the hosts of men that the Dominions had rendered such wonderful service, for the troops sent by the Dominions had by their quality won the admiration of the whole world, especially in regard to the Dardanelles landing."

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The City Council will meet in special session this evening to consider the question of awarding the garbage contract also a matter respecting the Peterborough Metal Products Company.

Light Wanted.

A light is wanted badly in the vicinity of the cold storage warehouse, East City. Several complaints have been made concerning the inadequate lighting at this point.

Get Fire Chief's Pay.

Acting Fire Chief W. J. Smith, of Toronto, is to receive a bonus for the year that will raise his salary to that of a chief's during his period of office. He was appointed to that position on the resignation of Fire Chief Thompson and Deputy Chief Noble. The decision means that he will be handed a cheque for $1,800 for "extra services" rendered as Acting Fire Chief.

DETROITERS GAVE $15,000.

Of the $140,000 subscribed to the Windsor Patriotic Fund more than $15,000 was contributed by residents of Detroit, according to Secretary T. C. Ray of the campaign fund.

MUSICAL NOTES.

ANNIVERSARY AT KNOX CHURCH

Rev. Ronald McLeod of St. Paul's Church, Ingersoll, Will Be the Preacher

Next Sunday, Dec. 12th, is the anniversary of the opening of Knox church and will be fittingly observed by that congregation. The session is fortunate in that they have secured the services of Rev. Ronald McLeod of St. Paul's church, Ingersoll, as preacher for the day. Mr. McLeod comes to us highly recommended for his pulpit gifts and wil doubtless be greeted by large audiences at both services.

A special offering to aid in carrying the liabilities of the congregation will be taken.

The Session and Board of Management feel confident that the congregation and friends will unite to make these services a success in the highest sense of the word.

SPRING SITTINGS OF THE HIGH COURT

The jury sittings of the High Court will open in Peterborough on Tuesday, 15th February, while the non-jury sittings will commence on Tuesday, 5th April..

It is altogether likely that Sandford Lindsay and his wife, who have been indicted on a charge of murder, will appear for trial at the jury sittings commencing Tuesday, 15th February.

ENGLAND'S DEBT PROBLEM.

Francis Neilson Says Land Will Have to be Re-valued.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—To meet the great debts of the war, England must re-value her lands at the end of the conflict, according to Francis Neilson, M.P., who spoke yesterday before the Columbia University Institute of Arts and Sciences. The great task of meeting the pensions and supporting the blind, maimed, and insane soldiers, together with all the other debts will do for England what years of agitation could not bring about.

Following the address, Mr. Neilson was besieged with questions by the women present as to his views on suffrage. These he evaded, but he added that the Conservative party in England was in favour of giving suffrage to the 1,000,000 women property holders. This the Liberals objected to, fearing it was the establishment of another class which would militate against them.

"The re-valuation of present lands in England is inevitable," he said, "owing to the stupendous debt being incurred in carrying on the war. Under the present values fixed for the lands the taxes will not be sufficient to meet the debt. No change in the valuation has been made since the time of William and Mary, in spite of the most strenuous efforts on the part of reformers."

MR. C. A. G. SPENCE, Sanitary Inspector, whose salary will be considered by the Council to-night and probably increased.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The State Department has been informed that all United States vessels seized by the British Government would not be requisitioned until the Prize Court had given some decision.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Sir John Simon, Secretary of State for Home Affairs, to-day introduced in Parliament a bill extending the maximum life of the present Parliament from five to six years. The term of the present Parliament expires early next year. It is Sir John's intention to prevent the holding of an election while the war is in progress.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—Nine Austrian warships bombarded the port of Burazzo on Monday and also shelled the Italian wireless station. Several Albanian, Montenegrin and Italian vessels were sunk.

TORONTO, Dec. 9.—Analysing Chancellor Von Holleweg's speech in the Reichstag to-day, the Toronto Star says the following points may be drawn from it, under the heading, "Shadow of Defeat of Germany":

1—Germany apparently has reached the stage where she is ready to quit, but on her own terms and conditions.

2—A plausible reason for not actually-naming the peace conditions herself. Most of the "confusion of public opinion" is in Germany.

3—Trying to put the onus for the continuance of the war on the Allies now that Germany knows defeat is certain.

4—Germany knows the conditions of a "lasting peace" mean the crusing of German militarism.

5—Food and copper may be sufficient for Government needs, but civilian distress is prevalent.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—An advance of the Turks on Aden, in Southern Arabia, near the entrance to the Red Sea, through which the Suez Canal passes, is announced in a Turkish official statement.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The British steamer Veria, 3,000 tons, and the Greek steamer Goulandris, have been sunk by an Austrian submarine.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—The French Ministry of Marine to-day confirmed the reports of the torpedoing of the Turkish destroyer Yarhissar by a British submarine in the Sea of Marmora, and added that two Turkish officers and forty men were made prisoners.

5—Exemption of Taxes, Homesteaders—

It is published for the information of all concerned that a letter has been received from the secretary of the Rural Municipality of Roval Canadian No. 281, Craiglands, Saskatchewan, stating that this Municipality has passed a resolution exempting from Taxes on their homesteads all men employed on active service from date of their enlistment.

6—Board of Officers—

A Board of Officers detailed as under will assemble at the Armouries on Friday, the 0th inst., at an hour to be named by the president, to report and inquire into the quality of the Dubbin and the advisability of the continuance of its use.

The quartermaster of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., will attend.

President—Captain R. S. Muir.

Members—Lieut. L.J. Stuart, Lieut G. R. Browning.

7—Leave, Christmas and New Year—

It is published for general information with regard to Christmas and New Year's leave being granted to officers, N.C.O.'s, and men of units of the Canadian Expeditionary Force now in Canada, authority is granted for 50 per cent. of each unit to be given Christmas leave from the night of the 23rd inst. to the night of the 27th inst., and 50 per cent. from the night of the 30th inst. until the night of 3rd January, 1916. This will give four clear days to each officer, N.C.O. and man at his own home. This privilege is to be restricted to well conducted and deserving men.

8—Permission to Marry—

Permission to marry has been granted to the undermentioned men of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.:

Pte. E. King, Pte. A. Thomas.

T. J. Johnston, Lt.-Col.,
Officer Commanding,
93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

A copy of the following letter is published for the information of all concerned:

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 6, 1915

From Ed. M. Elliott, Esq.,
County Clerk.

To Lt.-Col. T. J Johnston, Officer Commanding, 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Dear Sir,

I am requested by the Council of the County of Peterborough to transmit to you our admiration of the position you now hold and the efficient manner in which you perform your duties, winning the confidence and love of the 93rd Battalion, characteristic of your conduct when a member of the County Council.

From the fact that you are an ex-Warden of the County, and some of your colleagues still in office, at the instance of Mr. Anderson, your successor as Reeve of Otonabee, it has been suggested that these sentiments be transmitted to you.

Enclosed find cheque for $400, unanimously voted to the 93rd Overseas Battalion Fund, as a slight recognition of your battalion and yourself. I am requested also to state that the 93rd is a credit to their Colonel and the County to which they belong.

Signed on behalf of the County Council of the County of Peterborough.

Ed. M. Elliott.

When the sacrifices that some families in Peterborough are making for the sake of the Empire in the great crisis, it is hard to find words in which to describe the stay at homes who refuse even to help the patriotic fund. This morning Mrs. Leal, Aylmer street, received a letter from her son Fred in Smith's Falls, informing her that he had enlisted and started drilling this morning. He is the fourth son of Mr. and Mrs. Leal to enlist. One brother, Pte. Douglas Leal, who was with the 57th quota in the 2nd battalion, was killed at Langemarck. Two other brothers, Ptes. Harold and Frank, are in France with the Peterborough boys in the 21st Battalion, as is also Mrs. Leal's nephew, Pte. Aubrey Leal.

Mr. Geo. Cunningham, 945 Rubidge street, is in receipt of the following breezy letter from Pte. Geo. Peters, son of Sergt.-Major Peters, formerly of the 57th Regiment, and one of the Peterborough boys at the front with the 21st Battalion, to which regiment his brother is also attached.

Dear Friend,—Just a few lines to let you know I received your kind letter and papers O.K. and certainly was glad to receive them. We are both in the best of health, hoping you all are the same. So you hear quite often from Will! Tell him to write to me. I will have lots of news to tell him. Well I guess it is pretty cold over there now. We are having it cold, and mud up to the neck. We are going through something we never went through before. We were working yesterday fixing up our trenches. But we soon had to quit. The Germans shelled us so bad with Jack Johnson shells. They are acting dirty this last week, I guess because we bombarded them for two hours. We gave it to them hot last night again. I was down to a village near the firing line, I and another chum. While we were there we went into a house that a shell had hit. We just got there five minutes after it was struck. I got some good souvenirs. They shelled our resting camp some miles back of the firing line. They killed the civilians of course, most of them being pro-German. The place we are in now is the farthest advanced place along the line and the most dangerous. We are now in for three weeks' turn. We also will be in for Christmas. A German aeroplane has just flew over our heads only 25 ft. above us, (Censored) at it and stopped its machine, so it had to come down and one of our machine gun fellows just told our Colonel that they got it. We put some shells over in their trenches to-day and you ought to have seen them beat it. Eight of them started across the fields. I got two of them and some of the others fellows got three of them. It was like firing at rabbits. The officers that were running the aeroplane seemed quite young men. They had lost their way. They are now prisoners behind the 1st lines, where they lit. Their machine turned over, but they never got hurt. I must tell you that Harry Wood is still living, and also Albert White, but the other White is gone, and also Fred Briscoe, my good old chum. The first contingent relieved us a month ago, and I never saw Wood or White. They were down to see Dan White and I, but I was in the firing line. Anyway I am going to see them some of them these days.

Well, I must close now. If I told you all about what is going on it would take me two months. The Germans are giving us hell to-night. Well, good-bye all. Hoping to hear from you again.

Yours truly,
GEORGE.

P.S.—I guess it is so near Christmas that I must say, a merry Christmas and a happy New Year to you all.

Peterborough's soldiers are everywhere in the Canadian expeditionary forces. One of the latest to turn up is G. T. Brown of Peterborough, who is sergeant-major of No. 7 Overseas Stationary Hospital, which mobilised at Dalhousie, N.B.

In a letter to a member of the Examiner staff, Gunner M. K. Hardill, who left Canada with the first draft from the 33rd Battery, and who is now in the Reserve Brigade, C.F.A., at Ross Barracks, Shorncliffe, says that he is taking a course in riding, gunnery, signalling, and that Major Gerald Hall of Peterborough, is the officer in charge of the course. Gunner Hardill says he is enjoying the life and getting fat. He has seen Les Jewell, Max Breckenridge, the Wade brothers and several other Peterborough boys in the 39th Battalion which is stationed about eight miles away from Ross Barracks.

Capt. Beresford Hamilton of the 33rd Battery, is home on leave from Kingston. He is going overseas with the next draft from the battery.

Bombardier Alf. Hagerman of Peterborough, writing to a member of the Examiner staff from Ross Barracks, Shorncliffe, Eng., where he is attached to the Reserve Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery, says that most of the boys who went over in the first draft from the 33rd Battery have been transferred to other batteries and some have gone direct to France. Bombardier Hagerman says he has met a number of Peterborough boys who enlisted before he did who have not yet got to the front. Eddie Collins and Mart Kenneally, two Peterborough boys with the Canadian Army Service Corps, paid the battery boys a visit a few days before he wrote. Bombardier Hagerman mentions that his brother Bill, who was in England with the Princess Pats reinforcements, left for France to join that famous regiment on the day before his letter was written. He also sent the Examiner the following most interesting letter he had received from another brother, Pte. Vic. Hagerman, who is on the firing line with the 21st Battalion:

'Somewhere in France.'

Dear Alf.—Received your letter yesterday, also the box of fags, while in the trenches. Those cigarettes came in handy, as I was just out. They will do me until I get to the billets. Things are very quiet over here on the front. Nothing but artillery duels and Frizt and Co. get the worst of it every time. For every shell they send over we send about six. We've had very few casualties. The other day while out on a working party the fellow who was working next to me got shot through the lungs. He died the next day. It's rotten to see a fellow shot down like that. I just thought that it might be me that would get it next. But we don't let that worry us any.

I don't think the war will last very see how it can last as the Germans long. I have a pound up that it is over before the 21st of March. I don't say they are starving and their trenches are in rotten condition.

We don t get a pass from here until we have been here three months. I may get a pass after Christmas if I am still in the land of the living. I would certainly like to get over to see you and Bill before you come over here.

How do you like England? There's lots of rain there, but it can't beat this country for rain and mud.

MEN'S CLOTHING DOWN TO ZERO

Suits or Overcoats Made to Measure Offered For Eleven Dollars

The Globe Tailoring Coy's striking announcement in to-day's paper looks like welcome news to the men of Peterborough. Most men were convinced that the regular standing offer of this firm to make to measure suits and overcoats for $14 was a radical reduction in the prevailing prices of these garments. But the Company's offer of to-day, which appears in a four column advertisement in this issue, undertaking to accept $11 instead of $14 for the same service, is certain to create a stampede to the Globe Tailoring Company's store, 181 Charlotte street, during the time limit indicated. It is claimed that these suits or overcoats would represent $20 or $22 values in many places.

Property Committee Recommends Increase To Sanitary Inspector

Among other items to be discussed at to-night's special meeting of the Council will likely be the Property Committee's recommendation that Sanitary Inspector Spence receive a salary of $1,000. This is a belated recognition of the services of one of the most diligent officials in the city's employ. At $700 a year he has been receiving less than an ordinary policeman. Probably the long association of the sanitary inspectorship with the Police Department has blinded the Council to the effectiveness that now characterizes this work, without reflecting in the least upon the former system. Mr. Spence has inaugurated many changes in the preparation and handling of food for public sale, and has shown a great deal of tact and patience with persons who have been disposed to ignore the city's by-laws. The incinerator and the garbage collecting system have been special duties of his, and the other night the Council passed a by-law he prepared to further provide for the public health by adopting dry earth outhouses and other measures in that connection.

The inspection of yards, etc., of milk, meat, slaughter houses, sales on the market, and other work, has all been part of the duties of this office. The general opinion of thoughtful citizens advocates the broadening of the scope of the sanitary inspectorship for the simple reason that everything affecting public health strikes home to the individual ratepayer.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HOCKEY NOTES

Bill O'Hara, the well known baseball player, and "Mac" Murray, the star outside wing of the Argonaut Rugby Club, were banqueted and wrist-watched by sporting friends Monday night, and were around saying their "so-longs" yesterday. They will sail with the next battalion for England, where they will complete their schooling in the aviation branch of the service.

Among the new players who turned out with the 36th Battery last night were McDonald, the Orillia forward, Janes, the Peterborough goalkeeper; Pethick, formerly of Peterborough, and Major Gordon Southam. The latter was a member of the good Varsity Intercollegiate team several years ago.

"Lovey" Jupp and Lavigne are showing up well with the Battery team. Pethick also made a very favourable impression for his first appearance. McDonald and McNab, two former Orillia players, are fixtures, as is also Connie Smyth, the crack centre of last year's Varsity junior champions.

"Bill" Breen left for Peterborough to-day, where he will handle the two O.H.A. teams this season. "Bill" has always been a favourite in the Lifflock City, but has been training Toronto teams for the past three years, previous to which he was with Peterborough for many years.

"Ken" Crane, who played good hockey as rover for the Riversides last year, is evidently being counted upon to fill that position again this season. Crane is a big boy, uses his weight well, and might make a valuable defence player. Dopp and Applegath look like fixtures for the wings.

Flight Sub-Lieut. "Joe" Gorman, formerly of the sporting staff of the Ottawa Journal and Toronto News has completed a course in aviation and will proceed overseas in a few days.

Lieut. Jack McCamus, who will be found at left wing for the Argos this season, will not be out to practice this week due to military reasons. He will turn out regularly commencing next week. Jack is one of the most popular players in this city.

CURLING CLUB MEETS ON FRIDAY NIGHT

A special meeting of the Curling Club has been called for to-morrow (Friday) evening at the rink to ballot for 42 new members. If these are all accepted it will bring the membership ahead of last year, and as there are several more applications on hand to be balloted for at a later meeting it looks as if curling is going to be more popular than ever this winter.

ICE MAKING AT THE CURLING RINK

Mr. Angus McIntosh has commenced to make ice at the Curling Rink, and with last night's lower temperature the promise is good for an early sheet. Already the members are gathering during the daytime and in the evening to renew acquaintance with the old surroundings, and everything is looming up brightly for a good season.

CLEVELAND MAY LOSE CLUB

Rumour of Deal in Prospect to Send it to Toledo.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 8. — President Ban B Johnson of the American League, accompanied by John E. Bruce, secretary of the National Commission, were here to-day for a conference with President Chas. W. Somers of the Cleveland club and ankers who are in charge of his affairs. It was admitted that the sale of the Indians would be discussed.

Interest was added to the situation at noon when Ed. Barrow, president of the International League, arrived and went into conference with Johnson and Somers. It was reported that Barrow was representing a group of eastern capitalists and that he might make an offer for the Cleveland American Association Club with a view to transferring it to Toledo.

Without Vodka Russia Goes On and Prospers

Stockholm, December 9.—Vodkaless Russia is unbelievable prosperous even in the midst of war, writes the editor of the Dagens Nyheter after a long trip through the Russian provinces, but there is still a great danger for the peasant has as yet found nothing to take the place of the saloon as a place of recreation and of amusement. Stories are told of cases of suicide wing to the dullness of life now that the "dear little water" has been put out of reach.

BEGGARS DISAPPEAR.

"In the towns there has never been so much prosperity as at present," remarks the editor. "Beggars have disappeared from the streets and the masses are better fed and better clad than ever before."

"It is however in the villages that the blessings of teetotalism are most apparent. The hundreds of millions formerly spent in the spirit shops now remain in the pockets of the peasants. Millions formerly wasted in drinking bouts and their after-effects help to fill the pockets.

"The net result is that the Russian villages so to say roll in money. Meat formerly eaten once or twice a year, is becoming part of the daily fare, and dwellings and farming utensils and decorations are being purchased out of savings by the agricultural classes.

"The one danger with the increase of economic strength is the possibility of a decrease of moral strength. Vodka filled a void in the empty and tasteless life of the peasant. He wonders now how he shall spend his free time and his superfluous money.

"The teetotallers are alive to this danger and already in certain districts of Russia, 'people's houses' are being provided, equipped with libraries, tea, lecture and reading rooms and cinematographs.

"All this is to the good, but a big effort is essential in order to raise the intellectual and moral level of the nation if Russia's teetotal year is to be more than a little episode in her history."

BANDMASTER OF 15TH.

Belleville, December 9.—The members of the 59th Battalion brass band met at the Khaki Club this afternoon and bade farewell to Sergt. J. W. Charwick, their leader. He goes to Port Hope to become the bandmaster of the 136th Battalion band.

Women's Institute.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Agricultural Office on Saturday afternoon. A larger number than usual were present to hear the reports by Mrs. J. S. Patterson and Mrs. M. Brown of the Women's Institute convention recently held in Toronto. Before the close of the meeting yarn was distributed among the members to be knit into socks and scarfs for the Red Cross. Their next meeting will be held on 18th December, at which Mrs. Watts of Toronto will address the meeting. There will also be special music at this meeting.

Public Library Board.

A meeting of the Public Library Board was held on 30th November. Members present: Messrs. J. K. Keefer (chairman), R. G. Lawlor, Chas. Tucker, W. H. Cuthbertson, P. M. Grover.

communication from the inspector of Public Libraries dealing on our Government grant; was read.

Minutes of the annual meeting were read and adopted.

Moved by Messrs. Lawlor and Grover—that we subscribe for the following additional papers and magazines: The Montreal Weekly Witness and Canadian Pictorial, the Norwood Register, Toronto Globe and Mail and Empire, the Peterborough Daily Review and Examiner, the London Graphic, the Scientific American, McLean's Magazine.

Moved by Messrs. Cuthbertson and Tucker, that the secretary and chairman be authorized to pay the ordinary accounts of the year.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Tucker and Grover that Mr. Keefer prepare a large printed card to be hung in the Library Room calling attention to the 14-day limit of retaining books and notifying subscribers that fines must be enforced for holding books longer than 14 days, and also that subscribers must not loan books belonging to the Library to others.—Carried.

Baptist Minister Ordained.

The Baptist Church was filled to its full capacity last Wednesday at both the afternoon and evening meetings when Mr. C. Waddell, B.A., pastor of the Baptist Church was ordained into the ministry. It was worthy of note that all the ordained ministers in the association were present to form the council for ordination.

The afternoon meeting was a sort of preparation for the real ordination service which took place in the evening. In the afternoon the candidate told of his conversion, and to questions by the members of the council, expressed his ideas on sin, redemption, Christ, salvation, etc. His answers were so clear and thoroughly convincing that the council decided at once to proceed with the ordination service at the evening meeting.

Rev. Mr. Scott of Picton led the song service at the beginning of the evening meeting. Rev. Mr. Galt of Gilmour Memorial Church, read the Scripture lesson, after which Rev. Mr. Richards led in prayer. The audience was then treated to a much-appreciated male quartette by Revs. Smith, Scott, Sliman, and Mr. T. Marks.

Rev. Mr. Webb of Peterborough then preached the ordination sermon, which was most instructive, and the choir sang "Dear Saviour, lead thou me." This was followed by the laying on of hands, and the ordination prayer by Rev. D. Brown of Peterborough. The candidate was then given the right hand of fellowship into the ministry by Rev. Mr. Spidell of Port Hope. Rev. Mr. Smith of Belleville gave the charge to the candidate, followed by the charge to the church by Rev. Mr. Siman of Lakefield. The service was concluded by the singing of the hymn, "The church's one foundation," and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. C. Waddell.

Norwood Curling Club.

The Norwood Curling Club have elected the following officers for the coming season:

Patron and Patroness—Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Finlay.
President—J. R. McKelvie.
Vice-President—R. G. Lawlor, B.A.
Secy.-Treasurer—C. I. Puffer.
Executive Committee—Messrs. T. E. Finlay, J. R. McKelvie, and A. J. McHenty.

Rev. Mr. Snell of Hastings will occupy the pulpit of the Methodist Church on Sunday morning and evening, 12th December, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Irwin, taking the missionary services in Hastings for him.

Miss Pauline Weir and her friend Miss Blackburn of Peterborough spent Sunday at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Weir.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church will be held at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. W. J. Trenouth.

The death occurred last week in Kerrobert, Sask., at the age of twenty-seven, of Mrs. Ruffe nee Doris Isobel Howson, daughter of Mrs. James Buck, Hastings Road. The remains arrived in Norwood on Sunday on the midnight, and were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Buck. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon to the Norwood Cemetery.

Mr. Earle Laing spent Sunday in Keene.

Miss Christina Calder has resigned her position in Campbellford post office, and has returned home to assist her father in the post office here.

The Mission Band of the Methodist Church held a very successful bazaar and tea in the basement of the church on Saturday afternoon and evening. From the sale of articles donated etc., the Band realized over $60.

Presentation to S. S. Superintendent.

At the house social held at the home of Mr. Anthony McNeil on Friday evening, 26th November, under the auspices of the Elgin Union Sabbath School, the superintendent, Mr. Henry Thistlewaite and his wife were presented with a handsome bookcase and secretary, accompanied by the following address:

To Mr. and Mrs. Thistlewaite.
Dear Friends,

We, your many friends and associates in Elgin Sunday School, feel that we cannot let the present opportunity pass without manifesting in some way the esteem in which you are held by us.

Ever since you have taken up the Sunday School work here, we feel that the success of the school has been largely due to your untiring efforts. You have done a great deal to mould community. We believe that your Christian example and earnestness in the work of the Master will do much to influence the young people of the Sunday School to devote their future lives to the greatest of all work—the service of the King of Kings.

We hope and pray that you may be long spared to continue your unselfish labour of love in our midst, and we feel sure that some day you will see the result of your work.

You may feel discouraged in your work, but we wish you to know that a really do appreciate what you have done and are doing for us.

As a slight token of our regard, we ask you to accept this bookcase and secretary.

Signed on behalf of the Elgin Sunday School,

Alex. Clark,
Frank McMillan,
Maxwell Brown,

Mrs. Sparling of Winnipeg has been a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Squire.

The Four Bostonians, of the Maple Leaf Bureau, have been engaged to give a concert in the Town Hall on Monday evening, under the auspices of the High School students.

Ladies' Aid Tea.

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian Church held a very successful tea and entertainment in their church on Wednesday evening, 1st December. As usual provisions were in abundance, and the very best of everything served to those who attended. The speaker of the evening was Rev. Mr. Thompson of Hastings. A few words were also spoken by Rev. Mr. Shore of Havelock, and Rev. Mr. Irwin of Norwood. Instrumental music was furnished by Miss Isabel Robb, Miss Wilma Burgess, Master Elton Burgess and several others. Recitations were given by Miss Minnie Robb, Mr. Harley Ennis, and little Ruth Harper. A much appreciated solo was sung by Miss Roxie Andrews, and Mr. Staples of Peterborough sang three solos which were enjoyed exceedingly by all. The proceeds amounted to nearly $80.

The children of the Methodist Sunday School are preparing for an entertainment and Christmas tree.

Mr. Otto Patterson, son of Mr. Thos. Patterson, left last week for Cobalt, where he has accepted a position.

Mrs. Norton Porter returned home last week from Saskatoon, where she had spent several weeks.

Mr. Lees, inspector of public schools, visited the Norwood School last week.

Mr. James Andrews was in Peterborough last Wednesday.

In order to allow teachers the opportunity to spend New Year's Day at their own homes, Norwood School will not be reopened until Tuesday 8th January.

Mr. D. Emerson of Kerrobert was in town this week.

Up to Him.

Coyly the blushing girl approached her father as he sat at ease after dinner.

"Daddy," she said coaxingly, "is it true that two can live as cheaply as one?"

"That's an old saying, dearie."

"But do you believe it?" she persisted, fondling the bald patch on the top of his head.

"Well, perhaps it can be done," said father doubtfully.

"Then if George and I get married do you think you can manage to support both of us on as much as you spend on me every year?"

Insects' Sense of Smell.

How do insects smell? Naturalists are agreed that they are keenly sensitive to certain odors, but they differ widely as to the organs with which they do it. The usual opinion has been that their antennae serve them as do our noses. But Dr. N. E. McIndoo of the Washington bureau of entomology points out that those which have no antennae smell equally as well as those which have. He suggests that certain pores at the bases of the wings and legs are their organs of smell, for when these are covered with glue or vaseline they react to perfumes only in a very slow manner.

Found Wanting.

A New York visitor called us a "sissy" because we have never seen a game of golf, but at the same time he confessed that he never saw a watermelon on the vine and couldn't tell when one was ripe. He was indignantly dismissed from our bucolic presence.

Work of Imagination.

"They tell me that it is imagination that keeps the doctors busy," said the slow pay patient.

"It is," replied the physician. "A lot of us are kept busy making out bills which we foolishly imagine are going to be paid."

Well Preserved.

"There's money in preserves."

"You bet! I know a girl who made $20,000 by preserving the letters a man wrote her."

Two Canny Scots.

Donald and Jamie, two bosom friends and canny Scots, entered the tobacconist's shop "Will ye have a cigar, Jamie?" said Donald. "Yes," responded his friend. Donald then asked the shopman for two three-penny cigars, and after both had lighted up he hurried away. Jamie quietly took a few puffs at his cigar, then slowly turned toward the tobacconist and said—"Mester, you sell these five for a shillin', don't you?" "Yes, sir," said the dealer. "Weel," said the Scotsman, at the same time fumbling in his vest-pocket with thumb and forefinger, "here's a saxpence; gi'e me the ither three."

John and the Doctor.

The country doctor in Scotland one day met a Highlander who boasted he was a staunch teetotaler, and resolved to put him to the test. Passing an inn he asked him in and ordered two glasses of whisky. After they had drunk these and two or three more at the doctor's expense his friend began to get a wee bit "glib o' the gab." The doctor then, feeling he had him, bluntly asked, "How does this square with your teetotal pretentions?"

"Weel," quoth John with a quiet smile, "though I'm a staunch teetotaller I'd be a fule to refuse whit the doctor orders."

ALLEGED BIGAMIST WAS REMANDED

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 9.—In the Police Court, Oliver Frank Rose (or Avery) appeared on a charge of bigamy. Rose was arrested on information of the Belleville police, as Florence Mary Cumimns had had a warrant issued for his arrest charging that he had gone through a marriage ceremony with her in November 1914, having been previously married at Ottawa to one, Hattie McDonald of the village of McCrimmon, in August, 1913. Rev. Robert Eadie officiating.

This latter lady resided in Kingston with her twin children.

Rose or Avery is 31 years of age a native of the United States, and a tinsmith by trade. For some time he lived in Ottawa.

Music & Drama

THE WHITE FEATHER.

"The White Feather," that sparkling war comedy which has had such a long run in England and the United States, was seen at the Grand Opera House and delighted a large audience, being voted one of the most enjoyable and interesting offerings for several seasons. Based on the German espionage system and with the central figure a young Britisher who is apparently a shicker, but in reality a secret service agent, the interest is sustained at top measure throughout. As Christopher Brent, Mr. Albert Brown was a delight from start to finish, and he was supported by a fine company.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 3---Eyes As An Asset

IF your daily work brings you an income of $600 to $1000 a year and you require eyesight to do that work, what value would the eyes represent as part of your working capital? Take 6 per cent as a basis of money value, and it would require a capital of $10,000 to $17,000 to bring you an annual revenue of $600 to $1000. We would consider this a low valuation of your eyes as an asset.

What care are you giving this valuable working capital? If the eyes ever tire and ache after steady use, that's a sign you are neglecting them. Let Mr. FOWLER, who has highest qualifications as an EYESIGHT SPECIALIST, examine your eyes and tell you what they need.

WEDDING BELLS

DAVIS—MEBBEREY.

A very pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Luke's Church last evening, when Miss Violet Mebberey became the bride of Private Thomas Davis of this city. The bride looked charming in a tailored suit of navy blue, and wore a black picture hat with ostrich trimmings, and a set of black fox furs, the gift of the groom. The bride and groom were ably supported by Corp. and Mrs. F. Payne. The happy couple received many useful and costly gifts, including an oak locker from the fellow-workers of the bride at the Quaker Oats factory, and a handsome clock from the members of A Company, 93rd Battalion, of which the groom is a member.

A supper was served at the home of the groom's parents, 309 Burnham Street, and the evening was spent in music and dancing, the company dispersing in the "wee 'oors" of the morning after wishing Pte. and Mrs. Davis many years of happiness.

OBITUARY

FRED E. BENOR.

The many friends of Mr. Fred E. Benor were shocked yesterday to learn of his death which followed after only a week's illness of fever. He was well known and popular about town, and had resided here all his life — about 35 years. An especially sad feature of his death is the fact that his father and aunt have died within almost a month, and his mother, Mrs. Jas. Benor, has only become convalescent after several weeks' illness with fever.—Campbellford News.

ARTHUR COOK

Arthur Cook of Trent River, passed away a few days ago after a long illness. Five years ago he fell off a ladder, his injuries resulting in his legs being paralysed. He never recovered the use of his limbs, although undergoing treatment of different kinds. He was unmarried and in the prime of young manhood, a little over over 31 years of age. He bore his sufferings with patient and commendable fortitude and always appeared to be cheerful and optimistic.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, took place to the Centre church cemetery, Seymour, services being held at the Trent River church by Rev. O. W. DeMille.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. P. Lang and Mrs. Roy Hutchinson are in Toronto for a few days.

Mrs. Harris Ardiel and little son, J. R., of Toronto, are visiting at "Strathormond."

DIED.

ARMSTRONG.—At his residence, New Westminster, B.C., on Wednesday, Dec. 8th, the Hon. W. J. Armstrong, dearly beloved brother of Mrs. James Stratton, Gilmour street, Peterborough.

SHOWED SPLENDID EXAMPLE OF DEVOTION

QUEBEC, Dec. 9.—Gunner William James of Smith's Falls, Ont., who has just arrived back wounded from the front, is one of our few heroes possessing the Distinguished Conduct Medal, also the Russian Medal of the Order of St. George. James is in Quebec awaiting his discharge. He was among some men picked from the Kingston battery who were later attached to a regular regiment at Armentieres. He was wounded in the arm on May 1.

"Our first baptism," said James, "was at Ypres. For a while we were entirely cut of, Major Leonard of London ,Ont., who accompanied the regiment, is one of the finest and bravest men in the field to-day. If anybody merited the V.C. he did. During the terrific shelling at Ypres the Major ordered all his men to fall back, and remained alone with the gun. By means of ropes they dragged the guns for some miles back."

The following is an extract from the War Office regarding the hero: "Gunner E. W. James, 3rd Brigade Artillery, for conspicuous gallantry and ability at Patyge, when he repaired telephone wires under shell and rifle fire. He continued to do so after being wounded, and showed a fine example of devotion and duty."

NINE HAVE BEEN OR ARE BEING RAISED IN CANADA

OTTAWA, December 8.—Nine essentially French battalions have been raised in Canada or are in process of being raised.

The 22nd battalion is now at the front, the 41st is in the training depot in England; the 57th at Quebec and the 9th at Halifax. Regiments in process of formation are to be commanded by Col. Barre, Col. Desrosiers and Col. Roudeau of Montreal, Col. Chauveau, of Quebec. In New Brunswick an Acadian French corps is being enrolled.

Recruiting meetings in Quebec addressed by Hon. T. C. Casgrain, Hon. C. J. Doherty, Hon. P. E. Blondin and Hon. R. Lemieux, are producing satisfactory results.

Subnormal.

"I don't see why they call it the normal school."

"Why not?"

"Did you ever see the products?"—Michigan Gargoyle.
